Bank Opening

On Tuesday morning Graham & Sons Bank on West Madison Street moved into its handsome, new, granite front bank building. It was opening day and thousands of people poured in to inspect the new premises and to offer their congratulations to Andrew J. Graham. Most of the visitors referred to him as "our next mayor," to which the popular candidate modestly demurred.

Graham's Bank was started in 1857 and for the past year has been adding more than six hundred new accounts, many of them savings accounts, per month. At the present time the bank is doing a quarter million dollar business daily. In preparing plans for the new building the architects, Jenney & Mundie, were not held down by any restrictions of cost in figuring the designs. The front of the building is made entirely of polished granite with solid bronze, medallioned doors faced at either side by elaborate bronze pillars topped by ornate lanterns. The entire counter and inside finish are of various colored marbles backed up underneath by solid masonry and finished up above with bronze railings and wicket gates. The ventilating system is of the most modern design. The bank had been open but half an hour when the contractor who installed the system walked up to the counter and congratulated Mr. Graham. He also handed him a receipted bill covering the entire work done by the ventilation firm and would accept no remuneration whatever. He privately told those who were standing about him that not less than three times Mr. Graham had saved his business for him and that he had put in a system which he thought would cause the banker to live ten years longer than he otherwise would, which would be ample recompense to him. The lighting system of the new banking room is as efficient as possible. The savings departments will keep open until nine o'clock evenings and good light is required. The entire vaulted ceiling might be called an ornamented sky light softened somewhat by the beautiful colors of the glasses used. In the matter of vaults, workrooms, lavatories, and other accessories to a first-class banking room nothing further could be said than that they are in keeping with all of the other appointments of the institution. The former banking room is just one door west of the new room and all that was necessary was to move through a big archway into the new building. The three thousand safety boxes which occupied the rear of the old banking room will be increased to nine thousand boxes and a new granite front in harmony with the one just finished will be erected. This will in point of equipment put the Graham Bank on a par with anything of its kind in this or in any other city.

There were not less than one hundred splendid bouquets sent in for the occasion by friends and patrons of the institution. George M. Reynolds of the Continental & Commercial sent an enormous armful of American beauties which had the place of honor at the side of Mr. Graham's chair. W. F. Merle, an old time friend of Mr. Graham, sent an immense Irish harp, much taller than a man, bearing a card which said, "Luck to the Irish," and then told in autographic detail how he and Mr. Graham had started out together as boys at fourteen, working in a very old-fashioned establishment where second-hand furniture was polished up and sold. Both have been quite successful in life and neither has ever forgotten their early trials and hardships.

Near the front door of the new bank building, in a veritable nook surrounded by flowers, Mrs. Graham was established. A number of ladies were assisting her in welcoming such callers as were family friends and acquaintances. The various departments of the bank either now or soon will be headed by a Graham Junior, several of whom are not less than half a head taller than their distinguished father. Mr. Graham claims that he is not going to work any more, but few there be who know his disposition that are willing to accept this statement at par.

This is a view from the front door looking toward the rear. The second floor rear is used for storage and locker rooms, and the second floor front contains Mr. Graham's private office. It's a beauty.

Tuesday was the first of recent days that Mr. Graham has not visited his headquarters at the Hotel La Salle where his friends are booming his interests for the mayoralty. It was estimated by one visitor at the hotel yesterday that not less than fourteen hundred persons were present. Twenty-eight wards have endorsed Mr. Graham as their choice for the democratic candidacy and there is a probability that others will be added to the list. His friends can see nothing but a certainty of his nomination and election and point to the significant fact that up to date no republican has shown any intense desire to run against him.

Graham & Sons were established in 1889. Frank J. Graham and Ralph R. Graham are now associated with their father in the institution.

Banker Tells of Conditions

President M. F. Dunlap of Ayers National, Jacksonville, Ill., was a caller at National City, Wednesday. Mr. Dunlap has extensive interests in a noted corn region and keeps in touch with the business situation. He says that while farmers are in good shape many of them are still holding their grain in hope of getting higher prices. This leaves something of a burden still on interior banks. Liquidation is expected, however, by spring.

Money Easier

A stagnant money market this week has served to depress rates to inside quotations. The majority of loans are at 5 per cent, but secured commercial paper has been selling around 4½. This market is not following New York in any sense. Call loans advanced to 6 per cent in the East, Wednesday. Here the rate was 4 to 4½. Bonds have been fairly active and it is possible to market gilt-edge securities on a 4 per cent basis.

Bankers agree that there is no reason beyond holiday inertia for the present depression and they expect the situation to change in a few days. Funds are accumulating in the city on all accounts and merchants and builders have not developed their program for the year sufficiently to make an active market.

Bank Owner Talks Hopefully

L. B. Hill, president of People's National, Hillsboro, Ill., and owner of two or three other banks, was a visitor at LaSalle Street National, Wednesday. He talked hopefully of business and farming conditions and said farmers of his locality had shown the good sense to diversify their products more than is usual. As a result of this they are living close to a cash basis and general business in the community is satisfactory.

Fred I. Kent Visits in Chicago

Fred I. Kent, former manager of the foreign exchange department of First National, called on John J. Arnold and others among his Chicago friends the fore part of this week. Mr. Kent and family have been spending the holidays with relatives here.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

RUSH C. BUTLER, the well-known attorney, will head a new law firm which will devote considerable attention to interstate commerce practice. The new law firm has offices at 1414 Monadnock Block, Chicago, and the members are Rush C. Butler, William E. Lamb, Stephen A. Foster, Earnest O. Best, and Cornelius Lynde.

THE firm name will continue as Cassoday, Butler, Lynde & Foster. Although Mr. Cassoday died during last year, his name will be used professionally.

KING, FARNUM & COMPANY has taken offices heretofore used by John H. Wrenn & Company in the Rookery Building. The new firm will retain the entire office force and will conduct the same kind of business with the same courtesy and attention which distinguished the Wrenn firm.

JOHAN H. WRENN has made an enormous fortune and retires. For years he has stood a model for men in his line of business. His reputation for honesty and fidelity to clients has never been surpassed; his standing in the Chicago banks has never been questioned; his career has been an honorable one.

CH. H. HUTTIG of St. Louis sent out New Year's compliments on a beautifully engraved card. The simple inscription was: "I extend cordial greetings and hope the year 1911 will be filled with health, happiness and prosperity for you."

"FARWELL TRUST COMPANY extends to you its best wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year." This was the simple little reminder sent out under the direction of Albert G. Lester who looks out after details at this prosperous bank.

AMONG the handsomest of the New Year's cards which came to this desk is one sent out by the First National of Greenville, Mississippi. The past year has been a most successful one for this carefully managed institution and all its friends will wish it to continue in prosperity and in happiness.

FARWELL TRUST COMPANY has paid George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National the highest possible compliment. It has had a neat folder engraved, containing two extracts from the now famous interview with Mr. Reynolds. The following two paragraphs are the ones used: "Public sentiment is one of the most potent factors in all human endeavor; it exerts the same influence whether it is right or wrong; and since public sentiment is largely created through discussion of the various topics of the day, in a conversational way, by those who occupy high places in business, I am a believer in the theory of conservatism in public utterance, as also I am a believer in conservatism in business."

"IT IS my belief that most of the things that occur in life which cause us worry and anxiety come as the result of anticipation of things which really never come to pass, and it has been my observation that on many occasions business has been more or less handicapped through the creation of an improper or unfair public sentiment which has misguided the public into anticipating dire calamities which never have happened."

H. B. CRADDICK, a specialist in financial advertising at Minneapolis, addresses his friends as follows: "The greetings of the season to you. May the bounties of the old year be blessed; may the new year bring you health, happiness and prosperity; may the future be one of greater success in your chosen calling."

MR. CRADDICK believes that advertising is a science and its practice an art worthy of the best thought of any man. He believes that advertising is a vital element to all good banking; that it creates and holds confidence.

MR. CRADDICK is an enthusiast and does not believe that successful bank advertising is possible in the hands of any other sort of man. Thousands of bankers believe in Mr. Craddick and look to him for their business pulling copy. He can be reached care of the "Commercial West," Minneapolis.

T. B. WALLACE, organizer of the Fidelity Trust Company of Tacoma and for ten years its president, was one of the best known bankers and financial men of the Pacific Northwest. Prior to his recent death he had been practically retired from active business. During his busy life time he assisted in the organization of many of the best known business enterprises of the Northwest. His death occurred at North Yakima. Mr. Wallace leaves a large estate.

THE CLEVELAND AND MARIETTA RAILWAY COMPANY has declared a dividend of six per cent payable in cash. This road is one of those which go to make up that splendid system known as the Pennsylvania Lines.

BEST cure for "bankers' dementia" is treatment by a wide-awake superintendent of banks. Governor-elect Dix must consider the high standard established by Clark Williams before appointing a successor to Superintendent Cheney.—Wall Street Journal.

YOU don't hear much about the Chemical National, New York, these days unless one of the officials resigns to get into a live institution. It hasn't paid the Chemical not to advertise.

NELSON N. LAMPERT is to speak on "Hamilton the Financier" at the Hamilton Club banquet, January 11th, the anniversary of the birth of Alexander Hamilton.

ONE of your good resolutions should be "No more giving of Christmas junk." That day is over.

SOME candidates "open a barrel" in the midst of a campaign. Not so, Andrew J. Graham, "Chicago's next mayor," for on Tuesday he opened a new bank building, of the latest and most modern type.

NORTHERN TRUST'S annual statement shows that its time and demand deposits almost divide at $15,000,000 each. In fact they would balance with the transfer of less than thirty thousand from the demand to the time ledger.

H. B. JUDSON, who manages the bond department of the Northern, has sent out quite an attractive New Year's list. Up to 5 per cent net.

"FARM Mortgages vs. Speculative Investments" is a beautifully printed and interesting booklet sent out by Warren W. Hurd from St. Paul. Albert S. Maxham is manager of the Chicago office at 153 La Salle.

BACHE & COMPANY, New York, say that "The year is closing enveloped in uncertainties. The questions which thinking business men give most weight to, are: What will the Interstate Commerce Commission decide as to rates for the railroads? What will the Supreme Court decide as to the Sherman Anti-Trust cases against Standard Oil and American Tobacco?"

THE same high authority says that securities with assured dividends are safe, from the investment standpoint, and may be bought without reference to whether or not they will go lower, for whether they do or not, intrinsic value will eventually carry them higher.

THE net profits for the 47th year of The First National Bank, Chicago, are $1,823,172.27 which after paying the usual dividends, adds $683,172.27 to profit and loss account, increasing same to $925,077.15.

THE net profits for the year of the First Trust and Savings Bank are $940,604.63 which, after paying the usual dividends adds $560,604.63 to profit and loss account, increasing it to $1,150,229.61, from which the directors have transferred $500,000.00 to capital account and $500,000.00 to surplus account during the year, leaving a balance to be carried forward of $150,229.61.

CHICAGO'S FIRST NATIONAL is one of the far outstanding, model institutions of the country. When a bank can make such handsome profits and at the same time be noted for and pointed out for its conservatism, why should anyone wish to conduct a bank on doubtful lines. "No serious losses" says Mr. Forgan, "for the year." There were some. It wouldn't be quite a bank if there were none.

IN summing up conditions President Forgan says: "The demand for money for industrial purposes has been steady and fully equal to the supply throughout the year. High rates of discount have prevailed and there has been an unusual opportunity for profit in commercial banking. In investment banking the scarcity of surplus funds for investment purposes has curtailed business, reduced values, and profits have been comparatively small. The combined earnings of your affiliated banks again show a satisfactory average for the year, viz., 11½ per cent net on the aggregate capital employed."

G. G. EVERHARD, formerly vice-president of the St. Joseph (Mo.) Stock Yards Bank, has been elected a vice-president of the Corn Belt Bank, of Kansas City, Mo. Mr. Everhard is widely known in business and banking circles and will add strength to the Corn Belt.

Business Review Shows Nation is Sound

Condition of uncertainty in recent months causes slight check on industry. Outlook for 1911 is encouraging. Rate question still a factor of importance in all lines of commercial enterprise

In many respects the year just closed was remarkable. It was a period of unusual and trying situations for all business interests and yet as a whole the country made substantial progress.

Perplexity came to bankers, merchants and manufacturers in the midst of a season of great activity, for a money stringency, a sudden fall of prices and the adoption of a policy of retrenchment by leading railway companies revealed the fact that unwise investments and over-expansion, in connection with political agitation, had placed business interests in an unsafe condition.

In the face of an unusually heavy production of agricultural staples and when trade seemed at its best evidence suddenly appeared that commercial security and general prosperity were endangered by reckless investments in unproductive property and by a curtailment of business in several important branches of the iron industry which depend largely on the railroads for patronage. Considerable labor was deprived of employment at a time of year when all lines of trade are supposed to be at their best.

Volume of Business Heavy

This mixed situation raised grave doubts as to the future of business and yet the fact remained that the country had large crops and unimpaired buying power. Business men as a general thing preserved their optimism and the year drew to an end with some improvement as to prospects for the immediate future. The outlook would be entirely satisfactory were the railway rate trouble settled.

The trade of 1910 in all lines was large in volume and profitable as to returns. The city of Chicago was the center of great mercantile and financial expansion, gaining a high degree of prosperity.

Chicago's wholesale trade for the year 1910 amounted to $2,132,220,450, an increase of ten to twenty per cent in the various lines. The city's manufactures for the year total $1,855,845,350, an increase averaging about ten per cent over 1909.

Building permits issued in Chicago for the year footed up $95,736,050, which sets a new high record in real estate development.

Bank Record is Gratifying

During the year the Chicago banks made the highest record in amount of deposits in their history. The call of March 31st showed the total for the national banks to be $435,281,165, a gain of over $22,000,000 over the last previous call. State banks of the city showed at that time deposits of $398,999,961, a gain of $13,000,000, bringing the total of Chicago banks' deposits to $834,281,126, a high record in local banking.

In the period up to the next call the state banks of the city showed another gain of $16,000,000, bringing the amount of deposits as of June 30th to $415,008,724, the high record to date. The national banks, however, showed a decrease from the previous call, and the aggregate of deposits shown in the March call remains the record.

Comparison of conditions in 1910 with those for ten years prior indicates notable increases in the country's wealth, business of the banks and stock of the circulating medium. The wealth as stated by the census bureau for 1900 was $88,- 000,000,000 and in 1910 estimated at $125,000,000,000, the assets of the banks, so far as learned, aggregated $10,786,000,000 in 1900 and about $22,500,000,000 in 1910, while the stock of money rose from $2,339,000,000 in 1900 to $3,488,000,000 in 1910. Hence the increase in wealth during this period was $37,000,000,000, in bank assets $11,700,000,000 and in money nearly $1,150,000,000.

Facts as to Iron Industry

It is customary to regard the iron and steel business as the barometer of business conditions. In 1910 the amount of pig iron manufactured was approximately 26,000,000 tons, against 25,300,000 tons in 1909. But the price of pig iron at Birmingham fell from $14 in January to $11 in December, the decline being gradual throughout the year. And the end of 1910 saw pig iron being produced at a rate about 50 per cent less than at the beginning. Iron and steel prices, to all appearances, will be reduced considerably in the first month of 1911.

The fundamental cause for this falling off in the demand for pig iron is said to be the check on buying that became part of the policy of the railroads.

Measured in dollars the nation's business was slightly lower than in 1909, if bank clearings are a trustworthy index. Clearings for all the banks of the country were about $162,000,000,000, against $164,195,488,940 in 1909. But the great falling off was in New York City, the center of the nation's speculative interests. That city's clearings amounted to about 4.5 per cent less than in 1909, while outside of New York the clearings amounted to about 7 per cent more than in 1909.

Earnings of Big Corporations

Thirty-three of the larger railways and industrials increased the dividend rates on their common stocks, and also increased their capitalization, the result being distribution of $142,774,053 among the common shareholders by the companies mentioned, an increase of $46,194,855, or 32 per cent.

The largest single increase was in the case of the United States Steel corporation whose common dividends, at 5 per cent aggregated $25,415,125, an increase of $11,436,807 over the amount disbursed in 2¾ per cent payments in 1909. American Tobacco's 40 per cent disbursement was a gain of $2,012,020. International Harvester's inauguration of common dividends was a clear gain of $3,200,000. Canadian Pacific's increased and extra dividends were $3,900,000. New York Central's increase was $4,432,158 and Goldfield Consolidated's was $3,917,057.

The general progress is sufficient in the average person's mind to justify great confidence in the future of business. Summing up the whole situation it may be claimed that business is good, money is plentiful and the nation is sound. Interest therefore turns to the prospects for the opening year. Business men feel that 1911 is a more important study than 1910.

Real Estate Activity Assured

Chicago will lead all the rest of the country in building investments. Many of the largest projects ever undertaken here will get into motion as soon as steel prices are fixed for the season. Few contracts for structural metal have been made but a good deal of important business along this line will be shaped up by February 1st.

Financing city real estate propositions is a comparatively easy matter. There has been uniform success with the better class of buildings here in the last dozen years, financial returns being all that was promised and all that could be asked for.

Judging from the large volume of mercantile business already in hand, Chicago jobbers are assured a reasonably satisfactory trade this year.

Farmers have as good prospects as could be expected at this time of year. There is a somewhat larger winter wheat acreage than last year, and probably the spring wheat area also will be enlarged. Corn production may be slightly curtailed. In general, however, the business interests of the interior are in good shape and throughout the West there is a confident spirit.

Pekin Postal Bank Opens

Pekin, Ill., January 3.—But six persons were lined up at the postoffice when the first postal savings bank in Illinois was opened to the public this morning. The cold wave dimmed the enthusiasm of many who intended to obtain the first depositors' certificate. The honor of being the first depositor went to Paul Conaghan, the 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Conaghan.

The boy was at the postoffice building at 6:55 A. M. Five minutes later the front door of the postoffice swung open and he took his position directly in front of the bank window, and there he remained for one hour. Several persons arrived before the hour for opening the bank, but there was no rush.

The selection of Pekin as the Illinois city in which to try out the postal savings bank idea is considered an ideal choice by postoffice officials. The city has a population of 10,000, a majority being of German extraction and possessed of the thrift characteristic of that nationality. Fully two-thirds of the wage earning class are depositors in the banks or one of the three building and loan associations. Just how strong a government bank that pays 2 per cent on deposits will appeal to them as against a national bank paying 3 per cent is a question much discussed here. Bankers believe the postal bank will not decrease their savings deposits, but will serve to place in circulation money that would not otherwise find its way to a depository. Postal banks were opened at 47 other experimental towns in as many states.

The whole of the $25,000 worth of stock in the new savings bank to be started in Inglewood has been sold. At a meeting of the buyers of the stock the following board of directors were chosen: W. H. Kelso, Adolph Leuzinger, John Aerick, F. A. Zillgitt and W. G. Brown. The selection of officers has not yet been made other than that Frank Zillgitt was chosen cashier. The building for the new bank and its location have not been definitely decided upon.

Alabama Program

The mid-winter convention of the Alabama Bankers Association will meet at Montgomery, the state capital, January 18th and 19th. As has been stated heretofore the convention is called at this season of the year for the purpose of aiding in the passage of a new state banking act creating supervisory powers over private banking and all other kinds of banking except national. It might be called an emergency convention and the reform element which expects to have unlicensed banking completely abolished in every state within five years will be present in great force. Practically the entire program will be devoted to discussion of the new banking act as drawn by a special committee of the association. Michael Cody, president of the Montgomery clearing house, will welcome the visitors, and other addresses of welcome will be delivered by Mayor W. A. Gunter, Junior, and by President E. B. Joseph of the Montgomery Business Men's League. On behalf of the visitors the response will be by Snowden McCaughy. President W. L. Lancaster of Wetumpka will deliver the annual address and McLane Tilton, Jr., will read the report of the secretary-treasurer.

The discussion of the new banking bill will be opened by Wm. Manley, chairman of the committee on legislation who will be followed by E. J. Smyer of Birmingham in a further discussion of the "Bank Bill as Reported." The first day's session will conclude with five minute reviews of business conditions by the group chairmen. A large banquet will be served in the evening at the new Exchange Hotel. Wm. A. Gayle of Montgomery will act as toastmaster. At this meeting some very large guns are to be fired. The Honorable Clark Williams, comptroller of the state of New York and former banking commissioner for that state, will deliver an address on "The Need of Better Bank Supervision and Regulation." The next three speakers will be Wm. P. G. Harding of Birmingham, E. J. Buck of Mobile and J. B. Greene of Opelika. These three speakers will discuss the new banking bill from the various standpoints of the national banker, the state banker, and the country banker, respectively. Ralph H. MacMichael of Pittsburgh, president of the American Institute of Banking, will address the banqueters and will be followed by a general open discussion of the new banking bill.

At the second day's session there will be a debate on the new bill participated in by H. L. Winn of Ashland, W. S. Prout and J. L. Marx of Demopolis, Clay Sheffield of Pine Hills, A. E. Jackson of Hartselle, F. A. Merrill of Cordova, A. S. Preston of Jasper, T. M. Ferrill of Vinegar Bend, A. B. Hope of Notasulga, W. W. Fussell of Enterprise and such members as may catch the eye of the presiding officer. At the close of this public debate the previous question will be moved upon the bill and a resolution passed calling upon the legislature to pass it as submitted. The election and installation of new officers will conclude the session.

Meeting of Illinois Executive Council

The mid-winter meeting of the Illinois Bankers' executive council will be held in the assembly-room of the First National, Tuesday, January 17th. After the business session a meeting of all officially identified with the activities of the association and its committees will be held in the gold banquet room of the Congress Hotel, at 6:30 p. m. Informal. Upon this occasion all are invited to bring guests, interested in banking, to the fellowship meeting. Seating will be at small tables for six persons, which may be reserved if early notice is given, with names of those to occupy the places. "Tickets to banquet and entertainment to follow, $5.00 for each person. Please remit to secretary in advance" is one of the regulations. This is to be a good fellowship meeting and should be well attended.

Chairman J. D. Phillips will bring up any subject proposed to him for discussion by any member. He hopes the attendants will make it their own affair from start to finish.

Treasury and the Banks

"The Independent Treasury of the United States and its Relations to the banks of the Country" is the title of a volume just published by the National Monetary Commission. This monograph was written by Dr. David Kinley, professor of political economy in the University of Illinois.

During the past ten or fifteen years Dr. Kinley finds that there has grown up a policy of active interference with the money market on the part of the treasury department. This new policy, he believes, is due to the realization on the part of secretaries of the treasury and business men of the evil influences of the independent treasury system on business.

The use of the independent treasury for affording relief in a panic by means of its surplus, Dr. Kinley concludes, is not a satisfactory mode of accomplishing that purpose. He believes the harm done by the system greater than the good, and the advantages of its occasional assistance in time of crisis more than offset by its continued disturbance to the money market and the banks.

Bank Guaranty Valid in Oklahoma, Nebraska and Kansas—New York State Law Upheld

Washington, January 3.—The fights against the policy of the state guaranteeing bank deposits met with telling reverses to-day when the supreme court of the United States held constitutional the bank guaranty laws of Oklahoma, Nebraska, and Kansas.

The three acts were passed by the respective state legislatures as a result of the financial stringency beginning in 1907. They were similar except that the Nebraska law made it obligatory on all state banks to contribute to the guaranty fund to be placed in the hands of state officials, while the Oklahoma and Kansas legislatures left the contribution with its attendant duties and benefits to the discretion of the banks themselves.

The supreme court also held constitutional the New York banking law enacted in 1910 to regulate the conduct of individuals and partnerships engaged in the business of receiving deposits for safe keeping or for transmission of money to another without being licensed.

The law was enacted, so it was stated to the court, as a result of the report of the New York immigration commission and was designed to cure abuses said to exist principally in the case of banks dealing largely with immigrants and aliens.

In the bank guaranty cases the lower courts sustained the laws, but the objectors carried the cases up. In the New York case, putting restrictions on and taking supervisory powers over private banks, the lower courts decided adversely to the law but the state carried the cases up.

Baltimore Trust Increases Dividend

The Baltimore Trust Company declared a quarterly dividend of 5 per cent, placing the issue on a 20 per cent per annum basis, payable January 3d. The last disbursement was 4 per cent and an extra of 1 per cent.

Commissioner of Banking M. C. Bergh, has issued a charter authorizing the Mount Hope State Bank, capital $15,000. Andrew Carius is president and William Leighton cashier. Articles of incorporation of the Farmers State Bank of Calumet Harbor were also approved by Commissioner Bergh. The bank has a capital of $10,000 and the incorporators are H. A. Maxey, Charles Bergen, Jr., and Louis Friedman.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The Granite City Trust and Savings Bank, the new financial institution in the rapidly growing Illinois suburb of St. Louis, opened its doors for business December 24th. When closing time came that evening it was found that $30,000 had been deposited in the new bank. A man from St. Louis was the first depositor and Granite City people quickly followed until the new bank was comfortably started.

The bank has a capital of $100,000 and when State Auditor McCullough checked in the new institution the evening before it began business the stock was paid in in actual cash. From the standpoint of architectural beauty as well as from the viewpoint of banking convenience the room is all that could be desired. Officers are Chas. F. Stegel, president; F. Vorwald and G. A. Neimann, vice-presidents; R. A. Morris, cashier; and R. C. Barney, assistant cashier. The directorate includes some of the best men in Granite City, Edwardsville, Madison and Venice.

Record Prices for Land

One of the best sales of land in central Illinois is the transfer of 140 acres on McLean county near Lexington for $262.50 an acre. The Bloomington Pantagraph in reporting this sale says that it is probably the highest price ever known for McLean county land and adds that the purchaser bought the land for an investment. The $300 mark must be well in sight if the new owner expects to make a good margin of profit on the deal.

Another good sale is reported from Douglas county where 120 acres of land sold recently for $250 an acre. A thrifty German farmer paid this price. In Moultrie county a farm of eighty acres located in the vicinity of Sullivan was sold for $250 an acre.

Bloomington Clearings Increase

If bank clearings can be regarded as a barometer of business prosperity the financial situation in Bloomington must be regarded as very sound and progressive. During the year 1910 the increase in clearings in Bloomington is the largest of any year since the clearing house was established in 1900. The volume of business handled for 1910 is $5,000,000 ahead of the total for 1909.

While the general tone of business for 1910 has not been as good as some of the years preceding the financial flurry of 1907 yet the volume of business handled by the banks of Bloomington shows a remarkably healthy increase. The figures from the Bloomington clearing house also show that three times the business is now done in that city which was transacted there ten years ago. Bloomington is rapidly becoming well known as clearing center for central Illinois and some bankers prefer handling their business there to having it done in Chicago.

Pekin Postal Bank Started

As previously stated in THE CHICAGO BANKER the government will give the postal savings bank system a try-out with one bank in each state and territory. The designated postoffice in Illinois is at Pekin and the postal bank was placed in service there the first business day of the new year, January 3d. Pekin has received considerable advertising because of her new enterprise and the Chicago and down-state papers have given her special write-ups.

Postmaster Fahrman has recently returned from Washington where he has been receiving instructions relative to the new department of his office.

Banking Notes

Samuel C. Gosney, aged seventy-two, for years vice-president of the First National of Carmi, is dead.

The new building of the Mattoon National is progressing rapidly and when it is completed will be one of the best business buildings in Mattoon.

The creditors of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Macon, which failed recently, will probably receive about forty per cent of their deposits from the receiver of the bank.

Manager Donovan of the Red Sox team of Boston is making a special effort to secure Garland Stahl, better known as "Jake" for his team. Stahl is now in the banking business with his father-in-law and is serving as vice-president of the Washington Park National of Chicago.

George W. Curtis, president of the Dime Savings Bank of Peoria, represents the Peoria Clearing House Association on the committee of the Association of Commerce which is working to boost the interests of Greater Peoria.

The State Bank of Charleston has added $10,000 to its capital and has declared a dividend of five per cent. John M. Glassco, secretary of Group Six, is the cashier.

The will of the late Charles G. Brown, formerly president of the Farmers National of Springfield, has been filed for probate in that city. Mr. Brown leaves an estate of one million dollars. The property consists of railroad and other stocks and a thousand acres of Illinois farming land. The earnings of the land are to go to educational and charitable institutions among them being Blackburn College at Carlinville and the Home for the Friendless in Springfield as well as to an industrial school in Asheville, North Carolina.

"Sources of Credit Information" is the title of an address by H. A. Wheeler, vice-president of the Union Trust Company of Chicago and printed by them in pamphlet form for circulation. Inasmuch as the credit men of the country are doing a great work now in protecting banks, merchants and manufacturers from falsified and shadowy credit statements the address of Mr. Wheeler may be read by bankers with considerable interest.

Wheat Higher

With an upward rush at the opening of business on Tuesday wheat struck the dollar level after two months of a dragging market. The severe weather was the only cause in sight but the fact that the May option is so largely held by strong operators had a good deal to do with the spurt.

Throughout the entire winter wheat region of the West a condition has developed which may have a strong influence on the market. There was little snow on the ground last week but what little there was turned into water. Then there was a light general rain, followed by a sharp freeze while the water stood on the grain fields. This leaves a coating of ice on the wheat, which cannot be otherwise than hurtful. No crop is safe from serious injury in these circumstances. Wheat bulls may make the cold weather and fields of ice the basis for a strong upward movement.

The European situation has been somewhat against holders. Supplies are fair and it is learned that Russia has much more wheat to export than had been expected. Foreign speculators are apt to take hold with their American brethren now that there has been a change in conditions on this side. Deliveries will run rather light for a time, but the main factor in the bull situation is the severe weather over the winter wheat belt.

Adopt Scale of Reward for Swindlers

Kentucky bankers have declared against forgers and swindlers, and in a meeting at Lexington, adopted a resolution providing for a scale of rewards for the pursuit, capture and prosecution of persons swindling or attempting to swindle a bank in the commonwealth.

A change in the bank burglary bonding companies carrying this class of insurance was also discussed, but was held over until the next meeting so that data affecting bonding rates could be secured in the meantime.

Money, Banking and Finance from Chicago Viewpoint

Western financial men are not averse to having the great insurance companies increase their investments here. It is believed there will be full employment for bank funds before the end of winter. Otherwise there might be a disposition to monopolize the bonds of the Burnham insurance building locally. While this issue of real estate bonds is in some respects the most attractive ever made in Chicago it is probable the big eastern companies will own at least 60 per cent of them. The remainder are likely to be absorbed here.

It was the expectation until a week ago to market these bonds on a higher basis, but the condition of the money market has made this unnecessary. The whole issue amounts to four million five per cents. Easier money convinced holders that better terms could be secured and the issue goes out at $1.02½, the interest to net 4¾ per cent.

It is apparent that had this enterprise not been launched at the time of monetary stringency a few months ago a four and a half per cent bond could have been successfully floated. Burnham's projects are in high favor with investors. They invariably are worked out in a practical and skillful way and make good returns on money invested. The entire situation is encouraging to others who have deals of this nature to finance this season.

Unexpected Plethora of Capital

Money is plentiful enough at present so that as popular an issue as this would not go begging were the face return fixed at four or four and a half per cent. The present winter is an unusually favorable time for financing such projects and several more issues are looked for in the near future. Investors who keep in touch with the banks are ready to back all the real estate enterprises within the loop that have so far been spoken of. A number of million and two million dollar buildings are on the program for 1911 and they are expected to follow the plan of the insurance block, making a five per cent bond with liberal selling profits. In most cases the banks or trust companies will market these securities but may not retain ownership to any great extent.

General faith is expressed that before spring the Interstate Commerce Commission will see the necessity of freeing the railroads from restraint with reference to the proposed increase of freight rates. When this comes about business is bound to improve for the companies will once more become liberal buyers of leading commodities. It is thought that the advance in wages which has been granted by western lines will be a powerful leverage in getting Interstate Commerce action. Public sentiment has turned largely in favor of the railroads. It is the opinion of bankers generally that the condition of stagnant money will come to an end just as soon as the railway controversy is settled.

Look for Active Season

With the one dark spot on the business horizon removed it is thought there will be a season of great activity throughout the West, with the usual large employment for bank funds in mercantile lines. All early indications point to an increased wheat crop and it is probable the production of corn and cotton will fully equal that of the past year.

The year 1910 will prove to be the best in 25 years in the cotton belt. The earlier half of the calendar year was marked by high prices for the old crop, and the first third of the season in the new crop has turned out to be still better. Weather conditions during the season were never more favorable for a clean and uniformly colored fiber. Prospects for next season point to an enormous increase in the sale of fertilizers for trucking crops, cotton and corn. This movement has already begun to occupy attention of the southern railroads and shippers.

Prices in practically all staple farm products, even including cereals, are still high enough to cause the extension of acreage in nearly all kinds of spring planting. The next ninety days should determine the extent to which prices have affected the plans for the season of 1911. The farmer is able financially to enlarge his operations, and the chief question will be one of labor capacity to do the work.

Opinion as to General Business

Careful inquiry at local banks as well as among wholesale houses fails to reveal anything but a spirit of confidence with regard to general trade. Certain facts are clear enough for the most superficial observer. Crops were excellent in all parts of the country last year and judging by acreage and winter prospects farmers will maintain the position they now hold. This is considered sufficient on which to base predictions of prosperity. As W. T. Fenton recently stated in this journal, it is hard to ruin a country when it has good crops.

There is a slowing up in certain lines of manufacturing. This is due to the railroad deadlock. The roads feel compelled to pursue a policy of retrenchment until they get a decision from the Interstate Commerce Commission and while they are light buyers some lines of industry are bound to suffer. This is looked on as an exceedingly unfortunate incident that hurts the business world in spots, but it does not reflect unsound conditions anywhere, not even among the railroads, as last week's advance in wages proves.

Trouble May Soon be Over

Bad as the railroad dispute is it has none of the elements of a panic. To bring on a period of depression such as was experienced three years ago we would have to show over-expansion of business, a scarcity of capital, inability of the banks to cope with currency demands and a general lack of confidence. There are no such features in the present situation. As a truth money is overabundant just now, a fact which is largely due to good collections and a general liquidation of indebtedness, following the marketing of farm products.

The business world is ready to move forward in a normal way as soon as a decision can be reached in the rate dispute, which is the only clog on commercial affairs. In the nature of things this trouble must soon be ended. The federal administration is keenly aware of the country's desire for a decision of the pending question. So great has been the pressure of public sentiment to get this matter disposed of that it is only reasonable to look for definite action in the near future.

Armour & Company Earn 29 Per Cent

Armour & Co.'s first annual report consists of a condensed income account and a balance sheet. It shows that the net earnings for the year declined $1,310,203. In 1909 net profits were equivalent to 35.6% on the $20,000,000 stock. For the current year they were 29%.

Until the issue of the $30,000,000 bonds the company carried enormous bank loans as part of working capital. After 1907 the necessity for a more permanent means of increasing working assets than by bank loans became apparent. The $30,000,000 bonds are 5% thirty-year securities having a lien on the entire property of the company.

Net capital investment as indicated by the report is $93,983,313. President Armour says in regard to this that the earnings, which equal about 6½% on this investment, are fair, considering the unusual and unfavorable conditions under which the company operated during the year.

President Reynolds Optimistic

George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental & Commercial National, is optimistic concerning the new year. He says the only peril is from pessimists that look upon the dark side of the commercial world. On this subject he says: "In view of the abundant yield of all kinds of crops that the soil of our country produces, I regard the general physical condition of the West and South are being satisfactory. The inclination for too great an activity in real estate speculations and the expansion of credit in other directions has been much curtailed during the last few months and the tendency now with bankers and business men generally is toward a more conservative policy in this direction. Public sentiment is one of the most potent factors in all human endeavor; it exerts the same influence whether it is right or wrong; and since public sentiment is largely created through discussion of the various topics of the day in a conversational way, by those who occupy high places in business, I am a believer in the theory of conservatism in public utterances, as also I am a believer in conservatism in business.

"It is my belief that most of the things that occur in life which cause us worry and anxiety come as the result of fear of things which really never come to pass, and it has been my observation that on many occasions business has been more or less handicapped through the creation of an improper or unfair public sentiment which has misguided the public into anticipating dire calamities which never have happened."

Gold Brick

"The Gold Brick" by Brand Whitlock (publishers, Indianapolis; Bobbs-Merrill Company) contains a collection of political stories with popular interest as the pivot about which the plot revolves. Although the book contains other fine stories as "Henderson of Green," "The Has-Been," and "The Pardon of Thomas Whalen," "The Gold Brick" was evidently intended to lead them all. Neill Kittrell, a poor newspaper cartoonist for a small popular paper, was persuaded by the "Daily Telegraph" to accept their offer of a much larger salary which, he thought, would mean an end to all the ceaseless economy with which he and his wife had been living. Through this change he lost his enthusiasm for his work for during the campaign he had to flatter those he hated, and to paint his friend and often-time guest at the flat who was running for mayor as the people's man as black as possible. His wife lost interest for she was much happier struggling along on a small pittance with her husband living up to his colors than now when his heart was not in his work. However, sincerity had not altogether left him, and the reader will discover how he again became himself. All of the stories contain that apt political sketching which is characteristic of the work of the author, and makes his stories always interesting.

Detroit Banks Elect Directors

Two new names were added to the list of directors of the Detroit Trust Company, at the annual election, those being John M. Dwyer and Julius H. Haas. They were elected to fill the vacancies left by Joseph N. Wright, deceased, and another which has been left open for some time.

The complete list is as follows: John Avery, Henry P. Baldwin, Arthur H. Buhl, Edward H. Butler, Jas. E. Danaher, James E. Davidson, Chas. A. Dean, Samuel T. Douglas, Frederick E. Driggs, John M. Dwyer, Frank H. Eddy, Elisha H. Flinn, Frank W. Gilchrist, Julius H. Haas, Benton Hanchett, Oren S. Hawes, Alex. I. Lewis, Lucius Lilley, Alex. McPherson, Sidney T. Miller, Edwin C. Nichols, Geo. Peck, Daniel L. Quirk, Jr., Walter Scotten, Edward D. Stair, Chester G. White.

At the annual election of directors of the Union Trust Company, the following were re-elected: Henry B. Ledyard, F. J. Hecker, A. E. F. White, Charles Stinchfield, Henry Russel, Elliott T. Slocum, Charles A. Ducharme, Harry A. Conant, Charles L. Palms, D. C. Whitney, Philip H. McMillan, Herbert E. Boynton, George Hendrie, Albert L. Stephens, Paul F. Bagley, Burnham S. Spokane Chapter, American Institute of Banking held its first December meeting in the club rooms last week. Morton Macartney, city engineer, and Attorney J. T. Burcham were the principal speakers of the evening.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Reviewing the year of 1910 it now appears that the beginning of the year promised more than was realized. The manufacturer looked for an unusual demands for all kinds of products but his hopes were not fulfilled. According to General Otto H. Falk, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association of Milwaukee, the middle of the year witnessed a depression in a number of most important industries—orders failed to materialize and the working forces were reduced. Toward the autumn months some little revival of trade was expressed in many lines and the year closed with about a normal production to its credit.

Some of Milwaukee's industries outside of iron and steel ran not only full capacity during the entire year but at certain times that capacity was strained to the utmost to supply demands. Large additions have been made to a number of manufacturing plants and several new industries have been located in Milwaukee.

The total number of establishments in Milwaukee in 1910, embracing all of the various lines, amounts to 4,126 as compared with 3,989 for 1909, or an increase of 137; number of employees in 1910, 109,216 as compared with 105,919 for 1909—an increase of 3,602.

The total amount of wages paid in 1910 amounted to $65,853,152 or a gain of $3,795,218 over the preceding year. The total amount of capital employed in 1910 amounted to $236,558,011 as against $229,864,362 for 1909, showing a gain of $6,683,649. The estimated value of the year's production for 1910 amounts to $329,526,607 as compared with $323,354,823 for 1909.

The Year's Bond Business

Concerning bond trade for 1910 and the present condition of the bond market, Gardner P. Stickney, vice-president of the Wisconsin Trust Company, has the following to say:

"The year of 1910 was ushered in with an active security market, but for the first six months of the year prices gradually receded with a diminution of investment business throughout the entire country. Minimum prices obtained about midsummer and from that time until well into September there was perceptible firming up with fair demand for the better grade of securities. After October 1st, prices again receded slightly, but the year closed with an increasing demand for high grade securities.

"Early in the second half of the year leading bankers predicted a letting up in general business and this became apparent in certain leading lines as the year advanced. This recession in business allowed money to pile up in the banks and is creating a consequent demand for good securities. During the greater portion of the year, money has demanded a high rate of interest and this has had its effect upon the security market, investors and country bankers seemingly preferring to take advantage of the high rate on short time loans. During the latter part of the year as these loans approached maturity, it was apparent that these investors were coming in the market for good bonds. It is an axiom in the bond business that when money rates are high bond prices are correspondingly low and the shrewd investor often takes advantage of this opportunity to secure a line of good securities against the time when loan rates decrease and the price of bonds advances.

"The year 1910 has been somewhat peculiar in that there have been comparatively few large bond issues since early in the year. A significant fact which has been widely commented on recently in financial publications is that underwriters for some time have found it relatively easier to interest their clients in preferred stocks of established corporations rather than in low grade bonds. This has led to some noteworthy increases in stock issues of this class and the underwriters of these issues have experienced little difficulty in placing them quickly. As a matter of fact, in one or two local instances the stock has been heavily oversubscribed."

The Year among Milwaukee Banks

The year 1910 has been one of progress and expansion among Milwaukee banks. Some of the older institutions have taken steps to increase their business and new banks have entered the local field to compete with them.

The year has been noteworthy for the number of new buildings that have been planned and which are now under way or will be begun in the near future. One of the most important announcements of the year was that in regard to a proposed building for the Marshall and Ilsley bank. This is to be located on East Water Street, between Wisconsin and Mason streets. It will be designed exclusively for banking purposes and will be one of the most imposing structures of its kind in the city.

The Second Ward Savings Bank has also announced its intention of improving its facilities.

¶ This Bank, being at the logical center of Wisconsin banking activity, and having an exceptional list of State and Foreign correspondents, offers its services to conservative Banks with the assurance that such a connection will be of mutual advantage.

One of the most important improvements contemplated is the tearing down of the old building at West Water and Third streets and the erection of a modern bank building in its place. New branches are also planned.

During the year the Merchants and Farmers State Bank opened for business. Most of the stockholders are farmers and merchants who live in the vicinity of the bank, which is at Green Bay Avenue and Fifth Street.

The Home Savings Bank was organized during the year and will be opened for business early in the new year.

The last year has been one marked by the consolidation of banks throughout the country. Although it has been rumored that there was a possibility of Milwaukee banks merging, no definite announcements to that effect have been made.

A number of important changes have occurred in the personnel of the various banking institutions of Milwaukee during the last year. Two bank presidents and one director died during the year. They were George Brumder, president Germania National; J. M. Pereles, president Citizens Trust Company, and Edward P. Hackett, director Marine National. The resignations of M. A. Graettinger, cashier, Merchants and Manufacturers Bank, and Charles E. Arnold, second vice-president, Wisconsin National, were accepted during the year.

Wisconsin Trust Companies

Regarding trust companies Commissioner Bergh says:

"The trust company law enacted by the legislature of 1909 has not been on trial long enough to disclose all of its defects. It is however, apparent, even at this early date, that certain limits should be fixed by law, both as to the amount that might be loaned to any one person, firm or corporation, as well as the territory where such loans may be made, in order that added protection be given to the depositors, and also to materially simplify the work of examination and supervision. I can conceive of no good reason for permitting savings and time deposits in trust companies, to be invested under different rules than those established for the same class of deposits in state banks and mutual savings banks. This law as a whole is, however, an improvement over the old law, in so far as it requires the deposits received to be held or invested separately from other funds or properties held by the corporation, so that in case of insolvency or liquidation all such funds and investments made therefrom are primarily liable and must be used for the payment of such deposits."

Bank Commissioner's Annual Report

In his annual report submitted to Governor Davidson on December 30th, State Bank Commissioner M. C. Bergh said that there were no losses to depositors in any of the 510 state banks and 11 trust companies under his supervision in 1910.

"These institutions," says Commissioner Bergh, "have had a very prosperous year. The deposits in state and mutual savings banks have increased $19,523,976.83 and the resources, $21,978,064.66."

The total resources and liabilities of the 510 banks on November 1, 1910, were $162,125,640.30 as against $140,155,455.87 on November 16, 1909.

During the year covered by the report thirty-eight new state banks were chartered and one surrendered its charter, the net gain in the number being thirty-seven.

The bank which liquidated was the State Bank of North Prairie with a capital of $10,000. The bank was taken over by the State Bank of Genesee Depot, Genesee Depot, Wisconsin.

Bank Mergers Fall Through

In denial of the rumor that a consolidation of the Milwaukee National with the First National of this city is impending, although at the same time admitting that overtures in this direction have been made by the latter institution, the Milwaukee National has issued the following statement to its stockholders and depositors:

"Although a large bonus was offered by a very strong financial institution of this city for the business and good will of the Milwaukee National, our directors decided unanimously to continue business. Thanking you for past favors, hoping for a continuance of the same and wishing you a happy and prosperous New Year, we are,

"Yours respectfully,
W. F. FILTER, Cashier."

President George W. Strohmeyer of the bank is disinclined to discuss the matter beyond saying that he is pleased at the termination of affairs. He conceded that during the last ten days negotiations had been pending toward the sale of the business and good will of the Milwaukee National, and that a flattering offer had been made, which the board of directors has decided not to accept.

The Milwaukee National was organized and incorporated in 1853 and reorganized in 1865. It is one of the oldest and most conservative banks in Milwaukee. At the time of its last report its capital was placed at $450,000 with a surplus of $100,000. The officers are: President, George W. Strohmeyer; vice-presidents, L. M. Alexander and C. Pensthorpe; cashier, William F. Filter; assistant cashier, John F. Strohmeyer.

The bank owns the building which it occupies on the northeast corner of East Water and Michigan Streets.

This deal has been pending for several weeks but as negotiations progressed it became apparent that the required two-thirds of the stockholders could not be induced to consider the consolidation and it was therefore abandoned.

Year's Bank Record Good

The annual report of the Milwaukee Clearing House Association shows an increase in clearings of $55,122,112.90 over those of 1909. Balances show an increase of $1,671,283.79.

Prominent La Crosse Banker Retires

E. E. Bentley, president of the Batavian National, the second largest in Wisconsin outside of the city of Milwaukee, has announced his retirement. Mr. Bentley has been president of the bank for sixteen years and has been an employee or an officer of it since 1866. He was recently married to Miss Anna Head, of Beloit, a young high school teacher, and has just returned from a honeymoon trip through Europe. Albert Hirscheimer, president of the La Crosse Plow Company, will succeed him as president. Mr. Bentley said he now proposed to enjoy his life and to spend much of his time in traveling in America and Europe. He is 67 years old and his bride is 28.

Association Secretary Optimistic

Commenting upon the future, Secretary George D. Bartlett, of the Wisconsin Bankers Association says, "There is nothing in the conditions of the central west to indicate anything except a continuance of prosperity of 1910. Judging from the reports from the eastern section of the country they do not impress me as it being a desirable time for the laborer to insist upon higher wages."

Retirement on pension of persons with the bank a stated term and who have passed an age limit to be set has been determined by the Northwestern National. Directors F. E. Kenaston, A. R. Rogers and L. S. Gillette have been appointed to work out the plans for submission January 10th. The plan was presented by two vice-presidents, E. W. Decker and Joseph Chapman, Jr. Action approves the plan to appropriate a lump sum to start with, the amount to be decided. Forty-seven employees were on the roll ten years ago and 194 now. The Minnesota Loan & Trust Company, an affiliation, has forty-seven. If the plan includes both institutions the total will be considered. Several employees have reached sixty and are eligible for retirement.

Country in Good Shape

An estimate of the year by W. A. Miller, president of the St. Paul First National, reads: "The year has been a good one. There is nothing pessimistic in our outlook. The year's business has been satisfactory, and the anticipations of depression due to exaggerated crop predictions, which were discounted by the real yield, were not realized. It is true some points have felt a shortage of crops where the country was a one-crop territory, but the embarrassment has been only temporary, and the country is in very good shape, especially the Northwest. There is plenty of money in the St. Paul banks for all legitimate needs, and there has been no tightening of credit. The rate on commercial paper is the same and, in fact, a little lower than it was a few months ago."

St. Paul and Minneapolis Clearings

St. Paul bank clearings show a gain of $58,728,433. Every month but three showed material gains. The clearings for the year, last day estimated, were $575,972,796.

Bank clearings in Minneapolis for 1910 were $1,155,659,665, a gain of $125,744,809. December showed clearings of $102,794,784, a decrease. Clearings for four previous years were: 1910,

$1,155,659,665; 1909, $1,029,914,856; 1908, $1,057,468,860; 1907, $1,145,462,150.

High Crop Record Made in 1907

E. W. Decker, vice-president of the Northwestern National, said: "The former high record was made in 1907, a year of an enormous crop and high prices for grain. 'The year 1910 did not raise as great a total crop in country tributary to Minneapolis as was raised in 1907, and prices did not rule as high on the whole. Yet the bank transactions ran to a new high record, showing that business in all the manufacturing, wholesale, and retail lines increased greatly. There will be much new building, I believe, in Minneapolis in 1911. Business in general will be affected somewhat by the lighter crop produced last year in some portions of the Northwest, but it will be a good year.'"

Cover Man Poisoned

The Interstate Protective Association has lost a "cover man." He was fed wood alcohol when he asked for a drink, presumably by men who suspected him of reporting their movements to the association detectives. The act was in October in an obscure town in Iowa. The cover man was in jail. He managed to get a word to his companions, all yeggs, to slip him a bottle, which he drained.

"We must withhold his name, and even that of the town in which he was killed," said Charles R. Frost, secretary of the association. "He was on the 'square' with us, served us faithfully and the oath we took when he entered our employ not to reveal his identity to any one under any circumstances will be observed, even though he is dead. We have many other former yeggmen working for us as 'cover men' and if we should betray him even now we could never expect them to play 'square' with us."

Condition comments are as follows: F. A. Chamberlain, president Security National, "I can see no reason why we should not enjoy continued prosperity the coming year;" Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president Northwestern National, "The past year was satisfactory. It is the general feeling among bankers that the business of the Northwest will be satisfactory in 1911;" V. H. Van Slyke, president Metropolitan National, "I see no reason why 1911 should not be a fairly good year. Political conditions are becoming settled and more conservatism is being shown;" F. M. Prince, president First National, "Business has been good and we do not see why it should not continue so for the coming year;" Theodore Wold, president Scandinavian American National, "Business is fine. If it was any better now than it is we could not take care of it."

Paul Commercial Club, urged a unification of the various business organizations, continued activity in bringing conventions; further efforts to bring homeseekers to Minnesota.

The Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank of Wabasha, $25,000 capital, has as incorporators, J. B. Kelley, E. B. Kenefic, Joseph Welp, Lawrence Scherohammer, J. B. Ulrich.

At the close of business for the year the Minneapolis treasurer had $835,118 in cash and in banks as compared with $2,068,936 the year previous. Interest collected on bank balances in 1910 amounted to $43,888.

Minnesota Trust Buys School Bonds

The Minnesota Loan & Trust Company has bought $200,000 school board notes running six months and bearing interest at 4 5-16 per cent. Other bids were received. The board will pay an obligation to the city. President G. H. Elwell of the school board had already commented on the inability of the city to sell bonds at 4 per cent, but the bonds cannot sell below par and cannot pay more than 4. It is expected that market conditions in 1911 will permit the sale of bonds, and meanwhile the board will have the money.

Bankers' Personal Property Valuations

Personal property valuations on bankers are reported as follows: W. H. Dunwoody, president Northwestern National, $240,600; F. H. Wellcome, Union Investment Company, $20,425; M. B. Koon, vice-president Northwestern National, $15,990.

Bookkeeping of All Minneapolis Banks Similar

As to the required uniformity in bank bookkeeping, H. A. Willoughby, cashier Minneapolis First National, says: "The national banks of Minneapolis keep their books in a manner so nearly alike there is substantially no difference. It is not always practicable for a smaller bank to follow the exact system that a larger bank finds practicable, but, generally speaking, there is no difference in the accounting while among the larger banks the system is practically uniform."

State Asks for Certificate of Alabama Firm

J. B. Galarneault, retiring superintendent of banks in Minnesota, has asked the Standard

Home Company of Birmingham, Ala., to surrender a certificate recently granting it to do business in the state. The company, the superintendent says, showed on August 31, 1910, a paid up capital stock of $81,270, with authorized stock of $500,000, and its certificate is for $500,000. This, he believes, was obtained to show high capitalization to increase business in Minnesota. Secretary of State Schmahl says that the law should be changed in the state, where it is customary to issue certificates for the amount specified in the articles of incorporation.

Defunct Bank Gives Full Payment

When the Edgemont State Bank, S. D., went into the receiver's hands a year ago it had no funds. The receiver, Fred L. Dunn, who has just been discharged, had paid dollar for dollar and a 2 per cent dividend. The bank failed through ill advised investments of the president in local real estate. When the president agreed to turn his property over sentence was suspended. Edgemont prospered, values increased and the result was full payment.

Consolidation Completed

J. W. Molyneaux has been elected president of the Minnesota National to liquidate it. The Scandinavian American National, which took the deposits, and assets to cover them, will have a sum to pay back, representing the excess. The Minnesota National has a lease on its former quarters of four years to run at $3,600 a year and a twenty-year lease of its new quarters, nineteen and one-half to run, at $6,000.

The transfer of the bank to the Scandinavian American National building was accomplished safely, the clerks over the holidays transferring the accounts, opening new pass books, and closing old accounts, or 6,000 operations. The Minnesota had 1,300 customers and the other bank 1,800.

Bank of England Notes

About the year 1819 a great outcry was raised against the Bank of England for not adopting a style of note that could not be imitated, at the same time preventing the sacrifice of life which at that period was all too common, the punishment for forgery being death. The subject at last became so pressing that the government appointed commissioners to investigate the cause of the numerous forgeries, and whether a mode could be devised whereby the forging of bank notes might be prevented. The result was the bank note of to-day. The color of the paper is peculiar and cannot be imitated exactly by counterfeiters except at great expense. The combined thinness and strength of the paper was also unique. It is made in sheets large enough for two notes. Each note, before it is sized, weighs about 18 grains, and if then doubled, it is strong enough to suspend a weight of 36 pounds.

Peculiar, too, is the texture of the paper. It has a crisp feel, invariably the same, and such that bank clerks of experience can readily detect forgeries by this test alone. Then the wire mark, impressed in the making by a frame, costly to make and difficult to use, is practically inimitable. Each note has thin, rough edges, uncut, not to be produced by any mode of cutting paper that is not made expressly for the purpose.

The paper for printing is dampened with water in the exhausted receiver of an air pump. The ink used in the plate printing is made of Frankfort black, which is composed of the charcoals of the tendrils and husks of the German grape, ground with linseed oil. This ink has a peculiar and very deep shade of black, common black inks being tinted either with blue or brown.

Currency Associations

Washington, December 31.—Completed statistics show that more than 32 per cent of the national banking power of the United States now is represented in emergency currency associations, which Secretary MacVeagh has been urging the bankers to form. Returns show that out of the 7,204 national banks in existence 227 of them are members of currency associations, but that small number represents $542,024,720 of capital and surplus.

The capital of all the banks in the associations is $288,954,710 and under the Aldrich-Vreeland law they are authorized, in event of an emergency, to issue that amount in notes, which already have been prepared. The law provides that at no time shall the issue of emergency currency exceed $500,000,000.

Dividend for Allegheny Bank Creditors

The comptroller of the currency declared an eighth dividend to the creditors of the Allegheny National, of Pittsburgh, of 8 per cent, or $127,445.81 on claims proved amounting to $2,548,913.16, making total dividends paid of 85 per cent. This bank was closed May 18, 1908.

Editorial Comment

What Illinois Needs

If Illinois had a law safeguarding the business of banking we would not have a Cosmopolitan "bank" issuing millions in certificates of deposit, based upon wind, and traded off for anything from a bull pup or a bicycle to a livery stable leasehold or an ancient grand piano. We would not have the Jankovitch and the Butler scandal, where boys of 22 years open "banks" and make clean sweeps of the deposits.

Alabama and Arkansas are up in arms, their state associations are fighting for the passage of legitimate banking laws, to protect the public.

In Illinois the association has raised no great smoke in its efforts to put an end to wildcat banking. In very truth the association for twenty years has secretly worked against the passage of any law limiting the depredations which may be committed upon any unprotected community under the name bank. Ex-convicts can open a "bank" in Illinois and can call it "The Peoples Trust and Savings Bank" or "The Security Savings" or any other misleading title and there is no law to stop them. There are no requirements as to capital, character, ability, desirability or safety—positively none. One act was slipped through—the Hurd statute—preventing the use of corporate titles by private or unincorporated parties, but the courts construed it that the law only forbade actual deception by statement or otherwise. In short the law was nullified in favor of the wildcats.

Two of the five states in the same condition of Illinois have decided to pass drastic reform laws, the kind that always follow ill advised resistance to needed reforms. Alabama has been in Chaos so far as banking regulations are concerned, but her state association always has favored the establishment of a state banking department with supervisory powers. The association will meet in Montgomery on January 18th to act in a body with the legislature which then will be in session for the passage of a new banking act. Many of the reforms asked for have been printed in THE CHICAGO BANKER but in the "final draft," sent out by secretary McLane Tilton, over the seal of the state association, some new restrictions have been provided.

We remember two swindling private banks, but flaunting famous national and international titles, which opened not long ago on Dearborn Street, Chicago, one with furniture bought on the installment plan and the other with rented fixtures. They lasted but a few months and the loss in each case was total. Notice how such persons would fare under the proposed new Alabama law.

carrying on of the banking business without first giving notice of intention to organize and carry on such business by publication at least once a week for four successive weeks in a newspaper to be designated by the superintendent of banks published in the city or town or county where such bank is proposed to be located. Such notice shall specify the name or names of the individual or individuals proposed to be interested in such bank, what interest each will have, the amount of the capital proposed to be used in the proposed banking business, the name under which and the place where the business will be carried on, and the bona fide cash value of the assets and property of each individual to be interested in the bank, over and above all indebtedness. Copy of such published notice shall be served on any bank or banks in the community and affidavit shall be made and filed with the superintendent of banks, and the superintendent of banks shall investigate and ascertain whether the character and general fitness of the individuals named are such as to command the confidence of the community in which such bank is proposed to be located, the same as is required preliminary to the incorporation of a bank under the provisions of Sec. 24 and Sec. 25 hereof.

The superintendent of banks may refuse a permit if any one of these precautions are evaded. The only recourse is to the courts and all the objectors are to be heard. Could Jankovitch, or Butler or the Cosmopolitan have had even a look in under such a law? Then after they do open up there are regular and rigid examinations and published reports. Banking is made incomparably safer if the bad ones never are allowed to start. What Illinois needs is just such a law.

Deferred Action Hurts the Public

John J. Mitchell, president of Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, in a statement to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER, deprecates the Interstate Commerce Commission's delay with reference to freight rates and shows how this deferred action is hurting public interests. Mr. Mitchell is accustomed to weigh his words carefully and his views are worthy of consideration.

The railroads are the greatest buying power in the country and when they adopt a policy of retrenchment all business is more or less injured. It is not necessary to take sides for or against the railway companies to understand the need of more prompt action by the government's representatives. A decision one way or the other regarding the proposed advance of freight rates is highly desirable, so that business interests may know where they stand.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has too much work, if it is required by law to spend month after month in studying the business of running railroads. In all its work since the beginning it has been hampered by the endless details of railroad affairs and on this account it is always behind. There is no branch of government work that needs to be more promptly and vigorously pressed to a conclusion than these investigations of railway affairs.

It has been somewhat popular to side against large corporations in everything, but in the main the American people are for fair play. The best information obtainable is that the railway companies stand in need of a moderate advance in rates. They feel the higher cost of labor and all other operating expenses. This fact is at once apparent. It may be set down as settled that there will be little railroad construction in the West until the roads are able to show larger earnings.

Exports and Prosperity

Without large and continual exports the prosperity of this country would come more and more into doubt. Exports cannot be maintained without producing larger crops. The unoccupied land has been reduced to a comparatively small area and as the population of the United States is steadily growing, it is easy to imagine a state of affairs wherein we will not have flour enough for home demands without becoming importers.

The call is for an increase in agricultural production that equals or exceeds the actual increase of population, including the immigrants and the temporarily high birth rate of the foreign born. But, notwithstanding the fact that this difficulty is greater in the United States than it is in all other countries that have practically ceased to take much new land into cultivation, many of the states of this nation are each maintaining an increase of production in the case of one or more prominent crops that is greater than the actual increase of population.

Better farming is needed as well as an increased acreage. Exports of wheat might easily be double what they are from the land already under cultivation in America.

New Banking Law for Illinois

One of the best of the many good features of the new banking laws proposed for Alabama and Arkansas (now the law in many states) is that giving the commissioner of banking the power to refuse a bank charter for cause. Illinois has a confessed bribe taker, a senator if you please, just opening a state bank at Iuka. This senator, then a private banker, swore in court that he had accepted as a bribe for his vote in an important matter, the sum of $2,500. The money was paid over in a notorious public drinking place in Chicago. The senator has been indicted in two counties and yet he could take out a state bank charter without a question. If he will remit his dues he can become a member of the Illinois Bankers Association and sit with the very elect in their deliberations for the welfare of the state and the uplifting of the profession.

The new constitution, or the old one "revised and rejuvenated" should have a qualification clause for use in such cases. The new Illinois banking act should give the new banking department discretionary powers. Not under any modern banking law could D. M. Holtslaw embark in a business which he dishonored and disgraced.

Tells of Better Conditions

Addison Corneau, assistant cashier of Western Trust and Savings Bank, made a trip to Springfield last week, where he found a decided improvement in business conditions. This change for the better is explained by the settlement of labor troubles at the coal mines and by the large corn crop. The Springfield district occupies an important position in mining and the city is a financial center for a number of large corporations. It also is one of the best farming markets in the state. Farmers in that region are among the most prosperous in the world. Mr. Corneau states that financial men at the capital are confident the new year will be one of prosperity.

New Bank War on Crime

Frequency of bank burglaries has brought financial men of Illinois into a new war on crime. Pestered by yeggmen until patience has ceased to be a virtue, numerous bankers in the smaller towns of this state are in a move to secure increased protection. Their first step in this direction is to add to the safety of their buildings and enhance the character of their equipment.

This movement is the result of correspondence started by Secretary R. L. Crampton of Illinois Bankers Association, who has ascertained that the cheapness and inadequacy of safes, vaults, and buildings in many interior towns are proving to be a direct invitation to burglars. This fact is readily and generally admitted by bankers, a majority of whom are believed to be in favor of a sufficiently increased investment to place their institutions on a safer footing.

It is thought that orders will be ready by the end of this winter for from fifty to one hundred new vaults and safes of high type. Inquiry already is being made among manufacturers and dealers and it is supposed that patronage on so extensive a scale will secure unusually favorable rates.

Burglar insurance is carried by nearly all bankers and while this may be sufficient to reimburse them for the money actually carried off when a robbery has been committed it does not recompense for the stoppage of business, the waste of time in securing repairs to equipment and the annoyance of having to conduct a campaign against the criminals. In many cases a bank's credit is injured by a robbery and nothing can reimburse it for this, according to the views of men who are in the new move to place stronger safeguards around their establishments.

Secretary Crampton while ably assisting in the development of all new plans for fighting crime is an earnest advocate of burglary insurance, claiming that it should be the first step with every banker. An adequate insurance has a good moral effect on a community when the question of a bank's solvency is raised after a robbery has been effected. It is felt, however, that nearly all of the smaller banks can improve their position by adding better equipment and improving their buildings.

Yeggs Fail to Blow Safe

An attempt to rob the Farmers Banks at Strasburg in Cass county, seven miles east of Pleasant Hill, Mo., last Saturday morning failed. The door to the vault was blown off, but several shots failed to move the door of the safe inside.

Several persons heard the explosion but nobody paid any attention until the discovery of the attempted robbery this morning when the bank opened for the day. The damage to the vault and safe is about $300. There was $3,000 in the safe.

Burglars, who blew the safe of the People's Savings Bank at Britton, Mich., early last Friday, fled from town without any booty, pursued by a large posse of citizens, with whom they exchanged shots freely. Pursued and pursuers seized hand cars and raced down the railroad to a wooded tract near Maybee, where the robbers left the railroad and disappeared in the woods.

Two suspects, who had a gun and a kit of burglars' tools, were arrested near Azalia and locked up at Monroe. They gave their names as James Mira of Flint and George McDonald. Another suspect who refused to give any name, was arrested near Adrian.

The Absolutely Dependable Car

The Car That Ends the Era of Artificial values

It would be the sheerest folly to approach the motor car buying public in these days of strenuous competition in moderate priced cars with anything but absolutely the best value for the money ever offered.

Measured by perfect motor car satisfaction—appearance, durability, dependability, performance and economy in up-keep—the Westcott 45-50 is the best motor car value money can buy and the greater your knowledge of motor cars, the keener will be your appreciation of this, the car that ends the era of artificial motor car values. No car like it has ever been sold for less than $3,500.

Easy on Tires

The Westcott 45-50 is equipped with 36x4 Diamond tires that will give you the very best tire service.

The big 36 inch wheels assure wonderful road-smoothness and the splendid semi-elliptic spring equipment makes easy riding and saves the wear and tear on the machinery. You can ride all day, every day, with comfort.

Not a One Feature Car But a Car of Proven Essentials

The Westcott 45-50 is a consistently balanced combination of proven essentials—strength, simplicity, absolute silence, light weight, high power, perfect lubrication, easy manipulation—a car in which the strength and efficiency of no one feature has been sacrificed for any other—in which speed has not been sought at the expense of comfort, safety and economical up-keep—yet there is always an abundant reserve power to climb the steepest hills, without perceptible effort or to do

50 miles an hour, when the road permits, and at a minimum of operating expense.

It Looks an "Aristocrat"

—and it is, too, in all save price and we make no apologies for that. Any car now selling for $3,500 if built in the Westcott factory by the Westcott labor saving economical methods, could be sold at the price of the Westcott 45-50—if the makers were satisfied with the Westcott profit per car.

If your ideal car has been one costing $3,500 to $5,000, a revelation now awaits you. In appearance and style the Westcott 45-50 is distinguished in the company of the most expensive cars. Its perfect, silent mechanism, graceful, racy outlines, richness of finish, its interior and exterior refinements are those you have hitherto regarded as distinctive of and exclusive in the very highest priced cars.

Easy to Manipulate

It has none of the anxieties or burdens of the average, heavy touring car. It is roomy and luxurious, but not ponderous. You don't feel the weight. It has the feeling of flexibility of the small motor car and all the independence of action that goes with it.

Each Car Sold Sells Others

Our claims for this car are broad and your guarantee that this car is all we claim for it is the reputation of its manufacturers—for many years one of the largest and best known makers of vehicles in the world, composed of men with national reputations for creating the best, regardless of cost. Such a firm could not afford to stake its reputation and invest millions of capital in any car that was not predestined to be a success from its very first inception—unless each car manufactured was so thoroughly satisfactory to its user that it sold others—and lots of them.

You cannot get more than the Westcott 45-50 offers, no matter what you pay for it. That's why the Westcott 45-50 is a startling innovation. If you are thinking "motor car" this year, it will pay you to completely satisfy yourself that it is utterly impossible to buy a better built car at any price. It is the ideal car that meets the requirements of family and business as no other car can.

Write today for complete literature, specifications and the name of a local dealer who will gladly give you a demonstration without imposing any obligation upon you.

This means more mileage, more service every day in the year, under all sorts of conditions.

Simple in Construction

Simplicity is not merely avoiding a multitude of parts parts simple in themselves can be put together so as to cause complicated methods of operation. Everything connected with its operation is simple—nothing cumbersome—everything easily accessible—readily removable—means dependability, long life, economical up-keep.

1911 Westcotts Larger—More Powerful

It has a 45-50 h. p., 4 cylinder, 4 1/2 inch stroke, 5 inch bore, Rutenber motor—the cylinders are cast separately and individually mounted on crank case of special aluminum alloy, making it the best, most durable, most silent engine ever put into a motor car.

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

Creation of a Gold Depository by Kansas City Banks

In preparing this paper relative to the creation of a gold depository by the Kansas City Clearing House Association, and in taking advantage of Mr. Allendoerfer's kind request, I have endeavored to make this discussion as brief and concise as possible.

I have tried to bring before you the kindred facts materially affecting its character and those essential to be known to have a correct understanding.

As reported in the December Bulletin of the American Institute of Banking, the monetary wealth of the United States on July 1, 1910, amounted to nearly three and one half billion dollars; of this amount $1,635,000,000 was in gold coin and bullion. Approximately speaking sixty per cent of this held in the treasury and forty per cent was in circulation. The gold coin held by Kansas City banks at that time was estimated at a little over four million dollars. I have presented these figures for your consideration, so that you may have an idea of our holdings as compared with the actual amount in circulation, also as this coin was the principal reason for effecting the introduction of a gold depository here. Nothing has so emphatically demonstrated the necessity of a more efficient method of settlement of clearing house balances, than has the presence of this coin. It has had a known and experienced connection with such settlements.

The question then arises, what are the functions of this coin. The percentage paid out over the counter is not large enough to consider and very few requests are received from country correspondents to ship gold, consequently this kind of money has a tendency to accumulate, augmented to some extent by incoming shipments and individual depositors.

Prior to the clearing house rule which created a gold depository, I believe that about ninety-five per cent of the gold held here adorned the reserve safes of our clearing house members.

The banks have from time to time shipped gold to their Eastern correspondents at St. Louis, thereby creating exchange at an expense of sixty-five cents a thousand. This of course was usually done when the premium on Eastern exchange was greater than the cost of shipping and when currency was not available. But the receiving banks can only handle a limited amount of gold on account of the abrasion that this kind of money suffers. (By abrasion I mean a loss of weight, and the loss of weight to gold means a loss of value.) So you can readily see that they can afford to absorb only a reasonable amount of loss when any occurs. To remove this difficulty it follows that the shipping bank in making up such shipments use the larger coin when possible, for the 20's and the 10's suffer less abrasion in handling than do the smaller coin.

Taking the foregoing into consideration you can understand that the use of gold for the creation of exchange, is only under certain conditions an economical proposition.

This then brings us to consider the large local function of gold coin, which was the important factor in the creation of a gold depository in this city. Our banks have used gold to a noticeable extent in payments of clearing house balances. This brought about constant complaints by several members of the association, on account of the occasional short weight gold and the difficulties arising therefrom.

I wish to state here that the settlement of clearing house balances is a matter which should be carefully considered, for the proper management of such settlements will do a great deal toward enhancing the banking facilities of a community.

The complication then of circumstances so intimately interwoven as to be hardly separable from each other created a situation that required some attention.

It was these conditions that caused the submission of a measure touching upon the mode and manner as to the use of gold for clearing house settlements. Mr. Thralls drew up and presented to the Clearing House Association a plan to remove this precise difficulty.

The plan as it was presented, was sufficiently attractive as to induce its adoption, and it provides a satisfactory and economic method whereby gold can be used for the liquidation of such indebtedness. It is based on expediency and attaches itself to the local circumstances. In this respect the essential parts of the plan are so connected as to be incapable of separation.

The rules creating a gold depository are as follows:

1. This association shall receive on deposit, in special trust, such United States gold coin of standard weight and fineness, or United States gold certificates, as any member of the association may choose to send to it for safe keeping for clearing house purposes, which coin and United States gold certificates shall be kept in such safe deposit vaults as may be selected by the clearing house committee, subject to the approval of the association.

This rule tells us exactly what is to be received in this depository, and also provides a place for keeping such deposits. The association rented a safe deposit box at the Fidelity Trust Company for this purpose.

2. Certificates in lieu of such deposits shall be issued in denominations of 5 and 10 M. dollars, and shall be signed by the president of the association, chairman of the clearing house committee, and manager, or, in the absence of the president, by the vice-president, and in the absence of the chairman of the clearing house committee, by any member designated by the committee.

This rule says what shall be given in return for the deposit, also as to the necessary signatures on the certificates.

3. Such certificates shall be negotiated only among members of the association and shall be received in payment of clearing house balances.

4. The coin and gold certificates, thus placed in special deposit, shall be the absolute property of such of the members as shall from time to time be holders of the clearing house certificates, and are to be held subject to withdrawal on presentation to special committee (consisting of manager and any two members of the clearing house committee) of certificates, properly endorsed, at any time during banking hours.

These two rules relate to ownership and convertibility.

5. Settlements of clearing house balances shall be paid in currency, clearing house gold certificates, or United States gold coin, of standard weight and fineness; and a member receiving gold coin may deposit same with the clearing house committee, and the paying members shall settle promptly for any light weight coin, or short count, reported by said committee.

This rule relates to the use of the certificates, and also the condition under which gold itself can be used for such purposes.

6. This association shall be responsible for the safe custody of all gold coin or United States gold certificates which may be so deposited with it, and for its return to certificate holders when demanded.

7. Gold coin or United States gold certificates held by the association, for which clearing house certificates have been issued, shall be counted and reported upon at least once a year by a special committee appointed by the president.

8. Should any loss occur while such coin or certificates are in the custody of the association, such loss shall be borne or paid by the member or members found responsible therefor by the clearing house committee. But if the responsibility for the loss cannot be so fixed and determined, the same shall be prorated among the members of the clearing house on the basis of the respective total footings of their last official published statements, preceding the discovery of such loss.

9. The manager and each member of the clearing house committee shall have the combination to safe deposit vaults or boxes where such gold coin or certificates may be stored, but access thereto shall only be permitted by owner of such boxes or vaults when not less than two members of such clearing house committee appear in person, and who shall be personally known to the manager of the safe deposit vaults.

These four clauses provide for the responsibility, care and protection of the plan.

10. Any member of the Clearing House Association who shall pay or deliver to any party, other than a member of the association, a certificate of deposit issued by the Clearing House Association shall be subject to a fine of one hundred dollars ($100.00.)

This last clause may not appear to be indispensable, yet it creates an obligation and places the banks under the degree of protection it has undertaken to bestow.

These rules went into effect on August 10, 1910, and the gold that was used as payment

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Wash., January 4.—James J. Hill, chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern Railway Company, while in Spokane on December 20th said that the state of Washington, and more especially the eastern part, will be the scene of a large influx of desirable settlers the coming spring and with them, he added, is bound to come considerable capital. He announced also that his company will expend hundreds of thousands of dollars in and near Spokane just as soon as the city and railroad can make arrangement for the separation of grade. He added: "There is no better city of its size in the country to-day than Spokane."

This view is shared by Julius Kruttschnitt, vice-president and director of maintenance of the Harriman system, who passed several days in Spokane, who announced that the work in Spokane on the North Coast Railroad, the largest undertaking on the line operated by the Oregon-Washington system, will be completed inside of the specified time. Mr. Kruttschnitt was in Spokane to arrange for the transfer of the North Coast Railroad Company's property to the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company. He was accompanied by W. W. Colton, counsel. The North Coast Railroad Company, of which Robert E. Strahorn of Spokane was president, absorbed in the merger ceased business at 11:59 o'clock in the evening, December 23d.

A. W. Doland, retiring president of the Spokane Merchants Association, reported at the annual meeting of that organization that 1910 was the best business year in its history. R. C. Dillingham was elected president for 1911, J. B. Campbell being retained as secretary. The association has 105 active members, representing every line of business in Spokane.

Taxable Property has Increased

J. E. Frost, chairman of the state board of tax commissioners, said in Spokane on December 22d the assessed valuation of property in Washington has trebled since 1900, the total for 1910 being $907,000,000. The population doubled in the last 10 years. He added that the value of stock and money of banks and bankers has increased more than 400 per cent in five years. Six million acres of land is under cultivation, as against 3,600,000 in 1906. He added: "As the ratio of assessed valuation to the actual value of property in the state is approximately 37 per cent, it appears that the real value of tangible property within the state is $2,450,000,000. This does not include money and other intangible property, such as notes, stocks (excepting those of banks,) bonds, mortgages and other evidences of indebtedness. The actual wealth in Washington is more than $2,100 per capita."

Statement of Trust Company

R. Lewis Rutter, secretary and manager of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company, has prepared a preliminary statement, showing that this concern handled a total of $249,375,138.64 in the various departments in 1910, an increase of $50,000,000 over 1909. The items follow: Individuals, $91,997,915.47; time certificates of deposit, $390,211.81; demand certificates of deposit, $1,979,933.38; escrows, $1,590,632.70; warrants, $1,429,610.72; mortgages and real estate, $1,627,163.33; bills receivable, $15,621,722.42; savings deposits, $1,858,278.27; trust department, $1,260,144.25; out of town banks, $42,287,212.13; remittances, $30,605,405.96; insurance department, $19,990.24; rent, $27,414.03; reserve banks, $57,238,821.13; bonds, stocks and other securities, $1,432,981.80, total, $249,375,138.64.

Big Bond Deal Negotiated

Speed and precision marked the handling of a bond issue of $1,000,000, bearing 6 per cent interest, to run five years, for the Idaho & Washington Northern Railway Company by the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, through the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company. Within 48 days after F. A. Blackwell, president of the company, had taken up the matter with the bank the money was at his disposal. Herbert Witherspoon, trust officer of the bank, negotiated the deal, the Guaranty Trust Company being represented by L. B. Franklyn, vice-president, who made a personal inspection of the property. Mr. Franklyn was so favorably impressed with the Inland Empire that it is believed his company will make additional investments in this district. The system, operating through the Pend Oreille valley in Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho, 115 miles, with an entrance to Spokane over the Spokane International road, is declared by railroad men to have the best roadbed and equipment of any line in America, length considered. The company has just completed 10 miles of road from Lone to Metaline Falls, Wash., a new manufacturing town, at a cost of almost $1,000,000, part of the road bed being hewn out of solid rock. Mr. Blackwell owns several townsites and lumber mills in Northern Idaho and is rated a millionaire.

One hundred and thirty-three residents of Spokane own property in Spokane and the district aggregating a value of $58,000,000, according to a compilation made by The Chronicle. Of these 21 are designated as millionaires, 28 each have wealth of more than $500,000 and 81 possess a quarter million dollars or more.

Bank Clerks Well Remembered

Employees of Spokane banks were well remembered at Christmas time in the way of gifts, between $10,000 and $12,000 being given them by their employers as presents for faithful work. Gifts of 10 per cent of the year's salary were given by the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company. The Old National gave each employe 25 per cent of a month's salary in gold coin. The Exchange National gave gold coin in accordance with the salary of the employee and in addition a $10 gold piece for each year the employee had been with the bank. Several employees drew more than $100. The Traders' National gave a gold coin in accordance with the salary and position of the employee. The National Bank of Commerce gave each 10 per cent of a month's salary. The Fidelity National, Northwest Loan & Trust Company and Scandinavian-American bank each gave their employees suitable gifts in gold. The Washington Trust Company gave all employees 5 per cent of a year's salary, allowing the employee to draw 25 per cent the first year, 50 per cent the second year and 75 per cent the third, and after the fourth year to draw it all with 6 per cent interest on all remaining in the bank after the first year. The smaller banks also gave gifts in gold coin.

Old National Opens New Home

Bankers from various parts of the Pacific Northwest and thousands of residents of Spokane and the tributary district attended the reception at the opening of the Old National Bank's new quarters at Riverside Avenue and Stevens Street, the evening of December 31st. The big structure was illuminated from cellar to pent-house. W. J. Kommers, assistant cashier of the bank, who had charge of the construction of the building had charge of the celebration, the reception committee including D. W. Twohy, president; W. D. Vincent cashier; J. A. Yeomans, W. J. Smithson, Levi Ankeny, F. A. Blackwell, J. D. Farrell, T. L. Greenough, J. P. Graves, P. Welch, J. B. Porter, August Paulsen, John Twohy, W. J. C. Wakefield, Thomas Wren, Fred B. Grinnell, T. J. Humbird and J. P. McGoldrick.

Many Improvements Made by Spokane Banks

Spokane banks expended more than $1,500,000 in improvements of their places of business during 1910. Of this amount about 66 per cent was expended by the Old National, which formally opened its new quarters at Riverside Avenue and Stevens Street the evening of December 31st. The rest was spent by the Traders' National, The Spokane & Eastern Trust Company, the Union Trust Company, the Northwestern Loan & Trust Company and the Washington Trust Company.

Chapter Dance

Spokane chapter of the American Institute of Banking, entertained 40 couples at a dancing party in the Hall of the Doges, the evening of December 27th. The assembly room was decorated with red and green, done with poinsettias, and with quantities of foliage banking the balconies and the pillars. Julian O. Tiffany, Arthur S. Blum and Charles A. Ham had charge of the arrangements.

Banking Notes

R. W. Butler, auditor of Spokane county, shows in a report that the total assessed valuation of the county for 1910 is $112,182,535, as against $82,294,525 in 1909. This is based on an assessment of 60 per cent. The valuation of city real estate and improvements for 1910 is placed at $70,879,442, against $52,990,104 in 1909.

State banks in Washington increased their deposits more than $3,000,000 in the period between September 1st and November 16th, according to the latest report of the state bank examiner. The increase in total deposits was almost $10,000,000. Spokane county was a good second to Seattle in the total standing with $11,886,771, while Pierce county, or Tacoma, came third with deposits of $7,314,352. Seattle had $34,986,898.

National banks in Spokane paid dividends on January 3d. Stockholders in the Old National draw a quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent, amounting to $25,000 on a capital of $1,000,000. The Exchange National paid a quarterly dividend of 3 per cent, $30,000 on its capital. The Fidelity National paid a semiannual of 4 per cent, $8,000 on its total capital of $200,000. The Traders' National paid 7 per cent, $70,000 on its capital, in the form of a semiannual dividend.

First National of Walla Walla, has instituted suit for $10,558.50 in the superior court of Walla Walla county against the Inland Auto Company and John Lamb on two notes past due. Lamb was a prosperous farmer before he engaged in the automobile business. The concern failed and the president became clerk in a cigar store.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

J. A. Lewis, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, can see nothing ahead for St. Louis except easy money. "I believe," said Mr. Lewis, "that we will have low rates for at least three months, and that is about as far ahead as it is of any value to predict. However I can see nothing likely to happen in six months which will materially strengthen the money market. This year, in my opinion, will be a rather quiet and routine one. I don't look for any great activity, nor, on the other hand, any business depression. It will be a sort of average year, wherein the cautious and conservative can build their fences strongly, either to meet depression should it come in 1912, or get in shape to reap a goodly harvest if it proves prosperous. The banks in this region, in all likelihood, will earn their dividends easily, and perhaps put aside something besides, but there will be no great building up of surplus accounts. We have had large crops, and basically the entire middle and Southwest is strong, probably stronger than ever before, but a more conservative policy has been adopted, and the number of new enterprises is less. This is especially true of railroads, but some concessions in the way of rates by the Interstate Commerce Commission, would cause considerable revival in that line. The easy rates just now are due to a falling off in manufacturing and general commercial activities. The banks are pretty well stocked with funds, that is in the large centers, but country institutions are pretty well loaned up. There is one thing, though, which is that last year at about the same time everyone thought there was going to be a long period of very easy money, but the contrary turned out to be the case. The general situation is much more solid and staple now than at the first of 1910, and a sudden wave of activity may spring up at any time, and sweep away all prospects for easy money."

Oklahoma Bankers Want Change

Advices from Guthrie, Oklahoma, are to the effect that bankers of that state are looking for some needed reforms to result from the present meeting of the legislature. The bankers are determined to have the much desired amendments to the bank guaranty law, and to that end have held several conferences with Governor-elect Cruce during the past week at Ardmore. They want the members of the state banking board to be bankers only, to have the department eliminated entirely from politics of a partisan nature, and that the general business qualifications of a banker be considered rather than party affiliations. Since the passing of the law Oklahoma financiers have been harassed in various ways by its imperfections, and are weary of having their business dominated by politicians who know absolutely nothing, or little at best, of banking.

German Savings Dividend

The German Savings Institution was one of the prosperous banks last year, and its prosperity took tangible form in the increasing of its dividend rate from 16 to 20 per cent. The first 5 per cent quarterly was paid to the stockholders this week. The capital stock of the bank is $500,000. Its last statement showed a surplus of $1,343,000, and this will be increased to approximately $1,400,000 after the increased dividend has been paid. There is a vacancy on the board of the German Savings Institution, which will be filled at the annual election on January 9th. The last quotation in the open market for the shares of this bank was a bid of $485, with no offerings.

Will Handle Small Loans

Tom W. Bennett, president of the Mortgage Guarantee Company, is organizing a company to handle small real estate loans, ranging from $500 to $5,000. In a large measure the new company will be auxiliary to the Mortgage Guarantee Company, and both will guarantee both principal and interest of loans handled. The new corporation will have a capital of $500,000, and the shares will be offered first to the stockholders of the Mortgage Guarantee Company.

1910 Best Year in History

St. Louis, January 3.—Local banking institutions transacted more business in 1910 than in any twelve months in the history of St.

Louis. This statement is attested by the bank clearings for the year, and also by the financial condition of the banks and trust companies, as made to the Missouri secretary of state and to the comptroller of the currency at Washington.

With a few exceptions, all the banking institutions under the items of deposit, and surplus and profits, showed handsome gains. Some of the institutions have declared extra dividends the past year, with a couple more about ready to do likewise. Besides this, two have increased their dividend rate, with rumor of another to do so shortly.

Many of the banks and trust companies of this city transact considerable business outside of St. Louis. They have been doing this a great many years, but of late this business has expanded considerably, and is now expanding in a greater ratio. St. Louis institutions now do a great deal of business through the state of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and the Southwest generally.

"Those who criticize St. Louis and call it 'ultra-conservative' are apt to forget that the dangers of rapid progress vary as the square of the speed. At the same time, they show their low appreciation of the safety that goes with deliberate conservatism in business and finance."

A glance at the St. Louis bank statement of November 10th shows that thirty-one institutions, with a combined total capital and surplus of $84,109,000, had $288,046,000 deposits. This means that the banks here are using $1 of their own funds to $3.50 of the depositors' money, reserves not considered. Against $288,046,000 of deposits the banks held cash reserves not considered. Against $288,046,000 of deposits the banks held cash and cash items amounting to $108,045,000, equal to $1 of reserve for each $2.66 of deposits. So that in effect for every $1.67 of the depositors' money actually in use, the banks were using $1 of their own capital and surplus funds.

To give data for comparison it will be well to add that the New York clearing house banks, as an aggregate, have $3.67 of deposits for each $1 of capital and surplus; about $1 of reserve to $4 of deposits, and, excluding reserves, use $2.70 of depositors' money for each $1 of their own corporate funds. When the totals of all the New York banks and trust companies are taken, the differences are even more marked, showing that these institutions on the average use $3 of deposits, excluding reserves, to $1 of their own capital and surplus funds.

The resources of the home banks amount to $400,000,000, and is a tower of financial strength, of which any of the larger cities may

Banking Opinion

John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, was asked by a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER for his views on the effect of railroad retrenchment.

"The railroads are tied, hand and foot, by the failure of the Interstate Commerce Commission to grant the relief asked for," said Mr. Mitchell, "and the curtailment of buying is having a marked effect on general business. It is not a question of getting cheaper money for construction purposes. That does not enter into the case at all, although money is likely to be more or less stagnant until there is a readjustment of railroad rates and a revival of business in those lines which are affected by present conditions. Increased expense of operation compels the railroads to raise freight rates correspondingly but the commission has interfered with that plan and created a condition approaching demoralization. The commission is hampered by undertaking endless details of work. Under its system of trials and investigations it takes too long to deal with an emergency, and for that reason the country is suffering to-day."

"While the outlook for business is more or less perplexing, general conditions are sound. We have been blessed with fair crops at reasonable prices and the return of business has been satisfactory. With this state of affairs business people are hopeful and even confident of another good year, and with an early adjustment of the railroad trouble I have no doubt trade would at least be normal."

Looks for Moderate Prosperity

Earnest A. Hamill, president of the Corn Exchange National said:

"The bountiful crops, and full prices we are obtaining for them, including that of cotton, would lead one to expect a prosperous year of much activity. The present fact that our exports are again exceeding our imports, in large measure, the fact that we have had a general liquidation of securities, and the excellent condition of our farmers owing to the large reduction that has been made in farm mortgages during the last few years, would also lead to the same conclusion."

"On the other hand, however, there are disturbing elements to be taken into consideration. The national election of 1912, which promises to be one of unusual importance to the country, the unsettled condition of railroad rates, and the suspense occasioned by the delay of the opinion of our supreme courts in the Oil and Tobacco cases, have a tendency to prevent any increased activity among our merchants and manufacturers."

Perhaps the greatest drawback to a year of much activity is the labor trouble that is menacing the world of commerce, especially the manufacturers. There are already evidences of a decline in the volume of trade for the ensuing year; summing up the situation, however, I look for rather a quiet year, not one of unusual prosperity, neither one of disaster. A year of this kind will be of benefit to our country, for there has been a tendency of late, perhaps, of too rapid expansion."

Business on Solid Basis

James B. Forgan, president of First National said regarding the business outlook:

"General business, although shrinking somewhat in volume seems to be on a solid basis, and while a fair year's business may be expected, the large profits in commercial banking which have prevailed in 1910 are not likely to be realized in 1911."

Where the First Coins were Made

Earliest history refers familiarly to the use of gold and silver as a purchasing medium, but the metals were exchanged in the form of bars or dust for many centuries. Even to-day the Chinese prefer their gold and silver in bullion form, states a writer in the Montreal Standard. In the great African desert a sale is for so many ounces of gold dust.

The credit of making the first gold coins is given to the Lydians by Herodotus, and the first silver coins are supposed to have been minted on the Island of Egina, 860 B. C. There are to be found in the various large museums of the world coins of Persia issued 350 B. C. The earliest coins known in Palestine were called Daric, or king's money (from Darius) and were coined 450 B. C.

In the year 139 B. C. Antiochus VII. granted the privilege of coining money among the Jews to Simon Maccabens, and the various pieces are dated "in the first (or second) year of Simon, benefactor of the Jews, high priest."

The earliest Biblical mention of wealth is that of Abraham, when he left for Egypt to return to Canaan, and the 1,000 pieces of silver that Abimelech gave to Abraham for Sarah's use. Abraham bought the cave of Machpelah and weighed to Ephron 400 shekels of silver. Achan stole a wedge of gold weighing fifty shekels.

Bonus for Trust Company President

New York, December 31.—At a meeting of the trustees of the Central Trust Company after dividend action and the voting of $50,000 bonus to employes, a bonus of $50,000 was voted to James N. Wallace, president of the company, in recognition of his services. Mr. Wallace succeeded Frederick P. Olcott after the latter's death. He has been with the company since youth, rising to the presidency from a minor clerkship.

Mr. Wallace is also a director in many other companies, among them the Morristown, N. J., Trust Company.

W. A. Gardner in Bank Directory

Stockholders of the Merchants' Loan and Trust Company, in their annual meeting re-elected the retiring directors and elected William A. Gardner, president of the Chicago and Northwestern, to fill one of the two vacancies in the board, caused by the death of Lambert Tree and Erskine M. Phelps. Mr. Gardner is not a director in any other bank. The bank's list of officers and directors is as follows:

President, Orson Smith; Vice-Presidents, E. D. Hulbert, F. G. Nelson and J. E. Blunt, Jr.; Cashier, J. G. Orchard; Assistant Cashiers, P. C. Peterson and S. E. Estes; Secretary, Leon L. Loehr; Directors, C. H. McCormick, M. J. Wentworth, T. J. Lefens, E. H. Gary, J. S. Runnells, E. L. Ryerson, E. M. Barton, Chauncey Keep, C. A. Burley, E. D. Hulbert, Orson Smith and W. A. Gardner.

All of the national banks and a majority of the state banks in the city will hold their annual meetings next Tuesday. Few changes of importance are expected. As previously announced, W. I. Osborne will retire from the presidency of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings, and George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National, will be made the active head of the trust company.

Texas Group Meetings

The series of annual group or district meetings of the seven districts of the Texas Bankers Association will be held in the month of February, 1911, as follows: 5th district, February 11th, in Dallas; 4th district, February 13th, in Hillsboro; 3d district, February 14th, in Austin; 2d district, February 15th, in San Antonio; 1st district, February 17th, in Houston; 6th district, February 20th, in Brady, and 7th district, February 22d, in Fort Worth. Secretary J. W. Hoopes hopes for outside attendance, which owing to consecutive dates will be a fine assignment for the roadmen.

Union Trust Company of Spokane has transferred to the Hogan Investment Company property valued at $102,000, held in trust by the former for some time.

Blountsville is soon to have a bank, a company having been organized with John H. Jordan as president, Perry Millikan, vice-president, and Dr. O. J. Hetsler, cashier. The company organized with a capital stock of $10,000 under the state law and the bank will be conducted as a private bank. The company is erecting a business block in which its business will be conducted. It will have a vault and modern safe. It is proposed to open the bank for business within the near future and the character of the men interested commands the confidence and respect of the community. There are twenty stockholders, the majority of whom reside in Stony Creek township.

Kansas City

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

As a rule the bankers of the Central West enter upon the new year in a most optimistic frame of mind and a careful consideration of conditions by some of the more prominent financiers in this district appears to warrant this cheerful disposition. Herewith are given statements from one of the best posted bankers and financiers in Kansas City on the outlook: H. C. Flower, president of the Fidelity Trust Co., of Kansas City, says: "The year just closing has been, on the whole, a year of prosperity in this territory. While crops and prices have broken no records, both have been considerably better than the average for the last ten years. A commanding feature of the economic progress of this country has been the large movement of population to new farm lands, a phenomenon which, of course, has been observed at more or less periodical intervals throughout the history of the country. As usual the progress of developing new agricultural territory has been overdrawn in some localities, and as usual, its later phases have been accompanied by a good deal of speculation. Partly on account of this speculation, partly on account of the locating of a good deal of capital in building operations, and partly on account of individual and municipal extravagances, the country witnessed a tight money market early in the year. The banks applied the brakes promptly, however, by declining loans tinged with speculation, and the result was that the crop-moving season found the banks amply prepared for all legitimate demands of business. The financial institutions of the country enter into the new year in excellent condition. Some slowing up of business activity is observed in the East, and as the country is financially and economically a whole, the West cannot escape the same experience altogether."

William T. Kemper, president of the Commerce Trust Co., has this to say of the situation: "The people living in Kansas City and the great territory contiguous have cause for congratulation that they live in this section of the country, for we have prospered more in proportion than any other section of the country, and the indications are that we shall continue to enjoy substantial and lasting prosperity. Financial conditions have shown a vast improvement and the general financial condition of the people, I think, is better because of their adopting more conservative lines of living and investment. We can look forward in contentment, but we must continue to infuse the right kind of spirit into the great Southwest, for it has been helpful to these new communities and we reap the reward daily."

"There is a decided improvement in the financial situation here," said H. Koehler, cashier of the Western Exchange Bank, of Kansas City. "The feeling of uncertainty is disappearing and confidence in the business situation is increasing. This condition, of course, has been brought about by the marketing of our large crops and is having the effect of decreasing the demand for funds, and increasing deposits may be looked for in the near future. There is still a demand from the country for funds for the use of cattle feeders. Caution should be exercised in this matter as it may be that feeding cattle may not be profitable. Losses have already been reported and there is undoubtedly a downward tendency in prices. The two great cereals, wheat and corn, have already had a sharp decline. Both in real estate, stock and grain, reports indicate that speculation has very materially decreased. No matter which way the important cases before the United States supreme court are decided, the decisions will help to clear up the business situation. The great corporations will adapt themselves to new conditions if required to do so."

A. C. Jobes, vice-president of the First National of Kansas City, gives this as his view of the outlook: "I can see nothing discouraging as to the outlook, generally speaking. Business throughout the country is upon a sound basis, a conservative policy of retrenchment rather than one of business expansion has been the rule of late, which was a good thing for everybody, as it is giving the country time to 'catch up', to liquidate some of its indebtedness, and the money market an opportunity to absorb and digest the avalanche of securities which already had been thrust upon it, and incidentally to weed out the good from the bad, rather than to increase the load which was being carried."

Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House Association, who is one of the best posted experts in this district upon financial conditions said: "There has been much talk during the closing months of the year 1910 about the slackening of business throughout the United States, but a review of our records will show a great activity for Kansas City and for the vast territory to the west and southwest. This area is one of the most resourceful scopes of country in the United States, and its development during the ten years closing with the year 1910 is unsurpassed. A comparison of the business transacted during this year with that of 1909 does not show as heavy a gain as does the comparison of the year 1909 with that of 1908, yet a good, substantial increase is shown and the apparent slowing down is due merely to the adjustment of conditions to a more safe and permanent basis—something that must take place in every rapidly growing country or community. The banks of Kansas City never were on a better basis, and every effort is being made here to discourage wild speculation and to encourage legitimate business. More capital is being put into the banking business and our bankers are doing all in their power toward providing facilities for the handling of and caring for the business of the great Southwest.

Controversy over Bank Robbers

Serious controversy threaten between the authorities of Kansas and Nebraska on account of the formal charge made by Bank Commissioner Dolley of Kansas that the local authorities and people of Wymore, Neb., are deliberately sheltering and protecting a well organized gang of bank robbers that has been preying upon a number of smaller Kansas banks for several months. So frequent have been the depredations upon smaller banks in northern Kansas that the situation has become alarming. More than a dozen such robberies have occurred and in no case has a single robber been caught or even wounded so far as is known.

The Kansas authorities claim that their detectives have tracked this gang to Wymore, Neb., on several occasions and have learned that in that town the members of the gang are protected. Commissioner Dolley in an interview on the subject said: "Some time ago I took the matter up with the Wymore authorities and to my great surprise they were opposed to cleaning up the gang. They told me that the gang left a lot of money in their town. Besides, the robbers didn't molest the people there. What do you think of that argument? Willing to shelter the robbers because they spend money freely and don't molest Wymore people." The governor of Nebraska has been appealed to.

Two more Kansas banks, both in the same town, were robbed last week. They were the Citizens State Bank and the State Bank of Waterville. The robberies occurred on the night of December 30th and the Citizens Bank lost about $3,000 and the State Bank $4,000. Six different explosions were heard by the people of Waterville two in the first bank and four in the second. Both banks were insured and were open for business the next day. As in the other cases the gang of robbers numbered five or six, some of whom stood guard while the others blew the safes. All escaped. They are believed to be part of the Wymore, Neb. gang although such identification is hard to prove at this time.

On the night of December 31st the North Muskogee State Bank at Rex, Okla., seven miles north of Muskogee, was entered by robbers who used six charges of nitro-glycerine to break down five steel doors. They secured $1,300. This bank is a branch of the Commercial National Bank of Muskogee, Okla. It is believed that this gang of robbers is entirely separate from that alleged to have headquarters in Wymore, Neb., although there are many indications that there is some sort of "working agreement" between them. They seem to have divided the Kansas and Oklahoma territory between them.

Since the era of bank robberies in Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma many insurance companies have canceled their policies on the smaller country banks. The situation has grown truly alarming.

Mr. Miller is vice-president of the Commerce Trust Company of this city and will continue to hold that position while having the title of president of the Western Exchange Bank. Mr. Miller is a very popular banker and will bring to his new institution much personal patronage. Mr. Lillis, it will be remembered, is the debonaire man about town who was attacked by "Jack" Cudahy in the latter's home something over a year ago. Mr. Lillis will retire from the banking business.

Bank Moves from Kansas to Missouri

Four years ago the Interstate National of Kansas City which does a heavy stockyards business decided to move from Kansas into Missouri. This meant only moving across State Line Street. But the bank found it necessary to secure a special law for the purpose and congress was petitioned. The law was passed and then the bank decided to stay where it was. Now the bank will take advantage of that old law to move into the big new steel Live Stock Exchange Building on the Missouri side of the line. The change will necessitate the election of a few new directors as the law specifies that three-fourths of the directors must be residents of the state wherein the bank is situated.

Supreme Court Sustains Guaranty Law

The news from Washington that the United States supreme court had sustained the bank deposit guaranty laws of Kansas and Oklahoma, came too late for much comment to be heard upon it among the bankers of the Central West. That it will be one of the most important pieces of news in Western financial circles for a long time is certain.

Life Imprisonment Penalty for Robbery

On account of the unprecedented reign of bank robbery in Kansas the past few months, it is likely that the coming session of the state legislature will see the passing of much more stringent laws in relation to this kind of crime. Representative Watson of Allen county, has prepared a bill in which he makes the penalty for bank and house robbery life imprisonment. Other representatives have similar bills and in the present state of the public mind in Kansas it would not be at all surprising if very drastic legislation will be enacted.

Echoes of Abilene Failure

Echoes of the Flack defalcation which resulted in the closing of the Abilene State Bank, Abilene, Kan., continue to be heard. It now develops that the Abilene Baseball Association lost $1,250 through Flack's failure to turn that much of the association's deposits into the bank. Another odd circumstance is that a widow, who had entrusted her pension papers to Flack and who had been paid $30 a month regularly by him, has had her pension cut off. Her papers were not found in the bank which has brought suit against her for $468.

Later this stock was increased to $150,000 some of which is held outside of the family. The deposits are $1,275,000.

Kansas City bank clearings have almost doubled in four years and the figures for 1910 are more than three times those of ten years ago. The completed figures for the past year are $2,634,738, an increase of $239,026,755, or ten per cent over those of 1909.

Chattanooga, Tenn., January 3.—Negotiations were closed to-day by which the First and American National Banks of this city, have been merged under one management. The two banks represent a combined capital stock of $750,000. Charles A. Lyerly, president of the First National, becomes president of the consolidated bank, and H. S. Houston Clearings Show Big Gain

In the matter of Houston (Tex.) bank clearings the year, 1910, exceeded that of the year previously by more than $60,000,000. During the fall months of 1910 there was a great increase in the volume of banking business over that of the same period for the previous year, indicated by the clearings.

The showing is a flattering one for Houston and is evidence of her increasing prosperity and her growing financial greatness.

For the year just closed Houston's bank clearings totaled the enormous sum of a billion, two hundred and seventy-nine million dollars.

Treasury Deficit Reduced Twenty Million

Washington, January 3.—The new year finds the finances of the United States treasury far improved over the condition in which the business of 1910 was begun.

When 1909 began the treasury spent some $26,000,000 more than it had taken in. That sum took no account of the extraordinary expenses for the Panama Canal.

The beginning of 1911 finds that deficit reduced to $6,000,000, and the total deficit including Panama expenditures reduced to almost $26,000,000 on all accounts—practically half the amount it was a year ago. The year closes with about $86,000,000 in the general fund and a working balance of $34,000,000 in the treasury offices, both considerably lower than a year ago.

This is considered by treasury officials a remarkable showing in spite of more than $130,000,000 having been advanced out of ordinary funds for the canal construction.

The showing seems to sustain Secretary MacVeagh's declaration that the treasury will be able to keep an even keel until congress passes legislation to allow an issue of securities on the plans he has laid down.

Panama Bond Issue Planned

This plan, as Mr. MacVeagh and Senator Aldrich have so far worked out, contemplates the issue of $50,000,000 or $100,000,000 of Panama bonds, not to be available for national bank circulation, and at a rate of interest high enough to make them attractive to investors. Such a plan promised to develop into legislation when congress settles down to work.

Not only does the working balance and the general fund show strength after the six months' strain, but the ordinary deficit for the fiscal year has been actually reduced. The close of the first month of the fiscal year found the cash drawer out some $9,000,000 on ordinary account. The first half of the year closes with that reduced to $6,000,000, although it had been as high as $14,000,000 within that time.

Close check on expenditures, with added receipts in some quarters, which, however, have probably been offset by decreases in others, have gradually worn it down.

The working balance is now $4,000,000 better than the close of the first month's business left it, and when it is considered that several times since the fiscal year began the ready cash has sunk as low as $26,000,000 and the general fund as low as $84,000,000, the present condition gives satisfaction to those treasury officials who have been predicting that the government's finances would right themselves in the face of an abnormal drain.

Court Decisions Awaited

There are important possibilities, however, to be reckoned with during the next six months in any study of the national finances. The first is the decision of the supreme court in the corporation tax cases. Should that be adverse to the government, the treasury would be called upon to pay out $27,000,000. That would be met by an immediate issue of 3 per cent certificates of indebtedness to run one year.

The second is that the reclamation service may call for $20,000,000 for works in the West. That would be met by an issue of bonds already authorized, but the treasury can not issue the bonds until it has paid out the money. The expenditure of $20,000,000 will not be in a lump and the treasury will have to pay it out in comparatively small sums.

The issue of Panama securities at a rate of interest which will attract investors and supply funds without inflating the present basis of national bank currency is the next big move contemplated.

Chicago Bank Elections

At their annual elections this week Illinois Trust and Savings, Northern Trust, Merchants Loan and Trust and Stockyards Savings have re-elected the retiring officers, without change.

Raises Surplus to $5,000,000

Directors of Corn Exchange National, Wednesday, transferred $1,000,000 from the bank's undivided profits account to surplus, making the total in the latter item $5,000,000. This leaves a balance of about $500,000 in the undivided profits account, according to the bank's last published statement. The capital of $3,000,000 has a book value of $283 a share. Corn Exchange earned in 1910 upwards of $930,000, or a little more than 31 per cent on its capital.

Bank Shows 34 Per Cent Profits

At the annual meeting of stockholders of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank Wednesday, John J. Mitchell, the president, reported that the earnings of the institution in 1910 were nearly $1,700,000 or 34 per cent on the $5,000,000 capital stock. Mr. Mitchell reported also that there had been no losses during the year and that there were no overdue loans at the end of the year. The deposits on December 31st were about $90,000,000, an increase of about $5,000,000 during the year.

New Illinois Bank Going Well

Fred N. Setterdahl, cashier of the Farmers' Bank, Sherrard, Illinois, visited Chicago one day last week. The Farmers' Bank was opened October 15th, capital $25,000.00. Hon. C. A. Samuelson, a dealer in general hardware and farming implements is president and J. C. South, a farmer, is vice-president. Mr. Setterdahl formerly was with the old private banking house of Lynde and Mitchell and later with the State Bank of Rock Island. He reports a most satisfactory opening of their business and expresses the belief that they have a splendid field for future growth.

St. Louis Clearings Break Record

The year closed with the St. Louis bank clearings reaching $3,727,949,379, a record total. The clearings for 1909 were $3,442,439,- 002, which gives 1910 a gain of $285,510,377, or 8.2 per cent.

While the year has witnessed a vast expansion of banking transactions and close-to-record clearings in many of the principal cities, St. Louis has enjoyed a larger prosperity than the other reserve centers, if the bank clearings are a gauge. This contrast was particularly sharp in the clearings for last week, reflecting in a large measure the holiday trade. Last week's clearings in St. Louis totaled, $65,575,839, as against $61,544,682 for the corresponding week of 1909. In New York the clearings for last week decreased 24.9 per cent from the corresponding period of 1909. In Boston there was a decline of 11.9 per cent and in Philadelphia 12.6 per cent.

Year-End Week a Marvel

Chicago and Kansas City made slight gains, the former of 1.8 per cent and the latter of 1.6 per cent. For the country in general the Dun reports show a decrease of 18.7 per cent between the year-end weeks, the heaviest losses being in the East.

The St. Louis showing and the fact that the Middle West cities made all the gains, warrants, St. Louis bankers say, their optimism concerning business conditions. At the same time they admit that conditions in the East justify the unsettled feeling which pervades Eastern banking circles. New York's clearings for the year fell off heavily and Chicago shows a decline. The West and Southwest has all the best of the financial situation on the face of the figures.

The year's clearing house balances totaled $317,815,200, as compared with $298,885,723 in 1909.

A Rumor from Milwaukee

La Salle Street has a story that a leading Milwaukee National is to take over two minor trust companies and compound them into one, practically under its own name and direction. We do not furnish the names which go with the rumor.

Westfield Savings Bank Short

Westfield, Mass., December 31.—Following the discovery of an alleged shortage of nearly $60,000 in the funds of the Westfield Savings Bank the treasurer of the institution, Velenus W. Crowson, was arrested and arraigned in court to-night.

According to a statement issued by Arthur D. Chapin, state bank commissioner, Crowson has confessed to misappropriation of funds of the bank.

Indiana Bank Robbed

Indianapolis, Ind., January 2.—The State Bank of New Palestine, at New Palestine, a small town fourteen miles southeast of Indianapolis on the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad, was broken into early last Friday and its safe robbed of $6,416.

The door of the bank was opened with a skeleton key and the thief worked the combination. Not a penny of the bank's deposits was left.

Bond Activity

Western Trust & Savings Bank and George H. Burr & Company, are offering the unsold portion of $750,000 Karpen Building first mortgage 5 per cent bonds.

This issue is secured by a ninety-nine year lease-hold and twelve story office building now being erected by S. Karpen & Brothers at Michigan Avenue and Eldridge Place, Chicago. The cost of the building is $1,600,000, and the net assets of S. Karpen & Brothers are in excess of $2,500,000.

The bonds are being offered at 99½ and interest for the first four maturities, and 99 and interest for subsequent maturities.

There is much interest in this property and the financing has been an easy proposition.

Bond sales have been numerous enough this week to show an improvement in the market. Money continues easy and this helps the investment business.

A large part of the $1,500,000 issue of first mortgage 6 per cent bonds of the Tremont Lumber Company is reported by George H. Burr & Company, as sold. The bonds are dated November 1, 1910, and mature semiannually in $150,000 installments, callable after May 1, 1911 at 102 and interest. The mortgage is a first lien on the company's 170,000 acres of timber land in Louisiana and three plants. It is a part of the $4,000,000 authorized amount.

The Insurance Exchange issue has been placed on the market. The rate is 5 per cent and the bonds are offered at 102½.

The $9,000,000 capital stock of the William Wrigley, Jr., Company, which has absorbed the Zeno (gum) Manufacturing Company, is divided into $1,500,000 of 6 per cent preferred stock and $7,500,000 of common. The two companies earned last year at the rate of 15 per cent on the new common stock.

Sears-Roebuck common stock went to a new high record price Tuesday in the local market. It touches 188½, but did not come up to the New York record of 190 made last week.

Stocks Buoyant

Leading financial men in Chicago and elsewhere are giving support to the stock market in the belief that forthcoming supreme court decisions, action of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the general course of the administration will be favorable to the railroads.

The new year made a good beginning Tuesday from a bull standpoint, leading stocks advancing from 1 to 2½ points, the buying being mixed, partly for short and partly for long account. The Harriman, Hill coalers, and steel securities led the market, with excellent responses in the less active stocks. Declaration of the regular Atchison common dividend stimulated some trading in that issue. Norfolk and Western was quite active. St. Louis South Western Preferred went up easily, and so did International Harvester and Consolidated Gas.

There were practically no exceptions to the general strength, but the course of so-called Standard Oil stocks caused a good deal of comment, as the Street is hearing that some banking interests which had been antagonistic to the market were more favorably disposed toward it.

The strength of steel, in view of the trade conditions, is largely due to a large short interest, as well as to the fact that holders seem to be satisfied now to keep the stock during a lean period. In fact, the strong feature of the market for some time has been the unwillingness of investors to part with stocks in spite of the current pessimism. A considerable short interest has been created in the market and there was a general impression that there would be a sharp drop in prices this month. Because of this sentiment the short interest increased and many would-be buyers decided to wait. Stocks were taken by our banking interests, and if they are satisfied that expected developments at Washington will be favorable, the market will discount them by further material advance.

The market closed strong at the top, and was again buoyant on Wednesday.

New Beardstown State Bank Opens

Beardstown, Ill., January 3, 1911.—The new Beardstown State Bank opened its doors for business on Monday, December 19th, and has had a very prosperous start. On the preceding Saturday afternoon and evening they kept "open house" and invited all to come in and inspect the building, fixtures, vaults, etc. The officers of the bank and their wives welcomed the guests, presenting the men with cigars and the ladies with carnations.

The new building located at the corner of Second and Washington streets is two stories high and is built of black Indiana brick with white Bedford stone trimmings. The bank occupies the entire first floor, the second floor being fitted up for office rooms.

The interior of the bank is very handsome, having a spacious lobby with mahogany desks and resting benches. The floor is of tile, the counter is composed of English Vein Italian white marble with a Sylvan Vein green marble base, mounted with brass and mahogany trimmings, and a white marble wainscoting goes around the entire lobby. The arrangement of the cages and desks is very convenient and there is a customers' room and a ladies' room.

The Beardstown State Bank starts with a capital of $50,000 and a paid in surplus of $10,000, its ninety-five stockholders being all local people. The officers are: C. F. Johnson, president; H. W. Hackman, vice-president; E. H. Kinney, cashier and manager and E. F. Hunter, assistant cashier. Both Mr. Johnson and Mr. Hackman are life long residents of Cass county and have enviable business reputations. Mr. Hunter is well known to Beardstown people and resigned as manager of the Riverside Wholesale Grocery Company, to take the assistant-cashiership.

Mr. Kinney, the cashier, is a former Table Grove man, having been for twenty years with the Farmers Bank of that place, and being its cashier at the time of his resignation. He is a very capable and genial man, having a large acquaintance throughout the state, at the present time being a member of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association. He also is prominent in Masonic, Odd Fellows, and Knights of Pythias circles. Mr. Kinney has moved to Beardstown and has just completed a handsome new home on Sixth Street.

American Banks Needed in South America

The establishment and development of American banks in South America, especially in Argentine, offers a special opportunity to American commercial interests, in the judgment of Prof. Paul S. Reinsch, who was one of the delegates from the United States to the fourth Pan-American Conference last July. Prof. Reinsch has reported to Assistant Secretary of State Wilson the results of his observations in South America, and says the banking interests of Argentine are almost wholly in European hands and lack the vigor, snap and modern methods of American institutions.

As the result of a factional fight at Gary among electric workers supported by other building trades, over $1,000,000 worth of new building work is tied up.

Des Moines, January 5.—The bankers of Iowa will be well represented in the coming session of the legislature which meets in Des Moines January 9th. Apparently, the bankers are beginning to take seriously a bit of advice often thrown at them which in effect is this: "Get into politics." It is not necessary to say that the bankers are among the strongest members of the Iowa legislature. Many of them were leaders in the last session and will be back again this year. The bankers as shown by the official list is as follows: Senate—Joseph H. Allen of Pocahontas; Horace R. Chapman, Bennett; Edwin H. Hoyt, Lamont; George McCulloch, Humeston; Arthur C. Savage, Adair; Nicholas J. Schrup, Dubuque; Willard C. Stuckslager, Lisbon.

Representatives—Nathaniel W. Beebe, Hampton; Wellington I. Beans, Oskaloosa; James W. Bowman, Marion; John W. Campbell, Fort Dodge; John A. Cousins, New Hartford; Robert M. Finlayson, Grundy Center; Dennis P. Hogan, Messina; Karl J. Johnson, Osage; George W. Koontz, Iowa City; Ernest R. Moore, Cedar Rapids; Charles B. Murtagh, Ringsted; George W. Des Moines Banks Prosperous

Although but a few bank meetings have been held at this writing, reports thus far submitted show that the banks of Des Moines are prosperous. It is probable that there will be no important changes so far as officials in the Des Moines institutions are concerned. The directors of the Commercial Savings approved the examining committee's report for the past six months and declared the usual dividend. The annual meeting has been announced for January 9th, the same date as the meetings of the Des Moines Savings; the Iowa National will meet January 10th and the Peoples Savings January 11th.

Good Work of Permanent Secretary

The selection of secretary P. W. Hall by the Iowa Bankers Association is showing the wisdom of that body. Mr. Hall is now well acquainted with his work and the good results are apparent. Detectives have been put on the trail of several bank robbers, forgers have been caught and other good work in this line has been accomplished. Through Mr. Hall's labors, Gust Toney was arrested last week at St. Louis and brought back to Odebolt to answer to charges of forgery.

Discussion over Banking Hours

Bankers at Cedar Rapids are in the midst of a discussion as to whether they should keep the banks of that city open until 9 o'clock on Saturday nights. There has been much complaint in many of the cities of Iowa about workingmen being forced to have their checks cashed in saloons because the banks have closed before they are paid off at the end of the week. It is argued that the open bank on Saturday night would be useful along this line. It is also an argument that many people who are down town on Saturday nights would start savings accounts if they had an opportunity to get into a bank. Bankers point out that the hours of an employee of a financial institution are not confined to the times that his face is observable at the bank window and that Saturday afternoon is necessary to get squared up for the forthcoming week.

Bankers Blamed for Loss of Population

Another discussion which has come to the front in Iowa in connection with Iowa's loss of population is whether or not Iowa bankers are encouraging the establishment of factories in the state by loaning money upon future possibilities.

Articles have appeared in a Des Moines newspaper, contributed by readers, that Iowa bankers are too conservative in this respect. It is stated frequently that Iowa must have factories if she is to regain her lost population and the duty of bankers has been pointed out to them in this respect through the daily press. Doubtless bankers have views of their own on this subject.

Bank of Dow City Robbed

The safe blower is still abroad in the land. The latest victim up to this time is the Bank of Dow City, near Denison. Robbers entered the building Thursday night of last week, dynamited the safe and escaped with over $4,000. It is stated in the report to Secretary Hall of the I. B. A. that four men in an automobile were seen driving rapidly down the road a short time after the robbery is supposed to have occurred. Assistant Cashier Wiggins discovered the robbery when he went to open up for business Friday morning. The bank is owned by the First National at Denison. W. A. McHenry is president and W. E. Fishel is cashier. Secretary Hall sent detectives to the scene at the first possible moment.

Play Joke on Arthur Reynolds

This may be an old joke but it is being worked at present on Arthur Reynolds of the Des Moines National as a fact. Mr. Reynolds is seated in his comfortable chair in the Des Moines National Building at Sixth and Walnut. In rushed a complete stranger who dashed up to the banker and says: "Let me have $400, quick."

"But sir," replies the banker considerably taken aback, "I do not know you. What is your security, may I inquire?"

"You bet," replies the excited one. "I am sitting in a mighty stiff game of poker upstairs over there and I have four aces." Whereupon the borrower throws down the cards to show that he has what he says. Slow curtain.

Joice Trial Postponed until June

P. M. Joice, indicted for misappropriation of funds in connection with his presidency of a bank at Lake Mills has secured a second postponement of his trial which was set for the November term of court at Fort Dodge. The case has now been set for trial next June. It was stated that the ex-banker has been critically ill with neurasthenia at St. Paul where he is now living. There are fifty counts in the indictment returned by the federal grand jury against Joice.

Police Stumble on Yegg Haunt

The Sioux City police made an important find in the raid of a lonely east side house near that city when they captured three men believed by the officers to be yeggmen. In the house were found eight sticks of dynamite, fuses, soap and several revolvers. The officers thought they had located the band of bank robbers which had been working northern Iowa but the robbery at Dow City a couple of nights after the Sioux City capture demonstrated that this theory was erroneous.

development department of the Burlington railroad gave an interesting version of why Iowa is losing in population while in Des Moines last week. Mr. Howard states that constant attack upon capital have produced a feeling of unrest throughout the entire nation. This has been particularly acute in Iowa, Mr. Howard says. The result has been an arrested development particularly as far as promotion of interurban and factories are concerned.

Iowa a Big Auto Market

Reports for the year 1910 show that over 10,000 automobiles have been sold in Iowa during the past twelve months at a valuation estimated by the secretary of state at $12,000,000. It is stated further that Des Moines and Iowa automobile dealers have contracted for 10,000 more to be delivered during the coming year. This raises again that much discussed problem of whether the automobile craze is responsible for tight times in financial circles, particularly in those communities which do not manufacture these machines thus resulting in capital leaving the state.

Lothrop, Lee and Shepard Company has published for the holiday trade a splendid book for young girls. It is intended for gift purposes. It is one of the famous Helen Grant books and is entitled "Helen Grant's Decision." The author, Amanda M. She has, as nearly as may be, become a personal and valuable friend to thousand of girls and young women who no doubt find it difficult to wait for the issue of each new addition to the series. Like all of its predecessors this new volume is entirely independent of the others. In it Helen is found entering upon her second year as teacher in the Westfield High School. Helen is called upon to make a decision in this case and also in another very important matter which will be found very interesting to young women of like age and attainments. The price is $1.25.

The volume is full of information, alive with adventure, and is inciting to patriotism at every turn.

The boy or young man of to-day, will instantly appreciate this fine volume in all its adventurous detail. It is published by Lothrop, Lee and Shepard Company of Boston in decorated cover at $1.50.

Milwaukee Banks Sound

The Milwaukee Wisconsin chooses John H. Puelicher to write its annual review article. Banks in charge of men closely allied with business and civic life in Wisconsin metropolis

Milwaukee is generally spoken of as a city of homes—which probably means that more of its inhabitants than is usual in cities own their homes—and this proves them to be a solid and substantial people. This is reflected in the institutions of the community. As its people, so its business enterprises.

The banks of Milwaukee are peculiarly an expression of this solidity and substantiality, they having been organized when needed, and grown up and become influential with the city. The men in charge of the banks resemble the citizenship of Milwaukee, in that they are not transients, but men who have their homes and their interests here; men who are closely identified with the business and civic life of the city. The solidity of the community and its enterprises, and of the banks, are of vital interest to each other. The confidence of the community in the banker makes possible the loans of the banker to the business man, one depending on the other, for if there were no deposits, no loans could be made, as the savings of the employed enable the employer to get through the banker the funds which makes his enterprise possible. This confidence rightly prevalent here, of depositor in banker and of banker in business man stood to Milwaukee's advantage in the currency shortage of 1907. While in many communities factories were closed and employees were thrown out of positions because bankers were compelled to call loans to pay depositors, in Milwaukee the people accepted from the bankers, without much question, a substitute for currency, because they had confidence that the bankers here had safeguarded the interests of the depositor by securing beyond possibility of loss the clearing house certificate used.

What have Milwaukee bankers done since to warrant an increasing confidence in their institutions? It is generally known that Wisconsin is exceptionally fortunate in its equitable banking laws. All banks in Wisconsin are under either national or state supervision, and are therefore regularly examined, in the interest of the depositor, by either the national or state banking departments, and held to increasingly high standards. In addition to these examinations, the bankers of Milwaukee have this year, through the agency of the clearing house, employed a clearing house auditor to thoroughly audit the affairs of all the member banks. This is a decided step forward, as these frequent audits insure the public of an ever-growing care of its interests.

In the nation there has been a decided interest aroused in the question of currency reform. Some such method as is being employed in England, in Germany and in France, each peculiar to the commercial needs of the specific country, yet in general resembling each other, must be worked out in the United States. The confidence which the people are inclined to repose in their bankers will have to be relied upon, even in a greater degree, for the solution of this vital question, as it is one requiring knowledge of finance, and should therefore be solved in the interest of all the people by financiers and economists, and not by politicians.

Last year the deposits of the Milwaukee banks amounted to $72,045,610.18, and this year have grown to $77,304,318.82. This indicates a steady, solid growth in the wealth of the community. The loans of the banks in 1909 amounted to $49,157,429.36, and in 1910 amounted to $53,865,154.33. This enormous amount loaned to merchants and manufacturers of the city is largely the accumulation of the saving laborer, deposited in the bank, and through the agency of the bank loaned to his employer. There is no better example of interest in the common welfare, and of interdependence, than what has just been stated.

It may be well to say a word as to the future. In its hot haste to achieve wealth, the nation has frequently met with severe reverses. There seems to be an unavoidable law which requires growth of any kind to rest upon secure foundation, and any attempt to grow faster than absolute security will permit is generally punished by at least a partial collapse of the structure. In our haste to achieve wealth, to achieve social distinction, to acquire the means of luxury, we sometimes forget. We have again arrived at one of those periods where a review of the lessons of the past, and a slowing down of our onward rush, would prove profitable.

since that date up to the 25th of October was held by the collecting bank under seal to be counted and weighed by a special committee. This committee was composed of Mr. Childs of the New England National, Mr. Witzleben of the National Bank of Commerce, and myself. The three of us acting with the manager of the clearing house.

The counting, sorting and weighing of this million in gold was a very tedious operation.

At the beginning we would issue to the depositing bank a temporary receipt for what coin they sent us. Then this money was counted out of the sacks to the sorter who went over it piece by piece, distributing them into two piles, one which contained coins of standard weight and fineness, and the other, doubtful and light weight coins. (I wish to add that a coin may be standard weight provided it has not lost more than $\frac{1}{2}$ of 1 per cent in weight. This is the amount of shrinkage allowed by the government.)

In the process of sorting it is necessary that it be done by natural light only, so that the sorter may quickly detect any wear on the coin. This cannot be accurately done under artificial light, because of the glare. As soon as the sorter was ahead a few thousand one of the committee would count the full weight gold and put it up in sacks of five thousand each, while the other two of us would take the pile in which he placed the doubtful and light coins and start to weighing them one by one. This proved about as interesting as pulling an adding machine all day, but it was a little more instructive, because the constant weighing of these coins enabled us to some extent to recognize a light weight coin when we saw one, and that is not as easy as some of you may think.

After we had sorted, weighed and put the gold into such shape as was acceptable to the clearing house, the gold certificates referred to in the rules were issued to the contributing bank on return of their temporary receipt.

All of the gold turned over to the committee was handled in this manner and with the completion of this eight day task the creation of a gold depository was a fact.

In presenting to you all of the statements in this discussion, I have endeavored to show that each circumstance owes its existence to some preceding circumstance, and that it in turn becomes the parent of the others during its existence, by its connection with the subject under investigation. In consequence then of pursuing this mode of treatment it remains for us to see if this plan agreed and consented to by our Clearing House Association, is expressive of its character, motive and object.

It undoubtedly is expressive of present purpose and intention, so the weight and value remain to be determined. If you will kindly refer to the market quotations of Eastern exchange, you will discover that the creation of a gold depository has had a tendency to lower the rate here in Kansas City of Eastern exchange. Prior to the adoption of this plan the rates ranged from 40 cents to as high as 90 cents per thousand; since, the rate has often been at par and seldom above 20 cents. This is one of the most striking proofs of the advantages derived.

The plan has also proved constructive in that it reserves for our banks a certain amount of actual money that is very valuable when times become stringent.

The gist of the whole action though, is the conversion of a large amount of our gold into gold certificates, which by virtue of their convenience and safety are now used extensively in liquidation of clearing house balances. It has eliminated the difficulty of settlement with this kind of money, by doing away with the loss in the matter of abrasion, resulting from the daily handling and counting of the gold. It has placed at our disposal an opportunity to preserve this kind of coin. The importance of this I believe will be felt in time to come.

In summing up I will say that is another step taken by your Clearing House Association which is gradually becoming the fundamental power that will ultimately force our banks into a stronger unit. Just one more convincing argument for clearing house supervision and usefulness.

Metaline Falls Trust and Savings Bank of Metaline Falls, Wash., a new town 100 miles north of Spokane, has commissioned a local architect to prepare plans for a two-story brick and cement building to cost $20,000. Lewis P. Larsen and his associates are interested in the bank.

At Westhope, S. D., the First National has dissolved and united with the First State Bank. James Page, cashier of the bank of Westhope, will remain as cashier under the combination. J. E. Roman, cashier of the First National, will be liquidating officer.

New Books from the Publishers

In "The Life of Charles Sumner" by Walter G. Shotwell (Thomas Y. Crowell & Company, New York, publishers), the author has aimed to be as impartial as he could consistently be and yet be in sympathy with his subject. He has told the story of the life of the famous Massachusetts statesman only after several years of research, consequently the book can be regarded as highly valuable, as being well-written and containing records that are true. Sumner was a fighter for his convictions and by his own strong character made people listen to him. His views on the great civil war and its results are among the priceless contributions to our American political letters. In congress and elsewhere his one thought was for the preservation of our institutions, and Mr. Shotwell has succeeded in giving us new lights on the wonderful and inspiring patriotism of this man who helped to make the history of his period. The book is on sale at $1.50 net.

"That Other Hand Upon the Helm" by Charles Frederic Goss is a tale of western mining camp life, and contains the usual interesting kinds of people found in such a settlement. The heroine is a very beautiful girl of strong character, who, dissatisfied with herself and things in general, decides to go West and break away from all the hateful conditions of her position in the city. She encounters some adventures on her way there, but arrives safely and makes a great friend of Mrs. Fancher, as lovable a person as could be imagined, and her husband, the young minister from the East who is just as interesting. We have not mentioned the hero but of course he is just what a hero should be. The story contains bright touches of humor and its situations are well carried out, forming a story that will hold the attention of the reader until he has read the last page. This book is published by Jennings & Graham, Cincinnati; Eaton & Mains, New York, and sells at 75 cents net.

Lucas Malet (Mrs. Mary St. Leger Harrison, author of "Sir Richard Calmady") has given her readers a touching new story in "The Golden Galleon." This is the story of a simple-minded old maid who is willing to sacrifice everything for the young lodger in whose abilities she has unlimited faith. This supposedly promising young man has unconsciously built up this ideal of himself in her heart, and he leaves Miss Miranda (for that is the name of the heroine spinster) and her aunt to follow the call of insistent voices which are beckoning him to greatness. He comes to grief, and in his downfall somewhat involves the two kindly hearted worshipping ladies. The story is not one of the rapid sort, but it is sure to arouse the reader's sympathies and interest. George H. Doran Company, New York, are the publishers. It sells at $1.00 net.

"The Fight for Conservation" by Gifford Pinchot, (publishers, Doubleday, Page & Company, New York), is not a systematic treatise upon the subject. Some of the matter has formerly appeared in magazines and some of it is taken from addresses made before conservation conventions and other organizations during the past two years. The book treats in somewhat general terms the movement for the proper utilization of national assets. Among the subjects discussed are better times on the farm, waterways, equal chance, the need of preventing monopoly, and others of equal vital interest to-day. Conservation as a moral issue is especially emphasized, "to make this country the best possible place to live in." The book is of value as showing just what this movement is and why it is so vital to the nation. It is sold for 60 cents net.

Orison Swett Marden has written a new book on New Thought lines, "The Miracle of Right Thought," which is surely the equal of "Peace, Power, and Plenty," his former successful work, in its clearness and the convincing and authoritative style in which it is written. The creed of which Mr. Marden is an exponent is one that all ambitious young men and women should read. The gist of it is that "whatever the soul is taught to expect, that it will build." That which we intensely long for is really the "range of our efficiency" and a prophecy of what we can be, if we have the right mental attitude. No one can succeed if deep down in his heart he doesn't expect to; he must look forward to success as an assured fact. The chapters contain a great deal of helpful suggestions as "Self-Encouragement by Self-Suggestion." The book is a fine one and should inspire its readers with a desire to look at things in a different light than the pessimistical one. It is published by Thomas Y. Crowell & Company, New York, and is on sale at $1.00 net.

Richard Washburn Child has laid the scene of "Jim Hands," a very interesting new novel, in a New England village. This village contains every class of society, from the powerful factory owner to the tramp. The story is told by "Jim Hands," who possesses that fine Yankee sense of humor, as he smokes his pipe on the porch and relates incidentally the love story of his daughter, a splendid heroine, while he gazes at the twinkling lights of the town below and shows his auditors its very soul. It is a highly interesting book, is published by The MacMillan Company of New York, and sells at $1.50.

"Lips of Music" by Charlotte Porter (Thomas Y. Crowell & Company, New York, publishers) contains about one hundred and fifty poems, the greater number of which are lyrics of exceptional merit. Some of these have been successfully set to music—namely, "The Green Bird," "Bertrand's Song," and "The Tragic Rapture." Miss Porter will be remembered as editor of Shakespeare's works and of the Camberwell Browning, also as being one of the writers for "Poet-Lore," in which several of the poems in "Lips of Music" have appeared. Readers will be interested in observing the effect that her long study and association with Browning's works has on the author. The poems are so far above the average that lovers of poetry will surely long for more from her gifted pen. This book is on sale at $1.25 net.

"Son of the Wind"

In "Son of the Wind" written by Lucia Chamberlain (publishers, Bobbs-Merrill, Indianapolis), the author has deviated from her earlier clever mystery stories and has given us a story that is notable for its fine descriptions, the charm with which she pictures the forests and mountains, the little wild creatures, and especially the wonderful black stallion, the wild horse, which the Indians believe to be a son of the wind. There is a charming love story connected with it of a young horse tamer, Carron, who, hearing of this horse, is determined to capture it, and Blanche Rayner, daughter of a placid old scholar who runs a summer hotel but who, on account of reminiscences of past glories, leaves the management and business worries of it to his much harassed wife. Blanche, a wild creature with a great sympathy for all wild and free things, is reluctant to tell Carron where he may see "Son of the Wind," but is at last prevailed upon to let him get just a glimpse of the horse as he is drinking at the stream. There is a description of the terrible struggle between the animal and the man with the sympathies of the reader all drawn to the side of the horse and the girl who stands by broken hearted for having betrayed the noble animal. It is a fine story, realistically told, with characters that are not of the common type.

A. A. BENTON, manager of the bank audit department of Marwich, Mitchell & Company, sent cards for a Happy and Prosperous, etc., to his many banker friends.

M. A. GRAETTINGER, who has retired from the M. & M. Bank, Milwaukee, would be a strong card for any Chicago or New York bank looking out for new accounts up Wisconsin way.

L. G. KAUFMAN, busy with taking over the Phoenix into the growing Chatham National, New York, did not forget to send out his compliments of the season. He doesn't forget.

F. RICHARD C. ALDRICH, Eugene R. Pike, William E. White and Benjamin Block have been admitted to general partnership in the brokerage firm of Finley Barrell & Company.

L. E. HIGGINSON & COMPANY, print their January list in large type, moderate sized pages, which is correct. The fancy paper, wide margins and nonpareil type craze has gone the limit. Besides the men who have arrived at the investment age and income do not delight in small type, blue paper and green ink. They want it plain and large.

A. FIVE-TON motor coal truck in the service of the Syracuse University hauls an average of forty-five tons of coal a day from the D. L. & W. Railroad coal pockets in Syracuse, N. Y., to the University. The distance is three and four-tenths miles and three quarters of the distance is up grade, the average being seven per cent and the maximum twelve per cent. One man operates the truck, which is loaded by gravity from the coal pockets and delivers its loads by gravity through a chute in the side of the steel body into underground coal bins through man-holes. On one day recently the truck hauled forty-six and six-tenths tons of coal to the university in nine loads and in addition hauled two five-ton loads from the coal pockets to the downtown building of the institution.

A. UTOMOBILE tours of Europe is a feature of "The Gross Tours, 302 Ellicott Square, Buffalo." Think of it, and at only about ten or twelve dollars per day. Then too, the Gross who manages it is a brother of Harry A. Gross of the Northwestern Railway, which is a substantial guaranty.

"N. OTHING new under the sun" is an accepted truth in many quarters. Lots of those who equip their cars with a speedometer think it a modern invention. Not so!

W. E may read in Vitruvius's Treatise on Architecture, where he describes a method of measuring the distance traveled by a vehicle. Gearing was so arranged that when one Roman mile was traversed a pebble or ball was dropped into a brazen pot, thus giving an audible notice of the end of the mile; this with the hour glass gave the speed indicator, and when the day's journey was finished the distance was found by counting the pebbles in the brazen pot.

V. ITRUVIUS dedicated his book to the Emperor Augustus, who died A. D. 13, but the actual date of the publication is unknown, but it is believed to have been a few years before the beginning of the Christian era. As he speaks of this invention as being used at that time, it is very likely more than 2,000 years old. It was also used for measuring distances at sea, a paddle wheel being fixed on one side of the ship to turn the gearing. If this was't the first odometer and speedometer combined it was certainly an early one.

"T. HERE are no hard times in Oklahoma" said F. A. Davis. "For an example, take my town of Nashville. It isn't very big and has only 149 inhabitants. Just fifty men over twenty-one years of age live there, but say; the automobiles scoot around there lively. Twelve farmers living in the town, or near it, own autos."

U. NTIL the publication of the remarkably interesting and valuable biography, "The Intimate Life of Alexander Hamilton," its author, Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, was known to readers only in professional lines. Since its publication a few weeks ago by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, it has been remarkably successful and has proved itself well suited to the tastes of the general reader but just the thing for the banker who wants to be up-to-date on Hamilton.

S. PENCER TRASK & COMPANY is marketing the Kaw Valley drainage bonds on a $4\frac{3}{4}$ basis. Kansas City, Kan., school bonds sell on $4\frac{1}{4}$ basis and the drainage ought to be just as good.

L. AST week it was intended to read in this column that "Andrew Russel has been invited by State Treasurer Mitchell to remain in the office as a sort of chairman of the board. The holiday vision of the proof-reader made it read "escort of chairman, etc." Could you beat him? We would like to.

Talk No. 50

The Cashier Says:—

"Just as I was leaving the barber shop this morning I met Browning, the Cashier of the First National.

He stopped me and asked if I would mind dropping in some time and explaining just how we handled our Transit items.

I told him I would be mighty glad to tell him all I knew but that I wasn't much on lengthy explanations. However, I gave him a brief outline of the way in which we number the different items and then list them on the machine.

"Then I told him to write the Burroughs Adding Machine Company at Detroit, Michigan, and ask for their booklet, 'A System for Handling Transit Items.'

He did and I understand they have adopted the complete system as outlined by the Burroughs Company. That makes the third bank in this city to adopt the Burroughs Transit System.

Better write today for their booklet and find out how to eliminate one of the troublesome details of banking with a Burroughs."

P. HILADELPHIANS who have bought stocks, bonds, timber lands, mining shares, etc., from F. A. Guthier & Company, of Room 810, Perry Building, in that city, probably will be amazed to learn that the head of the firm—the much absent, much traveling, rich old gentleman, "Frederick A. Guthier"—is none other than the suave, attractive, little blonde girl behind the counter, whose name is Florence Agnes Guthier.

J. UST at present Miss Florence, as she is known among her friends, is offering unsuspecting investors "the unsold portion of an issue of $250,000 guaranteed debenture 6 per cent forty-year gold bonds of the Producers' Chemical Company," which, as a matter of fact, has not yet been incorporated, has issued neither stocks nor bonds, and does not own a thing, although Miss Florence's prospectus says that the company's property, as security behind the bonds she offers for sale, is $350,000.

A. PRIVATE wire says if driven out of the bond business in Pennsylvania she intends coming to Illinois to open a private bank, having read of the success of the Cosmopolitan, the Jankovitch and the Butler adventures.

S. PECIAL canvassers have worked up quite a business in the "Card of Thanks" line for the daily papers. They tackle the bereaved family for an ad. on burial day, to express their gratitude for those who came to the funeral. We know several alleged financial papers who will go to this new quarry so soon as they hear of it.

W. ELL, those who insisted upon fighting state guaranty are wiser than they were, and of course, they will pay the fiddler.

H. ENRY M. CARPENTER, out at Monticello, Ia., sent this characteristic telegram to a Chicago friend on January 3d: "About 20 below zero here this morning and we are glad we have an inside job."

G. ERMAN NATIONAL of Beloit, Kan., has sent out a regular boudoir calendar this year, catering especially to the lady patrons. It is in lavender colors with a real ivory ring for hanging up. The portrait suspended by a ribbon is in water colors. L. A. Mergen, cashier, is the art critic entitled to the credit.

S. ECURITY BANK, Chicago, has gained $600,000 in deposits the past year, now reporting $2,760,000. The net profits of the year are $53,000, nearly all of which went to surplus. E. A. Erickson is president and J. B. Forgan, president of the board. Mr. Forgan pledged himself to make it a model bank and many think he already has succeeded. No losses or depreciations are reported for the year.

F. IRST NATIONAL Berkeley, Cal., has sent out a neat book of views giving complete details of its new banking building. Deposits are near two and one half millions in the national and nearly three million in the Berkeley Bank of Savings, under the same management. A. W. Naylor is president and Frank L. Naylor cashier.

T. HERE were thirty disappointed bidders when the ten millions of Pittsburgh's new municipal bonds went to N. W. Harris and Company, New York branch. The bonds went to almost $2\frac{1}{2}$ points premium.

F. RANK W. ALDRICH, a Bloomington banker, so we see in the society column has been granted a divorce. Mrs. Aldrich has taken up her residence in Paris. (Not Illinois.)

M. Y, my, but we're not sorry for W. E. Corey. How they stood him so long as they did will remain a mystery to outsiders. Men who desert wife and children to marry an actress are not the kind the public puts any faith in.

Gain in Deposits

In all the banks of the city, national and state, there is a gain of $14,000,000 in deposits since the previous call, the total amount now held on this account in fifty-four banks footing up $830,000,000. The increase for two months is about 5 per cent. Important gains in cash resources are made by Central Trust, Chicago City, Chicago Savings, Continental-Commercial Trust, First Trust and Savings, Foreman Brothers, Hibernian, Illinois Trust, Merchants Loan and Trust, Northern Trust, Prairie State, Western Trust and Savings.

Central Trust gains a million and a quarter in deposits, Illinois Trust, over three millions, Northern Trust two millions, Foreman Brothers a half million and First Trust and Continental-Commercial Trust each nearly two millions.

W. G. Edens on Tour of Inquiry

W. G. Edens, secretary of the Illinois committee on agriculture, left for Minneapolis on Thursday evening, to consult and meet with the "back to the soil" committee of the famous Minnesota Bankers Association. Mr. Edens was boning Joseph Chapman, Jr., one of the authors of the movement, for information, and Mr. Chapman invited him to attend. Mr. Edens also met with the executive council at St. Paul. The Illinois committee will meet at the Union League Club at 10 A. M. on January 17th, preceding the executive council meeting that afternoon at the directors' room of the First National.

Money Steady

The money market is quiet and steady around 5 per cent. There is a range of 1 per cent in counter rates, the size and character of the loan being the governing factor. Little business is reported in call loans, the quotation being 4 to 4½ per cent. Secured paper is taken freely at 5 per cent. Time loans are mostly at this figure, though the range is 4½ to 5½. Bonds are fairly active for investment account. Collections in the country are rather slow this week and liquidations that were expected at the first of the year or earlier are in some cases deferred, as farmers are holding grain and stock for higher prices.

A. A. Crane

A. A. Crane, vice-president of the First National, Minneapolis, was in Chicago on Wednesday on his way to New York. He was accompanied by Mrs. Crane and his six year old son. He reports briskness in money demands in the Northwest.

THIS is an illustration of the Insurance Exchange Building, a 21-story block now in process of construction in Chicago. The site is 202 x 202 feet, fronting on Jackson Boulevard, between Fifth Avenue and Sherman Street. D. H. Burnham & Co. are the architects and builders, and the ownership rests in the Insurance Exchange Building Trust. A bond issue of $4,000,000 five per cents has been made and these securities have been taken over by Continental and Commercial Trust and First Trust, in this city, for the purpose of marketing them. This building will be the largest office structure in Chicago, the second largest and one of the finest of the kind in the world, and will be largely, if not wholly, occupied above the second story by underwriters and the local offices of the principal insurance companies of the United States and Europe. Already more than three-fifths of the office space has been leased to tenants of this class, numbering 125, for a period of from ten to thirty years at an annual rental of over $500,000, which is more than sufficient to cover all expenses, taxes and interest. The bonds are secured by an absolute first mortgage upon both the land and the building to be erected thereon, and the total value of the property when completed is estimated to be in excess of $8,000,000.

COMMERCIAL SAFE DEPOSIT CO., which owns the building which houses the Continental and Commercial National has increased the dividend from 5 to 6 per cent.

NATIONAL BANK OF THE REPUBLIC now has capital $2,000,000, surplus $1,000,000, having added $300 this year out of earnings.

NEW YORK banking law passed May 23, 1910, requiring private banks to secure license and deposit security of $10,000 with the state comptroller, together with a surety bond, was declared constitutional by the supreme court of the United States after having been turned down in the lower courts.

THE comptroller of the currency has declared a fifth dividend of 10 per cent to the creditors of the First National Bank of East Brady, Pa., amounting to $21,879.99 on claims proved of $218,799.97, making the total dividend paid 60 cent. This bank was closed May 1, 1908.

DANIEL ANNAN down at Cumberland, Md., has a board of directors who direct. On Christmas day they handed President Annan a check, signed but not filled out, and told him to go to Europe for a year. The whole family was included. He will sail on January 11th.

MR. ANNAN is an ex-president of the Maryland association and is known to every banker in his state. We know two or three bank presidents who will leave marked copies of the above paragraph lying about where their directors may happen to see it. They will if they are wise.

COUNTERFEITERS now are making their half-dollars and dollars out of real silver at a handsome profit—say 100 per cent. Really Murray should do something about this?

A HALF-BUSHEL of dimes came into the Pekin (Ill.) postal savings bank, and yet there are those who believe we never would have them in this country. Now look out for the income tax and the parcels post. There is such a thing as being too skeptical, you know.

BANK amalgamation stories are pretty thick even in Chicago. In other cities they are thicker.

DON'T fail to note the frequency of the "Look out" notices from those secretaries who have safes and insurance for sale. The woods are not so full of Yeggmen as they want you to believe. The zealous revivalist always dwells upon the terrors of the future life. Ye agency-secretary waves ye Yeggman's flagge.

JOSEPH C. ROBIN was a "bird" of a banker. Lucky for him that Clark Williams wasn't in the chair when he first expanded.

MONROE NATIONAL has a new and popular director in George W. Dixon, of the Dixon Transfer Co., Chicago.

NATIONAL banks stand solid with the public as is shown by their doubling their resources in ten years. This, too, in an open field against the newer and more popular form of trust company banking, under less stringent state laws.

REALLY we hate to revert to the subject of private banks but two more of them—in Alaska and at Pittsburgh—failed to open on Saturday last. One in Chicago sued the entire neighborhood where it is located for "circulating false stories" about its credit.

THE Pittsburgh "bank" closed because the New York banking department got after its New York branch, under the new state law recently upheld by the U. S. supreme court. The Alaska "bank" failed because of "investing its resources (deposits?) in a lumber company." These are the rocks which the unsupervised banker continues to stumble over.

CORN EXCHANGE NATIONAL earned 31 per cent on capital last year which is going some for "hard times."

ILLINOIS TRUST earned 34 per cent last year which is another bright red feather in John J. Mitchell's plumage. Bank and banker in this case closely approach the ideal.

OH yes! if you have any of those Cosmopolitan "bank" certificates of deposit just—well, of course, if you'd rather just say nothing about them. They're worth just as much locked up as they are at large.

CONTINENTAL AND COMMERCIAL TRUST & SAVINGS BANK, Chicago, sends out an attractive offering of Spokane Lumber Company gold 6's at par and interest. These bonds are redeemable at 103 on any interest date and are in denominations of $500 and $1,000.

TRULY Mr. Cheney's star is not going down in a blaze of glory. Or, is he to blame for Robin's long drawn out career? New York is so conspicuous in things financial that we far-outers expect great things of her bank superintendents just as we accept in wonder, also, the tales of her banker who wears a white flannel dress suit, a yellow dinner coat and plays chess by long distance telephone.

OUR regards to President MacMichael of the chapters. He is going to speak before the Alabama Bankers in very fast company, as oratory goes, without reducing his thoughts to "written form." Think of going to bat in between Clark Williams of New York and the Hon. Wm. P. G. Harding of Birmingham with bases full. There ought not to be any sacrifice hits in public speaking.

THE above is not a "knock" on the able head of the A. I. B. We had it out with the snappiest off-hand talker in the ranks—Joseph J. Talbert now of New York, then of Chicago—on the same subject. Mr. T. was going to the big Chicago A. B. A. convention with an extempore address. But he changed his mind and put it in polished phrase, in "written form."

LATER Col. Joe said he didn't believe any man was big enough to take up the time of the American Bankers Association with half baked rhetoric and uncertain logic. Educational Director Allen and our Friend Gurney of Fremont, Neb., put a lot of the young fellows wrong with their entertaining simulations of "doing it off hand." Clever, very clever both of them but very deceptive. They both know. Allen knows weeks in advance just how he is going to approach a climax in a halting way; and Gurney has practiced fumbling with his fob-chain and looking at the floor and the ceiling for a word until he does it artistically.

BUT don't you young fellows be fooled, even Herman couldn't take a jack rabbit out of a silk hat without practice nor without first putting it in the hat. Further, if you are preparing in advance, carefully and prayerfully, but want it to appear as "inspired" don't try to fool the editor who wishes to put it in type in advance. He is wiser than you may think.

THERE are only about two good excuses for not sending in your manuscript. One is if you have "lifted" it and the other is the method of D. R. Forgan—of using the same address several times, or, until some paper publishes it from notes.

C. H. HUTTIG, president of the Third National Bank, will be re-elected president of the St. Louis Clearing House on January 17th. The rule is for the president to serve two years. The slate for the board of managers has not been made up. W. W. Hoxton will continue as manager.

R. T. FORBES telegraphs that they are cutting ice at St. Joseph, and that the crop is fine. Ice is a big factor at St. Joe.

W. J. FENTON, not our banker Fenton, but sheriff of Falls City, Neb., denies the charges of Mr. Dolley, bank commissioner of Kansas, that he protects bank thieves who do their robbing in other states.

C. E. MITCHELL, F. L. Hilton and F. W. Black, all of New York, are to form a partnership for the purpose of dealing in securities, beginning February 1st. These gentlemen have been identified with the Trust Company of America, Mr. Mitchell was assistant to the president, Mr. Hilton secretary and Mr. Black auditor.

JOHAN R. MORRON, president of the Atlas Cement Company, has been elected a director of the Guaranty Trust Company, New York City.

DON'T forget, no matter what you think the law ought to be, that the law now is that a state may tax solvent banks to pay the losses of insolvent ones, as they do in Oklahoma. The supreme court settled that.

PPRIVATE bankers must not forget that the same high authority has decided that the state may regulate and examine all private banks, no matter how private, and that security bonds may be required as well. You hear a lot of other kinds of talk but this is the law from the highest tribunal.

IN the Oklahoma case the decision said: "In short, where the Oklahoma legislature declares by implication that free banking is a public danger, and that incorporation, inspection and the above described co-operation are necessary safeguards, this court certainly cannot see where it is wrong."

WE wish to amend the Billings-Sherman sterilization bill now only applied to incurables and habitual criminals to include teachers of "the absolute life" and all other prophets, cultists, religionists and reformers who prey upon innocent women. This with our compliments to the Illinois legislature.

SMALL seismic disturbance in New York. Two or three unimportant banks fail. When they let a bank fail in New York it generally is one they wish to be rid of.

New Banking Law

Strong points in the new act proposed by Arkansas Bankers Association. All forms of banking to be under supervision. Powers of the commissioner. National Monetary Commission investigator finds State banks supplanting private banks. Growth of Trust companies phenomenal. The situation is interesting

The Arkansas Bankers Association seems to be quite as much in earnest as the Alabama Bankers Association about the necessity for a strictly modern state banking department. The bill which has been prepared by the Arkansas committee appears to cover largely the same ground as that prepared by the Alabama bankers and both of the new bills include the most striking and effective paragraphs from the recently adopted laws in several of the more progressive northern states. Arkansas has been trying to get along practically without supervision or regulation of any kind and has found that progress without them is impossible. Even the incorporated banks have been going about as they pleased. The proposed act will control banks, trust companies and savings banks, and individuals and private bankers engaging in banking will come under the same supervision and regulation as incorporated banks.

Private Bankers to be under Supervision

After providing for the formal appointment of the commissioner and the establishment of his office and duties, the new bill takes note of the work which is to be accomplished under it. As early as section 10 it is provided that any individual, firm, or corporation holding itself out to the public as a bank or banker must become subject to the law. Following are the provisions of section 10.

Sec. 10. That any individual, firm, or corporation holding himself or itself out to the public as a bank or banker, trust company or savings bank, by sign, advertisement, or otherwise, shall be subject to the provisions of this act, and wherever in this act shall be used the word "bank," it shall be understood to apply alike to any incorporated bank, trust company, savings bank, copartnership, or individuals transacting a banking business.

Can Refuse Charter for Lack of Character

Those who apply for bank privileges in Arkansas are to be bona fide residents of the state. All capital subscribed must be actually paid in. The banking commissioner is to be satisfied with the character and general fitness of the persons named as stockholders. They must command the confidence of the community in which the institution is to be located. He must know that the capital has been subscribed in good faith and actually paid in. He then may issue a certificate of incorporation. The new institution shall transact no business except the election of officers, the taking and approval of their bonds, and the receipt of payments for stock subscriptions until they have been further authorized by the commissioner to commence business. These provisions apply to an individual or a firm just as fully as they apply to an incorporated bank. Section 15 further defines the obligations put upon private banks in Arkansas as follows:

Sec. 15. Any individual or firm doing business as a private bank, shall designate a name for such bank, which shall show that it is not incorporated; and all property, real or personal, owned by such bank shall be held in the name of the bank, and not in the name of the individuals of the firm; all the assets of any private bank shall be exempt from attachment or execution by any creditor of such individual or firm, until all liabilities of such bank shall have been paid in full. No private banker shall use any of the funds of his bank for private business, and the note of the owner or owners of any private bank shall not be considered or accepted as a part of its assets. In case of the death of an individual banker his widow shall not be endowed of any of the property of the bank except such as remains after the payment of all depositors and other creditors.

Some of the New Requirements

No form of banking can begin in the state until all fees to the commissioner have been paid. Banks shall organize with not less than ten thousand dollars in cities of less than twenty-five hundred inhabitants. The amount of capital is graduated from this upwards until fifty thousand dollars is the capital which will be permitted in cities of ten thousand or more. This section is not retro-active and banks now doing business with smaller capital, after complying with the other provisions of the bill, will not be required to increase the amount. The bill is very positive about the non-issue of any banking shares until their full par value shall have been paid in in money. There is a stock qualification for directors and ownership in these cases must be bona fide.

Can Remove the Incompetent and Negligent

The bank commissioner is to have some of the powers delegated to the banking commissioners in South Dakota, Oklahoma, and elsewhere. If any officer of a bank is found to be negligent, reckless, or incompetent, he shall be reported in writing to the directors. If they do not remove him at once all of the directors so notified are held by the law to be responsible for any losses which come to the bank through the officer to whom objections have been filed. The usual lien upon all stock is given to the bank. In case of the partnership or private bank the lien is upon the owners or partnership property of its members. Under the new law any person wilfully making a false statement or a false entry upon the books of the bank is to be punished by imprisonment of not less than one year. Reserve of not less than fifteen per cent is provided; two-fifths of this shall be carried in cash in vaults and the balance may be held on deposit subject to check with other banks and trust companies. There is a very positive prohibition against paying dividends out of capital; likewise against the certification of checks or drafts unless money covering the same is actually on deposit. This applies to private banks and to incorporated banks alike. A further provision denies a bank the right to employ its money directly or indirectly in trade or commerce or in the buying and selling of property or merchandise. It shall not purchase its own shares of capital stock unless to protect the bank from a loss. Neither shall the bank loan any money to its stockholders taking their stock as collateral. Loans to individuals or corporations are limited to forty per cent of the capital stock paid in.

Overdrafts are not Entirely Eliminated

The law permits the board of directors to ratify overdrafts but otherwise it holds the bank officer paying an overdraft personally responsible for the amount. It must not be forgotten that in the Southwest overdrafts are not looked upon with the same degree of disapproval as in the North and in the East. Section 38 provides that every private bank and incorporated bank shall make full statements of assets and liabilities whenever required. These statements are to be called for without notice. In the case of private banks the oath of the proprietor is to be attached to the statement. If it is a banking firm the majority of its members must sign the affidavit. The bill throughout is very explicit in denoting the same methods of examination, the same penalties for evasion and for failure to report upon private banks that it imposes upon incorporated banks. Paper past due in all kinds of banks for twelve months must be charged off. The result of each bank examination shall be mailed to each director of the bank who must make acknowledgment of its receipt. Two yearly reports shall be published in the newspaper in the country where the bank is located. Failure to make these reports or to publish them within ten days of the time named in the call is sufficient ground for the commissioner taking charge of the bank and pronouncing it to be insolvent. The commissioner and his examiners are given very full powers and are permitted to examine under oath any proprietor of a private bank, officer, agent, or clerk or other person in any bank under examination.

Penalties may be Promptly Enforced

Whenever any officer of any bank refuses to submit books and papers freely to the examiner the commissioner may revoke their banking permit and proceed to wind up its business. If any officer continues to conduct the bank after its authority has been revoked, a fine of five hundred dollars is provided. Ample provisions for taking charge of weak or insolvent banks is provided and the practice under the new law will be made strictly of a modern type. The commissioner is authorized to pronounce any bank insolvent whenever he finds that the actual cash market value of its assets are not equal to its liabilities; or when it is unable to meet the demands of its creditors; or when it shall fail to make good its reserve as required by law. The commissioner may require proprietors of private banks and stockholders officers of incorporated banks to restore the solvency. They may do this by executing a bond to be paid within six months; otherwise the bank may be liquidated. The usual provisions for notice of all other banks and bankers in case of insolvency are provided for. The commissioner is given the right to redeem any collateral which may have been pledged by the bank at any time within thirty days after taking charge. This bill is to be pushed for passage by the entire officers of the Arkansas Bankers Association at the present session of the Arkansas legislature.

What the National Monetary Commission Learned

In an exhaustive review of the growth of state banks and trust companies since national banks entered the field in 1864, Prof. George E. Barnett, of Johns Hopkins University, in a volume just published by the National Monetary Commission, declares that he has been unable to find that the rate of failure among state banks is any higher than that among national banks.

Analysis shows that state banks have partially supplanted both private banks and the national banks with small capital.

The following reasons are given for the growth of state banks at the expense of private banks: "(1) The chief reason for the partial supplanting of the private bank by the small state bank is the advantage of the corporate form of organization in giving greater security to the depositor and consequently in increasing the credit of the bank. (2) The growth of small state banks has been much increased in a number of states by legislation relating to private banks," such as the forbidding of the use of a corporate name or the name "bank" by non-incorporated institutions.

"In 1877 the number of state banks with a capital of $50,000 and over was 634 and the number of national banks was 2,080. In 1909 the numbers of the same classes were 2,620 and 4,773, respectively." The great majority of state banks have a capital of less than $50,000, while the great majority of national banks have a capital of $50,000 or more. The reasons why the smaller state banks have increased more rapidly than national banks are: (1) Since the development of state supervision the credit of state banks approximates that of national banks except for interstate business. (2) The profit on the issue of national bank notes has not been great. (3) State banks have more freedom in making loans. They may loan on real estate. (4) The reserve requirements for state banks are less stringent.

Recent Growth of Trust Companies

The recent growth of trust companies, Professor Barnett says, has been due to their more liberal reserve requirements, their more liberal provisions regarding investments, and their wider range of powers in general.

The capital required of trust companies varies from $5,000 in North Carolina to $1,000,000 in the District of Columbia, the usual requirement being $100,000. "The first general laws for the incorporation of trust companies in the United States required such companies to have a much larger capital than that required for banks, but the later legislation shows a distinct tendency in the direction of lowering the requirements in regard to capital."

Most companies are not usually required to accumulate a surplus.

The requirement of a specified reserve against demand liabilities is of comparatively recent date in most states. "In most of the antebellum state banking laws reserves were required only against note issue. Until 1887 a reserve was required for state banks in only three states, and in these the required reserves were small." At present a reserve of from 10 to 25 per cent of deposits (either demand or total) is required in all except 10 states. This reserve need not be entirely cash in bank, but may be part bank balance or, in some cases, specified securities. "In Connecticut, Florida, and Pennsylvania the reserve may consist partly, and in Georgia wholly, of securities."

States do not Encourage Concentration

Striking evidence is given of the natural economic tendency of funds to concentrate. Only Rhode Island and Connecticut have reserve provisions similar to those of the national banking law, i. e., formed in such a way as to centralize reserves. Consequently, an interesting comparison may be made. "The total resources of the state banks and trust companies are somewhat less than the total resources of the national banks; but on September 1, 1909, the net deposits of New York national banks due to state banks and trust companies was $334,000,000, while the net deposits due to other national banks was $289,000,000."

Trust companies, are, in general, required to keep the same reserves as state banks, with the exceptions, (a) that the former are more usually allowed to carry bonds or demand loans as part of their reserves, and (b) that different reserves are required to be held against demand and time deposits. Since the panic of 1907 Massachusetts and New York have increased the reserve requirements of trust companies.

The difference in activity of the deposits of national banks and trust companies is shown by the fact "that while the trust companies in the city of New York had about the same amount of deposits as the banks of that city their clearings amounted to only about 7 per cent of the clearings of the banks."

Branch Banking not Much Encouraged

"Under none of the state banking laws has there been built up an important system of branch banks," says the writer, although in 9 states (California, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, New York, Oregon, Rhode Island, Virginia, and Washington) state banks and trust companies are definitely permitted to have branches. In three states (Louisiana, Maine, and Massachusetts) trust companies may have branches. In many cases, however, there are restrictions as to location of the branch. Specific authorization by some state official or officials and the requirement of additional capital for each branch are usual conditions for the establishment of branches.

A number of states have limited the amount of bank stock that may be held by banks in order to prevent the extensive control of banking by a single interest. However, "it has not been possible to forbid the ownership of stock in a banking institution by persons or companies who already own a controlling interest in other banking institutions on the ground of such other ownership." In 1909 the Wisconsin commissioner referred to the unified ownership of banking institutions as follows: "A new feature in banking has manifested itself of late which, if permitted to go on unhindered, will eventually result in a monopoly control of the banking business. I refer to the so-called holding companies, which are increasing with alarming rapidity in various parts of the country. One of these companies, with headquarters in Minneapolis, Minn., owns a controlling interest in more than 50 banks in Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, and the Dakotas. Legislation should be had to discourage this evil in every proper manner."

Growth of State Banks Phenomenal

Growth of state banks has been phenomenal, according to the statistics which have been collected for the volume. They are now twice as numerous as the national banks, although their combined capital is only half as much. Their growth has been especially rapid since 1886, and the greatest increase has occurred since 1889. Their growth has been greatest in the far West and least in the New England States. Trust companies have been on the increase since 1889. There are now approximately 15,000 state banks, private banks, and trust companies.

State banks have enjoyed pronounced prosperity, Professor Barnett says, because they have fewer restrictions than national banks in making loans and because the capital and reserve requirements for state banks are less stringent, while the profit on circulation of

By C. C. Burford

The German-American Bank of Bloomington has completed almost nine years of business. During these nine years the German-American has made rapid strides and is now well established in the business life of Bloomington. Some of the most prominent business men in that city are members of the directorate of the bank. The capital stock paid in is $100,000 with an earned surplus of the same amount. The deposits are over $1,249,000. Albert Wochner is the president. Paul F. Beich and Frank Oberkoetter are vice-presidents while Adolph Wochner is the cashier. Mr. Beich, one of the vice-presidents and a prominent manufacturer of Bloomington, is a director of the La Salle Street National of Chicago.

Meriweather is New Cashier

Bankers at the Cairo convention remember J. A. Meriweather who was one of the visiting bankers from Decatur. At that time Mr. Meriweather was assistant cashier of the National Bank of Decatur, but at the January meeting of the board of directors of the institution was promoted to the cashiership. B. O. McReynolds, who was the former cashier for over twenty years, was advanced to the presidency, succeeding D. S. Shellabarger, who retires. Mr. Shellabarger, a well-known mill and elevator man of Decatur, remains in the directorate of the bank.

Competition in Country Banks

The question of competition of two banks in a country village is an interesting one. In villages of only a few hundred people in Illinois there are often two banks and in many cases the struggle for supremacy between them is a hot and heavy fight. Factional feelings are thus generated among the people of the village and the surrounding country and in many cases the local social and political complexion is greatly influenced by the friends of one bank or of the other.

However, it is not always advisable for one bank to buy a controlling interest in the other for as one banker says, "A new bank would probably be started if we did that." The Bank of Saybrook, in a village of the same name in McLean county, conducted by Messrs. Robert Means and Charles Schureman, has secured control of the Citizens Bank of the same town. A third partner, William Rowe, has been admitted and the business of the two banks will be handled as heretofore but under one control. How successful this plan will be is an interesting one for country bankers. The Bank of Saybrook has been in existence for a quarter of a century.

Fairbury Bank Liquidates

The First Bank of Fairbury, formerly the First National Bank, and one of the oldest financial institutions in Livingston county, is to retire from business.

At the present time Elmer E. McDowell, who purchased the bank some time ago from his brother, T. S. O. McDowell, is engaged in closing up the business affairs of the concern. The checking accounts were all paid out several days ago, and now the notes held by the bank are being realized upon as fast as they come due, no new loans are being made and every effort is being made to close up the affairs of the bank as soon as possible. The bank was and is a strong one. There are plenty of resources on hand to pay all depositors. No run on the bank occurred when announcement was made that the business was to be closed and the bank completes its business with the kindest feeling of all persons in Fairbury.

The bank was founded early in the seventies by Isaac P. McDowell.

Large Mortgages Filed

The Chicago, Terre Haute and Southwest railroad which takes over the John R. Walsh line, has filed a mortgage at Terre Haute, Ind., in favor of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago for $20,000,000, and a second and supplemental mortgage for $6,000,000 in favor of the First Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago.

The first mortgage is to secure an issue of refunding bonds. The transfer of the property from the receiver to the new company was made January 2d. The railroad runs from Terre Haute to Chicago along the eastern line of Illinois and closely parallels the line of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad.

After Ellisville Banker

The state's attorney of Fulton county has a number of subpoenas against the creditors of the Butler banks in Fulton county which failed a few months ago. These creditors are directed to appear before the January term of court. It is well understood now that Butler and his employees are to be given a very searching trial and while the creditors of the banks do not expect to get more than 15 per cent of their money yet they have determined to push the case against these defaulting bankers as much as they can.

C. C. James who was in charge of Butler's bank at St. David is wanted by the sheriff of Fulton county. The people of Ellisville and vicinity are swearing vengeance on Butler and James. Butler was placed in jail in Peoria January 7th.

Illinois Notes of Interest

Beardstown has a new state bank which began business about Christmas. Harvey Kinney is the cashier.

George L. Harry, who has been president of the Lincoln State Bank of Lincoln, since its organization, has retired because of advancing years. Oscar M. Kiest is the new president and John McNath is vice-president. J. E. Hoblit is cashier and John O. Fortman is assistant cashier. The bank enjoyed a good year in 1910, earning 6 per cent profit for the stockholders besides carrying large sums to the surplus fund.

Decatur bank clearings for the year 1910 show an increase of about three million dollars over the business done in 1909.

Clearings in Peoria increased in 1910 about twelve millions over the figures for 1909. The internal revenue collections at Peoria totalled over thirty millions, a gain of about one million over the preceding year. However the revenue collections are not up to the high water mark as in 1906 they reached the amount of thirty-four million dollars.

Lampert's Address on Hamilton

Chicago Banker at club banquet, tells of man who first gave to this country practical ideas on National Banking System and Protective Tariff Policy

At the annual banquet of the Hamilton Club of Chicago on Wednesday evening the speakers were Nelson N. Lampert, vice-president of Fort Dearborn National, Rev. Dr. R. A. White, Judge Cutting and Colonel Buckingham. Mr. Lampert was the only banker to make an address. In speaking of "Hamilton as a Financier" he said:

It has taken the American nation a century and a quarter to come to a fair appreciation of those ideas in finance and government which distinguished the public career of Alexander Hamilton, whose memory we honor to-night. Hamilton's whole life was a lesson to posterity. It pleases me beyond expression that this great club is doing its part not only to perpetuate the name of Hamilton but to give vitality and permanency to his views. Hamilton as the leading financier of Washington's day, the formative period of this government, gave to this nation its first idea of reliable banking and the benefits of a tariff on imports. But he never revised the tariff upward when intending to revise it downward. Strange as it may seem to us at first thought, the dominating theory in banking to-day is that which was first promulgated in America by Alexander Hamilton.

Hamilton was only thirty-two years of age when he became secretary of the treasury. The federal constitution had just been adopted under his able leadership. Washington became president and congress passed an act creating the treasury department. So pre-eminent had Hamilton become as a financial leader that no other person was seriously considered for the post of finance minister. Friends and foes declared him to be the most suitable man in the country for the difficult work of creating a financial system. In a report to congress early in his administration setting forth his policy Hamilton used these words:

"To justify and preserve the confidence of the most enlightened friends of good government; to promote the increasing respectability of the American name; to answer the calls of justice; to restore landed property to its due value; to furnish new resources both to agriculture and commerce; to cement more closely the union of the states; to add to their security against foreign attack; to establish public order on the basis of an upright and liberal policy—these are the great and invaluable ends to be secured by a proper and adequate provision at the present period for the support of public credit."

As Daniel Webster afterwards said of him, "He touched the dead corpse of public credit and it sprang upon its feet." Hamilton understood that it is impossible to keep one's credit without paying one's debts. Hamilton proposed that the government should accurately compute all the debts of the continental congress, both foreign and domestic, and pay the whole amount in full, with interest. That point he carried. Then he proposed something that surprised everybody and alarmed many. He proposed that the debts of the separate states should be assumed and paid by the federal government. Mark the profound wisdom of that proposition. Most of the creditors to whom the states owed money were American citizens. If the United States assumed the state debts all those creditors would at once become creditors of the United States and all would be eager to have the federal government get an ample revenue to enable it to pay its obligations. That would result in building up a party directly interested in strengthening the federal government. Another of Hamilton's proposals with the same end in view was the establishment of a great central bank in which the national government should be a shareholder and partly a director.

But some people objected to these measures and said the constitution nowhere gave to congress the right to charter such a bank. They claimed also that the nation had no right to raise money by taxation in order to pay money owed by a state. Hamilton merely pointed to that clause in the constitution which gives to congress the right to make all laws which shall be necessary for carrying into execution the powers vested by the constitution in the government of the United States.

That ought to be called the elastic clause of the constitution, because it can be stretched to cover many things. Thomas Jefferson was the principal opponent to Hamilton's views. In that way arose the first great division between political parties under the constitution. The Hamiltonians gave a liberal construction to the elastic clause in order to make the new government strong. The Jeffersonians gave a strict or narrow construction to that clause because they were afraid the new government would grow too strong and become tyrannical.

The North had been as much afraid of a strong federal government as the South, but in the northern states there were many more merchants and capitalists who had lent money to the states and nearly all those people supported Hamilton. On the other hand, southern planters were afraid of having the government managed too much by capitalists and so they generally supported Jefferson. Thus the love for a strong federal union began to grow much faster in the North than in the South.

The dispute over these questions raged fiercely and a compromise was finally reached when the site for a federal capital had to be selected. A bargain was made in which each side gave up one thing in order to get the other. Congress assumed all of the state debts and the city of Washington was built on the banks of the Potomac.

The assumption of state debts was a master stroke of policy in strengthening the Union. However, in order to pay all these old debts, state and national, congress must have a revenue, and it must have a revenue in order to pay the current expenses of the government. People are terribly afraid of having their taxes increased. A direct tax would perhaps have been resisted, but an indirect tax was adopted in the form of a tariff on goods imported from foreign countries. We are still disputing whether the foreigner or the American pays the tariff tax. By a very moderate tariff Hamilton obtained at once revenue enough to carry on the government and pay all the debts. He also recommended that the tariff be used to encourage native manufactures as well as to obtain revenue. He saw that manufactures were likely to spring up and that it would be well to interest the owners to benefit and strengthen the nation.

In a national bank he then saw the surest staff to aid the tottering steps of the young and struggling republic and now in the plenitude of his power at the head of the treasury and of a vigorous party he turned to it as a fundamental element of a broad and national financial policy. Beaconsfield once announced that it was necessary to educate his party, and in similar fashion Hamilton began a report to congress by confessing that he wished to educate the public. The plan of the bank was a good one. It was to have the support of the government and the government was to have the use of the funds, and to a certain extent control of the bank. The economical problem which confronted the United States was how to develop the vast natural resources of the country. The difficulty lay in injured credit, both public and private, in lack of capital and circulating medium and in the general deficiency of the financial machinery necessary to the conduct of domestic trade and foreign commerce.

In a national bank Hamilton perceived means of restoring general confidence, so important to large business transactions. In the issue of bank notes he saw an addition to the circulating medium of the country and a great expansion of credit. These notes would have the strength imparted by the close alliance between the bank and the government without the dangerous qualities inherent in irredeemable paper. Facilities for exchange and for the transaction of business throughout the states would be promoted to a degree which we can hardly conceive without picturing to ourselves a community almost utterly destitute of all the appliances by which the vast concerns of the business world are now kept in daily motion. All these great benefits flowing from the national bank were correct in theory and proved equally so in practice.

They were all sought by Hamilton to advance the development of the country, which was the pole star of his whole financial policy. They were intended to facilitate trade, encourage enterprise, enhance the value of land and stimulate at once and as strongly as possible both agriculture and commerce. The policy of a national bank thus founded by Hamilton has never been permanently laid aside. When the charter of the first bank expired the very men who had most fiercely resisted it established another. Then came a series of experiments with state banks and difficulty and distress led to a return to Hamilton's policy. The system of national banks has replaced the bank of the United States and its branches and the governing principles are those laid down by Hamilton. We live now under the sound, wise policy which he devised and carried through more than a hundred and twenty-five years ago. To bring ourselves still more closely in line with his logical financial views we have come to-day almost to the point of establishing a central bank. With the consummation of this general desire, we will stand exactly where the first secretary of the treasury stood.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

With the holding of the annual meeting of the various Milwaukee banks and trust companies on the afternoon and evening of January 10th, many of the various rumors, which have been so widely circulated during the past sixty days were set at rest.

Milwaukee banks have been making history fast during the past month and aside from the reports of this consolidation and that consolidation, increases in capital stock and changes in officers, at least one of the most important rumors has been verified, and with the meeting of the First National Bank formal announcement was made of the absorption, by that institution of the Milwaukee and Fidelity Trust Companies, and this action on the part of the directors was approved at the annual meeting. Beyond this formal approval no definite action was taken at this meeting, which was adjourned to February 21st, at which time final action, increasing the capital stock of the bank will also be taken. This postponement was made necessary by the terms of the bank charter, which requires thirty days' notice before an increase in the capital stock can be made. It is expected that at that time all of the present officers will be re-elected and the directorate increased to twenty. The capital stock will also be increased from $2,000,000 to $2,500,000.

The plan of taking over the trust companies was fully outlined to the stockholders and the fact was announced that when the control of the stock becomes vested in its new owners, the Milwaukee Trust Company will continue business under a new name probably the First Savings and Trust Company. The stockholders of the bank will then become the owners of the trust company through trustees each stockholder acquiring a proportionate share of the stock of the trust company. Announcement was also made that plans are on foot to acquire a new site for a banking house, which shall be the home for the bank and the new trust company.

As yet, however, nothing definite as to the location of the plans for the building is in shape to be given out according to the officers of the bank.

At the annual meeting of the Marshall and Ilsley Bank all of its former officers were re-elected. They are: President, James K. Ilsley; Vice-President, John Campbell; Cashier, J. H. Peulicher; Assistant Cashiers H. J. Paine and F. A. Kirchhoff.

This bank has nearly completed its plans for its new home on East Water street and while nothing definite has been announced as yet, by the officers for publication, it is definitely known that the work of demolition of the buildings now occupying the new site will be commenced within a few months and when completed the new Marshall and Ilsley Bank Building will take rank as one of the finest buildings of its kind in the entire country.

At the Marine National, Arthur H. Lindsey, cashier, was promoted to be vice-president and also elected a director. Assistant Cashier Edward H. Williams was promoted to Mr. Lindsey's position and George Moores, paying teller, was chosen assistant cashier. G. D. Prentiss, teller, was also promoted to the position of assistant cashier and Thomas J. Durnin was elected secretary. Stephen Hoff, partner in business of the late Edward P. Hackett, was elected to Mr. Hackett's place on the board of directors.

At the Germania National, George F. Brumder, son of the late George Brumder, was elected a director. All of the former officers were re-elected as follows:

President, William C. Brumder; Vice-President, George P. Mayer; Cashier, Alfred G. Schultz; Assistant Cashiers, E. A. Reddeman, and Carl Engelke.

At the National Exchange Bank it was announced that no changes would be made in the officers or directors of that bank. Mr. Lombard was re-elected president, Grant Fitch, vice-president and William M. Post cashier.

At the Milwaukee National all of the officers and directors were re-elected. George W. Strohmeier is president; L. M. Alexander, vice-president; William F. Filter, cashier and John F. Strohmeier assistant cashier. These officers and J. F. W. Inbush, Ferdinand Meinecke and Carl Penshorn constitute the board of directors.

The Wisconsin National will hold its annual meeting January 11th, at which time it is expected that Herman F. Wolf, cashier, will be elected second vice-president to take the place made vacant by the resignation of Charles E. Arnold; L. G. Bournique, assistant cashier, will probably be promoted to the position of cashier. Other officers will in all probability remain unchanged.

The Merchants and Manufacturers Bank will hold its annual meeting later this month, at which time, it is said that Edwin C. Knoernschild will be made cashier to take the place of Martin A. Graettinger, resigned. No further change it is said will be made in the officers or directors of that bank.

At the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Trust Company all of the officers and directors were re-elected. They are: President, Oliver C. Fuller, Vice-President, Gardner P. Stickney; Secretary, Fres C. Best and Assistant Secretary, R. L. Smith.

Large Increase in Bank Loans

The statements of the national banks of Milwaukee for January 7th, shows that loans have advanced considerable since the reports of November 10th. During that period the increase has been $534,000 or nearly 2 per cent while cash resources have declined about 5 per cent and deposits and total resources are down a small fraction of 1 per cent. The cash loss and the loan advance are the only changes large enough to have much significance.

According to one prominent banker the bank statements show a condition of solid conservation. The demand for loans is not as great as it was in the last two months of 1910. Money is a little easier but the outlook for spring is fairly good.

Among the national banks the loan expansion since November shows the following percentage gains:

First National up 5 per cent; National Exchange up 4 per cent; Germania National up 2 per cent and the Wisconsin National up over a fraction of one per cent. Some of the banks made small gains in deposits while others made slight and temporary reductions due to the drawing down of city and other large accounts.

More of the Mineral Point Failure

Another chapter in the failure of the First National of Mineral Point, Wis., was written last week when suit was begun by Christopher L. Williams, receiver for the bank, against the directors of the bank at the time of its failure for $700,000.

The bill desires to hold the directors individually liable for the looting of the bank by Philip Allen and alleges the great negligence of the directors in not preventing the manipulation of the funds by Allen who, it is claimed, took $460,000 from the bank through his speculations. Negligence is also alleged in the allowing of loans by the bank to some mining corporations without financial responsibility, and it is claimed in the bill that the demands of the federal banking statutes as to the duties of directors were not carried out or the bank could never have been looted as it was.

Milwaukee's Lombard Street

Indications point strongly to East Water street in the near future being the banking center of Milwaukee. Negotiations have been in progress for some time by the First National interests looking toward securing a site on this street and it is said that options have been secured on at least two desirable corners.

The Marshall & Ilsley Bank has already secured a site just north of the Wisconsin National frontage on East Water street and building operations will be commenced within a short time. At least one other banking concern is reported to be looking for frontage on this street while some rumors are to the effect that the Wisconsin National will enlarge its building by taking in the Waldheim property just north of the present location.

The Fidelity Trust Company Personnel

Howard Greene, president of the Fidelity Trust Company, in speaking of his plans for the future says that as yet he has not decided what he will do when he retires from the trust company. Clement C. Smith, first vice-president says that he may not leave the concern altogether but would make no further statement. Fred W. Dickens, secretary, will leave the company and it is reported will connect with one of the prominent bond houses of Milwaukee. W. A. Jackson, vice-president, has some plans for the future which will take him to the West.

Among the Banks of the State

E. J. Hueffner and Byron B. Northrup, president and vice-president of the Manufacturers National of Racine, have tendered their resignations and declined re-election to the board of directors. Illness on the part of Mr. Northrup and business matters on the part of Mr. Hueffner were the reasons assigned. Their successors will be elected January 17th.

Edwin M. Wing former cashier of the Batavian National of La Crosse, and ex-president of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, has been elected vice-president of the bank to succeed E. E. Bently, resigned. J. A. Bayer becomes cashier while H. O. Klein takes the post of assistant cashier.

D. C. Buckstaff, treasurer of the Buckstaff-Edwards Co., has been elected a director of the Commercial National of Oshkosh, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of F. Zentner.

The directors of the Citizens State Bank of Stanley, Wis., at their December meeting, declared a six per cent dividend to stockholders as earnings for the past six months a five per cent dividend having been paid in July. The annual meeting of the stockholders was held on January 10th.

Senator Otto Bosshard has been elected president of the State Bank of Holmen, Wis., Thomas Johnson, former assemblyman, is vice-president.

Donald W. Williams, for something over ten years associated with the Bank of New Richmond, the last three years as assistant cashier, has resigned his position and on April 1st will become cashier of the Redwood City Commercial Bank, of Redwood City, California.

Cashier F. P. Ainsworth, of the First National of Neillsville, Wis., has resigned his position.

At a meeting of the officials of the Bank of Black Creek, Wis., the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, William Strassburger; vice-president, Peter Ryser; cashier, George H. Peters.

For the second time in the history of the First National of Appleton, a 25 per cent dividend on the undivided accrued earnings of the past twenty years was made at a recent meeting. Each of the fifty-eight stockholders received a draft from President Herman Erb for his share of the $75,000 in proportion to his holdings.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the new bank at Stockbridge, Wis., the following officers were elected: President, T. E. Connell; vice-president, Thos. Flatley; cashier, A. H. Flatley and assistant cashier, John B. Flatley.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Osstburg State Bank a few changes were made in the list of directors: B. Grotenhuis will succeed S. E. Huibregtse and G. J. Lohuis will succeed John Theune.

At a meeting of the directors of the National Bank of Waupun the resignation of C. A. Shaler was presented. This move was made necessary on account of Mr. Shaler's failing health.

Franklin A. Boyd has been elected assistant cashier of the Commercial National of Fond du Lac. Mr. Body has been teller at the bank for several years. The following officers will serve for 1911: President, H. R. Potter; vice-presidents, A. G. Bechaud and Henry Boyle; cashier, M. T. Simmons and assistant cashier F. A. Boyd.

Granby Smelter Company, of which Jay P. Graves of Spokane, is vice-president and general manager, has just paid a dividend of $1 a share, or $150,000. The company has paid $2,000,000 in dividends to date.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

In his first message as elected governor, the successor to the late John A. Johnson, and recently choice of the people themselves at the polls in November, said in regard to the banking department:

The last session of the legislature, in compliance with the general request of the bankers of Minnesota, created a separate state banking department by taking the supervision of these institutions from the department of public examiner and placing them under a superintendent of banks. The new department began business August 1, 1909. The result from every point of view justifies the wisdom of creating the new department, which has at all times had more than sufficient work to occupy the attention of the entire official force.

An exceptionally gratifying showing, both as to the growth of prosperity in the state, and the success of banking enterprise under the new regime, is made by the records of this department. During the year ending November 10, 1910, there was a net increase of 40 new banks, of $20,000,000 in deposits, and of $22,900.00 in total bank resources, a gain of 22 per cent. On that date there were in Minnesota, 686 state banks with deposits aggregating $108,000,000, and total resources in the sum of $126,240,000 which is more than three times the number of banks and volume of deposits and resources represented by the state banking system in 1900. A state banking growth of 200 per cent in 10 years certainly bespeaks progress. Including national banks, there has been an eight-fold increase in 25 years until to-day there are 970 banks in the state, with deposits aggregating $340,000,000.

The federal comptroller of the currency is by the law authorized to exercise his discretion in issuing a charter to a bank where the amount of local business does not justify its organization, and in cases where the application is prompted by local spite or jealousy. In this state there is a demand for similar authority on the part of the superintendent of banks with reference to applications for state charters. Such restrictive power, when properly exercised, is of value in safeguarding the interests of depositors, but since the exercise of such discretion may in many instances work a hardship, I would suggest that the grant of power be carefully safeguarded.

Four Northwestern States Free from Yeggs

Just where is the line between stern duty and official courtesy is a question that has risen in the minds of Charles R. Frost and other executives of the Interstate Protective Association, although it has not risen into their consciousnesses. Westward, Ho! is the cry of the yeggman, and it is the result of the work of this association composed of four northwestern state bankers associations. The protective organization is shoving the yeggmen over the line into other states. Its minions patrol the borders of the protected commonwealths and yell, 'What, Ho?' to the members of the nitro fraternity, causing them in afright to ply their nefarious work in the states which fringe the border of the protected four, only.

Telegrams show that bank robbery is being pursued in Kansas, Nebraska, the far end of South Dakota, and at other points outside the realm in which gay cats and other accessories of the safe blasting trade are non grata. Secretaries of the banking associations of these offended states wish that Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Iowa would keep their old yeggmen at home, arrest them, shut them up, do anything with them, only keep them at home. Diplomatically Secretary Frost replies that the yeggs commit no crime in his jurisdiction therefore he cannot restrain them in gaols. This is the retort courteous.

Minnesota Banking Department Up to Standard

Efficiency of his force was commented upon by J. B. Galarneault, retiring bank examiner in Minnesota, the first incumbent of the new office. He feels that he hands over to Kelsey Chase, his successor, a well organized department.

"The corps of bank examiners and office employees," said Mr. Galarnault, "would be hard to duplicate. If the 'powers that be' will allow the department to be conducted, as from its inception, as a business department, and will not permit it to be dragged down to a political basis, the banking system of Minnesota and the financial condition of the state will both be the better for it.

"There is danger, as always in such cases, that political considerations may be given too much weight in appointments in the department, and that it will be placed on a par with the appointments in the oil inspection department, for instance, which has always been recognized as a political department. The legislature in creating the department of banking expected politics would be kept in the background. Governor Johnson entered upon the organization of the department in that spirit. He disregarded politics to such an extent that a majority of the employees were selected from the opposing party. When his political friends opposed his appointment of a certain man to an office, he said: "I don't know that I can count him a friend of mine. I don't think he ever supported me; but I should not consider that. If he is competent that's all I want to know." And that settled it.

"Much of the future of the department and of the banking business in this state depends upon the attitude of the bankers. If they will interest themselves to the extent of letting it be known that they will not tolerate politics in the department of banking they can accomplish much."

M. B. A. Executive Council Meeting

The executive council of the Minnesota Bankers Association on January 13th met at the Hotel Saint Paul to arrange a legislative program and for other business, including choice of the next convention city. Secretary C. R. Frost reported on the bank protection feature. The committee on agricultural development and education met the day previous to frame its report. The negotiable instruments law was talked over also.

Several Bank Changes

Fendall G. Winston was elected vice-president of the Security National Bank at its annual meeting. Mr. Winston has been an active director for years. He is president of the Winston, Harper, Fisher Company, wholesale grocers, and of the Winston Brothers Company, railroad contractors. He is well known politically as a leading democrat and is a pioneer and prominent citizen.

W. A. Meacham, for twenty-three years an employee of the bank, and paying teller, was elected assistant cashier. J. H. Ellison, with Winston Brothers Company, and E. C. Warner, prominent linseed oil manufacturer, were added to the board.

At the Northwestern National, John S. Pillsbury of the Pillsbury Flour Mills Company; F. C. Van Dusen, VanDusen, Harrington & Company, grain; C. J. Winton, lumberman, and A. C. Cobb, lawyer, were made additional directors.

H. P. Newcombe, head of the collection department, and W. M. Koon, paying teller, were promoted to assistant cashiers.

T. A. Foque was added to the directory of the St. Anthony Falls Bank. He is master mechanic for the Soo line.

The East Side State Bank declared a semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent and increased the surplus from $8,000 to $11,000.

At the Minneapolis State A. W. Harper, cashier, succeeded B. W. Smith as president; E. E. MacGill, of the Bankers Security succeeded Roy Quimby as vice-president; A. L. Arnold of Beach, N. D., succeeded as cashier; C. E. Hill was re-elected assistant cashier. New directors are: E. E. Merrill, produce commission; John Fagerstrom, contractor; F. C. Squyer, insurance; L. M. Chamberlain, storage and transfer, C. E. Hill.

At the Minnesota National, which is liquidating, J. W. Molyneaux was re-elected president; J. H. Martin succeeded F. L. Williams as vice-president; I. F. Cotton was re-elected cashier. Directors were cut to seven, A. D. Clarke, former president, remaining on the board.

Thomas Irvine was elected director of the National German American to succeed the late Thomas Wilson and F. R. Bigelow to succeed O. P. Lanpher, resigned. The Snelling State Bank, which was organized in May, had its first annual election. The Dayton's Bluff State Bank is another new institution in St. Paul, organized in October.

A. E. Clerihew of Forman, Ford & Company, wholesale glass, and Archibald A. Crane, new vice-president, were made additional directors by the stockholders of the First National.

L. J. Peterson was made a director at the Germania Bank, leaving other members as before, E. E. Schober, L. Paulle, C. G. Laybourn, J. J. Heinrich, O. E. Naegele and J. S. Tucker. At the East Side State J. Schmidler and S. L. Frazier were added to the board and at the North Side State the stockholders selected L. E. Jepsen as a new man. At the Union State P. A. Paulson and W. F. Olsen were put on the board, and two more will be voted upon at the next meeting.

Bank Showing not Quite so Good

At the bank call it developed that there was some reduction in deposits. Loans and discounts on January 7th were $54,712,259 and deposits $70,568,031. The savings bank totals are as follows: Deposits, Hennepin County Savings, $4,851,815; State Institute for Savings, $445,000; Farmers' & Mechanics', $13,255,180.

The call showed the Minnesota National absorbed by the Scandinavian American National, making its deposits $2,284,809 and its loans and discounts $1,591,531. The Market State Bank and Camden Park State Bank have been organized since the last call and they report individually total deposits of $53,813 and $17,594 and loans and discounts of $52,708 and $22,657.

Few Changes in St. Paul Banks

Changes in St. Paul banks are to be slight. W. B. Dean is slated for vice-president of the Second National to fill a vacancy created when F. D. Montfort bought a commercial paper business in Minneapolis, and Edwin Mott, assistant cashier, to succeed him as director. Total deposits of five of the national banks are more than $35,000,000. The total surpluses reported from the same sources amount to $3,000,000. At the annual meeting of the Security Trust it developed that the net earnings for the year were at the rate of 14 per cent.

Add Two Directors to Minnesota Trust

Henry Doerr of the Minneapolis Drug Company, and J. T. Wyman of Smith & Wyman, manufacturers, are added directors on the board of the Minnesota Loan & Trust Company. The company declared a 6 per cent dividend in the year and has paid up capital of $1,000,000 and a surplus increased from $100,000 to $150,000. Undivided profits are $25,000.

Private Banker Dead

After being for thirty years connected with private banking and investments, in Minneapolis, John D. Cleghorn is dead. He was seventy-three; brother of Thomas Cleghorn; heavy land holder in Scotland; father of Susan Cleghorn, author.

Banking Notes

Business men and laborers have rallied to the support of the Provident Loan Company of St. Paul, $50,000 capital, in subscription of stock to insure the start of the anti-loan shark institution. Louis Betz, L. S. Cushing and W. B. Geery are three business men appointed to arrange a conference luncheon at which progress was made. The stock is expected to pay 6 per cent.

South Dakota's treasury reports that it held at the close of the year $554,514 in all funds. A call is to be made for $225,000 outstanding warrants.

Editorial Comment

Honor Due to Hamilton

Nelson N. Lampert, the Chicago banker, has pointed out in a public address that it has taken the American people a century and a quarter to get around to the position occupied by Alexander Hamilton on financial questions. It is true that Hamilton in the first federal administration, when secretary of the treasury under Washington, gave to the country a clear view and vigorous advocacy of a central bank and of a national banking system such as we now enjoy.

After a century of all kinds of experimentation, some of which has been exceedingly disastrous, the business world is pretty well agreed that honor is due to Hamilton for starting the nation aright. His ideas dominate to-day and will be of incalculable benefit to the United States in years to come.

It is well to bear in mind that while the country has gradually worked around to approve Hamilton's ideas we still are a long way short of having as good a financial system as can be worked out in following his views. Currency reform is the great need of the United States to-day. It may be assumed, however, that there are not to be many more foolish experiments or expedients. The nation wants banking unity and strength, with a sufficient expansion of the currency to meet the growth of business. The resources and experience of the American people are equal to the public demand for the development of a system at once broad, uniform and reliable.

Aviation Toll is Too High

With the feeling of horror existing since the death of Moisant and Hoxsey the people of America are placing themselves in opposition to aviation exhibitions. The toll in human life has been too high.

Practical experiments in pursuit of the science of air navigation need not be abandoned, but freak exhibitions in which men fly upward ten thousand feet or more, or assume other unnecessary dangers should be given up. They are doing more harm than good and should be discountenanced by the public. It is commendable in the Wrights and their competitors to abandon that sort of aeroplane exhibitions which have been so unfortunate in the last year.

In 1908 there was but one death among aviators; in the next year there were four; in 1910 the appalling total of forty was reached. Nearly every day in December brought a fatal accident. Moisant and Hoxsey were killed on the last day of the year, the former while exhibiting at New Orleans and the latter at Los Angeles, where he had just established a new record for high flying. The world does not require this sacrifice of life.

It is clear to the lay mind that science has not advanced far enough in the principles of aviation to justify public use or exhibitions of airships. The death record goes to prove that air navigation in many of its essentials has yet to be studied and mastered by the world of science. There should be no more exhibitions until greater safety is assured.

Evils of National Extravagance

A nation can waste its surplus just as an individual can and must suffer in somewhat the same way. When practical bankers like W. T. Fenton think it worth while to point out the dangers of national extravagance it is time for people generally to consider what the extent and nature of these evils are.

One fault is that the idle rich of this country waste their money in Europe. It is apparent that the amount of American capital spent in the old world every year exceeds the average balance of trade between Europe and America. At first glance this nation seems to be doing very well when our exports are three hundred millions over the imports. Such a balance in our favor gives us new capital and serves to put fresh vitality into many industries. But what is gained if the balance of trade be in our favor to the extent of a third or a half billion and the moneyed classes turn around and spend as much or more in a season of extravagant living abroad?

It is not the cost of travel at which financiers complain but rather a reckless waste and the expenditure of vast sums for merchandise in Paris and London which ought to be circulated in the United States—in the country where the money is gained. In addition to this foolish buying there is the absolute squandering of American wealth in ultra-extravagant not to say vicious living. When we come to estimate this waste together with the vast sum which annually is sent abroad by foreign-born laborers in this country who intend ultimately to return to their native land to live, it becomes apparent that the United States is suffering under different kinds of unfairness and injustice.

Not many weeks ago C. B. Munday, vice-president of La Salle Street National Bank, explained in the columns of THE CHICAGO BANKER that the pressing need of this country is a larger difference between the amount received for exports and the amount returned to Europe for imports or in the personal expenses of American tourists. A thousand other bankers are impressed with the same belief. A sure means of producing hard times is to let the balance of trade turn against us and logically a sure way to produce good times is to keep drawing more money from the old world than our people spend abroad.

national bank notes has not been great. They have been growing at the expense of private banks, and in many cases have supplanted national banks of small capitalization.

Boy Private Banker Goes to Jail

A telegram from Peoria says that because Undertaker John Winzeler, bondsman with A. P. Haines of Chicago, feared E. W. Butler, the boy private banker of the Ellisville, St. David, and Glasford banks, would decamp before the embezzlement trial in the Peoria circuit court this month, he surrendered Butler to-night to the sheriff. Butler will remain behind the bars in the county jail until he can give a new bail bond.

Aliens and Private Bank Regulation

"Among the important decisions rendered by the federal supreme court says the Chicago Record-Herald, is one sustaining a New York statute for the licensing and regulation of certain forms of private banking—chiefly among the poor and the alien. The statute prescribes a license and a large deposit to insure honest dealing on the part of individuals or partnerships engaging in the business of accepting money for safekeeping or for transmission to other places and persons. This legislation was attacked as paternalistic, discriminatory and unconstitutional. The supreme court upholds it on the ground that, paternalistic or not, the state has the power to give special protection to the poor and ignorant who, as experience has shown, are often cheated by so-called private 'banks' conducted by aliens and, as a rule, connected with schemes for the encouragement of immigration and the brisk sale of tickets. The immigration commission expressly recommends further regulation of immigrant banks. It also suggests prohibition of the practice of dissuading aliens from taking out naturalization papers or placing their savings in American institutions. This suggestion deserves particular attention, for it refers to an evil little known to the general public. In the arguments against rigid regulation of private banks little account is taken of the havoc and mischief worked by 'banks' in the foreign quarters of large cities. The word 'bank' invites confidence and deceives those to whom it carries the implication of government supervision and guaranteed solvency. It is cheering to have a broad, advanced decision from the highest court that removes the constitutional bugaboo and enables legislatures to proceed to take the private banks in hand."

State Bank of Orient, Wash., shows in its report on November 10th, it had $20,000 in deposits and its resources and liabilities are in excellent condition. P. H. Blohn is cashier and manager of the institution.

Banking Opinion

"If congress would adjourn for about five years and let the country take care of itself everybody would be better off," declared President Byron L. Smith of Northern Trust to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER the fore part of the week. Mr. Smith was expressing himself with emphasis on the uneasiness which business men feel when congress begins to deal with the tariff and monetary questions.

"After several years of unreasoning agitation," said he, "we have reached a point where a bureau of the federal government assumes the power to prevent railroad corporations fixing freight rates according to necessity. The railroads are our heaviest buyers of important lines of merchandise but for the present they would not be justified in buying or building or improving beyond daily requirements. That makes a feeling of caution in other lines of industry and business is starting off very slowly.

"The country is not in a condition which indicates hard times. Merchants have had a satisfactory business and farmers are thriving. There is merely a slowing up all around and that leaves a lot of idle capital. Money is likely to remain easy on a 5 per cent basis for some time because there has been a rapid accumulation of funds in the last month and borrowers are not clear in their minds as to future conditions.

"It has been a popular thing in congress and elsewhere to attack the large business interests, particularly railroads, and it is high time for our public men to get on the other side. They ought to consider the fact that we need the railroads to lead the country's development and that the roads are the principal employers of labor and buyers of merchandise that we have. I have just heard of an inventory taken by the Santa Fe Company in which it was shown to have eighteen million dollars' worth of merchandise in store. That is only one instance going to show the importance of the transportation companies to other lines of industry.

"It is not alone that the government denies the right of the companies to fix freight charges on a proper basis, but by the long delay in going over details of railway operation a great deal of injury is caused. Nothing hurts worse than uncertainty and that's why I wish congress would give it out clearly that business interests will be let alone for a time. That uncertainty which hinges on the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the rate matter is felt throughout the business world. It is causing an unnecessary curtailment in various directions. It has caused money to pile up here when it ought to be usefully employed in business. This stagnation may continue until there is a settlement of the freight rate controversy."

Questioned with reference to building and manufacturing President Smith said the outlook would be good if capitalists had more definite assurance against radical official acts. There is money enough for all trade requirements, and the consumptive power of the nation is the highest it ever has been. The year may easily be as good in general trade as the one just closed unless business men become alarmed. All bankers say that wholesale houses report a fair winter trade but the spirit of caution is so widespread at this time that it is bound to have some effect on the year's volume of business.

The directors of the Oxford Junction Savings have increased the surplus from $6,000 to $10,000 and declared an 8 per cent dividend.

Memphis Banks Show Splendid Statement

Fully bearing out every prediction made with regard to the rapid forward strides which Memphis has made during the past twelve months, a consolidated statement, showing the condition of all Memphis banks, has been prepared for the Commercial Appeal by Edward S. Elliott & Co., public accountants. The statement is most gratifying in that it shows that Memphis has continued to forge to the front in spite of the injustice done her by the census figures.

The total resources of all Memphis banks at the close of business December 31st amounted to $55,287,198.68, as compared with $48,463,935.87 on December 31, 1909, indicating an increase of $6,823,262.81. After having paid their usual dividends of from 6 to 12 per cent each six months, it is found that the total earnings last year were $162,564.72 in excess of the earnings of the year previous.

The deposits on December 31, 1910, were $43,364,649.11, as against $37,289,250.37 on December 31, 1909, counting one institution, the State National Bank, from the date of its last published statement, November 10, 1910. There has been one failure during the year and one bank sold out or merged. Several banks have paid their dividends of 1 per cent per month, all during the year.

The total bank clearings for the United States for the week ending January 7, 1911, were $3,343,056.591, as compared with $4,874,819.762 for the week ending January 8, 1910.

Compared with last year, the total bank clearings decreased 31.4 per cent. New York City reports a decrease of 40.6 per cent; Chicago of 14.5 per cent; New Orleans of 22.1 per cent, and Baltimore of 12.5 per cent, while St. Louis shows an increase of 1.3 per cent.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

St. Louis Chapter

The adding machine contests, conducted by St. Louis Chapter for the Burroughs Adding Machine Company, at the National Business Show, November 28th to December 2d inclusive, were handled in an efficient manner by Louis W. Fricke, assistant secretary of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company. L. P. Stone of the National Bank of Commerce captured first prize in the final contest, running 250 checks in three minutes and thirty-seven seconds. In one of the preliminary contests E. W. Smith of the Washington National surpassed the world's record for two-hundred-fifty checks, running that number in three minutes and thirty-five seconds and although Mr. Smith was beaten in the final contest he has the distinction of holding the record for two-hundred-fifty checks.

On December 6th, Hon. Shepard Barclay, former chief justice of the Supreme Court of Missouri, delivered an able and inspiring address before our chapter. Subject: "Lines of Self-culture for Bank Men." Judge Barclay's broad experience, in the law and in teaching business men, having for twelve years conducted a series of "Law Lectures for Business Men" under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association of our City, has peculiarly qualified him to speak to young men.

The evening of December 13th was given over to the debate committee. The subject, "Resolved that bank notes in the United States should be issued by a central association of issue," was ably taken care of by Messrs. E. L. Lalumier and W. R. Dorris for the affirmative and Messrs. R. R. Sleeper and S. L. St. Jean for the negative. The decision was awarded to the affirmative.

E. B. Clare-Avery, assistant cashier of the Merchants Laclede National, addressed the chapter on the evening of the 20th. Subject, "The Credit Department of a Bank." The large and appreciate audience which greeted Mr. Clare-Avery was indicative of the high esteem which he enjoys among the members of the Institute.

With a feeling of personal loss I take this opportunity of paying a last tribute to our friend and fellow-member, Eugene R. Berger, who has passed on to that bourne from which no traveler returns. At the time of his death Mr. Berger was a paying teller in the National Bank of Commerce, and vice-president of our chapter, had graduated in law about a year ago and was considered one of the brightest young bank men in the city. He will be missed by his bank, by the institute and by a host of personal friends in addition to his family and immediate relatives.

Herrick to Head Big Syndicate

New York, January 9.—Former Governor Myron T. Herrick, of Ohio, is coming to the front rapidly in the gigantic financial banking interests of the East. For some time securities of the Chatham National Bank and the Phoenix National Bank were quietly bought up. Suddenly these two great banking institutions were consolidated. Then it became known quietly among those who do know things in big moneyed circles that Governor Herrick was at the head of a syndicate that controlled the combination of these two banks.

But their consolidation was only a stepping stone to other things. Shortly the prosperous Mercantile National Bank will be combined with the Chatham and Phoenix. The Mercantile is owned almost entirely by the Goulds. With the addition of the Mercantile the combination will be completed.

Then will it become officially known that unless present plans go amiss Myron T. Herrick will be made the president of this powerful financial syndicate. These banks will form a linking together of about the oldest national banks of the country.

Just to show what the joining means: The Mercantile has a capitalization of $3,000,000, surplus and profit account of $2,726,000, circulation $775,000, deposits $10,283,000, banks' deposits $4,904,000, loans and discounts $13,616,000 and cash and exchange $3,745,000.

The Phoenix has a capitalization of $1,000,000. It was organized in 1812 and in its statement published this week showed deposits of $7,808,000. It goes in with the Chatham at a capitalization of $30,000,000. Just what the capitalization of the three banks will be has not yet been determined.

The Chatham was organized in 1851 with a capitalization of $450,000. It has surplus and profit accounts of close to $2,000,000; individual deposits $7,754,000, bank deposits $2,408,000, loans and discounts over $7,000,000 and cash and exchange close to $3,000,000.

Trust Company of America

The Trust Company of America, Philadelphia, has accepted the resignations of Charles E. Mitchell, assistant to the president; Frank L. Hilton, secretary, and Frank W. Black, auditor, to take effect February 1st. On that day the men named will establish a partnership for the handling of investment securities.

G. W. Jones, for many years a prominent citizen of Kansas City and a stockholder and director in several banks, died last week.

Farrell's Merited Promotion

J. Fletcher Farrell, who for a year past has held the position of vice-president of Fort Dearborn National, has by election been added to the board of directors of that bank. There are no other changes in the board and the whole official staff has been re-elected, Messrs. Lampert and Farrell remaining as vice-presidents. Mr. Farrell came to Fort Dearborn National from Third National, St. Louis, and in the brief space of a year has earned recognition in Chicago as an active and capable banker. The rapid growth of the Chicago institution under Wm. A. Tilden's presidency proves that the staff as a whole is one of the ablest in the city and although comparatively a new man, Mr. Farrell has had a large share in the bank's development since coming to his present position.

Graduates to a Bank

Huntington, W. Va., January 9.—C. P. Snow, for 22 years connected with the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad in an official capacity and for four years past superintendent of the Huntington Division of the road, tendered his resignation to President Stevens. In this connection it was also announced that Mr. Snow had been chosen as cashier of the Huntington Banking and Trust Company, a new institution to be established on February 1st. Mr. Snow will be succeeded as superintendent by H. H. Morris, of Handley, who has been trainmaster of the Kanawha coal district.

393 New Banks in the South

Atlanta, Ga., January 9.—During the year, 1910, 393 new banks were organized and began business in the South, with aggregated capital of $7,420,000. Fifty-five banks that began business previous to 1910, increased their capital $2,544,500 during the year just closed, making a total accession to the banking capital of the South of $9,964,500. The total number of new banks includes 50 national and 343 state and private banks and trust companies.

The 1,460 national banks in the South have capital, surplus and undivided profits of $258,020,000, as against $240,401,000 at the close of 1909, a net increase of nearly $18,000,000 for the national banks alone in 13 states.

Clearing House within Law

New Orleans, January 9.—The department of justice at Washington has blocked the effort of United States District Attorney Beattie to have the grand jury here indict the members of the New Orleans Clearing House Association for alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust law in connection with the collection of a uniform commission for cashing interstate checks. This was learned when Mr. Beattie issued a statement in which he explained why the grand jury had not returned indictments. The attorney-general, he said, had held the law was not violated.

Nothing could better illustrate the growing difference between New York and Chicago than the course of the two money markets in the last few days. Money never was easier or more plentiful in this city around the first of the year than it has been since the last week of December. On the other hand there has been a sort of stringency in New York which has kept rates on an unusually high level.

It has been a 5 per cent market for the regular run of commercial paper in Chicago since toward the end of the holidays. There has been a plethora of capital for all business requirements. Some of the new bond issues have sold fast. High-class bonds bearing anything above 4 per cent have found a ready market. Considerable secured paper also has been disposed of at 4½ per cent. No call money worth speaking about has been loaned for a month, but the quotation is 4 to 4½ per cent, as compared with 4½ to 6 per cent in New York. Funds for real estate projects have been available at 5 per cent or a little less.

What the Difference Indicates

The two markets have not been far apart on commercial paper, the New York banks having advanced their rates to a 5 per cent basis. Ordinarily Chicago is higher than the eastern metropolis. Six weeks ago the common rate here on mercantile paper was 6 per cent, while in New York it was 4½ to 5. Natural trade conditions are responsible for the reduced rates here. Collections became heavy around the first of the year. Much of the money due from the interior was a month or two months late owing to the fact that farmers did not market their produce as early as usual. The annual settlements came with a rush during the holiday period, easing up merchants and manufacturers as well as bankers. Distribution of dividends has added to the supply of idle capital. This market must remain easy until mercantile and real estate programs for the season have developed.

It became apparent last week that the New York money market was governed to as great extent as ever by the stock exchange. Call money followed the rapid fluctuations of Wall street securities. Firmness of stocks for two days was sufficient to send the rate for call money up to 6 per cent. In the opinion of many bankers here as well as in the view of all borrowers the mere fact that stocks are strong is no legitimate reason for advancing money unless it be the legitimate function of bankers to attack securities when they are firm and seek to bring them down in price by putting up the rate for call money. These baleful fluctuations in New York ran call money from 6 to 14 per cent in one week about this time last year.

Money Supply is Supposed to Govern

Conditions which have made money plentiful in Chicago have created an abundance in all other cities. This is the time of a steady return from the interior, South and West, and commercial demands must be light for a few weeks. As a rule deposits are increasing and capital is stagnant. If the money supply is supposed to govern discount rates, as it is here, there is no justification for extremely high quotations in New York at this time. This is the view held by Chicago bankers, who look for a natural trade demand to cause an advance in money rates to a 6 per cent basis by the first of April.

It is not more than five years since bankers here were in the habit of sending money prices up or down according to New York fluctuations. To-day Chicago is operating on a strictly legitimate trade basis, much to the delight of merchants and interior correspondents, who dislike an unsteady or an uncertain market. It is the experience of every banker in this city that business men who are periodical borrowers hate an erratic money market. Few grumble at any money rates which are likely to be quoted in a period of bank competition. Six per cent is paid without protest when that is the uniform figure and when a keen demand for funds makes it a fair price. A lower market, with constant fluctuations, would be less satisfactory. In many cases the condition of money has an important bearing on large mercantile and real estate enterprises, and prospective borrowers are averse to having speculative interests interfering with their plans by bringing an element of uncertainty into the market.

Bond Dealers Reap Harvest

This is harvest time for bond dealers. Not for three years has the market been so favorable to them as it is at present. The large supply of money and the light mercantile demand explain the situation. If we are to have a season of easy money, as seems probable, the bond market will continue active and it will be a period of active real estate development. A large proportion of securities now on the local market represent building enterprises. This must remain a favorite form of investment in Chicago as long as such projects are so uniformly successful.

In the next two months the heaviest of the real estate issues will be out of the way and it is possible that the local market will be ready to absorb a large quantity of railroad securities. Financial people are looking for interesting developments along this line. It will surprise many if the transportation companies do not win their point regarding an advance in freight rates and if they do they will become large borrowers again. Not only this, but the moment the controversy is settled in favor of the roads there will be a revival in railway bonds and stocks of the better class.

Thus, if the railroads be allowed to enforce a reasonable increase in their freight charges it is generally believed that the dullness which everyone calculates upon during the early part of the year will be followed by a more or less marked revival not merely in the activity of transportation companies nor of concerns mainly dependent upon the railroads for contracts but in industry as a whole.

With the entire situation, present and prospective, favoring bond dealers they are making up for previous dullness. In other words, they are making hay while the sun shines.

Earnings of the Railroads

In discussing the propriety of a general advance, the brief filed by the railroads says that the increased rates will amount to $7,000,000 less than the increased wages, or an addition to operation cost of that amount. The rates in existence when the wage increases were made were not too high, as is indicated by the free movement of traffic and the increasing prosperity of the territory.

INSURANCE EXCHANGE BUILDING

First Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds

Due November 1, 1925. (Issued by the Chicago Title and Trust Company, as Trustee) Total issue, $4,000,000.

Bonds may be registered as to principal

Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, Trustee under the mortgage.

In the opinion of counsel, this issue is secured by an absolute first mortgage on property owned in fee simple by the mortgagor on Jackson Boulevard, extending from Fifth Avenue to Sherman Street, Chicago, and having a total area of 40,000 square feet. For further particulars regarding the bonds and their security, attention is directed to the letter of The Chicago Title & Trust Co., copy of which may be had on application, from which we quote:

"Upon this property will be erected at once, under the supervision of D. H. Burnham & Company, a modern 21 story, fire-proof building, to be known as the Insurance Exchange Building. This building will be the largest office structure in Chicago, the second largest and one of the finest of the kind in the world, and will be largely, if not wholly, occupied above the second story by underwriters and the local offices of the principal insurance companies of the United States and Europe. Already more than three-fifths of the office space has been leased to tenants of this class for a period of from 10 to 30 years, at an annual rental of over $500,000, which is more than sufficient to cover all expenses, taxes and interest.

"Based upon these leases, and upon the experience of similar properties within the loop district, it is estimated that the annual results of operation will be substantially as follows:

"Gross annual income.....	$813,337.50
Operation, repairs, insurance and taxes	270,000.00
NET INCOME	$543,337.50
Interest on bonds (This item will decrease as the bonds mature and are paid).....	200,000.00
ANNUAL SURPLUS.....	$343,337.50"

The following salient features of the issue are brought out in the letter above referred to:

These bonds are secured by an absolute first lien upon building and land, both of which are owned in fee by the mortgagor. They are not "lease-hold" bonds; that is, they are not bonds upon a building erected on leased land that does not itself come under the mortgage.

Title to the property is guaranteed by the Chicago Title & Trust Company.

The property securing the bonds will have conservative value of more than twice the outstanding indebtedness.

The annual net earnings, after the payment of operation, repairs, insurance and taxes, will be over 2½ times interest requirements.

Seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars of the issue, not now available, matures serially, 1915 to 1924. The debt and interest charges will therefore decrease each year, while the security will remain the same.

We recommend the purchase of these bonds by conservative investors among individuals, trustees, banks, insurance companies and institutions.

tors are not excessive, the brief points out that the interest in 1908 on the total funded debt of the railroad companies in groups one, two and three, whose statistics are published by the commission, is $142,000,000, a little less than 4 per cent. The dividends paid out of the income of that year amounted to $114,000,000, or a little more than 4 per cent of the amount of the capital stock. Certainly these figures do not tend in the remotest degree to justify the claim that these companies derived earnings which were excessive considered with reference to the return which they enabled the companies to make to the holders of their bonds and stocks. And in this connection it may not be amiss to direct attention to the fact that $34,000,000, the amount of the wage increase based upon the figures of 1909, is more than 30 per cent of the total sum paid in dividends.

Bank Profits are Large

The year 1910 was one of the best ever known in banking circles. Money was actively employed throughout the year at better than the average rates. Much of the time the volume of loans was at a maximum. At the same time losses were at the minimum. It was a year of healthy growth and expansion. The higher level of commercial paper made it a time of almost unexampled prosperity. There have been times when money was worth more to the commercial world but there never has been a time when banks had a more rapid or healthier growth. Their expansion was natural and their whole business spirited and safe.

Western bankers therefore are entering the new year with a feeling of prosperity and confidence. They do not look for as good a year in all respects as they enjoyed in 1910 but they know that the country is sound and that business rests on a secure basis. It is only in an incidental way that the banks come in for a share of the prosperity in bonds. It is in times of commercial activity and railroad expansion that the banks fare best and the year is likely to have a slow start in these departments, although there is a general hope that the first of April will see all branches of trade moving at a lively pace.

Financial Position Improved

Without doubt the general financial position of the country has improved in the last six months. Exports are somewhat above imports and this always is a sure sign of prosperity. A decline in certain lines of imports indicates a disposition toward less foolish extravagance among Americans. The most encouraging feature, however, is the retrenchment in speculation in the West. This relates both to unproductive lands and the general run of unstable stock market securities. Interior bankers and merchants have greatly benefited by getting these weak spots removed. So far as land owners and farmers are concerned, they are in good shape. Improved property is at least firm in value and in many sections is advancing. Farmers are making less money than they have been accustomed to for the last ten years but they are in a strong position, with a prospect that this year will see higher prices for grain and live stock.

A notable fact in the history of 1910 is that the number of failures gradually fell off even through the money stringency. Production of large crops had a stimulating effect on the whole country. Liquidations were rather slow inasmuch as farmers held back their products for higher prices, but the fact that the year had turned out so favorably in the agricultural sections showed the country to be in a safe condition and the feeling of encouragement spread to all classes.

New Guaranty Company

The Mortgage Guarantee Company of St. Louis announced plans for starting, this month, a new company to operate along its line of selling guaranty loans on real estate. The corporation not yet named, is designed to market loans in the class under $5,000, thus supplying a demand made by small investors, which the older company has been unable to meet. The new company will have a capital stock of $500,000. This will be offered first to the stockholders of the Mortgage Guarantee Company, which has a like amount of capital.

The board of directors of the Mortgage Guarantee is composed of Rolla Wells, A. L. Shapleigh, Tom W. Bennett, J. D. P. Francis, H. B. Collins, Fred G. Zeibig, Aaron Fuller, Richard T. Shelton, Dwight F. Davis, W. Julius Polk and George W. Niedringhaus. All of these men probably will be directors in the new company. Mr. Bennett had the following to say concerning the field for the new company:

"In the two years of the Mortgage Guarantee Company has been in business we have made and sold loans to the extent of several millions. We have had great difficulty in obtaining many small loans in amounts from $2,000 to $5,000 and have been utterly unable to accommodate a person who wanted to invest $500, $1,000 or even $1,500. The new company will issue certificates which will be participations in large loans or in a group of loans. They will be issued in various denominations, will mature at various times, and the payment will be guaranteed."

H. P. Hilliard, president of the Central National, is of the opinion that while money will be plentiful enough, the next few months will show a policy of decided conservatism by Western bankers. In speaking of the financial outlook Mr. Hilliard said: "The business interests of this country are now beginning to realize there was a panic three years ago. Now after that panic numerous individuals and corporations tried to recoup suddenly what they had lost, or imagined they had lost, and there followed feverish activity in many quarters. More was manufactured, bought and produced than could be digested. This the New York clearing house in its wisdom saw, and it took measures to check the over activity. Banks out here and elsewhere took their cue from New York, and a second and probably greater panic was averted. Now things have finally reached their proper level, and the year is likely to be a prosperous one. However the banks have learned much, and will not be aggressive in their efforts to seek loans, promote new enterprise and increase production. And distinctly they will join in holding down the speculative tendency. Bankers in the West will be ready to meet all legitimate needs of commerce, agriculture and other lines of industry, but will not deplete their reserves, and will be in splendid shape to cope with any situation which may develop. There have been big crops, and the people in this region are prosperous, but there is a lot of left over material to dispose of, so that while the situation is eminently healthy and sound. I do not look for a boom year. Rates will fluctuate according to the reserve levels, and though rates are fairly low now, they may not be in a month or two months from this date."

Guaranty Law Decision

The decision of the United States supreme court upholding the bank guaranty law seems to have met with satisfaction among financiers in Oklahoma and elsewhere where such laws are operative. While opinion is far from unanimous as to the theory of deposit guaranty, the question is at least finally settled, and bankers know where they are in the matter. In Oklahoma the proposition has not been very satisfactory, and there is much dissatisfaction throughout the state. In his annual message to the legislature, Governor Haskell, of Oklahoma, shows that there is now only $73,626 in cash in the bank guaranty fund out of $840,392 paid in by the financial institutions since the passage of the law. The governor's report was the first since the failure of the Columbia Bank and Trust Company. About $250,000 of "alleged assets" belonging to the guaranty fund are also listed in the report, but $500,000 is unaccounted for save by vague statements to the effect that it consists of Columbia assets. In spite of this showing, Governor Haskell says the total loss to the guaranty fund since the creation of the law will not amount to more than $100,000 per annum.

Kansas Commissioner Talks

Bank Commissioner Dolley, speaking of the supreme court decision said: "I am much gratified with the sweeping decision of the United States Supreme Court regarding the guaranty of bank deposits. We have made wonderful progress with the law. In less than two years from the date of its passage it has been presented in three federal courts and the supreme court of Kansas. I am not surprised at this decision, as I have expected fully from the first that the principle of guaranty of bank deposits would be vindicated. The final result of this decision will be that every person who places money in any bank in the United States will receive back on demand 100 cents on the dollar. I believe many other Western states will enact bank guaranty laws during the sessions of their legislatures this winter." Mr. Dolley refrains from giving any facts and figures regarding the operation of the law in his state, satisfying himself, simply, with the above glittering generalities.

St. Louis Banker to Wed

The engagement of Mrs. Elizabeth Bissel North, daughter of Daniel Bissel, of Bissel Station, St. Louis county, and Henry P. Hilliard, president of the Central National, has been formally announced. The wedding will take place on January 17th, and will be a very quiet affair, the couple departing at once for Mr. Hilliard's plantation in Louisiana. Mr. Hilliard came from Austin, Texas, several years ago to form a connection with the Mechanics Bank. Later he was vice-president of the Mechanics-American National, which position he resigned to become head of the Central National. He served a term as president of the Texas Bankers Association, and has held offices in the American Bankers Association.

One Way of Advertising

The American National of McAlester, Oklahoma, has hit upon a novel way of popularizing itself with its clientele. Last week it entertained the presidents and cashiers of all banks in the surrounding territory who do business with it; also its larger depositors, with an elaborate banquet. Markets of the big cities were drawn upon to supply delicacies with which to please the palates of the guests. After everyone had eaten as much as he wanted and listened to toasts and short speeches, the party adjourned to a theater to complete the evening's entertainment. It is said that the banquet will become an annual thing after this.

Enid Bankers Win

Holding that the constitutional provision insuring equitable and just taxation had been violated, District Judge Steen decided this week in Enid, Oklahoma, in favor of the Enid banks in their suit seeking a reduction in their tax assessments. His decision holds that the banks should be assessed at only 60 per cent of the value. The decision is considered important, as it will doubtless set a precedent for all the financial institutions in the state.

Missouri Lincoln Trust

The process of liquidation of the affairs of the Missouri Lincoln Trust Company, which was closed in 1907, at the suggestion of the associated banks of St. Louis, has been slow. The last report indicates that about two years more will be required to wind up its affairs. In the last six months $665,175 has been liquidated, leaving still resources of about $2,010,718. According to the statement just issued by President W. F. Carter, the excess of assets over liabilities is $1,082,842. The capital stock outstanding is $2,499,800, par value. The surplus of $1,000,000 was wiped out as a total loss. The apparent loss on the capital is $1,416,957, making a total apparent loss of $2,416,957, or 69.05 per cent on the capital and surplus. This company, with the two institutions that went down with it and which were under control of Doctor Pinckney French, form one of the very few dark spots which have developed in St. Louis banking history in the last two decades. Now, according to the statement, the Missouri-Lincoln has resources of $2,010,718, as follows: Loans secured and unsecured, $326,280; loans, real estate, $807,890; stocks and bonds and investments, $664,759; real estate, estimated value, $211,789; and debentures, $1,000,000.

State Banking Business Grows

John E. Swanger, Missouri State Bank Commissioner, has just presented his biennial report to the governor in which he states that the banking business in Missouri has kept pace with all other lines of business during the last two years. He says the banks increased in numbers since January 1, 1909 from 1,021 to 1,108, and the number of trust companies receiving deposits have increased from forty to fifty during the same period, making total increase of ninety-seven in these institutions. Further Mr. Swanger says that the capital of these institutions has increased from $46,224,-

In addition to the above there are thirty-one trust companies subject to examination, which do not receive deposits. Several banks have been forced to close their doors in the two years covered, but in no single instance has a dollar been lost by depositors. To this latter fact Mr. Swanger points with no small degree of pride. He frankly admits that the Missouri banks are conservatively conducted, and ably supervised.

Postal Bank Opened

The first postal savings bank to be tried in Missouri was opened last week at Carthage, with total deposits of $326. Quite a number of persons wished to make $100 deposits but were refused because the office ran out of larger certificate blanks and is wanting in supplies.

Wheat is Strong

Wheat has shown decided strength and greater activity since the dollar level was reached. While the export trade is only moderate it compares well with the movement when prices were 10 cents lower. The foreign demand is a feature of the trade that holders are compelled to study. At no time in recent years has Europe shown such a disposition and ability to get along without American wheat as at present. Prices here are not above an export basis, however, and a pretty large sum total of grain is going out from eastern ports every week.

Deliveries in the country are restricted by severe weather and figures show a falling off in stocks at leading primary markets. The winter wheat crop is going through a critical period. There is not a sufficient bed of snow on the ground in the wheat belt and alternate thawing and freezing are hurting the sprouts. There will be sixty days of this uncertain condition with respect to the next crop and if Europe continues to offer present prices for our surplus there is likely to be a good market for the remainder of the winter.

Exports last week increased 400,000 bushels, while receipts at interior points fell off 1,000,000 bushels. The Modern Miller's report was rather bullish, stating that a large area of winter wheat was unprotected by snow, and reports of damage were being received. The shipments from the Argentine were small and shipments from other countries were not heavy.

The Chicago market has witnessed heavy trade between $1.01 and 1.02 within the week.

The corn market was moderately active and very steady. The advance in wheat had some little influence, and there was further buying, encouraged by the heavy decrease in the movement West. The receipts have fallen off 1,500,000 bushels in one week, while there has been a good export demand, and Bradstreet's clearances were 2,294,000 bushels, or double the previous week. There has been a good export demand for corn of late, due to the sharp advance in the Argentine, and the Argentine prices are higher than the American for corn.

In the Chicago market May corn has touched 50 cents. While this is an encouraging advance the market still is about 20 cents under that of a year ago.

Bankers are Optimistic

Optimism in the banking outlook for 1911 is expressed by representative bankers of the country as carried in telegraph dispatches. The following are some of the expressions:

Ralph S. Stacy, second vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce of Seattle: "The best feature of the present outlook here is a somewhat better demand for labor. We do not look for a great revival in business conditions during 1911."

C. H. Huttig, president of the Third National of St. Louis: "One of the most encouraging features is the probability that congress will, at its spring session, pass a satisfactory bill. The money prospect is for an abundance of loanable funds."

A. C. Jobas, vice-president First National of Kansas City: "I do not look for any material revival of business during 1911, but am of the opinion that conditions will run along very much as they are now until after another crop shall have been harvested."

Graham G. Lacy, vice-president of Tootle-Lemon National of St. Joseph, Mo.: "I think the most healthful feature is the determination of bankers to put a curb upon speculation of all kinds and insistence upon the conduct of all business along more conservative lines and a careful scrutiny of all credits."

F. O. Watts, president of the First National of Nashville: "Big crops of every kind, the slowing down in manufacture that is present and the slight degree of personal and general economy that trails such a period as 1910 will more than likely make easier money market during 1911."

Caldwell Hardy, president Norfolk National of Norfolk, Va.: "The situation in a broad sense needs intelligent legislation and it is to be hoped that we may get something eventually from the monetary commission and congress."

W. H. Bucholz, vice-president of the Omaha National: "A decided check to extravagance and a conclusion to curtail speculation are encouraging features of the outlook."

W. H. Manley, president of the Security National of Sioux City: "The most helpful feature is disposition on the part of the banks to make no advances for speculative purposes, but to confine their engagements to legitimate business requirements."

H. B. Wilcox, president First National of Baltimore: "One of the most helpful features is the fact that our bankers have been preaching a doctrine of 'go slow' for some time past, which we think is having its effect."

Francis B. Reeves, president of the Girard National of Philadelphia: "I consider the most helpful feature of the outlook is God's generous rewards to honest labor in the large returns to be expected from our crops and mines."

Texas Sure of A. B. A. Convention

San Antonio, Tex., January 8.—That San Antonio will secure the next meeting of the American Bankers Association is now considered almost certain. Ernest L. Brown, cashier of the Alamo National Bank, is in receipt of letters from forty of the eighty-four members of the executive council, which has the selection in hand, pledging support to San Antonio. He believes there is no doubt but what he can secure the other five votes necessary. In fact, the indications are that San Antonio has been left practically a clear field. So sure do the bankers feel of securing the convention that the matter of entertainment is being discussed.

Following the convention, it is probable the delegates will take a trip over the state in a special train, visiting all of the larger cities.

Annual Statement Northern Trust Co.

The Northern Trust Company's (Philadelphia) thirty-ninth annual statement shows assets of $8,421,321, exclusive of trust funds and trust investments. The bond investments owned amount to $2,864,745 and the first mortgage loans on real estate $1,378,620. Time and call loans aggregate $3,286,442.

The directors of the Northern Trust Company declared a quarterly dividend of 3 per cent, being an increase of one-half per cent, and increasing the stock from a 10 per cent basis to a 12 per cent basis. The dividend is payable January 16th to stock of record January 4th. One hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars was added to surplus, making that account $1,400,000.

Columbus Clearing House

Columbus, Ohio, December 31.—The annual statement of the Columbus clearing house for 1910 shows a total business handled of $308,187,000, as against $307,648,000 for 1909, a new high record.

The damage by fire to the Gillett Grove (Ia.) Savings Bank last week was $3,000 of which $1,500 was covered by insurance.

Kansas City

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

The only cause for apprehension that appears in the banking situation to Walter H. Holmes, president of the Pioneer Trust Company of Kansas City, is continued drought in the Central West. "A single crop failure would not be of serious import," said Mr. Holmes, "but a general crop shortage would be very seriously felt here. I do not look for a continuation of dry conditions, however. It has been my experience that with expert cultivation of the fields our farmers are accommodating themselves to varied climatic conditions as never before. There was a time when a failure of a single crop—corn for instance—would mean hardship to our people. Nowadays any one crop could fail and we would not be seriously effected. At any rate we are in as fortunate position as the people in the East who are quite as dependent upon our crops as we are."

"The banking situation in this district is more than satisfactory. It is most encouraging. There is plenty of money and rates are lower than they were a year ago. Deposits are satisfactory and the farmers and others are enjoying a high degree of prosperity. The new year is beginning well for Central Western bankers who drew their revenues from the soil and who naturally keep their eyes upon the farmers without paying much attention to Wall Street."

Expect Little Change in Money Situation

"Our business is more than satisfactory," said Mr. W. H. Winants, president of the Mercantile Bank of Kansas City to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER last week. "There is very little fluctuation in either the demand or supply of money. As far as we are concerned we do not look for any important changes in conditions soon. The Mercantile Bank is doing well and, from all that I can see, must continue in the same way for some time to come." Mr. Winants is one of the most experienced bankers in the West and has been connected with the most important financial institutions of Kansas City for more than a quarter of a century.

"There is little change in conditions since I made my last statement to THE CHICAGO BANKER several weeks ago," said James T. Bradley, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce. "The new year promises much to our people in this part of the country and, save for the drought, which may be broken at any time now, the situation was never more satisfactory within my experience. Of course that drought worries us some but then it cannot be serious enough to bring on hard times. Farmers are not so dependent upon single crops as once they were and there is still plenty of grain in the West to take care of the stock. Deposits are normal for this time of year and so is the demand. The present call for national bank statements, I believe, will find all of our banks in prime condition."

H. L. Jarboe Joins Drovers' National

Following the recent acquisition by the Morris interests of the controlling interest in the Drovers' National at the Kansas City stock yards, came the election of Harry L. Jarboe, Jr., as president. Mr. Jarboe was vice-president of the National Stock Yards Bank of St. Louis. He is well known in Kansas City and the Southwest and was for several years president of the Oklahoma State Bank of Chickasha, Okla. Mr. Jarboe will be one of the youngest bank presidents in the Central West being only 36 years old. Speaking of the change he has made Mr. Jarboe said: "You have here a city of wonderful possibilities and each time I come here I feel this wonderful business growth. We hope to enter into this growth, to become a part and parcel of it and every effort shall be bent toward the upbuilding of the city as well as the institution in which I shall be directly interested."

Want Nationals under Guaranty Law

As was anticipated in the last issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER, the decision of the United States supreme court in upholding the bank deposit guaranty laws of Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma, created no end of interest in Central West territory. For years the controversy over the legality of these bank guaranty laws has waxed furious and hundreds of minor cases of litigation have hung upon the final outcome. In Oklahoma nearly half of the banks that were eligible under the law to participate in the guaranty plan held out under the belief that the law would be declared unconstitutional. There is now a scramble among the banks of the new state to get into the procession. In Kansas a much larger proportion of the state banks accepted the guaranty privilege although in both Oklahoma and Kansas this is purely optional. In Nebraska it is obligatory upon all state banks to join in the guaranty insurance.

In his last message to the Oklahoma legislature Governor Haskell last week summed up the result of the guaranty law thus: "Experience has fully demonstrated from the standpoint of public welfare, the complete efficiency of the Oklahoma law, and the complete failure of the national banking law." The total net collections of the Oklahoma guaranty fund up to December 31st, last, were $818,740.65. The total cash in the fund on that date was $73,626.59, and other cash items were $260,161.09, making the total cash and cash items in the guaranty fund on December 31st, $333,787.68. The net loss to the bank guaranty fund to that date is therefore shown by deducting the balance on hand from the net collections, to have been $484,952.97. To cover this loss there remains on hand about $800 of wrecked bank assets.

Since the decision of the supreme court the friends of bank guaranty in Kansas have been busy formulating amendments to the law that will permit national banks to participate in the guaranty scheme. After several consultations among the legislators now gathered in Topeka it has been decided to present the amendment as proposed by State Senator Fred Quincy, of Salina, to the legislature. There are two features to the Quincy amendments. The first devises the plan for participation of national banks in the guaranty fund through a trustee and the other wipes out the 3 per cent interest limit and permits the state bank commissioner to fix the limit. Here is the section relating to national banks as prepared by Senator Quincy:

"After the passage of this act any national bank doing business in the state of Kansas, under the laws of the United States, after an examination at its expense by the state bank commissioner, and upon his approval as to its financial condition, may at its option participate, either directly or through a trustee for its stockholders, in the assessment and benefits of the bank depositors' guaranty fund of the state of Kansas upon the same terms and conditions as apply to state banks; provided that receivers for guaranteed national banks appointed under federal law may take charge of and wind up the affairs of such banks as required by such law, and perform the duties required of receivers under this act for such banks; and provided further, that such national banks shall forward to the bank commissioner of the state of Kansas detailed reports, in form to be provided by him, of its condition on the date of the usual called statements of state banks, such report not to be published except at the option of the bank, and shall submit to one examination each year by his department, or oftener in his discretion, as provided by the banking laws of the state of Kansas, and pay the usual fees therefor. Should a guaranteed national bank disregard, or refuse to comply with, any recommendation made by the bank commissioner, in conformity with the provisions of this act, it shall immediately be subject to the provisions and penalties of this act and its certificate in the bank depositors' guaranty fund shall be canceled and its bonds, or money in lieu thereof, deposited with the state treasurer, shall be forfeited for the benefit of such fund."

with every point indicated on the above map reflect this bank's facilities for handling items payable in the Inland Empire. This extensive representation, unequalled by any bank in the West, should appeal to all banks desiring a prompt clearance of all out-of-town items, and seeking to avail themselves of a liberal and constantly growing list of par points. district was the looting of the Bank of Houstonia, Mo., early Sunday morning, January 8th. It is believed that this work was done by the notorious Wymore, Neb., gang and that at least five men participated in it. It was about 3 o'clock in the morning that some of the citizens of Houstonia heard the first of a series of explosions. These explosions were so muffled that no one paid much attention to them. Early Monday morning the station agent discovered the doors of the bank open and an examination showed that the vault had been blown and $2,000 taken. This was all the money in the bank at the time. The robbers had carefully cut all of the telephone and telegraph wires leading out of town and by the time the county officers were notified the robbers had made their escape.

The Bank of Houstonia was robbed three years ago in a similar manner when $1,500 were taken. J. P. Higgins is president of the bank and G. E. Longan is cashier. These men are firmly of the opinion that the activity of the Kansas authorities in hunting down the gang has driven it to operate in Missouri. W. F. Keyser, secretary of the Missouri Bankers Association, who lives in Sedalia, says he will pay a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of each robber concerned in this work. The robbery of the Bank of Houstonia is the third to occur in Missouri since January 1, 1911, the total loss to Missouri banks in these robberies being $10,000.

Owing to the apparent impossibility of proceeding effectively against the robbers with the present machinery of the law, the Kansas authorities called a meeting of chiefs of police and town marshals at Wichita last week. At that meeting the whole matter of the bank robbery epidemic was discussed and secret measures were adopted to co-operate in patrolling the northern and southern lines of Kansas. It is the opinion of those best posted that two distinct gangs are at work in this district although there is some sort of understanding between the leaders about division of territory as one gang never invades the territory of the other. It is now practically certain that one gang of bank robbers makes its headquarters at Wymore, Neb. The Nebraska authorities admit that this is true but say that the local officers are not strong enough to capture the gang. Figures given out by the Kansas banking department show that within the last three months thirty banks have been robbed in the state and that these crimes have netted the robbers $100,000. And in all of these operations not a single man has been captured or wounded so far as can be learned. With the exception of a suspect held in Kansas City the officers have no clue as to the names of the robbers or their numbers or authentic information as to their method of work.

In Oklahoma the southern gang is not quite as active as the Wymore contingent although it has been quite successful. Many banks and postoffices have been looted this winter and W. B. Harrison, secretary of the Oklahoma Bankers Association, has issued a warning in which he says: "We are absolutely sure of the existence of a gang of nineteen men which is operating in this state." In a house where a gang of robbers lived at Cherokee, which was discovered last week, was found a quantity of dynamite, tools and one thousand dollars in stamps with other small booty. The Oklahoma banks that have been robbed within the past ten days supposedly by the same gang are, the Bank of Jefferson, safe blown, $3,000 taken; Bank of Prue, held up, $1,700 taken; Cotton Exchange Bank, Crawford, held up, $1,300 taken; North Muskogee Bank, safe blown, $1,600 taken; Citizens' State Bank, Driftwood, safe blown, $2,500 taken. Post-office robberies have occurred at Goltry, Pond Creek, Okeene, Ponca City and Jefferson. Secretary Harrison believes that the headquarters of this gang are Oklahoma City, Anthony, Kan., and that at least part of the gang hangs out at Arkansas City, Kan.

The bank robber suspect held in Kansas City was arrested Monday night, January 9th. A. L. Spence of the Pinkerton service had him picked up on the streets and at a police station he was thoroughly "sweated." He gave his name as Thomas McLaughlin, and is believed by the police to be connected with the "Wymore" gang. As yet little has been made public that indicates that the police have the right man.

Abeline Bank Issues First Certificates

The first certificates to be issued under the sustained bank guaranty law of Kansas were issued last week to the creditors of the Abeline, Kan., State Bank which was closed November 22d last, following the disappearance of Cashier John Flack. The certificates show that the depositors have claims against the state guaranty fund to the amount of $50,000 and interest has secured from November 22d. The certificates will not be paid until the affairs of the bank are wound up and all the assets have been realized upon.

Postal Bank Runs Short of Supplies

The postal savings banks of Missouri and Kansas were located at Carthage and Pittsburg, respectively. During the short banking week that marked the opening of these institutions business was much better than had been anticipated. At Carthage, from Tuesday to Saturday, inclusive (January 3d to 7th) the postal deposits amounted to $3,245.70. Only a limited supply of certificates were on hand and the postmaster was forced to turn away at least one hundred depositors who wished the $100 certificates. The farmers of the neighborhood were the best customers. In the week 648 persons deposited amounts ranging from $1 to $5. There were almost twice as many deposits of $1 as of $5. At Pittsburg, Kan., the opening of the postal bank came at what is locally known as "between pay days" when money is scarce. The deposits were small in denomination and in total amount but Postmaster Watson predicts that during the next few weeks the deposits will average $250 a day.

Re-elect Woman Head of Rosedale Bank

Mrs. Minnie Y. Trickey has been re-elected president of the Commercial State Bank of Rosedale, Kan., a suburb of Kansas City. Mrs. Trickey has been president of this bank for two years and under her administration the deposits have increased and the bank has prospered wonderfully. Mrs. Trickey is also city treasurer of Rosedale which position she has held for six years. She is one of three women members of the Kansas State Bankers Association.

Well Known Missouri Banker Dead

W. A. Symington, for twenty-six years a banker of high standing in Pleasant Hill and Independence, Mo., died last week of double pneumonia at his home in Independence. He was 64 years old and a native of Missouri. Mr. Symington entered the banking business in the Citizens Bank of Pleasant Hill, Mo., in 1884, moving two years later to Independence, where he became cashier of the Anderson-Charles Bank. When that institution was merged with the First National of Independence in 1888, he was cashier of the larger bank which position he held until last July when he resigned to become treasurer of the Home Deposit Trust Company of Independence, a new concern.

Kansas City Clearings

Kansas City continues to hold sixth place in the bank clearings of the country, a position which it has not relinquished for six months. Its closest competition is Pittsburgh, which last week lost by 9 per cent, while Kansas City showed a gain of 6.4 per cent. Kansas City's clearings for the week were $49,228,000. Omaha with $12,938,000 showed a decrease of 9.5 per cent, while Wichita came up with the remarkable showing of 59.8 per cent gain. St. Joseph, Mo., suffered a slight decrease as did Oklahoma City.

Banking Notes

The annual election of the First State Bank of Kansas City, Kan., was held January 3d. The following were elected: J. O. Gaskill, president; C. W. Green, vice-president, and F. A. Braeken, cashier. A dividend of 20 per cent was declared.

William C. McClain, of Coffeyville, Kas., died last week, aged 51 years. He was prominent in Kansas banking circles and for years was identified with the banks of Huron and Peru, Kansas.

T. G. Gresham, supervisor of building and loan associations in Missouri in his annual report to Governor Hadley shows that there are 130 associations in the state, a gain of seven during the past two years. The total capital stock of these associations aggregate $56,939,800 and the total resources are $11,431,451.72.

The Bank of Grannis, Ark., was blown up January 7th. The robbers secured about $1,500 while the damage to the building and the vault amounted to about $3,000.

John Lewis, of Strong City, Kan., is probably the youngest bank cashier in Kansas. He is only 20 years old and is cashier of the Strong City State Bank.

C. S. Jobs, president of the Security National of Kansas, addressed a meeting of the Kansas City Institute of Banking, January 5th.

At a dinner given by bankers and bank employees at the Kansas City Athletic Club, Tuesday evening, January 10th, the Bankers' Club of Kansas City was formally organized.

Virgil K. Tuggle, assistant cashier of the New England National of Kansas City, and Thornton Cooke, treasurer of the Fidelity Trust Company of the same city recently attended a meeting of the council of administration of the Missouri Bankers Association at Sedalia, Mo.

The executive council of the Missouri State Bankers Association met at Sedalia, Mo., January 5th and decided that the next state convention of the association should be held in Kansas City, May 24-25. The association now has a membership of 1,299. The following bankers attended the meeting of the council: A. O. Wilson, St. Louis, president; A. H. Waite, Joplin, vice-president; R. K. Calkins, St. Joseph, treasurer; W. F. Keyser, Sedalia, secretary; A. L. Duff, Windsor; V. K. Tuggle, Kansas City; T. K. Shelby, Wellsville; Thornton Cooke, Kansas City; C. M. Knapp, Rolla;

The Cashier Says:—

"As I was coming down on the car this morning I met one of the Burroughs men and he handed me this little folder. Told me it was about a new machine the company was building.

I thought when we bought our last machine that it was just about the Acme of Adding Machine perfection but it seems that the Burroughs people are now building what they call a Duplex machine. It's really two adding machines in one. Instead of having only one set of adding wheels this machine has two and by simply moving a lever on the keyboard you can add on either the upper or lower set of adding wheels.

By simply pressing the 'Transfer Total' key when you have finished, you can transfer the amounts from the upper counter to the lower counter and take a grand total of the two amounts.

I believe we could save about an hour a day with one of these machines in handling yesterday's and to-day's balances and also in taking off our Debit and Credit Balance.

By the way I'm going down to the Burroughs office after lunch and I would be glad to have you go along if you are interested.

I'll also give you their address and you can write them for information about the Duplex machine. They will be glad to tell you all about it."

Postal Banks Prove Successful

Washington, January 8.—The postal savings bank system is a success. The short time that the chain of banks has been in operation has convinced Postmaster-General Hitchcock of this, and when the first returns of deposits are in there is no doubt that a splendid showing will be made.

All the reports that have been received indicate a favorable reception for the new banks and a very general desire to make use of these new savings depositories. Inquiries are still pouring in for information as to the workings of the new system. Some valuable suggestions also are being received.

Among the latter is one from a southern postmaster that the department provide special literature, easily understood by children, describing the operations and rules governing the banks, for distribution to school children. Many teachers have made detailed inquiries, with the object of informing and instructing their scholars.

The postmaster at Pekin, Ill., reported yesterday that a woman came into his office with $60 in dimes, representing her savings for a year. She was furnished a proper certificate for her deposit, and left apparently happy.

At Brunswick, Ga., the postmaster reports that he has received an unusual number of requests to accept deposits for children under 10 years of age. Ten years is the age limit for deposits.

At Manitowoc, Wis., the postmaster reports that a number of "show" men, sailors and commercial travelers offered deposits on condition that they be permitted to draw against them at any other postoffice. As that is against the regulations they had to be denied.

Many of the postmasters where the new banks are located are receiving deposits by mail from people who live beyond the delivery of their offices, but who are attracted by the government guaranty behind the postal savings banks.

Adds One Million to Surplus

The Union Trust Company, of Pittsburgh, added $1,000,000 to its surplus fund during 1910, besides paying dividends amounting to $1,000,000. The surplus and undivided profits of the company now amount to $27,500,000.

Dr. C. B. Alexander, formerly president of the First National of Mabton, Wash., has purchased the controlling interest in the First International Bank of Kennewick, and changed the name to the Bank of Kennewick. He has become cashier, C. E. Klitten is president.

Bank Elections

Practically all of the Chicago banks held their annual elections for officers and directors this week. Principally among the changes made was the election of George M. Reynolds as president of the Continental & Commercial Trust Company. W. I. Osborne retired as president and E. A. Potter, former president of the American Trust, declined a re-election as chairman of the board for the Continental & Commercial Trust. This puts Mr. Reynolds in direct charge of two hundred ten millions in resources, the deposits being around one hundred seventy millions in the two institutions. It is an open secret among Mr. Reynolds' friends that he expects before many years to have two hundred fifty millions in deposits. In the election of directors in the Reynolds' banks Robert Dunham was made a director and Edwin Cudahy succeeded the late Michael Cudahy his father. Those retiring from the board are George E. Roberts, W. C. Seipp, and Henry Botsford.

There are three new directors on the board of the Union Trust. They are Marvin Hughitt, Jr., Richmond Dean, and W. V. Kelley, the iron manufacturer.

National City stockholders approved the increase in capital from one million five hundred thousand to two million and the new shares will be issued April 5th at par. Richard C. Hall, Clayton Mark, and R. U. Lansing, manager of the bond department, were elected to the board.

Edward Tilden was elected to the Drovers Deposit National to succeed R. T. Forbes who went to St. Joseph, Missouri, to become president of the First National of that city. John Fletcher, who has been managing the bank with such fine success, was re-elected a vice-president and will continue to be its active head.

L. C. Wagner, who was president of the Washington Park National, has been elected president of the Englewood State Bank and Isaac N. Powell is the new president of the Washington Park National.

Northwestern Trust & Savings declared an eight per cent dividend, this being an increase of two per cent over the former rate.

Woodlawn Trust & Savings added twenty thousand dollars to its surplus, having earned nearly seventeen per cent of its capital stock, and the dividend rate is eight per cent.

La Salle Street National stockholders adjourned until February 7th. In the meantime the present officials will remain in charge. This adjournment was taken chiefly on account of President Lorimer's absence in Washington. In practically all of the other instances the old directors were re-elected and they promptly reappointed the present officials for another year.

Two new assistant cashiers were elected at the Monroe National. Matthew A. Berg and Robert H. Lee, formerly paying and receiving tellers, were promoted on merit.

Harris Bank Opens

Champaign, Ill., January 9.—The fine new buff stone building of the First National, one of the possessions of the Harris family, has been opened with a big reception to the public. Champaign loyalists believe it to be the handsomest banking room and building in the world. The new building is at the corner of Main and Walnut streets, almost in the heart of the city. Representing, as it does, an investment of a quarter of a million dollars, it stands as the most practical, yet withal the most beautiful, symbol of the faith which the stockholders and officers of the institution have had in Champaign county. Absolutely fireproof throughout, with every convenience and luxury that the best building practice has developed, and with a stately yet simple style of architecture, the new building represents utility combined with architectural beauty. The exterior is buff Bedford stone with a granite base and with ornamental terra cotta used in the spandrels and the mullions of the third, fourth and fifth story windows. The first story, containing the banking room, is designed to form the base of the building. The upper four stories of offices are treated on the Walnut street side with Corinthian pilasters, and on the Main street elevation with pilasters and three-quarter columns. The Main street entrance is enriched with granite treatment contained within the entrance arch, and is further accented by the heavy balcony at the level of the second floor. A full entablature and cresting all in Bedford stone, surmounts the whole.

The First National Bank was founded in 1865. In the forty-five years of its existence a continued skillful business management and the prosperity of the community in which it is located have combined to make it one of the strongest and wealthiest banking institutions in the state. The new building is the third the bank has occupied since its founding.

The present officers of the bank are president, H. H. Harris; vice-presidents, B. F. Harris and N. M. Harris; cashier, H. S. Capron.

Stocks Weaker

After a surprisingly strong stock market for several days a turn came early this week and the whole list has shown weakness. The decline under considerable pressure is not serious and it became more evident than ever in Tuesday's struggle that the market is being supported by strong parties. On that day selling of Corn Products and Central Leather, which broke quite sharply led to realizing throughout the list, and traders took the short side for a turn, the expected reaction following, leading stocks losing about a point, with an exceptional decline of two points in Con. Gas.

Canadian Pacific held most of its advance, and the reaction was nothing more than a healthy and proper one after a week of great strength. There have been unwarranted predictions of dividends on some industrial common stocks, like Central Leather and U. S. Rubber, and when there is any long selling of such issues in a narrow market, declines are of unusual proportions.

The situation is unchanged in that stocks are concentrated in strong hands, and there is not likely to be much change in this respect until the market is made attractive and profitable.

In the local stock market Metropolitan Elevated preferred was moderately active, closing at 68½. Chicago Railway series 2 certificates were steady at 24½. South Side Elevated was off two points, closing at 68. Match shares were weak. Commonwealth Edison was steady.

Among the local bank shares Continental and Commercial National was in stronger demand, selling at 283, with closing bid and asked prices 282½ and 283½ respectively.

Owing to the defective U. S. subtreasury system there are lying idle in the Chicago subtreasury $100,000,000 in real money. This money and that at other such points kept in idleness should be in the banks helping out with the business and commerce of the country.

Des Moines, January 12.—Governor B. F. Carroll in his annual message to the Iowa legislature read this week pays a high tribute to banking conditions in Iowa. Under the subject of banking, the governor says: "There is little, if anything, pertaining to banks and banking that needs to be called to your attention. The banks of the state in general seem to be in a very flourishing condition. There have been no failures of state or savings banks during the last two years. The auditor's biennial report shows that there were 950 state and savings banks and trust companies carrying deposits of nearly $247,000,000, reporting to the department at the end of the biennial period ending June 30, 1910. Fifteen or more have been added to the list since that date. The laws relating to the taxing of banks have been rendered somewhat chaotic by reasons of some of the decisions of the courts but that should be considered with other matters of taxation."

Governor Thinks Tax Laws Unjust

On the question of taxation the governor says: "I wish again to call your attention to the fact that the tax laws of the state are very inequitable and in some respects unjust. It has now been fourteen years since there has been a general revision of our revenue laws. Many changes of conditions have arisen in that time and many new methods of taxation have been adopted in other states which are worthy of consideration. The tax ferret law, the taxing of moneys and credits, a filing fee upon mortgages, based upon the amount and time to run and many other features are attracting much attention. I therefore recommend that a commission be provided to study carefully all the phases of the taxing questions, prepare an entire new revenue code and submit it to the next session of the general assembly."

Increase Capital One Million

The First National at Sioux City is planning to increase its capital stock from $300,000 to $400,000. The contemplated increase will bring the capital and surplus up to the sum of the resources of that bank and the Iowa State National of Sioux City before their consolidation and will put approximately $200,000 more of taxable property upon the books of the assessor that were withdrawn a year ago when the merger was formed. In addition to increasing the capital to $400,000 it is proposed to add $100,000 to the surplus.

Bankers Unite in Fight against Taxing Money

Iowa bankers have entered into the movement to secure a repeal of the Iowa statute taxing moneys and credits with enthusiasm. The legislative committee of the Iowa Bankers Association, C. N. Voss, W. E. Coffin and J. H. Hass, has sent out a circular letter to the bankers of the state asking them to use their influence with the legislators for repeal of this Iowa law. The committee asserts that the law has driven much capital out of Iowa. It cites a proposed tax ferret law, explained in a recent letter from Des Moines to THE CHICAGO BANKER and says on this subject: "It is currently reported that the tax ferrets are planning to invade the banks of this state. On the 20th of last month, a bank in Dubuque was forced to go into court at the instigation of a tax ferret. Other banks in this state have been victims of these agents who are out for the 15 per cent commission. This ferret law has become so obnoxious that there is quite a strong sentiment for its repeal at the coming session of the legislature, and a bill for that purpose will be introduced early in the session. In the interests of the tax ferrets, a bill will be introduced making it compulsory for every county to employ a tax ferret. In our judgment, the bankers of this state can do their communities and the state no greater service than to take an active interest in securing the repeal of this obnoxious tax ferret law, and the enactment of a more just and fair modification of our taxation system. Your most effective efforts will be by conference as soon as possible with your local senator and representative and getting them interested along these lines."

Postal Bank Has Poor Start at Decorah

Reports from Decorah indicate that people in the vicinity of that town are not falling over themselves to deposit their funds in the postal savings bank located at that place. At the end of the second day, there had been five accounts opened so it was stated from good authority although the postmaster refused to talk on the subject under orders from the postmaster general. Several accounts had been forwarded from various sections of Iowa which had been returned as not within the jurisdiction of the postoffice. One of these was stated to be $500, the limit allowed under the enactment. It was stated from Decorah that there seemed to be a sentiment that the post office bank would be a success but there has been nothing at this writing to indicate any undue popularity of the new system with the people.

Hall Turns Detective—Captures Noted Forger

John Fowler, thought to be one of the keenest check forgers in several states was arrested in Des Moines last week following some clever detective work on the part of P. W. Hall, secretary of the I. B. A. Fowler's description had been furnished Hall by several bankers and by the state authorities of Wisconsin where it is reported that Fowler was once in trouble for forgery. Hall knew that Fowler was in the city but he could not get the police detectives interested. He determined to run Fowler down himself. After an hour's work, he ran his quarry to earth in one of the hotels. Two police officers were notified and Fowler was arrested at one o'clock in the morning. To Hall, Fowler is said to have confessed. He had a habit of making a small deposit in a bank and securing a bank book. This would be used by him as a visiting card and he managed to deceive bankers in Des Moines, Sioux City, Oskaloosa, Washington, Marshalltown and other Iowa cities. The information that he was in Des Moines was sent to Mr. Hall by bankers at Muscatine.

Believes Bank Robberies Work of Amateurs

Secretary Hall believes that much of the attempted bank robbery in Iowa is the work of amateurs. This he believes is particularly true with the gang that has been at work in Southern Iowa. The gang which escaped after dynamiting the banks at Bancroft, Garden City and Dow City is the real article, he believes. Secretary Hall says that the young man was bound and gagged and saw the robbers who attempted to burgle the Bank of Russell gave descriptions of two of the men that coincided exactly with descriptions of two of the gang arrested recently at Oskaloosa. This young man was taken to Oskaloosa but when brought face to face with the prisoners, he declared that none looked familiar from which Mr. Hall believes the witness was afraid to tell the truth.

Iowa Democrats for Guaranty Law

The upholding of the constitutionality of the guaranty bank deposit laws in Kansas and other southwestern states has roused the democrats of the Iowa legislature to greater activity in preparing to boost a measure of that sort through the general assembly which convened this week. Two years ago several bills were introduced but without success. Some of these were republican measures but John Darrah who fathered the most successful of them all in the house is not in the Iowa legislature this session. The democrats held a state wide conference in Des Moines Saturday night at which tentative plans were made for pushing the proposition during the general assembly. It will be modelled after those of Kansas and Oklahoma.

Urges Establishment of Trust Companies

C. N. Voss of Davenport has written to the Iowa League of Commercial Clubs urging that body to assist in securing necessary legislation for the establishment and encouragement of trust companies in Iowa. He asks for a statute similar to that in Illinois providing a deposit with the state of securities for the protection of clients, proper publicity, supervision, etc. He points out that trust companies qualified to act as administrators, executors, guardians and trustees are needed in the larger cities of the state. In this connection he cites that funds held by a trust company as guardian for a widow or children cannot escape but must be fully listed for taxation, the latter amount about $1\frac{3}{4}$ per cent on the face value. The Iowa courts usually require the investment of this money in farm mortgages at 5 to $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent so that the tax removes practically one third of the revenue. Mr. Voss avers that this is plainly inequitable and that its direct action is to drive capital out of Iowa.

Mason City Bank Increases Capital

The First National at Mason City has increased its capital stock from $150,000 to $250,000 and its surplus from $175,000 to $250,000. This makes the bank third in the state in size with the Iowa National of Des Moines and the German Savings of Davenport surpassing it. C. H. McNider, the president will undoubtedly be re-elected president as under his management the institution has made remarkable progress. However, if the First National at Sioux City increases its capital stock to $400,000 and adds $100,000 to its surplus, Mason City may not be able to claim third place.

Banking Notes

W. A. Fry has resigned as president of the Johnson County Savings at Iowa City so that he may give more of his time and attention to the business of the Borner-Fry Company, a manufacturing concern. Mr. Fry is one of the best known financiers in central Iowa.

Ellis T. Robb of Eldora who is well known throughout Iowa as a state bank examiner is an active candidate for the position of national bank examiner to succeed Examiner Jones of Algona who resigned recently. It is reported that Congressman Pickett of the Third district has pledged his support to Robb and several influential members of the legislature are working in his interests.

It is understood that a lively banking war is on at Hopkinton. Andrew McDonald who went to that city some years ago to start the Farmers State Bank at that place was recently requested to resign as cashier along with the other officers. It then developed that men interested in the other two banks had secured a controlling interest in the Farmers and, to use a slang expression, had "slipped one over" on McDonald. The latter is now threatening to start another bank and the people are greatly interested in the unique contest.

Cashier Henry Garlock of the State Bank of Maxwell had a painful accident when his left hand was blown off by an explosion of steam in an attachment to the kitchen range. He was also badly burned. The explosion blew the windows out of the kitchen.

O. K. Olson was elected a new director of the Iowa Trust & Savings of Des Moines at the annual meeting last week. There was no other change. A. Clemens was elected a new director of the Mechanics Savings of Des Moines. There was no other change in the officary of this institution.

Fred Hutchinson has been elected president of the Rockwell City Savings at Rockwell City succeeding George R. Allison who has removed to California. Assistant Cashier Raymond Hutchinson was chosen cashier.

President and Mrs. Gideon Ellyson of the Commercial Savings, Des Moines entertained the employees of the bank at dinner New Year's day at their beautiful home on East Eleventh Street.

The following bankers were in the city last week; Cashier A. E. McKean, Bank of Jamaica; President E. T. Dufur, Lorimor Bank; Cashier L. H. Busselle, Chariton Bank; Charles Burdick, Baxter Bank.

Why Alaska Bank Closed

Seattle, Washington, January 6.—A cablegram from Fairbanks, Alaska, says that assets of the Washington-Alaska Bank, now in the hands of a receiver are $1,100,000 and its liabilities are $900,000. J. A. Jackson, vice-president of the bank, said it had been customary for the institution to lend money to the gold miners, who repaid it in the spring. Heretofore the Seattle Bank had advanced the bank money to carry on its business through the winter, but this year the bank was unable to obtain assistance either in Seattle or in California.

Alton Banker in Chicago

Cashier Cris. Seeger of Alton Banking and Trust Company has been among the callers at Western Trust and Savings Bank this week. The Alton institution which he represents has large interests both with merchants and farmers and is in a position to judge of the condition of trade. Mr. Seeger reports a comfortable state of affairs in all lines of industry around his district.

John. L. Hamilton

Rumor has it on LaSalle street that John L. Hamilton declined a re-election as president of the Hamilton National, at Hoopston, Ill., to accept a pressing offer from a large reserve center bank, which has been after him for some time. The name of the bank was withheld.

Receiver Finds Odd Tangle

Receiver Edwin C. Day has found an odd state of affairs in connection with the Cosmopolitan Bank, a Chicago concern which was putting out certificates of deposit in enormous quantities. Most of these certificates were in favor of N. T. Arvidson, who traded them for all kinds of property.

The receiver has examined the officers of the bank, and Arvidson, in an endeavor to discover assets. His examination showed that John B. Wohlenberg, who was at one time assistant cashier, and later manager of the Victor Finance Company, had appropriated about $2,000 worth of notes which it was claimed really belonged to the Cosmopolitan Bank. The Victor Finance Company is composed of the same persons as the Cosmopolitan Bank. Upon a proper showing being made Judge Tuthill also appointed Mr. Day receiver of the assets of John B. Wohlenberg and his wife, doing business as the Home Finance Company, 167 Dearborn Street. The receiver found about $2,000 in the notes of salaried people, but of this amount Emiline W. Bell of Green Bay, Wis., claims $1,000 to cover an investment for this amount made by her during December, 1910, in the Home Finance Company. Until the court determines Mrs. Bell's rights it will be impossible to know what really belongs to the Cosmopolitan Bank.

Lewis and Chandler turned over to the receiver stocks and bonds of various concerns, for which he has been unable to find any market value so far. The notes turned over to the receiver he has been unable to collect but hopes to realize something from them. Certain real estate was also turned over to the receiver, but investigations show so far that there are defects in the title and that the land is not valuable, even if the title were perfect. The receiver is making every effort to uncover additional assets found to be in the hands of third persons who fleeced the bank, but he has been unsuccessful to date in locating anything which he would feel justified in claiming as banking assets.

New State Bank at Franklin Park

The new Franklin Park (Ill.) State Bank opened for business on Monday in temporary quarters. As indicated by the title the new institution makes a bid for public confidence and patronage under state laws and supervision. H. N. Leadaman is president, Chas. H. Martens vice-president and Wm. H. Kirchhoff cashier.

First National of Sheldon, Iowa

W. M. Smith, former president of the First National at Sheldon, Ia., has been elected chairman of the board. F. E. Frisbee has been elected president. J. H. Archer is vice-president, and F. W. Bloxham, cashier. F. L. Barrager is assistant cashier. Twenty thousand was added to surplus.

Good Report from People's Trust

In its first statement People's Trust and Savings Bank proves itself a winner with deposits of three and a third millions and other business in proportion.

Banks Strong

Although the comptroller's call on Tuesday was unexpected Chicago's banks made an excellent showing. The statements as a whole are ample proof that the banks are working into a more satisfactory position. Where a loss of deposits is shown it can be traced to investment buying. The bond market has been active in the last few weeks and is absorbing considerable cash. Practically all banks national and state, are improving in cash resources.

Fort Dearborn National and La Salle Street National have made large gains in deposits the former increasing three quarters of a million and the latter nearly half a million. National Bank of the Republic, Standard Trust, National Produce, Western Trust, State Bank of Chicago and First of Englewood show substantial gains.

Black Hawk National Increases Stock

The Black Hawk National of Waterloo, Iowa, has increased its paid up capital from $160,000 to $250,000, and has increased the surplus to $100,000. The new stock was placed at $150 per share. No changes in the official list. F. F. McElhinney is president, F. W. Powers vice-president and Charles W. Knoop cashier.

Corn Ex

James G. Wakefield proudly calls attention to the new figures which denote the Corn Ex's strong position in capital and surplus. The capital is $3,000,000, surplus $5,000,000, and undivided profits $500,000. This is the highest type of deposit guaranty.

¶ I am desirous of having either a silent or active partner, who can furnish the above amount, and be in a position to finance an additional $25,000.00 if so required.

¶ This is really a big opportunity for a safe investment, and general business conditions were never more favorable than at present for the success of a store of this character. The merchandise is always in demand.

¶ Personally I have not the money, but have the executive ability, as well as a thorough knowledge of the merchandise, and know what can be accomplished. Can furnish any amount of references as to my reliability and earnestness. Principals only; no promoters.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.90. Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safe-guard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.

A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

The Use of Loan Credit in Modern Business. By THORSTEIN B. VEBLEN. Postpaid, 28c.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism." Contains all that it is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject of investment. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

The above books are the best of their kind, and will be promptly forwarded upon receipt of price.

THE CHICAGO BANKER,

407 Monadnock Block, Chicago.

Forbes is Optimistic

President R. T. Forbes of First National, St. Joseph, Mo., was a caller at Fort Dearborn National recently. The former Chicago banker is optimistic over the Southwest and tells of a rapid and substantial development.

JOHN FLETCHER, Drivers Deposit National, is a mighty good judge of the quality and style of pocket book the friends of that institution would like. Those sent out the first of this year are of the choicest materials and artistically designed.

POPE'S DAILY BOND INTEREST CALCULATOR, published by the Financial Service Company, 2 Rector Street, New York, which sells at $2.00 will save hours and hours of time and prevent mistakes in interest computation for any number of days, on bonds of $1,000, based on 30 days to the month.

THE BUSINESS MEN'S LEAGUE of Montgomery, Ala., is a live wire organization. It is helping the Alabama Bankers Association pass its new banking law putting all forms of banking under supervision and state control.

BACHE & COMPANY say there has been developing among business interests in the last week or two a rather more confident feeling about the situation. As a whole, the volume of business has not been for some time up to expectations, but it must be borne in mind that these expectations have been based upon increased capacity all around. This increase of capacity was begun in the boom period of 1906. It was arrested by the panic of 1907, but the comparatively quick recovery from that disaster induced those who had already begun to extend their facilities, to finish up, and this example was followed by many others.

THE Karpen 5 per cent bonds at 99 are about the classiest thing being offered to Chicago investors at the price this year. George H. Burr & Company, The Rookery, and the Western Trust & Savings Bank are the distributors.

J. B. FORGAN and Prof. J. Lawrence Laughlin of the University of Chicago, dined with President Taft, say the dispatches. Nothing is said as to whether or not Mr. Taft will call the new congress in extra session to revise the cost of living at once, or not. A lot of people would like to know.

PEKIN postal bank reports for the first week. There were three deposits of $100 each and the bank actually ran out of one and five dollar certificates. Foreigners working in the mines are the chief depositors and a few deposits came in by mail.

THE average foreign miner at Pekin is estimated to have been carrying about $500 on his person or to have had it concealed about his house. This money the postal bank is putting back into circulation. Surely all banking will be helped by this. Resisting the postal bank is a little like resisting bank regulation and supervision—a mistaken notion.

JOHN B. PEARCE, secretary of state for Colorado, was indicted for the second time within a few days. The true bill last returned charges him with obtaining money from the First National Bank of Denver in consequence of an unlawful agreement with that institution in connection with the deposit of certain state funds.

PRESTIGE of Gov. Harmon's support turned the trick for the new Ohio senator, Atlee Pomerene. With two democrats from West Virginia and the possibilities of four from New Mexico and Arizona (if they get their constitution adopted) the senate may be democratic yet. Shades of Hamilton!

THEN there's Woodrow Wilson! Speaking at a big meeting called to help eliminate Boss James Smith, senator, Mr. Wilson said: "It is not a dangerous or capital operation to cut off a wart. The thing can be done while you wait, and it is being done. The clinic is open, and every man can witness the operation."

BYRON L. SMITH wants congress to adjourn for about five years to give the country a chance. For us, we favor the abolition entirely of the promoter type of bank, not by the New York method of causing them to fail, but by increasing the supervisory power. Think it over!

EX-PRESIDENT Lewis E. Pierson, of the A. B. A. and president of the Irving National Exchange Bank, New York, believes in publicity. He has his growing bank examined with no strings out, nor any books hidden, by the best accountants he can find. Then he publishes the result. The annual statement for December 31st shows his bank to be "as clean as a hound's tooth."

THE IRVING EXCHANGE is verging on thirty millions deposits, half of it due from banks. These depositor banks like Pierson, and they like the Pierson plan of publicity. It's the very essence of confidence which is the very soul of right banking.

IN 1898 the capital of the Irving was $300,000; now it is $2,000,000. The surplus has grown from $53,000 to $1,800,000. Assets are up from just over two and a half millions to more than thirty-three millions. The vice-presidents who have shouldered so much of the burden from Mr. Pierson's shoulders are James E. Nicholls, Rollin P. Grant and Benj. F. Werner. Harry E. Ward is cashier and David H. G. Penny, Richard J. Faust and J. Franklyn Bouker are assistants.

WOLLENBERGER & CO., the Central Trust Company of Indianapolis and the Colonial Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago are offering $1,500,000 of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock of the Dodge Manufacturing Company of Mishawaka, Ind. The price is par and accrued dividend.

YOUNG BUTLER, who started three private banks in as many Illinois towns, when taken to the Peoria jail, charged with embezzlement, wanted a "parlor" cell, for which he was willing to pay. "Keep your money for your depositors," said the stone hearted sheriff.

BUTLER then was put in a common cell, cut off from the telephone hunt for a bondsman and subdued generally. Butler thought the jail was a picnic, and as free as banking in Illinois, but he knows better now. He operated three feeders to his brokerage business in Chicago, calling them so many "banks." They were located at Glasford, Ellisville and St. David.

SO great is the public confidence in banks that an unknown youth, who could not buy a suit of clothes on credit in a town, may start a "bank" and clean up thousands. We should have Clark Williams stump Illinois with his famous talk on "The Benefits of Increased Bank Supervision."

J. B. FORGAN returned on Monday from Washington, where he was called last week for a conference with the President, Senator Aldrich and others, concerning the proposed financial reforms. Owing to the illness of Senator Aldrich he was unable to attend the conference, but Mr. Forgan visited him at his home long enough to learn of the plans he has in view.

NATIONAL bank call for January 7th was "early," some of the banks thought, but as usual Chicago banks showed up in prime condition.

OLD NATIONAL BANK—SPOKANE

THE views herewith give fine expression to the faith which certain bold spirits have in the future of Spokane as a Northwest financial center. The new fifteen story Old National Bank building is their unquestioned testimony—doubly certified by their courage in building it with their own money. No realty adventure about this. Past growth and development was their inspiration. "To keep abreast of the city's business demands" was the recognized duty of the Old National crowd. Nothing of the Monument about it, rather it is to be a center within a center for the very elect of the Spokane upbuilders.

No need to here record the details for bankers are skilled in such matters. The splendid interior is shown by the half-tones. The exterior would be a credit to any city. It is a combined bank and office building, decided upon after six months spent in investigation by W. J. Komers for the bank, of which he is an officer. Every city was visited and the subject was gone into with a rare fidelity and insight.

The new building is a modern, fire-proof structure of the steel skeleton type with a cream-white enameled terra cotta exterior. It is situated at the northeast corner of Riverside avenue and Stevens street in the heart of Spokane's business center, occupying the full area of the plot 100 feet on Riverside by 242 on Stevens street.

The entire ground floor and basement is reserved for the use of the bank, all of the upper floors being rented for offices.

Upon entering the banking rooms one is at once impressed with the marvelous utility, beauty and convenience here combined. The quiet dignity, the orderly and convenient arrangement, and the beautiful volume of light that floods the entire rooms all reflect a careful study of the requirements of a modern metropolitan bank.

The spacious lobby, 30 feet wide by 72 feet deep, comes directly in the center of the banking rooms, affording easy access to all the cages and executive offices. This public lobby is surrounded by great columns of majestic proportions forming a portion of the cage screen itself and rising to a height of 23 feet, while the skylight directly above the lobby is carried up one story higher, thus producing a stately and architectural effect. Under this arrangement there is no obstruction of posts in either public lobby or working space. To obtain this unusual result the general banking room scheme was determined upon before the building and superstructure were designed.

The ceiling of the banking room is richly but simply decorated in ornament and color. The floor and the public space is laid in Tennessee marble, while the bank counter is a combination of Grecian and domestic marbles, topped with a beautiful frieze of Grecian design.

The executive offices of the bank are located at the left, just inside the main entrance. This arrangement places the offices in the closest possible touch with the traffic of the public and affords an unobstructed view of the entire room. Immediately adjoining the open space of the executive offices are two commodious consultation rooms where the executives may retire for private interviews or meetings. There is but one entrance to the working space of the banking room for the employees. This adjoins the auditor's cage at the end of the lobby, and being used exclusively by the employees, none is admitted except by the pressing of a secret button from within. A wide unobstructed passageway laid in noiseless rubber tile extends all around behind the cages.

The officers of the bank are D. W. Twohy, President, T. J. Humbird, Vice-President, W. D. Vincent, Cashier, W. J. Komers, J. A. Yeomans, W. J. Smithson, Assistant Cashiers.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

BANKS fail sometimes but very few of them fall down physically as did a main wall and one of the granite columns of the First National of Baltimore. The collapse was caused by excavation going on for a new sky scraper next door.

NEXT New York convention will be held at Manhattan Beach. It will be when the sea shore attractions are booming. The West ought to turn out at this meeting. The banks will not have to hire outsiders to represent them.

THE West's independence of New York has been a theme for speakers and writers for a number of years. Various crop-moving stringencies and disturbances due to antiquated currency laws have furnished occasions for positive demonstrations of this independence. The more independent the great West is, the greater the opportunity and the function of Chicago as the central banking center.—Chicago Record-Herald.

PROBABLY the most popular Republican in Cook county, Ill., of which Chicago is the port of entry, is one William Lorimer, with whom "The Chicago Tribune" recently induced Col. Roosevelt to refuse to eat. Because of the assaults on him by the press, Mr. Lorimer seems to have kept aloof from politics in Cook county this fall and let "The Tribune" and its persecutors run things. As a result the county, which has long been republican, was turned over to the pure democracy by about 40,000. The real trouble is that some persecutors are trying to bribe their way into higher office by convicting somebody regardless of the justice of their cause. "The Tribune" is a great newspaper and might be a wonderful power for good, but seems of late years to be serving purely selfish ends. The recent exhibition of purchased perjury in the White bribery case has done much to destroy its prestige and an uplift advocate.—J. Adam Bede in Duluth Budget.

ALL this leads one to inquire where the profit can be in the editorial department driving away subscribers at such a rate that the business office is forced to get them back by giving away houses and lots, and to pay the rent of its new readers?

ARTHUR von GWINNER of the Deutsche Bank, Berlin, can see no hope for American finance until we have a central bank. He thinks it the only remedy for our periodical devastating money panics. He would have it modeled after the Reichsbank, of course? He fears our present banks are "the playthings of politicians" which is where he slipped his trolley. He should come over for just one brief interview with the Chicago clearing house committee. Then he would be wiser.

CORN EXCHANGE NATIONAL has put in a pension plan, after its being fully examined and approved by the directors. "The last year was about as good as any we have ever had," said Ernest A. Hamill, the president, "and in some respects the best."

WE always said things would hum over at the Corn Exchange, if Mr. Hamill would get about to the conventions. He joined the de luxe excursion to the Los Angeles A. B. A. talkfest, last fall over the Northwestern and didn't miss a banquet in the whole three weeks he was "on the road." Now you see the result.

TRULY all the big bankers should do likewise. The personal equation is it after all. If it wasn't you wouldn't be reading this column. See?

CHAS. N. VOSS, W. E. Coffin and J. Hass are a committee of the Iowa Bankers Association to report on causes of Iowa's decrease in population, in the last ten years. In reporting to the members this committee, among other things, agrees that:

"IT is quite generally conceded that among the reasons for the decrease in the population of the state of Iowa are some of her unreasonable and unjust laws covering taxation. Almost every banker in Iowa knows of people who have left his community and taken up their residence where the tax on moneys and credits is more equitable. The modification of our tax laws is one of the important questions that will be considered at the coming session of the legislature. We know of none who could be more deeply interested in this question than the banker and we earnestly recommend that you take an interest in the subject."

FURTHER, the committee finds that "the tax ferrets are planning to invade the banks of this state. On the 20th of last month, a bank in Dubuque was forced to go into court at the instigation of the tax ferrets. Other banks in this state have been victims of these agents who are out for the 15 per cent commission. This ferret law has become so obnoxious that there is quite a strong sentiment for its repeal at the coming session of the legislature, and a bill for that purpose will be introduced early in the session. In the interest of the tax ferrets a bill will be introduced making it compulsory for every county to employ a tax ferret. In our judgment, the bankers of this state can do their communities and the state no greater service than to take an active interest in securing the repeal of this obnoxious tax ferret law and the enactment of a more just and fair modification of our taxation system. Your most effective efforts will be by conference as soon as possible with your local senator and representative and getting them interested along these lines."

OF the correctness of the conclusions of this committee there can be little doubt. Many wealthy families are moving over into Illinois or going farther West. Corporations too, are doing likewise and if the "tax ferrets" break into the banks there will be a shifting of balances to Chicago and elsewhere that will shake up credits like an earthquake. Iowa is too great a state to be in the hands of cranks and pirates. Perhaps all this tends toward a direct land tax after all.

ARTHUR REYNOLDS is sending out to the friends of the Des Moines National, a handy paper knife. A lot of people would like one of the pens that the popular Iowan uses in making his signature look like a camp of wireless telephone towers.

P. W. HALL, secretary for Iowa, is out after burglary insurance. He might do a land-office business if he could insure against the Iowa tax ferrets, a much worse evil than the Yeggman whom Burns is teaching to let banks alone.

CITIZENS NATIONAL of Bellevue, Pa., of which Cashier D. C. Wills of the Diamond National, Pittsburgh, is president has purchased a site for a new bank building. The Citizens National is but three years old but has prospered greatly.

LANDON CABELL ROSE is president of three prosperous Chicago banks. They are the Colonial Trust, North Avenue State and Michigan Avenue Trust. The same interests are represented in all three institutions, and nothing but straight forward, old-fashioned banking is practiced.

DURING the month of December twenty-four applications to organize national banks were received by the comptroller of the currency. Of the applications pending, sixteen were approved and nine rejected. In the same month eighteen banks, with total capital of $1,615,000, were authorized to begin business, of which number ten, with capital of $265,000, had individual capital of less than $50,000, and eight, with capital of $1,350,000, individual capital of $50,000 or over.

THE total number of national banks organized is 9,913, of which 2,682 have discontinued business, leaving in existence 7,231 with authorized capital of $1,014,591,135, and circulation outstanding, secured by bonds, of $693,370,056. The total amount of the national bank circulation outstanding is $727,705,981, of which $34,335,925 is covered by lawful money of a like amount deposited with the treasurer of the United States.

BARTLETT STATE BANK, of Bartlett, Ill., has had its opening. The capital is $25,000. Edward J. Schmidt is president, Herman W. Schnadt vice-president and E. H. Glos cashier.

INTERTRUST SECURITY COMPANY is the latest swindle put over the jumps by the U. S. for using the mails to get hold of the money of the innocents. Neither trust nor security should have been mentioned on the label, according to the pure food law. Mining shares were the excuse for taking the money.

Alabama Convention

President W. L. Lancaster of Wetumpka delivers his annual address at the Montgomery convention, specially called to urge the legislature to pass a new bank act putting all forms of banking under State supervision and control

Not quite a year has passed since our convention in Birmingham, where I was honored by being made president of this association. We meet to-day under somewhat different conditions and time than usual; our state convention having met heretofore in May, it was not anticipated until a few weeks ago that the date would be changed from the regular time of meeting. But all of you will recollect that at our meeting in Birmingham last May the most important subject considered was a change in our state banking laws, the convention in its final deliberations taking a very decided stand on this subject, named a legislative committee with positive instructions to prepare a bill embodying certain distinctive features, and submit same to the incoming legislature of our state for enactment into law.

You could not have appointed a more efficient or faithful committee. Messrs. Manley, Buck and Rison, all eminent state bankers, comprise this committee, and however much some of you may differ with some of the details of the bill that will be presented by them for your consideration at the proper time, yet their unselfish labors demand more than ordinary notice; to my own knowledge they have made their own business secondary to that of the association, and I take advantage of this opportunity to express to them on behalf of myself and my associates our appreciation of the good work which they have done, and I feel that this association will so express itself after a careful consideration of the bill and their labors. Your legislative committee some weeks ago notified your executive officers that they had completed a tentative draft of the bill, and suggested that after same had been gone over and revised, that it might be a good idea to call the annual meeting of the association some time in January in Montgomery the regular selected place if agreeable to our hosts, and there consider the bill, the state legislature then being in session. Our Montgomery bankers through their clearing house association, very courteously and promptly gave their assent to entertain us at any time desired; the executive committee was communicated with on the subject, and as I am informed by our secretary, unanimously and enthusiastically endorsed the suggestion for a January meeting, and this is the explanation due you for the change in dates and for this new departure.

It is with great pleasure and some pride that I call this association to order to-day in this beautiful "Capital City" of ours, I say ours, because all of us feel a personal interest in Montgomery the "Cradle of the Confederacy," and although she may not quite have reached "one hundred thousand in 1910," yet she deserves all the good things that come her way; and with the "Key of Opportunity," continually flashing before the outside world, as it now does at the foot of Commerce Street, it is a question of only a short time when she is bound to come into her own in population and material things her due, as she now possesses beauty, culture, and social qualities unexcelled the world round. It, therefore, gives me pleasure to preside over an association of this kind, I might say, in my home town—for do not citizens of Wetumpka look forward to the day when either Wetumpka will annex Montgomery or vice versa, they being only a few miles apart now. Montgomery and her people are dear to me personally. The bankers, professional and business men of this city I count my personal friends, and my pleasure and pride come from the fact that my chosen profession has honored me thus, and I am permitted to express and show my appreciation so near my own home.

Now in reference to the bill gotten up by your legislative committee and which has been printed and distributed, I dare say, to every banker in the state, and which is the main cause of your meeting at this date;—as the president of your association I heartily endorse this bill. I do so not that I agree to the letter with everything in the bill. If I had done the drawing of it, I might have had some things a little different, according to my own personal ideas, but I endorse this bill as a whole, because I believe it comes as near or nearer satisfying all the needs of expert supervision and management of banks in this state than any other that could be devised with the various interests at stake to be considered and provided for, and so many different ideas held by different bankers on this subject to be reconciled, and it is in this light I believe that this bill to be nearly ideal. I had hopes that the committee might find some way to satisfy our branch bank friends without weakening the bill; they tell me not, and as I am not prepared to meet their arguments against this method of banking, I am forced to conclude that notwithstanding strong personal friends engaged in branch banking, that this part of the bill should stand somewhat as written. If we could always have the strong personalities now at the head of these institutions of the state and none others, we might be willing to do otherwise, but laws cannot be made to fit particular individuals and localities, but must be made to fit all characters and conditions.

This bill as finally printed has been carefully revised and changes made of the original draft after consultation with the executive officers of the association, and prominent bankers of the state; suggestions being received and considered from every source obtainable. I commend it to your careful and earnest consideration in this convention. Let us have all the discussion needed, and then, after this convention has acted, let us lay down some of our individual views and as a united body express our approval of whatever is agreed upon to our legislators, and use our influence towards its passage and enactment into law; for gentlemen of this convention, you need not expect others to do your work for you, naturally the rest of the state feels that if the bankers do not know what they want and need, there is some excuse for themselves. If bankers would only get at the bottom of things, quote basic principles, and stand together for right things to be done, there would seem to be no reason why it should not be accomplished for the good of all. Heretofore the greatest trouble has been that the bankers themselves could not agree; the time has come, however, when it should not be difficult for bankers to both know and understand; undoubtedly the bankers conventions have been of the greatest assistance to the banking of the country, and to the individual banker himself;—the discussion of important banking questions, the practical views on currency matters, and laws governing banks, and the earnest desire shown on the part of three bankers to get at the truth of things for the benefit of all, have gone a long way towards improving matters.

The banking business like many other business enterprises is prone to get into a rut and stay there, and doubtless there are many in that rut to-day, though perchance they do not realize it. Some of you may say "Why not let well enough alone, and why foist on us any new plans which we would be compelled to familiarize ourselves with." To such I say get out of the rut and beaten paths. The one who follows only where the rut leads him loses his own individuality." This is an age of progressiveness. It is a time when new schemes and new ideas for the betterment of all lines of business are thought out, and threshed out, and then adopted, because men at the head are wise enough and progressive enough to leave the ruts and take advantage of opportunities and conditions that lead to success.

The early banker was engrossed with the care of his business. He knew all that went on in its boundaries, but did not recognize to the extent he does to-day, that he holds a trusteeship for all the people, their happiness and their prosperity. He was wont to consider the conduct of his business a private matter of no concern to anyone but himself. It is astonishing to know that the first laws enacted for the regulation and supervision of banks met with opposition from the bankers. That they alone were to publish statements of their condition seemed unwarranted. When it was proposed to place examiners in the banks from time to time to whom would be revealed the private affairs of the bank, many bankers actively opposed the plan; but fortunately reform measures prevailed, and the bankers know now that they prosper in proportion to the confidence that the public has in them. To gain that confidence he must, in the searching glare of the business of these days, be open, frank and candid; welcome intelligent supervision, and be the first to drive from his ranks the designing, the dishonest, and the incompetent. Hence to-day the banker openly urges reform, but at the same time counsels care, and deprecates thoughtless haste in legislation; by such methods he is leaving the imprint of his knowledge and experience upon the laws of the land. I believe the enactment into law of your committee's bill, with possibly a few changes, will put the state banks of Alabama in the foreground as the leaders in insuring to their depositors absolute protection, and doing away with the guaranty of deposits fallacy and similar undesirable doctrines. In fact, with this law on the statute books and properly administered, the state bankers of this state would have a decided advantage over the national. I think I speak advisedly.

The national system is not perfect by any means. Senator Aldrich, chairman of the National Monetary Commission, recently said at a special session of the American Academy of Political and Social Science held in Philadelphia: "The structural weakness and practical defects of our national banking system are shown by the relative growth of national banks and state banks and trust companies in the past twenty-five years. Within this period the number of national banks has increased 4,268, while the number of state banks and trust companies has increased 11,085. The capital and surplus of the state banks and trust companies have increased in the same time from $175,000,000 to $1,283,000,000. In many important communities practically all of the banking business is carried on by state banks and trust companies."

Therefore let the bankers of every description and name realize that none of us has a monopoly of the good things in banking, but that there are defects in both systems to be worked out to the betterment of banking in general by the united efforts of all concerned. For, if we are to give the banks of the country and of every section an opportunity which can only be afforded by the general government for association and co-operation, the result must be of such a nature as to be mutually beneficial to all banks and clearly in the interests of the people of the country as a whole. I am not prepared to say, as some do, that a "Central Bank" is the solution of all our banking troubles, especially in time of panics and monetary disturbances; though I am inclined very favorably to some such idea, for all our experiences teach that the reserve banks are such in name only, and the most vital reform needed in banking to-day is to provide a really efficient system of reserve banks, as we all know that the main trouble with the country banker during the time of panic is to get back the money deposited with the reserve agent. There may be two sides to this question, though I am unable to see but this one for the present. I shall not undertake to discuss this live national question further at this time, though it is a question that vitally interests us all, and is being considered by the country over, and is a question that the Alabama bankers should have their share in considering and solving. The year 1907 is not so long passed that we have forgotten the events that threatened financial havoc, and all of us felt at that time that something must be done and done quickly in a legislative way to make our currency system more responsive to business needs; but whatever system is provided for to make it a success, should include all systems of banking, both state and national. Alabama bankers should have clear and definite ideas on all questions relating to banking and the solution of these problems, and the courage and energy to strive for a satisfactory conclusion, whether in our state or national legislative bodies.

Once again as to our state legislative bill, let me emphasize the importance of passing some such bill through this legislature. If nothing else is done at this convention than to solidify the bankers of this state behind a reasonable state banking law, it alone will stamp the Alabama Bankers Association as a live, progressive concern which does things for the real good of the banking interests of the state, and this is but another way of saying that it accomplishes good for the state in general. Because the fact is, anything that makes for the security and usefulness of the banking interests of the state is helpful to the whole community. It will tend to emphasize the certainty, that if this association is to survive and continue its work of usefulness to the state, it must continue to be an active, energetic force, which has for its purpose the accomplishment of something that is real and tangible. In this connection, I would like to suggest to all the members of this association that the officers of the association are ready always to hear suggestions as to lines of work which may profitably be taken up and pushed to a conclusion.

Owing to the shortness of our year's work there have been no group meetings, but a place on the program has been assigned our group vice-presidents for short reports on general conditions in their respective groups. This group idea is a good thing, and I recommend its continuance, and would further recommend that if the next annual meeting is put off until May, 1912, that not less than two meetings be held in each group, one some time this spring or summer, and one again in the spring of 1912, before the annual meeting in May. In conclusion, apparently there is no cause for pessimism in the present business outlook, for when things go well with the farmers the demand for commodities is constant and trade is brisk. This state notwithstanding its large lumber, coal and iron interests, is an agricultural state and our farmers are more prosperous and happy than at any time in their history. With the guiding hand of the patriotic banker all should go well. We have a great state and a great nation. In traveling throughout the world we come back to this country with a desire to lift the hat, realizing its greatness and its future possibilities. It is a most wonderful country. From the great sweep of the Atlantic ocean to the deep blue of the Pacific, from the border of Canada to the confines of Mexico, there is a veritable expanse of promise and plenty. Whatever ability a man possesses he can find an outlet for. From the earth's surface he can garner the grain, from her bosom he can drag the precious minerals. Prairie land and mountain level plain and steep await his coming, and the teeming millions of the cities provide a market for his products. In the grand sisterhood of states, I do not misstate the facts in saying that Alabama stands out among the first in natural resources and advantages, for does she not command all the prime requisites, cotton, lumber, coal and iron. Alabama needs the active as well as the passive assistance of the men behind the bank accounts. Solidity, sense, safety, all seem synonymous with our bankers, whatever drawbacks there may be in the banking system,—the errors are of the head and not of the heart, as is proved by our progress and purposes. In the coming years there must be a balance of power—and that is always held by the conservatives. Let us not stay out of the fight. Let our motto be "Alabama, I will aye be true to Thee."

I again thank you for naming me as the president of this association. I trust our convention will be a successful one, and that the coming year has in store for you all happiness and prosperity.

J. Herbert Anderson, a promoter, has instituted proceedings in the Spokane county superior court against F. M. March of the National Bank of Commerce, for $5,225, the amount he alleges is due for advice and counsel and his endeavors in assisting in the organization of the banking concern in the spring of 1909.

State Senator R. C. McCroskey of Garfield, Wash., who is declared by the Department of Agriculture to be the best wheat farmer in the United States, making a record of 46,590 bushels on 1,000 acres of non-irrigated land in the Palouse country, south of Spokane, is president of the Pullman State Bank at Pullman, Wash., also owning large blocks of stock in the First National Bank of Pullman and the Palouse National Bank of Palouse, Wash.

By C. C. Burford

"Complete in every detail." This is the opinion of the friends of the new First National of Champaign. The officers of the bank held "open house" for two evenings after the bank was occupied, and a throng of admiring patrons and friends of the bank visited the new quarters those evenings. President H. H. Harris, Vice-President B. F. Harris and N. M. Harris and Cashier Capron were "on duty" to show their friends the new home of the bank.

In the words of Mr. Capron, "the bank is as complete as we can make it," and surely he expressed it correctly. B. F. Harris has visited Chicago, Pittsburgh and other banking centers, and, securing the most advanced ideas in those places, has put his information into active play at Champaign, where one of the best bank buildings in the Central West stands to-day. The vault is especially interesting, it being a Donnell with the round door, the door weighing eighteen tons and together with the framework weighs twenty-five tons. The yeggmen who have enjoyed such good professional success in Kansas have to begin work immediately after supper if they expected to reach the cash box of the Harris family before the breakfast-bell would ring.

Breese Bank Nationalizes

The bank of Schafly Brothers at Breese will begin business under a national charter in the near future. A new bank operating under a state charter will also be started at Breese. This town is located about twenty miles from East St. Louis on the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern railroad.

Peculiar Accident at Peoria

The snapping of a chain resulted in the fall of a giant seven ton Corinthian column of Green River sandstone which was being placed in its position in the front of the new First National building at Peoria. The column fell from an upright position and crashed full length upon the sidewalk. Three workmen and several passers-by narrowly escaped injury. The concrete walk was badly damaged.

This column is one of four which is being used in the new bank building, and was so large that a special quarry was needed to turn it from the stone. The damage to the column and the delay in the work will cost the contractor about $800.

Merritt Heads Hoopeston National

John L. Hamilton has resigned the presidency of the Hoopeston National. Isaac E. Merritt, who has been the cashier of the bank since it was nationalized eighteen months ago, is the new president. The new cashier is Mark R. Koplin, who has been assistant cashier for a year. Messrs. Merritt and Koplin came to Hoopeston from Buckley, Iroquois county, where they had been successful in the banking business. Mr. Koplin's father was an old-time successful banker at Buckley. These men own considerable farming land in Iroquois county, and are heavy stockholders in the Hoopeston National. Mr. Merritt is president of private banks at Buckley and Danforth.

Bank Director on State Board

B. M. Davidson, a director in the Marshall State of Marshall, is a member of the state board of agriculture from the eighteenth congressional district and enjoys the distinction of being one of the youngest members of the board. He is a member of the Illinois bar, has served as enrolling and engrossing clerk in the state house of representatives, and has been state's attorney of Clark county. He owns two good farms near Marshall and is an extensive breeder of Shropshire sheep and Angus cattle.

Jacksonville Banker Dead

E. S. Greenleaf, director in the Ayers National of Jacksonville and of the Whitehall National of Whitehall, is dead at the age of 72. He was a native of Maine, but most of his life was spent in Illinois. For many years he was an agent of the Wabash line and the St. Louis, Jacksonville, and Chicago railroads, now a part of the Alton system. He was interested in a number of business enterprises and served three terms as mayor of Jacksonville.

Bank Changes at Bloomington

C. C. Aldrich, who has served twenty-five years as vice-president of the State National of Bloomington, has resigned because of advancing years. The State Safe Deposit Company has been dissolved and the business of renting safety deposit boxes will be handled by the State National and the State Trust and Saving Bank.

James P. Hackett was elected president of the McLean County Bank, a position which he has nominally held for some time.

New Bank at Rock City

A permit to organize the Rock City State Bank of Rock City, near Freeport, has been issued by the state auditor. The permit was issued to Herman Boklof, A. A. Millenbrandt, Henry Graham, and others.

Changes in Treasurer's Office

State Treasurer Edward E. Mitchell has announced that Andrew Russel, of Jacksonville, retiring treasurer, would remain in the office as assistant treasurer. Henry C. Luerhs, of Kankakee, will be cashier and Frank L. Fiech will be warrant clerk. Edward C. Beck, of Jacksonville, assistant treasurer under Mr. Russel, will be inheritance tax clerk, a new position. J. A. Sullivan, of Carbondale, will be bookkeeper, Ira George, of Chicago, will be stenographer, and George P. Gardner, of Mendota, will be messenger. Treasurer Mitchell is cashier of the First National of Carbondale.

Illinois Notes

William Hazzard, assistant cashier of the Commercial German National of Peoria, and one of the prominent bankers of that city, has been added to the directorate of the institution.

The Farmers National of Pekin has elected F. E. Rupert president of the bank for another year, and upon the completion of this year Mr. Rupert will have served as president of the bank for twenty-five years.

The German-American National of Peoria, a "Roll of Honor" bank, has declared an annual dividend of ten per cent for the year 1910, besides adding large sums to the undivided profits account.

James Milligan, cashier of the Union Bank of Smithshire, near Monmouth, has been added to the directorate of the National Bank of Monmouth. The three national banks of Monmouth together with the Monmouth Trust and Savings Bank have total deposits of about three million dollars.

President Edmund J. James, of the University of Illinois, will speak before the Chicago Association of Commerce January 26th.

Deposits in Decatur banks have decreased $946,908 since January 1, 1910. The total deposits in Decatur now are $6,526,000. The holding of corn by farmers is given as the reason of the decrease.

Money Firmer

There is rather more firmness in the local money market this week. Bankers quote discount rates as steady at $4\frac{3}{4}$ to $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, with the majority of counter transactions at 5 per cent. Secured paper is $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 5 per cent and call loans 4 to $4\frac{1}{2}$. Bonds are fairly active and capital seems plentiful for the more popular 5 and 6 per cent issues.

Money, Banking and Finance from Chicago Viewpoint

Western bankers are viewing with extraordinary interest the absorption of American securities abroad. Notwithstanding the present easy condition of the local market this city has no money of consequence to spare for the large new bond issues made in the East. It is possible that a small proportion of the fifty million municipal issue in New York will find its way to Chicago, but it is thought that most of these bonds will go to London and Paris.

It is stated by local bankers that the Pennsylvania Railway Company also will market the greater part of its new issue in Europe. Both Paris and London investors are said to be ready for at least one hundred millions more of American securities. The two issues here referred to are the subject of much favorable comment. They are likely to be popular in the home market, but as money is worth more on this side than in Europe they are pretty sure to be disposed of abroad. Even with the present stagnation in the Chicago money market capital is finding employment at better figures. The Burnham and Karpen projects are represented by five per cent issues and others of equal merit are soon to appear.

France a Good Cash Market

Although money is unusually dear in London there is a good bond market there. Paris is still better. The French continue to lead all the rest of Europe in the promptness with which they can furnish cash for desirable securities. The investment buying of American bonds in that country has astonished the world in the last six months. It is noted, however, that the buying is critical.

France long ago won the admiration of the world by its financial ability and power. The people are frugal and sagacious and the nation accumulates capital. The per capita of currency there is about the same as in the United States, although France is only the size of one of our larger states. The nation has long enjoyed the benefits of an elastic currency and the government has a clear and direct supervisory control of financial matters.

The comfortable condition of monetary affairs in France during the stringency of last fall in the United States has led many to question the sufficiency of our volume of money, especially in view of the vast expansion of American trade. France has about the same area as the state of Minnesota. This country has thirty times as much territory, with a diversity of crops and other commercial interests sufficient to severely test its currency system every fall. There are times when the business of this country cannot be carried on without straining the credit of the banks.

Future of Money and Business

As the building program in this city continues to grow bankers get a new view of financial and trade prospects. The Insurance Exchange has really set the mark for real estate securities at 5 per cent. The range will be from 5 to 6 per cent on bonds of this class, several attractive issues bearing the outside rate having appeared this winter.

Indications this week are that the money market will go into a more active state before the winter is gone. It is the consensus of opinion in banking circles that the bottom has been struck and that money will work to a higher level by early spring. The mercantile trade is heavy enough to inspire the belief that the year will be pretty near normal in the general run of household necessities. Manufacturing has fallen off perhaps twenty-five per cent from the record of a year ago. This applies mainly to the heavier lines of goods, particularly steel rails and other articles pertaining to railroad construction. Cotton and wool have had active markets with firm quotations since the opening of the new year. Dry goods and grocery jobbers everywhere tell of a satisfactory trade. Taking all things together, Chicago bankers and merchants see much that is encouraging in the business outlook.

One of the most significant facts which have come to light this week is the decision of the steel corporation to resume operations in its Gary rail mill. Judge Gary states that there has been a sufficient increase in rail orders to justify the resumption of work at the mill. Not less than 2,000 idle mechanics will be restored to work.

There is a growing belief that the railroads will receive permission from the Interstate Commerce Commission to raise their freight rates and thereby augment their gross revenues sufficiently to compensate them for their greatly increased operating expenses.

Heavy Buying Hinted At

The unanimous determination of the larger steel manufacturers to maintain prices might seem to indicate heavy buying expected in the near future. But the demand has not shown any improvement yet.

Manufacturers say that a reduction at this time would in no way stimulate business. It is now said there may be another conference of the manufacturers in a few weeks, and in the meantime if there is more cutting of prices by some of the smaller independents consumers are likely to hold off until the market is on a more settled basis.

There is something doing in structural iron and steel right along. Manufacturers not only look for an active season but are daily receiving substantial orders from all the larger cities of the country.

Publication of a favorable statement on this country's exports of agricultural products has added to the cheerful feeling in financial circles. During December there were total shipments of $103,021,198, compared with $53,856,863 for the corresponding month of the Publication of the plans of the Pennsylvania Railroad to authorize the issuance of $100,000,000 more capital stock led to rumors that this financing was to be arranged in order to supply the road with funds needed to pay for additional stock in the Norfolk & Western which the Pennsylvania has bought. It was admitted in authoritative circles that the company bought a large amount of Norfolk & Western stock about eight months ago which, with its previous holdings, gave it a clear majority.

Farm Values are Firm

E. W. Wagner has five hundred special reports on farm values, covering 30 per cent of the middle and Southwestern grain belts and showing no signs of liquidation as the result of depreciation in coarse grain values or any other cause. Only three of fifty Illinois reports show declines in values as reflected by recent sales of land, among which are the following representative transactions (per acre):

Canton, $135 to $200; Sheldon, 175; Chenoa, $237.50; Meadows, $225; Jacksonville, $225.

Recent Iowa farm sales include the following: Fonda, $90 to $140; Grinnell, $150 to $225; Newton, $100 to $150. Sales have been made near Hartford, S. D., at $75 to $93, or 30 per cent advance in one year. Values in Champaign county, Ill., are steady.

Manhattan, Kan., reports "average $100, firm," and Joplin, Missouri, reports "no decline yet." Some parts of Ohio show signs of weakening a little, but values generally are steady. Springfield, Ohio, quotes $125, which is about the top. Values in Nebraska, Michigan and the Northeast seem to be steady.

"The reports indicate," says Mr. Wagner, "that good farm lands are still regarded as among the best investments, notwithstanding the advanced prices."

Demand is for Better Farming

How to attain better farming, how to interest capitalists in needed land development and how to keep young men and women in the country are problems that continue to interest people everywhere. This general interest is bound to have good results. A great deal of encouragement is found in a number of educational movements in the line of agriculture. Financiers and other leading men admit the need of making heavier exports and to accomplish this better farming is required.

E. C. Converse, better known as a banker and as one of the officers of the United States Steel Corporation than as a farmer, sent to an exhibition held in Boston last year specimens of apples raised upon his farm which is on the Connecticut border side of Westchester county, thirty miles from New York. In appearance the fruit was fully as attractive as that now brought to Eastern markets from Oregon and Washington. In addition, his fruit had a flavor not to be discovered in apples grown on the Pacific Coast. Yet five years ago the very orchards producing these apples consisted of scraggy trees, which yielded imperfect fruit, and were a part of desolated farms.

W. S. Hale, recognized throughout the United States as an authority on peach growing in a recent address delivered at New Haven, Conn., asserted that with careful cultivation, the peach crop of New England states would surpass peaches grown anywhere else in the world.

Some Practical Demonstration

If it is possible to demonstrate through co-operation between capital, brains and manual labor that the East is capable of securing harvests vastly in excess of those which farmers are now securing that demonstration will be made, and it will teach a lesson in modern or new agriculture of national importance.

It so happens at this time that striking proof of this purpose has been furnished from three independent sources. One proof is the recent organization of a corporation behind which stands the greatest railroad of New York, and some of the officers of that railroad in their personal capacity, which is to demonstrate, if possible, how well adapted the soil of New York is to the cultivation of some of the crops which have been in recent years in large measure harvested in the great states of the West. The second proof was made by Governor Dix when he intimated to his friends that he should endeavor, so far as lay in his power to influence agriculture in New York state that it may be developed within reasonable reach of its highest capacity. The third proof, which follows like an echo from the statements made by Governor Dix is the acknowledgement of the trustees of Columbia University of a gift of farming land which, with the buildings to be erected thereon, is to be devoted exclusively to the practical demonstration of the splendid possibilities of agriculture in the East.

Wheat Market Dull

It is thought the position of holders is improving in the wheat market, but trade has been lifeless and prices depressed this week. The May option holds on the dollar level. Exports continue fair and country deliveries are falling off. These facts in connection with winter damage to the new crop are looked on as aids to the bull element. A livelier market is anticipated toward the end of winter.

Missouri Date

The popular Missouri Bankers Association, W. F. Keyser, Sedalia, secretary, will hold its annual convention this year in Kansas City, on May 24th and 25th. This is one of the most largely attended of the state meetings, which is in part attributable to the early announcement of seasonable dates and good speakers. Illinois is close enough to this end of the big bridges to take a hint.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER

By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

The Wisconsin State Legislature is once more in active session and while there is much of interest to the state and manufacturing interests of Wisconsin to come before this session it is somewhat doubtful if there will be much to concern the banking interests. The State Banking Commissioner has said that some revision was needed in the present trust company laws but this proposed revision chiefly concerns that part of the law providing for the dissolution of such companies and the refunding by the state treasurer of the deposit.

Just what action will be taken in regard to the question of the segregation of savings deposits it is difficult to predict at so early a date but it is apparent that such a measure will meet with decided opposition on the part of bankers generally throughout the entire state.

May not Re-appoint Bergh

It is persistently rumored about the capitol that Bank Examiner M. C. Bergh will not be re-appointed by Governor McGovern. While Mr. Bergh was named for the position two months ago by former Governor Davidson, the appointment has not been confirmed by the senate and this gives Governor McGovern the right to make a new choice.

St. Paul Banker in Milwaukee

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank of Milwaukee held during the past week, arrangements were concluded with W. F. Myers, formerly first vice-president of the Capital National of St. Paul, whereby Mr. Myers is to be elected vice-president and managing officer of the bank at the annual meeting of the stockholders on Jan. 28th. He will enter upon his duties immediately.

Mr. Myers was born on Long Island, of Knickerbocker ancestry, prominent in the history of New York. He was educated at the Polytechnic School of Brooklyn, and entered a banking house on Wall Street, where he received his early training. After several years in the State Bank of Syracuse, N. Y., he carried on a successful banking business in southern Minnesota. For fifteen years he has been identified with the Capital National Bank of St. Paul, as first vice-president. Mr. Myers is a man of wide interests and experience in educational and philanthropic as well as business matters, having been treasurer of the Chamber of Commerce of St. Paul and the Society of Colonial Wars of Minnesota.

Mr. Myers is not wholly new to Wisconsin, having educated part of his family in this state. He was a relative of P. M. Myers, secretary of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway company and often visited in Milwaukee and is well known by bankers and business men of this city. In coming to Milwaukee he takes a large financial interest in the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank and is a man of substantial means.

At the same meeting of the stockholders Edwin C. Knoernschild, present assistant cashier will be made cashier to succeed Martin A. Graettinger, resigned. Mr. Knoernschild is of the younger generation and has been identified with the bank since its establishment. He is progressive and among business men and bankers of this city bears an enviable reputation. Mr. Knoernschild has had a splendid training in commercial lines and coupled with his banking experience makes him well fitted for his new position.

The Manitowoc Postal Savings Bank

The postal savings bank at Manitowoc has been in operation something over two weeks and while there has been no stampede there has prevailed a steady and increasing patronage. Deposits have averaged about $100 a day and about seventy accounts have been opened. Laboring men and working girls constitute the bulk of the depositors but there has been little patronage from the farmers. A great many have come to the bank, but finding that they would not be permitted to deposit more than $100 a month, have given the matter up entirely.

The beginning of many an account has been seen in the cards and stamps. These are bought by children and others in 5 and 10-cent lots and when a dollar's worth has been accumulated are exchanged for a certificate and an account opened. The school children are becoming interested but even this course has been somewhat of a disappointment to Postmaster Kress as it is not as large as expected.

elected second vice-president at the annual meeting of the stockholders recently, succeeding Charles E. Arnold, resigned. Mr. Wolf is succeeded as cashier by Lyman G. Bournique, who has been assistant cashier for a number of years. There was no other change in the list of officers nor in the board of directors. The business transacted at the meeting was purely routine and the reports presented by President L. J. Petit, showed the institution to be in a highly satisfactory condition.

Considering Two Prominent Sites

The new home of the First National and the First Trust & Savings Bank of Milwaukee may be located on the southwest corner of East Water and Mason streets, opposite the Kirby House. An officer of the bank says that various sites have been considered and that no deal has yet been closed. The property referred to is 100x160 feet and runs back to the river. It is valued at $250,000. Another plan said to have been considered is the acquisition of a long term lease on the Camp building site where the bank is at present located.

Trust Company Development

Trust companies have developed rapidly in Wisconsin during the past eight or ten years, which so nearly corresponds to the life of one of these institutions, the Wisconsin Trust Company, that the two facts may be fairly said to have some relation. One result of this rapid growth has been some misunderstanding of the actual relations of these concerns to Milwaukee and Wisconsin finance. For instance, a dispatch from Madison, published in a Milwaukee paper recently said that "they had progressed very largely in the banking enterprise," and that their trust business was negligible. The person who wrote it got his information from the report of the Commissioner of Banking, which is all right, and shows compliance with the provisions of the law by the trust companies, but none of the trust companies report trust business.

If this was done, the report of the Wisconsin Trust Company, alone, would aggregate more than the total amount reported now by all of the trust companies of the state. The Wisconsin Trust Company also leads in another branch of investment banking, the sale of bonds and securities, and the local career of its president, Oliver C. Fuller, is largely the contemporary history of this feature of Milwaukee finance. When he began the bond business in Milwaukee about 18 years ago, there was an occasional visiting bond salesman from Chicago, but the preference here was for real estate mortgages almost exclusively, and outside of the insurance companies, investors in bonds were few.

To-day a good authority places the aggregate bond sales by the Milwaukee dealers at $15,000,000 annually and the Wisconsin Trust Company is credited with selling at least one-half of this amount. Ten years ago the total resources of the local banks were $55,000,000. To-day they are almost twice that sum, and if the trust companies are included the growth in ten years is considerably over 100 per cent.

Davis to Head Racine Bank

According to authentic information Warren J. Davis, present cashier of the Manufacturers

National of Racine, is slated for the position of president at the next meeting of the board of directors to succeed Ernest J. Hueffner, resigned. Since the resignation of Mr. Hueffner from the presidency, which was also accompanied by the resignation of Byron B. Northrup, vice-president, there has been much speculation as to who would be the next executive head and Otis W. Johnson, president of the Fish Brothers Wagon Company, and one of the largest stockholders in the bank, was reported to be scheduled for this position. Just who the next cashier will be is a matter of conjecture at present, but that it will be someone who is not at present employed in the bank is almost assured.

The retirement of Mr. Hueffner and Mr. Northrup did not come as a great surprise to the public. Both men, while engaged in the banking business for a great many years, are getting along pretty well in life and are gradually getting away from business cares. Their desire to do this was evidenced in their resignations as tendered to the board of directors.

News about the State

The Crawford County Bank of Prairie du Chien reports an unusually good year with the surplus increased from $13,000 to $20,000 and a dividend of 10 per cent.

The Bank of Green Bay has declared the usual dividend and has increased the surplus fund $5,000, the capital and surplus now amounting to $30,000.

Charles Becker, Sr., father of Frank F. Becker, president of the First National of Kaukauna, died recently after a short illness.

The Farmers State Bank of Waupaca opened its doors for business January 9th.

The First National of Mondovi reports an increase of $30,000 in deposits during the past two months.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

First of the year interviews from St. Paul bankers give the inside of the Twin City situation as well as that in the Northwest as viewed by them. Briefly and condensed they are: E. H. Bailey, president First National—Outlook as encouraging as in January, 1910. With normal crops look for prosperous business season.

A. L. Alness, president Scandinavian-American—We have enjoyed excellent year. The Northwest held its own last year and the outlook for 1911 is promising.

G. H. Prince, vice-president Merchants National—General financial outlook for year is very fair. The money crop has been large. So much depends on this year crops that prediction would be hasty.

H. Von der Weyer, cashier National German-American—Indications are for average year of fair proportion. Business is recuperating from year of depression. The process will grow as year advances. Business will be as good as last year, possibly better.

J. L. Mitchell, president Capital National—Good year. Money easier than for some time. Outlook is promising.

L. H. Ickler, cashier American National—Nothing in evidence to cause worry or to indicate that the banks of Northwest will not do big business in 1911.

Trade Situation in Twin Cities

In its summary of the situation the Northwestern National Bank Review for the month says editorially:

In the Twin Cities, trade at the close of the year compared quite favorably with a year ago, but owing to the poor crop in the Northwest and more particularly in North Dakota, banks having a large country correspondence show smaller deposits than last year and have been called upon to an unusual extent for assistance by bankers in the affected territory. Local rates for some time have averaged from one-half to one per cent higher than in financial centers further East. A slight sagging tendency developed at the end of the year.

From a conservative viewpoint, we are entering upon the new year with much to encourage, perhaps not optimism, but a steady confidence. We have passed through a year which has been fairly profitable to properly conducted business enterprises. Extravagance in business and private life has been discouraged. Influenced by the uncertainty of the outcome of the important litigation referred to above, the tendency has been to produce a gradual liquidation and contraction of business to safe limits, which has brought about a condition that will not work injury by being continued indefinitely until doubtful elements have been cleared up. Business can then proceed gradually, enlarged by healthy, normal and regular growth, rather than by any sudden and violent expansion.

Ultimately, much good cannot fail to come out of the past year's experience in the Northwest. It has been a too common practice on the part of not only merchants and manufacturers but bankers and farmers to base their operations in the earlier part of the year on the assumption that the usual bountiful crop will be harvested. Without making proper allowance for the uncertainties of agriculture, which, of course, in the long run have always righted themselves, some have placed themselves in position where they have been more or less seriously inconvenienced through poor collections, and the lesson learned therefrom will not soon be forgotten and cannot fail, wherever experienced, to result in more conservative methods in the future; all of which will inure to the credit and standing of the splendid rich territory which looks to the Twin Cities as its financial center.

Minnesota Convention at Bemidji

Outside bankers who attend the Minnesota convention will get a breath of the Minnesota piney woods. The executive council decided on Bemidji, in the northern lake district, and for June 21st as the date. The committee met in St. Paul and was dined as guests of G. H. Prince of the Merchants National, D. S. Culver of the National German-American, and G. C. Power of the Second National.

The council indorsed the report of the agricultural committee which made points as follows: Something should be done to give educational opportunity to the masses and less to the classes; that the proposal for consolidating rural schools appears to be a good one; that a commission of three or five educators be appointed to examine exhaustively conditions in the state and report its findings to the legislature, and that industrial training in town and city schools be fostered.

Another breach of courtesy is his desertion of Illinois Slim and Iowa Shorty. Meanwhile Mr. Brown is so busy appearing against Dynamite Bill Shanks, Indiana Frank Loftus, Billy Forbes and Jimmy Mason at Brookings, S. D., that he has not been able to join the man hunt. Edens Visits Twin City Bankers

Hobnobbing with the governor, dining with the members of the executive council of the Minnesota Bankers Association, and inspecting the books of the supreme keeper of records and seal of Knights of Pythias, W. G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, was a busy man last week in the Twin Cities. To cap the climax he addressed an open installation of officers by three Pythian organizations. Edens followed the regular routine of his quarterly visits to Minneapolis on the Pythian errand, with Brig Young of Ada, O., except when it came time to go to a burlesque house matinee, he begged off to visit business acquaintances. Mr. Edens always begs off at that point, the Pythians say. Mr. Edens, as secretary of the agricultural and soil improvement committee of the I. B. A., paid particular attention to the report of Joseph Chapman's M. B. A. agricultural committee, and to the grilling of the governor by the executive councillors as to his attitude on the subject. He mailed from Minneapolis copies of the meeting report to all members of his committee.

"I was favorably impressed with the progress in Minnesota," said Mr. Edens, "and believe that the Illinois bankers, through the committee, will take steps to outline a program of work including the subject of agricultural or industrial training of the boys and girls in the rural districts as well as the cities, and a comprehensive investigation of the whole subject."

Want a Tax on City Bonds

Specific exemption of city bonds from taxation and elevation of the maximum interest rate from 4 per cent is special legislation which Minneapolis is considering. These changes would sell the bonds, it is thought. The former move is part of a plan for popular subscription for city bonds in the future. The treasurer's office is near that of the assessor, hence timidity of purchasers who fear taxation.

George to Speak on Farm Development

"How the Banker Can Aid in Farm Development" is the subject of a talk by Secretary G. D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association at a Wisconsin country life conference to be held February 15th and 16th at the University of Wisconsin.

Surprised at Supreme Court Decision

Bankers elevated their eyebrows when they heard the bank guaranty laws of Oklahoma, Nebraska and Kansas had been upheld as constitutional by the supreme court, after trial in the circuit court of appeals in St. Paul.

E. W. Decker, vice-president and manager of the Northwestern National, is quoted as saying: "I am more than surprised that this law has been held valid. It is the most pernicious piece of legislation ever enacted and we are to be congratulated that we have no such law in this state. 'Wildcat' banking is bound to spring up, while at the same time a sound, conservative banking institution is operated against."

Said F. A. Chamberlain, president of the Security National, "This bank guaranty law will be repealed in the near future by the very states which enacted it."

"It discounts practically every well managed bank and renders John Smith's country bank as safe as the most conservatively conducted institution."

"Furthermore, the state takes on itself a responsibility which, I feel, it is not called upon to assume. This law certainly can be compared to an ill wind which blows no one good."

Chapman to Speak at Fargo

Joseph Chapman, Jr., went this week to Fargo, N. D., to attend the twelfth annual meeting of the Tri-state Grain & Stock Growers Association, to speak on agricultural subjects. Mr. Chapman left immediately after his appointment as chairman of a committee to see that the old Minneapolis city hall is pulled down before the civic celebration in July. The appointment followed an incendiary speech by Mr. Chapman, which was supplemented by Judge M. B. Koon, vice-president of the Northwestern National in a call to form a mob and tear down the shack. Neither meant force should be used in fact, but moral suasion on the city council which refuses to be persuaded.

Security National Buys Improvement Bonds

Sale of $100,000 thirty-year permanent improvement bonds to the Security National Bank helped Minneapolis which was out of pocket. The Northwestern National and the First National are expected to take $200,000 more bonds together for the school fund. The banks abandoned the idea of getting one-year bonds to exchange later.

Bank Elections

William F. Olson, assistant cashier of the Union State Bank, has been made a director. At seventeen he became an employee of the Great Northern road. In 1906 he became clerk at the Union State, and is the only remaining officer or employee with the bank at the time.

Stockholders of the State Bank of Sherman, S. D., have made up the $2,692 shortage of W. A. Aune, trusted bookkeeper.

John Aird, manager of the Winnipeg branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, has been made assistant general manager at Toronto.

Officers of various Northwestern banks have been elected as follows: First National of Vermillion, S. D.—President, D. M. Inman; vice-president, M. D. Thompson; assistant vice-president, E. M. Hart; cashier, Carl Anderson.

First National, Mora, Minn.—President, G. H. Newbert; vice-president, J. C. Pope; cashier, V. W. Peterson; directors, G. H. Newbert, J. C. Pope, F. A. Cutler, D. R. Eaton, R. M. Pope.

Breckenridge, Minn.—President, J. R. Kelly; cashier, S. E. Hall; assistant cashier, C. L. Spink; directors, G. W. Burrows, Thomas Chizek, S. E. Hall, J. R. Kelly, J. W. Kelly. Mr. Hall has been cashier of the State Bank of Foxhome. J. H. Ehlert and J. W. Ehlert were not re-elected president and assistant cashier respectively.

Albert Lee State, Minn.—Cashier, A. F. Wohlluter; with his father, H. G. Wohlluter of La Crosse, he was elected director.

The First National, Vermillion National, State Bank of Irene, First National of Centerville, have been named depositories for Clay county, S. D.

Officers and directors have been re-elected by the Farmers' & Merchants' State at Stillwater, a suburb of St. Paul. The officers are as follows: President, C. A. Patchin, Springfield; vice-president, John Q. Mackintosh; cashier, W. E. Dickson.

Editorial Comment

Spirit of Modern Banking

Recent failures have started a discussion of the relationship of large banks to the public.

A statement was made in New York after the collapse of Robin that small depositors were in a sense forced to take their business to bankers of his class because it was not desired at the larger concerns. One of the baits held out by the Cosmopolitan in Chicago before it went into the hands of a receiver was an offer to let people start checking accounts with $25. This plan was based on the theory that a man of small means could not secure the advantages of banking facilities at the larger institutions. Prompt and emphatic denial has been given to all assertions of this kind.

Much misconception of the modern banking spirit prevails. Any person of good character is welcomed as a patron at the largest banks of Chicago and New York. Savings accounts may start with a dollar, and the young man or woman who goes to these banks with the merest trifle of a surplus saved from wages will not only get the benefit of banking facilities but will secure the friendly interest and advice of men of ability and high character who devote their time to this matter of stimulating the saving habit.

Nobody really wishes a checking account unless he has more than $25 in cash or securities, but no limit is fixed actually by bankers generally respecting the size of a patron's account. It depends largely on the nature of a person's business or his standing among his acquaintances. The intention of the modern banker is to be helpful to customers, little as well as big. It stands to reason, however, that a person who has only $25 with which to start an account should take his business to the savings department, where he will gain substantial interest.

No man is justified in taking his money to a bank of unknown standing. Least of all can he blame the large bankers for his move. It is the business of the modern banker to teach people to save and to help them to make good investments. All customers are treated courteously and receive the benefit of friendly interest as well as of experience and valuable facilities.

Inadequate Banking Laws

A lack of adequate banking legislation has been shown by several failures this winter. Reputable bankers everywhere are exasperated over developments which at first glance would seem to be impossible in this enlightened age. Our laws as they stand, or at least as they are enforced, do not give to depositors in banks of doubtful standing the protection to which they are entitled.

While the worst failures of recent days have happened in New York, no city or state is exempt from similar occurrences. There is a laxity in the statutes and at times in the manner of their enforcement. This is true of New York and Illinois, which states contain the two largest cities of the country and would naturally be expected to lead in the development of a better banking system than we now have. There is a lack of consistency in financial legislation which operates against the best interests of the nation.

It ought to be impossible for persons without good commercial standing to start banks and there should be speedier and more drastic punishment for those who use the money of depositors in speculation or any kind of private enterprise. Is it not a clear duty of congress and the state legislatures to guard the public against irresponsible bank management? On this point our law-making bodies are strangely remiss, and the fact is more painfully apparent in the great states of New York and Illinois than in some of the young frontier commonwealths.

In the city of Chicago the members of the clearing house have developed a system which scrutinizes financial business in a way that serves to detect weakness or irregularity either in banks or borrowers. But there is no law in the state which prevents such a course of procedure as was witnessed in the case of the Cosmopolitan Bank and several other private concerns which have gone out of existence. What the clearing house committee does is in the right direction, but it has no power to prevent irresponsible persons starting banks and defrauding innocent patrons. The legislature has such power and it ought to be alert in applying it.

Incidentally the efforts of Chicago bankers to place their profession on a higher plane and make up in an unofficial way for shortcomings of the law are receiving strong commendation from Eastern newspapers as well as from the local public who get some benefit from the protective methods which have been inaugurated.

Delay in Financial Legislation

In the belief that the short session is not a good time for financial legislation congress is frittering away the winter without attempting to give shape to any of the great reform measures which are so urgently needed. With singular fatuity the senate has given up most of its time since the first of December to the Lorimer case. The Lorimer investigation was carefully and thoroughly conducted by an able committee of senators and its report exonerating the Illinois leader should have been adopted, thus closing the incident.

Over and above all things else that this country expects of congress it needs financial and tariff legislation. It is reported this week that no tariff commission bill will be passed this winter, so that these two important subjects may be regarded as being sidetracked for the present.

The Aldrich Plan

Whatever one may think of the Aldrich plan, the plan of the National Monetary Commission, let it be said to its credit that it is fair, explicit and the result evidently of much investigation and thought. Every proper function of banking has been carefully weighed and what seemed best adopted. It shows progress, and the banker may acquire a liberal financial education by studying it and reading the reports of the specialists who contributed their talent to the subject. You will fail to find prejudice in it, or to see the Aldrich horns in it. Tell your congressman and senator just how you stand upon it and do it at once. The time is ripe to put an end to ambiguity and uncertainty.

Banking Legislation in Illinois

The attempt to place new banking legislation on the books in Illinois is serious. The Rapp bill, and one other to come, has, so it is said, solid democratic support and at one element in the republican ranks. It is bank guaranty on the plan recently upheld by the United States supreme court and admits national banks to its benefits as well as such private banks as will stand state supervision and inspection. It is too soon as yet to predict the action of the private banks which have been equal to every attempt upon their "liberties" for twenty years in Illinois. As the bill progresses it will have further attention. Most of the details of the Rapp bill are in this issue, in another column.

Start of the Postal Banks

With the opening of the federal government's postal banks in forty-eight states the experiment comes to a practical test. Public opinion so far has not greatly changed. The deposits are not large and it is doubtful if ever they will come up to the expectations of friends of the system.

It has been plain from the first that the postal banks would only attract those who have fear of banking institutions generally but who have faith in the government. People who have intelligence enough to post themselves as to the soundness of banks will not be disposed to accept the government's two per cent interest when the banks are paying three per cent.

So far as they operate, however, the tendency of the postal banks will be to bring into circulation money that otherwise would be hoarded. It is quite possible that they will hold in American trade channels a large aggregate of money that foreign-born workmen have been in the habit of sending abroad from year to year. In this way they ought to accomplish some good without hurting the savings banks of the United States.

Banking Opinion

In describing the general financial and trade situation as viewed in Chicago Vice-President Frank G. Nelson of Merchants Loan and Trust said to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER Wednesday:

The year just closed was a very satisfactory and profitable one for the banks. Funds were well employed during practically all of the year and excellent rates prevailed. The market for funds became weak about the middle of December and the new year so far has not shown any improvement. There is a distinct tendency to very low rates for the next few months. This condition, however, is not without its hopeful and better side.

There is no disguising the fact that trade conditions are slow and far from what merchants and manufacturers would like them, but this slackening up of business and the accumulation of money in the larger centers will soon bring on a very active bond market and eventually—possibly before the early summer, enable the railroads to sell some new securities and thus speedily bring about greatly improved conditions.

The business of the country follows very closely the fortunes of railroading. When the railroads are able to finance themselves and are not hampered to the point of petty and dangerous economy, they are sufficiently large purchasers of supplies of various kinds to make or unmake trade conditions in almost innumerable lines of business.

That the present easy financial condition will make a market for railroad securities is a very cheerful prospect, and its realization should go far toward making the last half of this year a very active and prosperous one for all industrial lines.

Increased activity in business will of course strengthen money rates and the bankers will not be without some participation in the prosperity that is to come in the late spring or early summer. The supreme court decisions that are due within the next few months, regardless of the nature of the decisions, cannot fail to help business along. Uncertainty and doubt are always stumbling blocks. While the immediate future will be one of lessened business activity, with a large supply of idle funds, it will in all probability be followed before the summer is here by a great revival in all lines. It is reasonable to hope that the last half of the year will give a good account of itself.

Woman to Run Postal Bank

The first manager of a postal savings bank in Oklahoma is a woman, Miss Margaret Ryan, postmistress at Guymon.

The postal savings bank was opened January 1st, according to schedule.

Logan Trust Heads Re-elected

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Logan Trust Company of Philadelphia the directors and officers were re-elected. They are as follows: Officers—Royland Comly, president; Hugh McIlvain, first vice-president; Walter H. Lippincott, second vice-president; William Bradway, treasurer. Directors—J. Gibson McIlvain, David L. Lukens, Charles M. Biddle, Frank H. Wood, Hugh McIlvain, Walter H. Lippincott, Charles A. Longstreth, Edmund Webster, Charles Major, E. Lawrence Fell, Rowland Comly, William Bradway, George M. Bunting, Walter Clothier, Alfred H. Lippincott.

Philadelphia Banks Declare Dividends

The Southwestern National, in addition to its regular semiannual dividend of 3 per cent added $10,000 to surplus. That fund now aggregates $150,000, undivided profits $12,781.

The directors of the Columbia Avenue Trust Company declared a regular semiannual dividend of 4 per cent, payable on demand.

The directors of the Textile National declared a semiannual dividend of 3 per cent, an increase of $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent over the former $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent rate. The dividend is payable January 15th to stock of record January 4th. Ten thousand dollars was added to surplus, making that account \$90,000.

Don't Hesitate

If there is a demand for a savings bank in your town and you have a good national or state bank behind you, don't hesitate. Of course it means paying interest on deposits but it probably will be a greater earner than your present bank. There are many instances to prove this. Besides some other fellow may do the trick.

After the Sentinel

Our warlike friend, up in Wisconsin, John Schuette of Manitowoc, goes after the Milwaukee Sentinel in his most graphic style, over its editorial on the supreme court decision upholding bank guaranty in Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska. Mr. Schuette writes to THE CHICAGO BANKER:—

The Sentinel, of Milwaukee, in its editorial under the caption, "Constitutional but Crazy," says, among other things:

(1.) "The decision of the national supreme court, sustaining the constitutionality of the Oklahoma bank deposit guaranty law, may be a feather in the cap of Mr. Bryan, but will be cold comfort for its few remaining friends."

Not at all! On the contrary, it is quite a warm comfort to millions, and especially to me. Only a few days ago I told the Free Press that a court decision finding the bank guaranty law unconstitutional would be a travesty on justice, and a farce. Now I am vindicated. And I am pleased for another reason. About a year ago, during a debate on this question, my opponent occupied his time citing court decisions against the guaranty law. Now that this powder is soaked, I would like to know what there is left to shoot with.

(2.) The Sentinel says: "Of course the court decision does not sustain the wisdom or merit of this crude attempt to prevent panics."

Let me remind the Sentinel that there was a time when our bank notes precipitated panics. After the government forced the banks to secure their notes we have had no more panics from that source. And we will have none from bank deposits after these are insured. Here is another proof that the insuring of deposits will prevent bank panics. The Wisconsin legislative committee, when seeking information on this subject, arrived at Oklahoma City on the very day the Columbia Bank and Trust Company suspended, and was taken in charge of by the banking board. Its doors were never closed, but the bank commissioner took charge and paid depositors as they appeared. The committee stayed there a week awaiting developments and this is what they say in their report to the governor:

"The closing of the bank caused no ruffle in the business world of Oklahoma City, the public was not excited, there was no run on any other bank, state or national. Depositors apparently had confidence that they would get their money. They acted in an orderly and well-behaved fashion. They drew their money out of the defunct bank and placed it in other banks. As a matter of fact, at the close of business on the day after the failure, the books of every other bank in the city showed an increase in deposits. While the lobby of the bank was quite well filled with depositors, there was no excitement or disorder and so far as the street was concerned, there was nothing to raise the suspicion on the part of any one that he was passing by a bank which had failed. No business interests in the city were disturbed, compromised or embarrassed in any manner."

What a contrast to the failure of a comparatively small national bank at Mineral Point, Wis., which failed about the same time. There it spread terror to the residents of Mineral Point and the surrounding country. The mother of the cashier fell dead from the shock, another person became insane, and the president was sent to prison. What great suffering it did create, and it still is in the agony of a receivership, and only a small percentage of the deposits, I believe, has been paid. Does this not prove that deposit insurance will prevent bank panics?

(3.) The Sentinel says that "the supreme court decision comes too late to do much, if any, practical harm." Yes, if it had come earlier there might not have been a national bank left in Oklahoma. Ninety national banks had been converted into state banks, and others were preparing to surrender their national charters, or avail themselves of the state bank guaranty when they were stopped by the courts.

(4.) The Sentinel says that "sound and conservatively conducted banks resent the hardship of being compelled to put up money to offset the recklessness, or rascality, or incompetence, of the other kind of banks."

Let me remind the Sentinel that the Chicago clearing house, composed of sound, conservative banks, did just what the Sentinel says banks will not do. These banks, rather than allow the insolvent Walsh banks to close their doors, took over the assets of the Walsh banks and guaranteed the deposits. Who knows if this had not been done, whether a far-reaching and disastrous panic might not have been precipitated. This sacrifice will be a hardship to the few banks who took hold of the situation, while if it had been distributed among many, the effect would have been infinitesimal. This again proves the efficacy of mutual deposit insurance.

(5.) "Why should the conservative and scrupulous banker A be compelled to contribute to a fund whose effect is to establish the credit of unscrupulous banker B, and thus enable him to lure business with the baits of high interest, easy banking favors, etc.?"

This is the old worn out argument. Why do we insure against fire and other possible losses when we know that the premium we pay may go to pay for the rascality, recklessness, or misfortune of others? Would any one, because of this, rather be without insurance and risk his all?

(6.) The Sentinel makes it appear that the Oklahoma school of finance has been going down hill, is petering out, and says that "after the Columbia Bank and Trust Company failure the exodus of depositors from the state banks began."

Now the facts are just the contrary. Any one who keeps in touch with the Oklahoma financial affairs must admit that its banking laws are more stringent than in most other states, for the natural reason that every banker, being directly interested in safe banking, takes a more active interest in having them made so, than do bankers in most of our other states. For instance, to prevent reckless banking, the law gives power to the bank commissioner to refuse a charter to disreputable parties, also to limit the interest rate to be paid on deposits. It is but natural that under a deposit insurance system laws will be made more severe.

The first bank that failed under the guaranty law was not closed at all, but was operated by the bank commissioner, who paid depositors on demand, and all within ten days. Then it was said by some: Wait until a big bank fails. And as if to prove that this would also stand the test, the Columbia Bank and Trust Company, one of the largest banks, was found to be insolvent. The bank commissioner took charge of the bank, paid depositors, and collected in the usual way, as if nothing had happened. The entire liquidation expense did not amount to $4,000. The same service, in the case of a national bank, would have cost $150,000, being 5 per cent of the amount liquidated.

The Sentinel says that after the bank failed the exodus of depositors from the state banks began. Did it? Not at all. Just the contrary. The deposits in the state banks, from that time until January 1st, increased by $5,000,000.

The state banks have drawn over one-third of the deposits from the national banks, and practically all the people regard the guaranty of deposits as a blessing.

St. Louis Bank Elections

One St. Louis bank gets a new president and two others get new cashiers as the result of elections of officers. All of the national banks of the city except one have held their annual stockholders' meetings and several state banks held meetings.

Changes in the directorates of the big banks were few. The most important was the election of August A. Busch as a director in the Third National, which increased its board to fifteen members. Mr. Busch went on the board of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company a year ago and resigned shortly after. The Third National is the only bank board of which he is now a member. His father, Adolphus Busch, is also a director in the Third National.

The Grand Avenue Bank elected George W. Clarkson as its new president. He succeeds E. E. Magill, who became president when F. A. Drew, the president, died a few months ago. Mr. Clarkson, 35 years old, is the youngest bank president in St. Louis. He was put on the bank's board three months ago, having removed to St. Louis from Arcadia, Mo.

The changes forecasted at the Boatmen's Bank came when the board promoted William H. Thomson from cashier to vice-president and E. M. Hubbard from assistant cashier to cashier and elected C. R. Laws second assistant cashier. Mr. Thomson has the longest service with the bank of any of its officers and his record has seldom been equaled among St. Louis banks. He was cashier forty-four years. Mr. Hubbard has been with the bank twenty-seven years. He was a discount clerk before being made an assistant cashier. The officers re-elected are: Edwards Whitaker, president; Murray Carleton, vice-president; Edgar L. Taylor, assistant cashier.

The State National Bank elected H. L. Stadler as cashier to succeed Logan Tompkins, who died. He has been with the bank twenty-six years, working up from messenger to teller, and five years ago to assistant cashier.

Jacob Berger was elected a vice-president of the Central National Bank. He came to the bank from the City National when the latter was absorbed by the Central National recently. He was not placed on the board, which remains unchanged.

W. L. McDonald, who has been a vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce since he left the Commonwealth Trust Company, was elected to its board to a place made vacant by the death of Benjamin Eiseman. This was the only change.

J. R. Cooke, an assistant cashier, was elected to the board of the Third National, along with August A. Busch. At the election of officers, which followed the stockholders' meeting, E. C. Stuart was made a new assistant cashier. He has been on the bank's staff about a year, having come from Washington, Mo., where he was cashier of the First National.

Citizens Bank, Alhambra (Cal.) will increase its capital from $25,000 to $75,000. After the increase in capital is perfected a branch will probably be opened in West Alhambra. A national charter has been applied for, and a site for a building has been secured at the corner of First and Main.

The South Bend National, the oldest banking institution in this city, has obtained a renewal of its charter, and is now entering on the forty-first year of its existence. The bank has paid out $397,500 in dividends in forty years, and has $115,000 in undivided profits, making the total net earnings $512,500.

Thomas H. Brewer, vice-president of the Exchange National of Spokane and superintendent of the Sunday school of Westminster Congregational Church, presented $161 to the Children's Home on Christmas as contributions by the pupils of the school.

Chicago Chapter

After a lull in activities occasioned by the holidays Chicago Chapter resumed operations January 10th with a smoker and entertainment. This feature brought out a goodly number of members who enjoyed the "smokes" and the numbers furnished by the committee.

Ex-President Brady reeled off a number of good jokes and a big boost for the chapter. Craig B. Hazlewood, now an officer of the Union Trust Company, gave a short testimonial on the wonderful results of institute activity, the key note of which was "Not more men in the chapter, but more men in the chapter work."

Henry Koefoot of the First National stirred up the crowd with a potpourri of rag-time selections on the piano. Louis Bock of the First National and Norman Rose of the Central Trust Company rendered a number of pleasing vocal solos. Both are possessors of very good voices and were well received.

Roy Weed, a German dialect comedian wound up the program with a bit of vaudeville which sent the boys home in the best of humor.

The debate society held a lively little session in the chapter rooms on the night of Tuesday, January 17th. The subject of debate was "Resolved, that the capitalization of state banks be graded according to the amount of deposits and location rather than by population as at present." Messrs. Ashley and Coleman of the Corn Exchange National and the Union Trust Company respectively presented the affirmative side of the proposition. They were opposed by Messrs. McNeil and Curto of the Glaser Savings Bank. The arguments put up by the debaters were splendid and showed considerable research and study. The judges were unable to give a decision, so well matched were the teams. Following the debate a lively half hour of parliamentary practice was indulged in which was at the same time uproariously humorous and instructive. The chapter possesses amongst its membership young parliamentarians who could easily put to shame some of the older and more experienced men of the parent association. It is in this respect, more so than in any other, that the debate society is an essential to a first-class bankman's "kit of tools." He will need it sooner or later and the experience is invaluable.

The annual banquet of the chapter will be held Saturday evening, January 28th, at 6 o'clock in the gold room of the Congress Hotel. We believe that the list of speakers is an ideal one. The Honorable Francis W. Walker will speak on "City Government." Mr. Walker is one of Chicago's most prominent attorneys. Back in the early 80s he was an assistant state's attorney, and as such prosecuted the Anarchists implicated in the Haymarket Square riot. He also assisted in the prosecution of the famous "boodle" cases of that time.

Chas. A. Alden will speak on "Modern Patriotism." Mr. Alden is assistant manager of the Western circulation office of the Ladies' Home Journal and Saturday Evening Post. He is an orator of eloquence and power, and his address is certain to be interesting. Speaking of Mr. Alden's ability as a speaker Elbert Hubbard says: "It is very seldom that one hears a speaker with the power, presence, and grace of Mr. Alden. He is eloquent, persuasive, bold yet kindly."

The third speaker is Francis T. Simmons, who will address the assemblage on "Chicago in the Abstract." Mr. Simmons is one of Chicago's foremost citizens. He is an ex-president of the Chicago Association of Commerce and at present a member of the executive board of that body. He is president of the Lincoln Park Board. His subject is a wide one and gives him plenty of latitude. His knowledge of Chicago is comprehensive, and his talk will be entertaining and instructive.

The Harmony Trio will amuse with songs, jokes, music and a little vaudeville.

A large representation is going to be present and an enjoyable evening will be spent. All communications regarding the banquet should be addressed to E. T. Gillmeister, secretary, care of the Western Trust and Savings Bank.

Bank Legislation at Springfield

Springfield, Ill., January 18.—Quite a stir has been apparent since it became known that banking legislation is to be attempted this session. Bank guaranty is first to bat and bank supervision over all forms of banking, not national, is to follow. The guaranty bill was introduced in the house yesterday by John M. Rapp of Fairfield.

The measure, which is almost identical with the law in operation in Oklahoma, provides for the establishment of a state banking board and the collection of an assessment of 1 per cent of average daily deposits upon all state banks and trust companies. The assessment is to form a guaranty fund.

When a bank under the act become insolvent and cannot pay all obligations, depositors are paid out of the guaranty fund, and if it is not large enough an extra assessment may be levied upon the solvent banks. Upon state banks and trust companies the bill is mandatory, while upon national banks and private banking institutions it is optional. The latter may come under the jurisdiction of the bank board on their own volition.

A digest of the provisions of the bill follows:

A state banking board, composed of the governor, state auditor and state treasurer, shall supervise and manage the depositors' guaranty fund.

The board shall levy an assessment against the capital stock of 1 per cent of the banks' average daily deposits, less deposits of federal and state funds, upon every bank and trust company organized under the laws of Illinois.

Assessments shall be collected upon call of the board.

If the fund becomes depleted, the board shall keep it up to 1 per cent of the total deposits by levying a special assessment.

Banks and trust companies hereafter organized other than through consolidations shall pay into the fund 3 per cent of the amount of their capital stock when they open for business, which shall constitute a credit fund.

Any national bank in Illinois approved by the state banking board may voluntarily come under the act and contribute to the fund.

If a federal guaranty act is passed the national banks may withdraw and get back 90 per cent of the unused assessments they have paid.

Any private bank may voluntarily come under the act by consenting to become subject to all the laws of the state with reference to bank supervision and examination and by paying the 1 per cent assessment.

When any bank, trust company or private banking institution under the banking board becomes insolvent, or forfeits its charter, or whenever the state auditor shall become satisfied of the insolvency of any such bank or trust company, he may take possession and proceed to wind up affairs.

If the state auditor takes possession the depositors shall be paid in full.

The banking board shall issue certificates to all complying with the act, and such certificates shall be conspicuously displayed.

Insolvent banks may be reopened after reserves, credits and funds are repaired and after all advances from the guaranty fund have been repaid.

Tacoma Chapter

During the month of December the chapter Board of Governors met with the Advisory Board to try and solve the problem of bringing out more members at the regular meetings and especially to the lectures on economics. After giving the question an afternoon's threshing out it was decided that the regular meeting each month should be taken charge of by one of the banks and be known by that bank's name.

In accordance with the above plan the January meeting, held on the evening of the fifth, was designated as The Bank of California evening. S. M. Jackson, manager, was in charge.

After welcoming the assembled clerks, which very properly could be called a crowd, Mr. Jackson spoke on the subject of "Foreign Exchange." His remarks were instructive and highly interesting, showing much time had been given to the subject.

The chapter was most fortunate in having present Clinton A. Snowden, at one time proprietor of the Chicago Times. Mr. Snowden recently completed a history of the state of Washington consisting of several volumes, and is one of the foremost literary men in the state. He took as his topic "Success" deftly weaving fact and story into a discourse, the end of which came much too soon from the audience's point of view.

The negotiable instruments act was briefly discussed by attorney Walter Loveday, who made many points plain and awoke a desire on the part of the bank men present to become more conversant with this important act.

Tacoma chapter hopes to have both Mr. Snowden and Mr. Loveday present at some future time to again benefit by their personality and remarks.

Last on the program were a Burroughs and a mental addition contest, prizes for which were awarded by Mr. Jackson. In the Burroughs contest A. Willison finished first, time 3:33; A. Geiger, second, time, 3:39.

Mr. Boccheck, of the National Bank of Commerce, won first prize in the mental addition contest, time 1:31, while second place fell to C. A. Craft of the same bank.

The meeting as a whole was one of the best ever held by the local chapter and more of the same tone are hoped for.

The Commercial National, First National, German-American and the Bank of Wisconsin all re-elected their old officers and directors.

The Aldrich Plan

Complete outline of a new banking system given out by Senator Aldrich before his enforced departure for a southern health resort. Not a central bank, but a comprehensive, detailed plan

Washington, D. C., January 17.—Senator Nelson W. Aldrich's long awaited "plan for the revision of the national banking legislation" was made public to-day. It does not contemplate the establishment of a central bank and it is so far from what many have expected Mr. Aldrich to propose that to those who have not been in his confidence it may come as a surprise.

The plan was submitted to the national monetary commission, but Senator Aldrich was not present. There was a suggestion almost of the tragic in the fact that when the hour came for the formal promulgation of what the senator is known to regard as the crowning constructive effort of his life, he was hundreds of miles away, speeding to the southland on a compulsory search for health. His communication was presented to the commission by the vice-chairman, Representative Vreeland of New York.

Opposed to Central Bank

Far from recommending the establishment of a central bank, Mr. Aldrich expressly disclaimed belief in it as calculated to meet the needs of the situation. In his letter of transmittal he says:

"While we have found much that is admirable in the operation of the various government banks of Europe, none of them is applicable to our needs here. The good results which they obtain can, I believe, be reached without the creation of such a central bank. I feel that the plan which is proposed reaches those results without being open to the objections which may well be brought against such an institution."

What Mr. Aldrich does propose is the establishment of the "Reserve Association of America," representing what might be called a federation of local associations formed by national banks. Those in the confidence of Mr. Aldrich drew special attention to the pains which they said he had taken to provide against control of the association by anybody. On this point he

Chief Provisions of Aldrich Reserve Association Plan

Local organizations of representatives of banks, formed by not fewer than ten banks, each bank holding stock in the association in proportion to its capital.

Directors elected by these to the board of "branch" associations, one branch for each of fifteen financial districts into which the United States would be divided. Each "branch" board would include a certain proportion of men not bankers, but representing industrial, agricultural, commercial and other interests.

"Branches" would elect the reserve association directors, forty-five in all, among whom must also be a proportion of men representing interests other than banks. There would be six ex officio members of this board—the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of commerce and labor, the comptroller of the currency and the governor and two deputy governors of the association.

The governor and deputy governor of the association would be appointed by the president of the United States and be removable by him for cause.

The association would be the principal fiscal agent and depository of the government and would fix from time to time the rate of exchange or discount. Eventually its notes would replace those of the national banks. Prime commercial paper, passing up from the banks through the local associations and branches, as well as bonds of the government, could be used as a basis for currency issue.

Two new classes of national banks or departments of banks, to receive savings and make loans on real estate and to be in effect national trust companies.

says that he believes the association, organized as he proposes, could not be "controlled by ambitious monetary interests or dominated by political influence."

To Meet Modern Demands

Mr. Aldrich prefaces his plan with an introduction in the course of which he says it has been his aim "to suggest changes in the national banking act which will make it responsive to the demands of modern business."

"If I am right in believing that the present law has become obsolete—and of this there can be no doubt—there is, then, no room for argument in regard to the necessity for modernizing the law," he adds. "Assuming such to be the case, it must be our aim to accomplish this result with as little disarrangement as possible. It should be our aim to liberalize the present national banking act and to add to it such features as are deemed essential, rather than to formulate any plan which will fundamentally change our present system."

"In the light of our experience it is obvious that one of the principal needs is to find some method for the unification of our present banking institutions into one comprehensive system. In other countries we have found that reserves are concentrated and used freely in any direction where needed. Under our faulty system reserves are so scattered as to be unavailable in time of trouble for purposes of assistance or of defense."

Sees Two Requirements Met

"If we can so amend the present national banking act as to permit the formation of an association of all the banks of the country to meet these needs we shall have gone a long way toward solving the problem which is before us. If, then, in addition, we provide a more scientific basis for bank note circulation, so that the volume of circulation will be responsive to the needs of business, we shall, I believe, have met the two main requirements of a satisfactory solution. In addition to that, if we can aid in creating a discount market in this country similar to the discount markets in Europe, so that the most liquid portion of our bank funds will not of necessity be forced to such a large degree as at present into the making of call loans upon stock exchange collateral, but will instead be available for the needs of commercial business, we shall have so broadened our banking methods as to bring incalculable benefit to the commercial life of the country. I believe that the conclusions which I present herewith meet those conditions."

To be Principal Fiscal Agent

It is proposed to charter the Reserve Association of America, which will be the principal fiscal agent of the government of the United States. The authorized capital of the reserve association shall be approximately $300,000,000. The length of its charter shall be fifty years. The head office of the association shall be in Washington, D. C.

The country shall be divided into fifteen districts and a branch of the reserve association shall be in each district. The reserve association and its branches shall be exempt from state and local taxation, except in respect to taxes on real estate owned by them.

Only national banks of the classes provided may subscribe to the capital stock of the reserve association. A national bank having a minimum capital of at least $25,000 may subscribe to an amount of capital stock of the reserve association equal to 25 per cent of the stock of the subscribing national bank, and not less, and each of such subscribing banks shall become a member of a local association. Fifty per cent of the subscriptions to the capital stock of the reserve association shall be called in cash; the balance of the subscriptions will remain a liability of the stockholders subject to call.

Stock Out of Private Hands

Shares of the capital stock of the reserve association will not be transferable and in no circumstances may they be owned by any corporation other than the subscribing national bank, or by any individual, nor may they be owned by any national bank in any other amount than in the proportion provided. If a national bank increases its capital after it once becomes a subscriber to the stock of the reserve association the national bank shall subscribe for an additional amount of the capital stock in the reserve association equal to 20 per cent of the national bank's increase of capital, paying therefor its then book value, but only one-half of this additional subscription will be called in cash. If a national bank which is a holder of the capital stock of the reserve association, decreases its capital, it shall surrender a proportionate amount of its holdings of the capital stock of the reserve association, or if a national bank goes into liquidation, it shall surrender all of its holdings of the capital stock of the reserve association. The capital of the reserve association so surrendered shall be canceled and the national bank thus shall receive in payment therefor a sum equal to the book value as shown on the balance sheet of the reserve association of the stock so surrendered.

For Distributing the Earnings

Earnings of the reserve association shall be distributed in the following manner: After the payment of all expenses and taxes the stockholders shall receive 4 per cent. Further earnings shall be divided, one-half to go to the surplus of the reserve association until that surplus shall amount to 20 per cent of the paid in capital; one-fourth to go to the government of the United States and one-fourth to the stockholders; but when the stockholders' dividends shall reach 5 per cent they shall receive no additional dividend distribution. After the stockholders receive 5 per cent the earnings shall be divided, one-half to be added to the surplus of the reserve association and one-half to go to the government. After the stockholders receive 5 per cent a year and the surplus of the reserve association amounts to 20 per cent of the paid in capital all excess earnings shall go to the government. The minimum dividends to the stockholders shall be cumulative.

To Form Local Associations

All subscribing banks shall be formed into associations of national banks, to be designated as local associations. Every local association shall be composed of not fewer than ten banks, and the combined capital and surplus of the members of each local association shall aggregate not less than $5,000,000.

All the local associations shall be grouped into fifteen divisions, to be called districts. The territory in the local associations shall be apportioned so that every national bank will be within the boundaries of a local association. Every subscribing national bank shall become a member of the local association of the territory in which it is situated.

Provisions for Directors

Each local association shall elect annually a board of directors in the following manner: The number of the directors may be determined by the by-laws of the local associations. Three-fifths of that number shall be elected by ballot cast by the representatives of the banks that are members of the local association, each bank having one representative, and each representative one vote, without reference to the size of the bank. Two-fifths of the whole number of directors of the local association shall be elected by the same representatives of the several banks that are members of the association, but in voting for these additional directors each representative shall be entitled to as many votes as the bank which he represents holds shares in the reserve association. At such elections there shall be no proxies. The authorized representatives of a bank must be the president, the vice-president, or the cashier of the bank he represents.

Directors for Each Branch

tions shall be grouped into fifteen divisions, and each of these divisions shall be designated as a district. There shall be in each district a branch of the reserve association. Each of the fifteen branches of the reserve association shall have a board of directors and those directors shall be elected in the following manner:

The board of directors of each local association shall elect by ballot one member of the board of directors of the branch of the reserve association. In this manner there will be elected as many directors of the branch of the reserve association as there may be local associations in the district in which that branch of the reserve association is located. In addition to that number there shall be elected a number of the directors equal to two-thirds of the number of local associations in the district wherein the branch is situated. Such additional directors shall be elected in the following manner:

There shall be chosen by the banks composing each local association a voting representative or proxy holder. In choosing such voting representative each bank shall be entitled to as many votes as it holds shares in the reserve association. The voting representatives of the several local associations which form a district shall then meet at the office of the branch and elect an additional number of directors of the branch equal to two-thirds of the number elected directly by the local associations—that is, equal to two-thirds of the number of local associations composing the district. Each voting representative at such election shall have a number of votes equal to the number of shares in the reserve association held by all the banks composing the local association which he represents.

Business Interests Included

The first business of the board of the branch as thus constituted shall be to add to its numbers by the election of an additional number of directors equal to one-third the number of local associations situated in the district. Such additional directors shall fairly represent the industrial, commercial, agricultural, and other interests of the district and shall not be officers of banks. Directors of banks shall not be considered as officers. The manager of the branch shall be ex officio a member of the board of directors of the branch and shall be chairman of the board.

The board of directors of a branch of the reserve association will thus be composed of:

1. A group of directors equal in number to the number of local associations composing the district, and this group shall be elected by the directors of the local association, each director having one vote.

2. A group of directors equal to two-thirds of the foregoing group and elected by stock representation.

3. A group of directors equal in number to one-third of the first group, representing the industrial, commercial, agricultural, and other interests of the district and elected by the votes of the first two groups, each director thus voting having one vote.

4. The manager of a branch shall be ex officio a member of the board of directors of the branch and shall be chairman of the board.

All the members of the board of directors of the branch, except the ex officio member, shall, at the first meeting of the board, be classified into three classes, and the terms of office of these three classes shall be respectively, one, two and three years. Thereafter members of the board shall be elected for a term of three years.

Forty-five Directors is Plan

The board of the reserve association shall consist of forty-five directors, and it shall be composed in the following manner:

1. Six ex officio members—the governor of the reserve association, who shall be chairman of the board; two deputy governors of the reserve association, the secretary of the treasury, and the secretary of commerce and labor and the comptroller of the currency.

2. Fifteen directors to be elected, one by the board of directors of each branch of the reserve association. They shall be elected by ballot, each member of the branch board having one vote.

3. Twelve directors who shall be elected by voting representatives, one representing the banks embraced in the district. Each voting representative shall cast a number of votes equal to the number of shares in the reserve association held by all the banks in the district which he represents.

4. The board as thus constituted shall select twelve additional members, who shall fairly represent the industrial, commercial, agricultural and other interests of the country and who shall not be officers of banks. Directors of banks shall not be considered as officers.

Three Years Directors' Term

At the first meeting of the board all except the ex officio members shall be classified into three classes and the terms of office of these three classes shall be respectively one, two and three years. Thereafter members of the board shall be elected for a term of three years.

No member of any national or state legislative body shall be a director of the reserve association or of any of the branches or of any local association.

The directors of the reserve association shall annually elect an executive committee and such other committees as the by-laws of the reserve association may provide. The executive committee shall consist of nine members, of which the governor of the reserve association shall be ex officio chairman and the two deputies and the comptroller of the currency, ex officio members. The executive committee shall have all the authority which is vested in the board of directors, except such as may be specifically delegated by the board to other committees or to the executive officers.

For Board of Supervision

There shall be a board of supervision elected by the board of directors among its number, of which the secretary of the treasury shall be ex officio chairman.

The executive officers of the reserve association shall consist of a governor, two deputy governors, a secretary and such subordinate officers as may be provided by the by-laws. The governor and the deputy governors shall be selected by the president of the United States from a list submitted by the board of directors. The governor shall be subject to removal by the president of the United States for cause. The term of office of the deputies shall be seven years, but the two deputies first appointed shall be for terms of four and seven years respectively. In the absence of the governor or his inability to act, the deputy who is senior in point of service shall act as governor.

Each branch shall have a manager and a deputy manager. They shall be appointed by the governor of the reserve association, with the approval of the executive committee. The powers and duties of the manager and deputy manager and of the various committees of the branches shall be prescribed by the by-laws of the reserve association.

To Guarantee Paper at Home

Any member of a local association may apply to that local association for a guaranty of the commercial paper which it desires to re-discount at the branch of the reserve association in its district. Any such bank receiving a guaranty from a local association shall pay a commission to the local association, to be fixed from time to time by the board of directors of that local association. The guaranty of the members of the local association, in the event of loss, shall be met by the members of the local association in proportion to the ratio which their capital and surplus bears to the aggregate capital and surplus of the local association, and the commission received for such guaranty, after the payment of losses and expenses, shall be distributed among the banks of the local association in the same proportion. A local association shall have authority to require additional security from any bank offering paper for guaranty, or may decline to grant the application.

The total amount of guaranties by a local association to the reserve association shall not at any time exceed the aggregate capital and surplus of the banks forming the guaranteeing association.

Privileges, for All Banks

All of the privileges and advantages of the reserve association shall be equitably extended to every national bank of any of the classes herein defined who shall subscribe to its proportions of the stock of the reserve association and shall otherwise conform to the requirements of this act.

The government of the United States and those national banks owning stock in the reserve association shall be the sole depositors in the reserve association. All domestic transactions of the reserve association shall be confined to the government and the subscribing banks, with the exception of the purchase or sale of government or state securities or securities of foreign countries, or of gold coin or bullion.

Government to Deposit Funds

The government of the United States shall deposit its cash balance with the reserve association and thereafter all receipts of the government shall be deposited with the reserve association, or, when necessary, with such national banks as the government may designate for that purpose in cities where there is no branch of the reserve association. All disbursements by the government shall be made through the reserve association.

The reserve association shall pay no interest on deposits.

The reserve may rediscount notes and bills of exchange arising out of commercial transactions, for and with the indorsement of any bank having deposit with it. Such notes and bills must have a maturity of not more than twenty-eight days and must have been made at least thirty days prior to the rate of rediscount. The amount so rediscounted shall in no case exceed the capital of the bank applying for the rediscount. The aggregate of such notes and bills bearing the signature or indorsement of any one person, company, corporation or firm, rediscounted for any one bank, shall at no time exceed 10 per cent of the capital and surplus of said bank.

The reserve association may also rediscount for any depositing bank notes and bills of exchange arising out of commercial transactions having more than twenty-eight days but not exceeding four months to run, but in such cases the paper must be guaranteed by the local association of which the bank asking for the rediscount is a member.

Rules for Assisting Banks

Whenever, in the opinion of the governor of the reserve association, the public interests so require, such opinion to be concurred in by the executive committee of the reserve association and to have the definite approval of the secretary of the treasury, the reserve association may discount the direct obligation of a depositing bank, indorsed by its local association, provided that the indorsement of the local association shall be fully secured by the pledge and deposit with it of satisfactory securities, which shall be held by the local association for account of the reserve association; but in no such case shall the amount loaned by the reserve association exceed two-thirds of the actual value of the securities so pledged.

The rate of discount of the reserve association, which shall be uniform throughout the United States, shall be fixed from time to time by the executive committee and duly published.

May Purchase Acceptances

Whenever its own condition and the general financial conditions warrant such investment the reserve association may purchase to a limited amount from a depositing bank acceptances of banks or houses of unquestioned financial responsibility. Such acceptances must arise from commercial transactions and have a maturity not exceeding ninety days, and must be of a character generally known in the market as prime bills. Such acceptances shall also bear the indorsement of the depositing bank selling the same, which indorsement must be other than that of the acceptor.

The reserve association may invest in United States bonds and in short term obligations—that is, obligations having not more than one year to run—of the United States, or of any state, or of certain foreign governments to be named in the act.

The reserve association shall have power at home and abroad to deal in gold coin or bullion, to grant loans thereon and to contract for loans of gold coin or bullion, giving, when necessary, acceptable security for their repayment.

The reserve association shall have power to purchase from its depositors and to sell, with or without its indorsement, checks or bills of exchange payable in England, France or Germany, and in such other foreign countries as the board of the reserve association may decide. These bills of exchange must arise from commercial transactions and be of a maturity not exceeding ninety days and shall bear the signatures of at least three responsible parties, of which the last one shall be that of a depositing bank.

May Open its Accounts Abroad

The reserve association shall have power to open and maintain banking accounts in foreign countries and to establish agencies in foreign countries for the purpose of purchasing, selling and collecting foreign bills of exchange, and it shall have authority to buy and sell, through such agencies, prime foreign bills of exchange arising from commercial transactions, running for a period not exceeding ninety days and bearing the signatures of two or more responsible parties.

Clause for Transferring Accounts

It shall be the duty of the reserve association or any of its branches, upon request, to transfer any part of the deposit balance of any national bank having an account with it to the credit of any other bank having an account with the reserve association. If a deposit balance is transferred from the books of one branch of the reserve association to the books of another branch, it may be done by mail or telegraph upon terms to be fixed from time to time by the executive committee.

In addition to the rights now conferred by law, national banks shall be authorized to accept commercial paper drawn upon them having not more than ninety days to run, properly secured and arising out of commercial transactions. The amount of such acceptances shall not exceed one-half the capital and surplus of the accepting bank.

National banks shall not have authority to establish branches except in the cities or towns in which they are situated.

The organization of banks to conduct business in foreign countries shall be authorized. The stock of such banks may be held by national banks. The bank so organized may have an office in the United States, but shall not compete with national banks for domestic business not necessarily related to the business being done in foreign countries.

New Classes of National Banks

There shall be established a new class of national banks, to be known by a specifically designated name. Such banks may have savings departments and may make properly secured loans on real estate, such loans to be restricted to a certain proportion of the aggregate time and savings deposits in the bank. The reserve requirement in such banks will be less against savings and time deposits than against demand deposits.

Another class of national banks shall be authorized, which shall be in effect national trust companies, to be designated by some appropriate name, and to exercise all the functions and have all the privileges, including length of charter, which are given to trust companies by the laws of the various states. These national institutions shall be subject, like other national banks, to inspection and examination by the national government.

There shall be no change in the percentage of reserve required by law to be held against demand deposits by national banks, except as otherwise provided herein, but the deposit balance of any national bank in the reserve association shall be counted as a part of its legal reserve.

For Report Once a Week

The reserve association shall make a report showing the principal items of its balance sheet to the comptroller of the currency once a week. These reports shall be made public. In addition, full reports shall be made to the comptroller of the currency coincident with the five reports demanded every year from the national banks.

All reports of national bank examiners in regard to the condition of national banks shall hereafter be made in duplicate, and one copy shall be filed with the reserve association for the confidential use of its executive officers.

National banks of all classes shall make a weekly report to the comptroller of the currency showing the principal items of their balance sheets, such reports to be available for the use of the executive officers of the reserve association.

Bank Notes to be Abolished

There is to be no further issue, beyond the amount outstanding, of bank notes by national banks. National banks, may, if they choose, maintain their present note issue, but whenever a bank retires the whole or any part of its existing issue it will permanently surrender its right to reissue the notes so retired.

For a period of one year the reserve association must offer to purchase at a price not less than par and accrued interest the 2 per cent bonds now held by national banks and deposited to secure their circulating notes. The reserve association shall take over these bonds with the existing currency privilege attached and assume responsibility for the redemption, upon presentation, of outstanding notes secured thereby. The reserve association shall issue, on the terms herein provided, its own notes as fast as the outstanding notes secured by such bonds so held shall be presented for redemption, it being the policy of the United States to retire as rapidly as possible, consistent with the public interests, bond secured circulation, and to substitute therefor notes of the reserve association of a character and secured and redeemed in the manner provided in this act.

To Hold Bonds Ten Years

The reserve association agrees to hold for a period of not less than ten years the bonds so purchased, or any government security which may be exchanged for them by refunding or otherwise. The reserve association, however, shall have the right with the approval of the secretary of the treasury, after two years to dispose annually of $50,000,000 of the bonds, held by it to secure circulation. The government reserves the right at all times to purchase at par from the reserve association, through the trustees of the postal savings bank or otherwise, any or all of such bonds.

If the government should adopt the policy of issuing securities at a higher rate of interest than 2 per cent, the reserve association shall have the right to exchange at par the government bonds which it may have acquired from the national banks, previously held by them to secure circulation, for any bonds bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 3 per cent, but in that event the amount of annual taxes to be paid on the notes based upon such new securities shall be as much greater as the interest rate of the new securities shall exceed 2 per cent.

To illustrate: If the government should decide to issue a $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent bond the rate of taxation on currency issued by the reserve association thereon would be 1 per cent, instead of one-half of 1 per cent, as on the existing 2's, and upon a 3 per cent bond the rate of taxation would be $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

Circulating Notes are Proposed

In addition to the authority to issue notes to replace any national bank notes outstanding at the time of the organization of the reserve association it shall have the right to issue additional circulating notes as follows: The whole or any part of the first $100,000,000 of such additional notes shall pay to the government an annual tax of 3 per cent; above $100,000,000 and not more than $200,000,000 may be issued at an annual tax of 4 per cent; above $200,000,000 and not more than $300,000,000 may be issued at an annual tax of 5 per cent; all above $300,000,000 shall pay an annual tax of 6 per cent.

All note issues of the reserve association must be covered to the extent of at least one-third by gold or other lawful money, and the remaining portion by bonds of the United States or bankable commercial paper as herein defined, or both. It should be provided either that the reserve association may also hold in its reserve foreign coin, or that the treasury will issue gold certificates against foreign coin. The notes are to constitute a first lien upon all the assets of the reserve association and adequate provision must be made for their immediate redemption in lawful money on presentation at the head office of the reserve association or any of its branches.

The notes of the reserve association shall be received at par in payment of all taxes, excises and other dues to the United States, and for all salaries and other debts and demands owing by the United States to individuals, corporations or associations, except obligations of the government which are by their terms specifically payable in gold, and for all debts due from or by one national bank to another and for all obligations due to a national bank.

The reserve association shall at once, upon application and without charge for transportation, forward its circulating notes to any depositing bank against its credit balance.

Juggling Funds

Facts showing the juggling of insurance funds have been brought out in testimony of W. H. Gregory, former president of Citizens' National Life of Kentucky, whose evidence was heard in receivership proceedings at Louisville.

Under his regime, he admitted, the company had approximately $400,000 invested in the favored banks bringing the company only 2 per cent annually.

Mr. Gregory was asked if an insurance company could afford to do business deriving so little interest on its deposits. He replied:

"Well, it's the custom, you know, for banks to carry deposits along at 2 per cent until the money is invested at a higher rate of interest."

It was testified by Mr. Gregory that L. W. Key, the treasurer of the Citizens' National, at the end of each year, forwarded certain amounts—usually about $10,000—to banks at Mayfield, Greenville, Harrodsburg and Maysville, with which L. W. Key, J. W. Lam, George Bohon and C. D. Pearce were respectively connected. In some instances these banks forwarded to each other the amounts which had been deposited with them by Mr. Key for the Citizens' National, and the total amounts showed on the financial statements of each of the banks which interchanged the deposits.

Mr. Key's bank at Mayfield handled $2,000,- 000 or $3,000,000 for the company, he said. This bank is capitalized at $50,000.

Mr. Gregory said that for the first three years during which Mr. Key's bank at Mayfield did not pay interest, the Citizens' Life had on deposit about $100,000.

Another important thing brought out in Mr. Gregory's testimony was his statement that L. W. Key, treasurer of the insurance company, postmaster of Mayfield, Ky., president of the Farmers' National, Mayfield, also connected with a lumber company and president of the Mayfield Water and Light Company, had approached him to ask if he would assist in acquiring control of the Mayfield Water and Light Company. Gregory says Key told him that Charles D. Pearce, vice-president of the Citizens' National Life, was also interested in the deal to secure control of the Mayfield corporation.

"Where did these men expect to get the money to obtain control of this plant?" Mr. Gregory was asked.

"I don't know; they asked for $25,000 from the Citizens' Life Insurance Company, but this sum was reduced to $20,000."

THE WALES is the one machine that combines exclusive features of convenient operation with mechanical perfection of construction.

Some of these features are the Self-Correcting Keyboard—that corrects automatically when the right key is pressed—and the Non-add key that adds without printing.

It is the only machine that is perfectly visible at every operation, showing totals and printing, in the same field of vision.

A glance gives you the number as it prints and the total up to that point. In construction the WALES is superior to all others.

McLane Tilton's Report

Popular and eloquent Secretary of Alabama bankers reports to the convention at Montgomery, but refrains from repeating detail

During six years service my reports as secretary have covered so fully the several departments of association activity that there is no need to again go into detail.

The insurance department continues to give perfect satisfaction. The policies of the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation and the American Surety Co. keep ahead of the times with many new and exclusive features that other companies have thus far declined to permit. We have never aimed to make this a great revenue producer, preferring to co-operate with local agents and to use our efforts toward fairer policy forms and lower premium charges. The difference in rates to-day and when the department first began work, on a most conservative estimate, brings about a saving of $6,000.00 per annum to the banks of Alabama. Members should keep in mind, however, that to hold the advantages gained the two companies responsible for extending them must be patronized to the point warranting the present very agreeable arrangement.

Receipts from insurance are less than last year because the report includes only seven months' business while the volume for the last five months yet to follow is always the largest. By May the net income will show a considerable gain over 1909.

The lock cleaning contract with the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Co. produces no revenue, the reduction in price going to the bank direct. The service is far superior to the way the item was handled in the old days.

The cipher code is in the possession of each member but has not yet come into general use to the point desired.

We keep in stock the three forms of notes prepared by counsel and calls for these forms have steadily grown in number. Everyone admits that they are an improvement over the style of notes that are still handed out by the country printer.

Owing to the fact that the convention was suddenly moved up from May to January, no group meetings were held this year. Group meetings must not be discontinued as every secretary is ready to testify that they have been the cause of much greater efficiency in association work.

Alabama is fortunate in being free of safe blowers and dangerous bank criminals. My mail is filled with warnings sent out by other secretaries against the genial flimflammer and with rewards for the apprehension of yeggmen. The blowing of safes is an everyday occurrence in western states but since I have had the honor of being your secretary not a single crime of this sort has occurred within our borders.

Upon examination of the character of flimflam games reported by other secretaries I have observed that over 90 per cent are of a nature that could have been avoided with due caution on the part of the victimized institutions. We should keep constantly in mind that the more plausible the story, the more likely the fraud. Identification with local endorsement, else the item entered for collection only seem to be popular with our members. Let us continue these plain business precautions so as to encourage crooks to turn elsewhere to ply their trade with bankers more credulous and easy going.

On the other hand, because we have been secure in this manner is no reason why we should not anticipate possible trouble in the future and guard against it. I favor the establishment of a protective department with a secret committee named by the president. There are good detective agencies in the state that would be glad to make a contract with the association. This matter is one that the incoming executive council should take up upon a resolution conferring power to act.

Membership now stands at 237, the largest in our history and an increase of 6 over last year.

There never has been a day's delay in the payment of either the principal or interest on any bond we have sold.

This shows the interest being taken in our work and is especially gratifying because the moving up of the convention gave me less time to send out the usual number and variety of duns for dues and because this same fact prevented holding any group meetings this year. Some banks continue outrageously slow in remitting dues and others appear to have a firm grasp on the waste paper basket habit. The voice of the association is the voice of practically the entire banking capital of the state as not less than 95 per cent of this capital is represented on the roll.

The deficit reported last year, due to extraordinary expenses not likely to recur, has been largely made up. The present small shortage is due my bank. In another year we should again show a credit balance from dues as now fixed and other routine receipts. Many associations boast of large unused surpluses, but I do not see the need of our being a money making organization. More properly a bankers' association should concern itself exclusively with the purposes stated in its constitution and to accomplish this no great amount of income or accumulated cash is necessary.

I wish to hold myself responsible for moving the convention up from May to January. Many advantages occurred to me in this connection that were readily recognized by the executive council and the Montgomery Clearing House which so kindly consented to the change. Not the least of these was the assistance the meeting would be towards the successful passage of the bank bill to be reported by the committee on legislation. Very happily the gum shoe and dark lantern methods of legislation now belong to ancient history. Heretofore bills labeled "banker" have had suspicion attached to them from the moment they were presented to the capital. As Mr. Woodrow Wilson pointed out in his remarkable Denver speech, the bankers have no one but themselves to thank for this condition.

People keep silent and fear to speak only when they are undertaking something wrong. The bill that cannot stand the light of "nitiless publicity" does not deserve to pass. We have been coming to Montgomery on tip toe, finger at the lip and "hush" the slogan. What was the result? Conservative bankers were not invited to put their shoulders to the wheel, the opponents of our measures came here without invitations, public sentiment was allowed to slumber at the switch. Unwise compromise or degrading defeat has been our portion.

None of us can blame past legislatures for believing that bankers were divided on safe and sane regulation and supervision. How were they to know otherwise? But even at that we accomplished something since 1905 and each step has been taken with the hope of reaching the vantage point we occupy to-day. This is the passage of the bill to be submitted to the convention by the committee on legislation. It has been examined by every banker in Alabama and by bankers and financial authorities in other states. It has been received with a chorus of praise everywhere. It has been called the best bank bill ever struck off in America not even excepting the national bank act. Our meeting here has been termed a "revival" by one leading bank publication which went so far as to urge every progressive banker in the middle west to come to Montgomery and see how we did it, respond with hearty amens and return home determined to profit by our wholesome example.

The association owes its everlasting thanks

Talk No. 52

The Cashier Says:—

"We find that our depositors appreciate the neat monthly statements of account which we send out to them once a month.

Mrs. Brown, wife of one of our Directors, and her daughter were in the other day and she enquired how it was possible for us to send a 'typewritten' statement to each one of our depositors.

After explaining that the statement was not made on a typewriter, but was handled by an entirely different machine, I had her come back to my office and explained in detail just how the statements are made out on the Burroughs Statement Machine.

Yes, the saving in time amounts to considerable. One man with the Burroughs machine handles in one day the same volume of work which formerly occupied two of our best men about forty hours.

You see the month, date and amount are all registered by the machine in one operation, and when the statement is concluded the simple pressing of the total key and operation of the handle gives the total.

The Burroughs Company will furnish you with fac-simile forms showing actual work done on this machine. Just address the Burroughs Adding Machine Company at Detroit, Michigan, and say you are interested in the Monthly Statement Machine."

to the committee on legislation and especially to its chairman, Mr. W. H. Manly. It is doubtful if another banker of equal ability in the state could have been found to devote his time and talents to this important duty, with the prodigious amount of detail, voluminous correspondence and thoughtful study required. Mr. Manly has labored hard and steadily with that intensity of purpose, intelligence and loyalty for which trinity of traits he is so highly esteemed by his wide circles of friends.

The legislature now assembled in this historic city is wise and patriotic enough to see that no selfish motive or unsound financial policy has produced this measure. It does no injustice to any well managed bank, big or little, state or national. It aims only to protect the public, to make deposits of money in Alabama banks as safe as in any other commonwealth on earth. Banking in Alabama has reached the stage when it can no longer be conducted to suit the whims or peculiar local conditions of each individual banker. It must be conducted in the manner assuring the greatest security to the people whose deposits are entrusted to our keeping. This means a sane system, efficiently supervised, such as every banker can live up to with a fair profit if he will. This object we believe will be accomplished when our bill has been enacted in law.

In conclusion I beg to remind you that a year ago I accepted re-election under protest. As I then stated I preferred to quit the job before you fellows felt the job ought to quit me. The sentiment expressed at our last convention I still hold. As a high private in the rear rank I would be glad to continue my work for the common good in the hope that by this course my deep appreciation of your many kindnesses will be understood by you and liquidated by me.

At Springfield

The invitation from Springfield presented by Mr. Keys and others to the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association was so pressing, so generally participated in by all the organizations of that city, that it was at once decided to go there for the next state convention. October was the date set so that the new hotel will be finished. Springfield can care for the convention nicely. It was there the group system reform was carried and perhaps it may be there that the revised constitution shall be adopted.

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

Edward Buder, treasurer of the Mercantile Trust Company, believes the present plente of funds and easy money market are likely to last for some time. Speaking of the general monetary outlook, Mr. Buder said: "Needs in this locality for the moment do not seem to be very urgent, and the average throughout the country is about as represented here. There is nothing I can see in the immediate future which will stimulate borrowers in a sufficient degree to cause any feverish activity in the money market. I am by no means pessimistic, rather the contrary, for basic conditions are extremely healthy. They could not be otherwise with our big crops and general growth of all kinds, along normal lines, of last year, but things now will seek what might be called a routine level, and there pursue their course placidly. In my opinion the key to the situation is the railroads. As things are with them, so will it be with general business activities. If concessions are granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the way of slight rate increases, the roads will take on new life. They have been extremely backward in the matter of expenditures other than necessary. Simply let them loosen up and get in the market for new equipment and supplies, and that activity will be reflected, like a light in all other leading lines of commerce. Leading systems have had to meet increased wage payments to employees, without corresponding gains in revenues. True their tonnage has been heavy, but tonnage must be moved at a profit if betterments are to be made. Indications for St. Louis are that this year will be a prosperous one. I do not look for anything extraordinary in the way of abnormal growth or new enterprises, but along conservative lines there will doubtless be good progress. This is a dull season for the banks, still as far as I can learn, our leading financial institutions are easily earning their dividends and still putting a little aside."

Deposit Guaranty Proposition

Throughout Southwestern banking circles the chief topic is the bank deposit guaranty proposition. The meeting of legislatures in Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and Kansas, coupled with the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court have served to stimulate interest in this important factor. Advices from Oklahoma City state that Messrs. Fuller, Acton and Cox are authors of a new state banking act, which proposes material changes to the bank guaranty law of the first and second legislatures, and in part meets the wishes of some of the bankers. The board is cut to three members, the governor and two of different political faith, to be named by him, who must show at least five years practical banking experience. Each bank is required to pay an annual assessment of one-twentieth of 1 per cent, based on their average daily deposits for the past year, which goes to the guaranty fund, until the total fund equals 5 per cent of the aggregate deposits of all guaranteed banks. In case the fund is wiped out an assessment of 1 per cent is made, and in case there is not enough money to pay depositors in a failure the state banking board is to issue 4 per cent deficiency certificates. Should a failed bank be able to pay all liabilities in four months it may reopen for business, otherwise it must be completely liquidated, and if voluntary liquidation is assumed, 80 per cent of the money paid to the state guaranty fund is returned, the remaining 20 per cent being diverted to the state treasury.

Searching for the Light

The above act is one of many, which represent the groping of blind persons for the light. Hardly a legislator in Oklahoma but who believes he can frame an act for regulating banking affairs. All are willing to take a whack at it anyhow, and see how their theories will work out. They may get the light in time, but it may be from a conflagration. Meantime the bankers are subject to experiment and bungle; the conservative must pay the losses of the reckless and dishonest and the premium on individual carefulness is in the declining scale.

National Bank of Commerce

The feature in the local stock market this week was the sharp recovery in National Bank of Commerce shares. The recent decline in this stock carried the price down to $200, the lowest level touched in many years. At that mark, however, the liquidation seems to have spent itself, and within less than ten days the price has worked back to $209.50. The sharp break gave rise to a rumor that the institution contemplated a further dividend reduction, but this was officially denied. An officer of the bank stated that the 12 per cent rate will be permanent, and if any change is made at all it will be an increase. Besides the capital of $10,000,000 the National Bank of Commerce has a surplus and profits of approximately $8,500,000, and its earnings last year were well in excess of the dividend. The last statement shows deposits $62,233,739, and loans and discounts $48,095,313. The report indicated that deposits have increased $4,093,954 since November, 1910. The total resources are $89,483,760.

Texas Bankers are Paternal

The Texas Bankers Association is continuing its policy to take an interest paternal in things general within the borders of its state. The latest accomplishment along this line was the awarding of substantial prizes to winners in the contest of boys' corn clubs. The prizes included five gold medals, a scholarship at the Agricultural College and cash donations. The object of the Bankers Association is to encourage country boys to a greater taste for farm life, and improve farming methods. The wealth of the state, it is believed, can be greatly increased by the introduction of intelligent methods of agriculture.

Des Moines, January 18.—Iowa bankers are well pleased with the banking committees in the senate of the Iowa legislature as named by Lieut. Governor George W. Clarke. The house committee has not been named at this writing. Senator Hunter of Sioux City is chairman of the senate committee. He is an attorney. His associate members are Senators Mattes, Savage, Fitchpatrick, Proudfoot, Hoyt, W. S. Allen, McColl, Cowles, McManus, DeWolf, Quigley, Balluff, Schrup. Of these Savage and Hoyt are active bankers. For the most part the remainder are attorneys. If the bill for revising the statute taxing moneys and credits is submitted to this committee, it will be well taken care of. The bill was introduced this week by Senator Gilliland and there is as much interest in the measure as any that will be handed in at the present session.

Deposits Increase One Million

Deposits in the National banks of Des Moines increased over a million dollars between the call of the comptroller for November 10th and that for January 7th. The total at the January call was $14,552,351.82 as against $13,162,893.95 in November. Loans at the January call totaled $11,745,215.48. At the November call they totaled $10,369,863.12. As compared with the total deposits a year ago the showing is not quite so flattering. The total deposits January 31, 1910 totaled $14,852,605.58. This is a slight decrease for the year. The Valley National increased its deposits $107,808.25 over a year ago but the other three institutions showed a falling off. There are indications however that times will be perceptibly easier from now on and the gain that has been made since November is regarded by bankers as satisfactory. Farmers are marketing their crops and the money that has been taken out in past months is once more floating into the banks, where it belongs.

Takes Over Merchants' National

The First National at Sioux City not only increased its capital stock to $500,000 as stated in my letter of last week but it took charge of the Merchants' National of that city as well. This bank merger is one of the largest in many months in Iowa. The Merchants' National had been in existence 22 years. The transfer took place upon the day of the annual meetings of the two institutions. That same night the books and money were carried from the Merchants' National over to the First National. The Merchants' National owned its own building and this was taken over along with the purchase. The Merchants' National had a capital stock of $100,000 and deposits of $1,200,000. The combined bank now has capital stock of $500,000 and deposits of close to $7,000,000. John McHugh, president of the Iowa Bankers Association remains as head of the First National. John J. Large, president of the Merchants' National, becomes vice-president of the merged bank along with D. A. McCornack, H. G. Weare and W. L. Montgomery. Vice-President E. B. Spalding and Cashier G. N. Swan of the Merchants' National will be interested in the merged institution but not officials. E. W. Rice, who recently retired as president of the Merchants' is also interested in the combined institution.

Few Changes in Bank Elections

Few changes have occurred at the various bank meetings of the institutions of Des Moines. W. G. Town was elected on the directory board of the Valley National succeeding D. P. Reinking. There were no other changes on the boards of the national institutions. R. B. Vorse was advanced to cashier of the Century Savings succeeding D. A. Byers and J. E. Morton, assistant cashier succeeds Mr. Vorse. The Mechanics Savings elected C. A. Rawson director instead of A. Clemens as stated in my letter of last week. P. B. Sheriff was placed on the directory board of the Home Savings. A. C. Miller was re-elected president of this institution although it is expected that he will retire in favor of W. B. Lutz, vice-president, who purchased a controlling interest in the institution some months ago.

Leading Citizen of Perry Dead

Allen Breed, president of the Perry Savings and Exchange and vice-president of the First National of Perry died at his home in that city at the age of 77. Mr. Breed has been accounted Perry's leading citizen. He was at one time heavily interested in the Chicago street railway company with the late Charles Yerkes. He was four terms mayor of Perry and was the builder of the largest business block in the city.

Bankers Loan and Trust Company

The Bankers Loan and Trust Co. to be backed by all the banks of Sioux City is soon to be organized in that city with a capital stock, probably of $200,000. It is purposed to act as an aid to the Commercial Club in a development plan that is expected to mean much to the business interests of Sioux City. Each bank is to be equally represented in the stock issue and have one representative on the directory board.

Yeggman Escapes from Jail

Taylor Brown, accused of being a bank robber and wanted in Missouri and Nebraska was arrested at Creston last week and permitted to escape that same night from the city calaboose. The Association of National Bankers had offered rewards of $150 according to the officers at Creston who were beginning to count the money as their own. Brown sawed his way out of jail and up to this time, no clue as to his whereabouts has been found.

Advocating New Law for Trust Companies

Iowa newspapers in general are supporting the legislative committee of the I. B. A. in the request for a new law that will permit trust companies to act as guardians of estates and administrators. Here is a sample editorial from the Sioux City Tribune: "Iowa's laws defining the limitations of loan and trust companies is too narrow, as experience here and observation elsewhere proves. A large part of the business of a loan and trust company in most states is to act as trustee for the affairs of others, as executor, administrator, referee, guardian and in other like capacities. The privilege opens up a vast amount of business, that comes unsought to a sound and carefully managed institution from persons who through lack of training cannot handle large affairs as advantageously as capable bankers can. It is a legitimate business. Iowa made an experiment in prohibiting it; and it is time to realize the failure of it and remove the ban. To do so will not only greatly enlarge the business of those loan and trust companies that are now operating in the state under a handicap, but it will make possible the development of others. This is a place where the cry of widows and orphans is really to be heard. They need thoroughly capitalized and organized responsible trustees to protect the little properties that husbands and fathers struggled to lay up for them. A good trust company makes the best trustee for the helpless.

Banking Notes

It is believed that the automobile in which the robbers rode away from the Dow City Bank after getting $5,000 is in the livery stable at Manning. Three strangers drove into the livery barn the morning after the robbery and requested the liveryman to store it for a few hours. They have never come back.

The First National at Boone has purchased a building at the corner of Eighth and Story in that city for $38,000 and now has one of the finest homes in the state. The block was purchased of S. L. Moore.

Nathan P. Dodge, brother of the famous veteran General Grenville M. Dodge is dead at Council Bluffs. He was interested actively in the Council Bluffs Savings and had resided in that city since 1857.

H. E. Manker has resigned as president of the First National at Elliott. He has been succeeded by O. J. Powell.

The Commercial State at Mediapolis and the Sperry Savings at Sperry, owned by the same interests were opened on the same day last week. The Mediapolis institution has a capital stock of $50,000. The Sperry bank has a capital stock of $12,000.

The American Savings at Sioux City has filed articles with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $50,000. The incorporators are W. S. Snyder, George C. Call, E. M. Corbett, N. Tiedeman, Samuel Krummann, Leonard O'Harrow, Herman Galinsky, Alex Larson.

Reports have reached Des Moines that the Bradley interests of Centerville have disposed of their stock in the First National at Moulton to Moulton parties.

Capt. Wm. H. Ingham, president of the Kosuth County Bank at Titonka appears to have been on the last buffalo hunt ever held in Iowa. This was fifty-five years ago and the hunting party chased forty-four animals over the prairies. Capt. Ingham bought $700 worth of buffalo hides from some of the trappers then in that section of Iowa.

Robert Aitchison, president of the First National of Mt. Pulaski, Ill., has bought the Johannsen interests in the First National at Colfax, Iowa. He has been elected a director in the latter institution.

Peter Behn, Sr. and C. S. Moller have been elected directors in the Battle Creek Savings at Battle Creek succeeding J. L. Riesedel and Charles Wirth.

J. H. Ingwersen, president of the People's Trust and Savings at Clinton and one of the best known bankers in Iowa, dropped into Des Moines last week. Mr. Ingwersen thinks that the increase in deposits is indicative of further growth along the same line. However in this connection, Jas. F. Toy is quoted in the Sioux City papers as predicting a falling off in March because of the activities of tax ferrets and general dissatisfaction with the Iowa tax laws.

Leo. H. Paulger has been elected cashier of the Security Savings at Cedar Falls succeeding his father, F. W. Paulger whose death occurred recently at Hot Springs. The directory board was increased from five to seven.

Jesse D. Newcomer, vice-president of the Hardin County National at Eldora, died very suddenly two hours after he was stricken with paralysis at his home in Eldora. He had been a resident of Eldora since 1860 and was very well known.

The Polk county supervisors have voted to issue $200,000 refunding bonds and as yet they have not been sold although there has been an active demand for them.

Des Moines bankers were too busy to hold a meeting of the bankers club on Jan. 12, the regular date. It was postponed until Thursday of this week.

Bank clearing in Des Moines gained $277,595 for the week ending Jan. 14th as contrasted with the clearings for the corresponding week in 1910. The total was $4,052,253.04.

Among out of the city bankers who have been in Des Moines recently were President J.

W. Foster of the Citizens Savings at Guthrie Center; Vice-President Otto C. Herman, Security Savings, Boone; Cashier John Kirby of the First National, Estherville; Cashier H. S. Thompson, Bank of Earlham; Cashier J. H. Roberts, Bank of Boxholm; Cashier E. H. Rich, First National, Fort Dodge; Cashier C. C. Harris, Wilton Junction Bank; Cashier R. A. Clark, Exchange Bank, Elkhart; Cashier C. D. Cass, Fort Douglas Savings; Cashier J. W. Smith, Bank of Coon Rapids.

G. D. Ellyson, president of the Commercial Savings, Des Moines, was taken ill upon his return from Melbourne, Iowa, and is confined to his home suspected of having the typhoid fever.

Ed. C. Brown, formerly a banker at Sheldon which failed, is dead at Thermopolis, Wyo. He was indicted in connection with the Sheldon bank failure and acquitted. Brown was active in politics, was once state railroad commissioner and later a defeated candidate for congress in the Eleventh Iowa district.

Gustave Jans, president of the German Savings at Manning has resigned after disposing of his $35,000 interest in the bank to the directors. His successor will probably not be named until July.

Iowans were particularly interested in the refusal of President Taft to extend clemency to W. S. Harlan convicted of peonage. Mr. Harlan was formerly a resident of Indianola and his brother, a banker at Indianola has been seeking to influence President Taft to grant a pardon to the prisoner.

"Jim" Tanas supposed to be an accomplice of Gust Toney who is held for forgery on a pay check for the First National at Odebolt has been arrested and Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association has a letter written to him by Toney which it is expected will prove valuable evidence in the case. The letter was torn up by one of the men when he discovered its importance. Mr. Hall fished the pieces out of a waste basket and joined them together so that they now appear on a window pane as "natural as life."

L. E. Wakefield, formerly assistant cashier of the Northwestern National, Minneapolis, has assumed the treasurership of the Wells & Dickey Company, investments.

Kansas City

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Perhaps no banker in the Central West is in closer touch with actual commercial conditions especially in regard to agriculture and the produce market than J. R. Dominick, president of the Traders' National of Kansas City. He is a financier of the highest standing and reputation for conservatism and sound judgment. Therefore, his statement to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER relative to conditions in this territory bear the mark of authenticity. "It must be understood," said Mr. Dominick, "that I do not view conditions as a pessimist. On the other hand I do not believe that the situation generally in this territory warrants undue optimism. I look for a slower market and sagging values for the coming year. Note this does not indicate hard times or even dull times. I believe that it is a good indication for general business in the long run. It denotes a healthy reaction from previous conditions and no doubt business will be all the better for it. In the business of the Traders' National we have been in close touch with the produce and cold storage men, and it is highly gratifying to me that our people have not been caught in the general slump that seems due the cold storage business elsewhere. Kansas City dealers were fortunate in 'getting from under' several weeks ago and practically all of the cold storage products in this city are held on eastern accounts.

"I regard the future as unusually bright and my reference to a sagging market should not be construed in any discouraging light. This territory is prosperous and it is natural during a time of prosperity to overdo matters. But I am confident that conservatism will rule and that general business will profit thereby."

Thornton Cooke Says Everybody's in Debt

Thornton Cooke, treasurer of the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City, is a shrewd and observant financial scout who knows conditions in this territory quite as well and perhaps better than any other western banker. He has spent much of his time of late attending meetings of bankers in both Missouri and Kansas and his acquaintance is extensive and valuable. There is scarcely a meeting of any importance in this territory to which he does not go, and his opinion may be termed "grass root" information. In discussing affairs with a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER recently, Mr. Cooke said:

"One phase of the financial situation in this part of the country that has struck me forcibly, is the fact that nearly everybody is in debt. That fact, in my opinion, will have the effect of making business a little slower here during the coming year than last. I look for good business, mind you, but not for any record breaker. In the country the farmers are heavy borrowers. They have had fine crops and as a consequence, the farmers have expanded. They have bought more land to add to their farms, and it is also a fact that farmers are the greatest speculators on earth. Kansas farmers have been investing heavily in Texas and Florida lands, buying whole counties in the latter state. City people, too, are in debt. They are buying new homes in better districts on which they owe, and there are of course the automobiles that help to swell the personal liabilities of country as well as city people. But I do not think there will be anything like a serious slump here in the Central West. Our own business remains good.

Detectives Breaking Up Wymore Gang

With several men under arrest at various points in Kansas and Nebraska under the suspicion of belonging to the famous Wymore, Neb., gang of bank robbers, there has been a decided lull in the bank looting business in this section of late. The increased activity of the authorities along the northern Kansas border, and the co-operation of the Nebraska officials, has resulted in making it much more dangerous for bank robbers to ply their trade. Sporadic attacks upon banks in small Missouri towns and in Colorado and Texas are believed to have been committed by men not connected with the gangs that have been operating in Kansas and Oklahoma.

The most important prisoner now in the hands of the officers gave his name as Neil Mulcahy. He was arrested in Kansas City through information furnished by the Pinkertons. After his arrest a search of his rooms revealed a package of dynamite, fuse and caps wrapped in a piece of wall paper. Mulcahy also had in his pockets $281 in currency which showed powder or dynamite marks. After the robbery of the Waterville, Kan., bank some weeks ago the officers traced the robbers to a corn field where investigation disclosed a number of things that the robbers had used in robbing the bank. These articles were wrapped in a piece of wall paper and buried in the soft earth. The pieces of wall paper found in the corn field and in the room of Mulcahy matched. After this arrest, a representative of the State Bank of Waterville, which had been robbed, came to Kansas City and replevined the money found in Mulcahy's pockets. After that the prisoners was taken to Marysville, Kan., which is not far from Waterville, for safekeeping.

While Mulcahy was being investigated in Kansas City, deputy sheriffs from Maryville, Kan., arrested Alexander Bernard at the home of his brother two miles east of Wymore, Neb. Bernard was also taken to Marysville where he, with Mulcahy, is awaiting arraignment. Another suspect arrested later gave the name of James Edwards. He was taken at Red Cloud, Neb. And still later another prisoner, who refused to give his name, was added to the Marysville colony.

An unsuccessful attempt to rob the Bank of Pilot Grove, Mo., was made on the night of Wednesday, January 11th. While trying to force an entrance to the bank they were discovered by the night watchman, who drove them off. Shots were exchanged but the robbers made their escape.

Introduce Changes in Oklahoma Guaranty Law

Important changes in the Oklahoma bank guaranty law have been incorporated in a bill introduced in the house of representatives by Representatives Acton, Cox and Fuller, three state bankers. The change most different from the provisions of the present law is, that instead of paying off the depositors of failed banks with cash and at once, the banking board is directed to issue certificates due within four months to all depositors. This is designed to give time to get all the assets and liabilities together and prevent the excitement due to immediate cash payments out of the state guaranty fund.

It is also proposed to reduce the annual premiums due the guaranty fund from one-fifth of a cent, as at present, to one-twentieth of one per cent per annum. The amount of emergency assessments which may be levied within one year are reduced from two to one per cent of the average daily deposits. The banking board of the state under the new bill, would consist of the governor and two experienced bankers, the latter to receive the same salaries as bank examiners. The maximum limit of the guaranty fund is made 5 per cent of the total average daily deposits as at present. Certificates bearing 4 per cent interest shall be issued when the bank guaranty fund shall be exhausted and depositors not satisfied. The authors of the bill are O. B. Acton, of Guthrie, president of the State Bank of Lovell; K. C. Cox, a banker of Granite, and G. M. Fuller, president of the State Bank of Strecker, Okla.

Bank Elections

The annual stockholders' meetings of the Kansas City banks resulted in various changes in their official boards. Most of these meetings were held last week, although several are scheduled for the latter part of this month. Interest centered in the changes in the official personnel of the New England National which is one of the strongest institutions in the Central West. John F. Downing, for many years president of the New England, was re-elected. C. J. Hubbard was elected vice-president; George B. Harrison, who has been acting as cashier, was made active vice-president; P. G. Walton, cashier, and F. T. Child, V. K. Tuggle and G. G. Moore were elected assistant cashiers. In order to take the position of cashier, Mr. Walton resigned as national bank examiner for the district of Kansas and Kansas City. He was national bank examiner for the two Kansas Cities, Topeka and Wichita. His successor in that position has not been appointed.

George H. Edwards, president of the Edwards & Sloan Jewelry Co., and a member of the upper house of the city council, was elected president of the Mercantile Bank. He succeeds W. H. Winants, who was elected chairman of the board of directors. Mr. Sloan has not heretofore been actively connected with any of the Kansas City banks. Other changes in the Mercantile Bank were: Louis Oppenstein, elected vice-president to succeed P. F. Covington, and George H. Ruddy, cashier. It is said that there has been no change in the interests controlling the bank.

At the National Reserve Bank, John C. Knorpp was elected vice-president. J. R. Burrow, president of the Central National of Topeka, was elected a director of the National Reserve Bank to succeed his son. Frank H. Burrow is to remain director of the National Reserve Bank. J. F. Holden, vice-president of the Kansas City Southern Railway Company, was elected a director to succeed L. C. Smith, and David Thornton was made a director to succeed Thomas Lynn.

The annual election of the Drovers' National resulted in the confirmation of the selection of H. L. Jarboe, Jr., and Charles E. Waite was elected vice-president and cashier. The following directors were elected: Samuel Silverman, George H. Cowan of Morris & Co., John G. Groves, C. H. Hill of Sulzberger & Sons and C. M. Macfarlane, Mr. Jarboe, as stated in THE CHICAGO BANKER last week, was formerly vice-president of the Stock Yards National of St. Louis.

In the Commerce Trust Company Henry P. Stewart was elected to the directorate to succeed H. Clay Armond, deceased. The vacancy caused by the death of G. W. Jones in the directorate of the Traders' National was filled by the election of F. L. Alexander. At the National Bank of Commerce the only important change was the election of W. L. Buechel vice-president. R. W. McCurdy has been tendered the position of treasurer of the Home Deposit Company of Independence (Mo.) caused by the death of W. A. Symington. C. E. Ricker has been elected a director in the First National to succeed B. C. Brown.

The annual election of the Central Savings Trust Company which is just beginning business resulted as follows: John T. M. Johnston, chairman of the board of directors; C. B. McCluskey and F. H. Burrow, vice-presidents and J. L. Johnston, secretary and treasurer. The following directors were chosen: W. E. Halsell, David Thornton, George S. Carkener, G. M. Smith, L. S. Parker, Robert L. Tschudy, C. S. Van Noy, Frank H. Burrow, Amos Gipson, Daniel Lyons, George E. Ricker, C. S. Cobb, S. H. Ferguson, O. G. Lee, R. L. Sutherland, C. W. Beeler, George D. Hope, Arthur C. Cowan, E. B. Smith, J. M. Coburn, Overton Harris, George Gosch, J. L. Johnston and C. B. McCluskey.

In Kansas City, Kan., P. W. Goebel was re-elected president of the Commercial National, A. C. Fasenmeyer, first vice-president; C. L. Brokaw, second vice-president and cashier and J. G. Bishop, assistant cashier. At the People's National of Kansas City, Kan., G. C. Smith was elected president, Dr. G. M. Gray, vice-president; J. D. White, cashier and James Ratcliffe, assistant cashier.

The Gate City National of Kansas City held a unique election of officers. A dinner was given by the directors at a prominent hotel and following this dinner all of the old officers were re-elected as follows: John M. Pollard, president; D. M. Pinkerton, cashier and R. L. Beattie, assistant cashier. The following are the directors: E. T. O'Rear, C. B. Norton, Joseph C. Wirthman, Ralph P. Swofford, Dr. J. Philip Kanoky and John T. Harding.

Citizens' Bank Quits Business

The Citizens' Bank of St. Joseph, Mo., closed its doors last week and its affairs were liquidated by the Drovers and Merchants Bank of that city. The arrangements for liquidation were made under the direction of John E. Swanger, Missouri bank examiner. It was stated that the Citizens' Bank was not insolvent but that it did not pay and the stockholders decided to quit business. The total assets and liabilities of the bank were $44,789. The capital stock was $10,000. E. T. Davis was president, Dr. J. L. Byrne, vice-president and E. T. Davis, Jr., cashier. The bank was organized four years ago.

Central West Bank Clearings

Bank clearings in the Central West continue to show a very satisfactory record in a general way. Kansas City is still in sixth place with a total for the week ending January 13th of $57,662,000 which is an increase of 10.3 per cent. St. Joseph, Mo., also showed a gratifying gain of 10.5 per cent, its total being $7,983,000. Omaha fell off slightly with $15,704,000 to its credit while Topeka showed a gain of 57.8 per cent and Wichita 19.2 per cent. The former had $2,042,000 and the latter $3,522,000. Oklahoma City showed a slight decline, but holding up well with $2,386,000 for the week.

Walters-Machette Company

Through the consolidation of the country banking security business of the Orthwein-Machette Investment Company of Kansas City and the business of the Charles Walters Company of Council Bluffs, Ia., Kansas City will have one of the largest and most important houses for the sale of country banks in the West. The new company will be known as the Walters-Machette Company and will confine its business to negotiating the sale of smaller banks and banking securities. C. A. Chapman, vice-president of the Charles Walters Company will be vice-president of the new concern and will move from Council Bluffs to Kansas City.

Illinois Bankers Attend Council Meeting and Banquet

The mid-year meeting of the Illinois Bankers Association executive council was held in Chicago on Tuesday. There was a large attendance, and the meeting which convened in the directors' room of the First National Bank building at two o'clock lasted until five-thirty. It was the first session at which Chairman John D. Phillips presided. It was the opinion of those who attended that he made a first-class presiding officer, and later in the evening scored a second success as toast-master of the banquet in the gold room of the Congress Hotel. During the forenoon of Tuesday several subcommittees held earnest sessions. They were the committees on agriculture, the committee on protective service, and the committee on "revision and rejuvenation" of the constitution.

The agricultural committee was greatly entertained by a report made by its secretary, W. G. Edens, of the Central Trust, who the previous week had attended the meeting of the executive council of the Minnesota Bankers Association at St. Paul. Mr. Edens attended that meeting to learn something of the pioneer efforts of the "back to the soil" committee of that organization. B. F. Harris of Champaign, vice-president of the state organization, is chairman of this committee, and both he and Mr. Edens made verbal reports of the work already done, to the executive council and the committee was continued. The committee is intending to take up the vocational feature of the work and make an attempt to have the principles of agriculture taught to some extent in the public schools.

The protective committee made a report on a proposal to join with the burglary insurance companies in offering rewards for the capture of criminals such as is done in many of the nearby states. This entire matter was thrashed over very thoroughly and referred to the protective committee. One recommendation which came from this branch of the organization called for the appointment of three bankers in each county to work with and to stimulate the local officials in apprehending criminals against banks. Mr. Wright of the general committee advocated county organization of bankers to take up home work in a field not covered by or conflicting with either the state organization or the group organization. These issues were referred to a committee of five. A communication from the Interstate Protective Association embracing some of the states northwest of Chicago (except Wisconsin) was received asking Illinois to join it in its work. After considerable debate this was referred to the executive officers of the association with power to act.

Mr. Woodruff's committee on "revision and rejuvenation" of the constitution was in session all day long and no report was made to the general committee. This is perhaps the most important committee maintained by the state association and its work requires a vast amount of investigation into the constitutions which have proved so successful in other states.

In the evening there was a general banquet attended by members of the council and former officers of the association. It was held in the gold room at the Congress Hotel and there were upwards of one hundred in attendance. There were no formal addresses and a great many members were prevailed upon by Mr. Phillips to make talks upon various subjects. There was a stereopticon show and lecture on Africa hunting and travel topics. It was very interesting to many of those present. The banquet was entirely up to the requirements, and was much enjoyed by those in attendance. Secretary Crampton was congratulated upon the perfection of plans by which the day's events were so neatly carried out.

High Grade 7 Per Cent Stock

Wollenberger & Co., 206 LaSalle Street, Central Trust, Indianapolis and Colonial Trust, Chicago, are offering seven per cent cumulative stock in the Dodge Manufacturing Co. of Mishawaka, Ind., at par and interest. Truthfully this can be called high grade stuff, and the standing of the three financial institutions offering it is sufficient guaranty. Circulars may be had giving fullest details for the asking. President Mix refers by permission to the following banks with which his company does business: Continental & Commercial National Bank, Chicago, Irving National Exchange Bank, New York, Philadelphia National Bank, Philadelphia, National Union Bank, Boston, Federal National Bank, Pittsburgh, First National Bank, Cincinnati, Third National Bank, St. Louis and Mishawaka Trust & Savings Bank, Mishawaka, Ind.

Another Private Bank Assigns

Watkins, N. Y., January 18.—The Watkins Exchange Bank, a private institution, closed its doors yesterday morning under a general assignment made to O. P. Hurd for the benefit of the creditors. This is the second private bank failure here within a month, the Farmers & Merchants' Bank having failed December 19th. The village is now without a bank.

Another Private Bank to be Closed

Arapad Goetzl, a private, foreign banker of Pittsburgh, Pa., committed suicide by shooting himself in the brain. He had been in financial trouble, due to a run on his bank by foreign depositors.

Little Rock, Ark., January 18.—The Bank of Grannis, Ark., was blown up last week, the vault and safe being wrecked by dynamite.

The damage to the safe, vault and building is about $3,000, and about $1,500 is missing.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.
The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.
This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.90.
Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37.
This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safe-guard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism." Contains all that it is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject of investment. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

THE CHICAGO BANKER,

407 Monadnock Block, Chicago.

PEOPLE do not smoke as much as they did. That's why the tobacco trust has nine million pounds left unsold from the 1909 pool. Or, have they been using more cabbage filler than usual?

ONE of Chicago's younger "road agents" had been going after business for his bank quite successfully for some months but his expense account was in keeping with the new business he turned in, but which sometimes staggered the head of the department who finally deemed it time to quietly point out an item in his expense account, labelled "traveling." Calling him into his office and after going over the account which presented a fair sized amount, and which was not all intended for railroad fares, remarked in a quiet voice, "you certainly ought to cover a great deal of territory my boy, for that amount of money." "Yes, I know that sir," said the smooth one. "But you know sir its necessary for me 'to go some' even when I'm standing still."

A BANK building covering a complete square, and that on Lasalle Street is the only thing that suits the Continental and Commercial National, and "it won't be happy till it gets it."

LAWRENCE O. MURRAY was in Chicago the past week "just looking around." He sizes up to his job if anybody ever did. We wish we had the power to oust the political examiners and could use only qualified men. Here are some of Murray's hobbies:

"The fact that some of the examiners obtain much better results than others has been brought forcibly to my attention, and the difference is so marked that I am making a personal investigation to learn whether the difference is due to the personal equation or to inferior methods employed by some of the officials."

"Each examiner is required to keep detailed information regarding the borrowers from the banks in his district and quite complete data relative to the various assets held by such banks. Each examiner's office will be inspected to see if the information on file is complete and available, and where the offices are not well organized I shall insist on improved methods."

A NOTHER Ohio bank cashed a check for a smooth stranger and thus puts Col. Rankin to the trouble of offering a $50 reward. Really a bank is not entitled to help or sympathy in such a case. There should be a fine imposed instead. The Toledo bank checked upon says "there have been others" who suffer in silence.

GEORGE L. RAMSEY'S Union Bank and Trust Company of Helena must have gotten its statement out by telephone for it was January "eleven" instead of "seven," the two chief oral stumbling blocks with the Hello girls.

"DEPOSITS $33,600,000." is the message sent out by Col. Galbreath of the 3rd National, St. Louis, he of the famous embossed numeral. The "Big St. Louis stock flurry" which the papers told about last week wasn't in his back yard.

"ELEVEN years of growth" is the title line under which the First National of Marquette shows how it more than doubled its deposits in that time. L. G. Kaufman is president, the same bland gentleman who put the Chatham and the Phoenix Nationals together so neatly recently in New York.

"FURNITURE and fixtures charged off" is a line in the statement of the First National of Clarksville, Tenn. It isn't in the big centers alone that right banking is done.

E. D. KENNEDY, cashier of the Exchange National, Long Beach, Cal., reminds future prospects of the advantages of his institution by the follow-up postal system. It has been quite effective.

SECRETARY JAMES M. HURST, of the Illinois state group organization has been working with the other members on the question of dates. He learns that Group Nine will meet at Centralia May 25th and that Group Seven will meet at Shelbyville June 14th. Other likely dates, but not definitely decided, are: Group One, Moline, June 1st to 10th; Group Two, Peoria, June 1st to 10th; Group Three, DeKalb, June 15th to 20th; Group Four, Ravinia Park near Evanston, June 20th to 25th; Group Five, Pontiac, about May 30th; Group Eight, Carthage, June 1st to 15th, and Group Ten, Murphysboro, May 20th to 25th. Group Six was not represented at the conference, but W. H. Ownby of Mattoon, when seen later, stated that the meeting would probably be held at Charleston and the time would be the latter part of May.

M. R. HURST is doing what he can for consecutive, non-conflicting dates, at least by districts. This helps more in point of attendance and interest than most persons suppose.

W. C. COOK, vice-president of the Western Trust, was the first Chicago banker to inspect the fine new Harris (First National) bank building at Champaign. He says it is the best ever. He was much interested in a 125 year old key safe which was one of the first burglar proofs in the state. It and the Harris family are contemporaneous.

FURTHER Mr. Cook was interested in a picture, hung upon the walls of the bank, framed by rails, au natural, split by the first Harris in the Champaign dynasty. Altogether Champaign is an interesting city and Mr. Cook was greatly pleased with all he saw.

P. YOREE (say it fast) is president of the Commercial National at Shreveport. Van Hook, E. Haag and H. Doll are on the board.

HOMER A. MILLER uses a folding postal to advertise the beauties, exterior and interior, of his beautiful new banking room in the Fleming building. The Iowa National, is one of the brag points of Des Moines.

EXCHANGE NATIONAL prints, "Deposits $4,492,549.60" in red on its statement folder and nobody blames them for it.

SOUTH TEXAS NATIONAL, Houston, is twenty years old and twenty years wise and safe. Quite a record. B. D. Harris, vice-president and cashier is the active force in the growing institution. Henry Brashear retired as vice-president but will remain on the board.

HANOVER NATIONAL, New York, is on example of what may be done by giving bankers' balances intelligent and persistent attention. Individual deposits are $20,368,621.82. While to other banks deposits to the amount of $59,579,485.60 are credited. Alexander D. Campbell looks after "country banks," and James M. Donald gave it his close attention for years.

W. T. FENTON isn't the only one who can dash off a ten line paragraph, all in one sentence. Please see the Northwestern National booklet. Probably J. A. Latta is the guilty epigramarian.

GIRARD NATIONAL, Philadelphia, shows $36,769,160.82 in deposits for January 7th call. The inside works of this bank building are the last word in things modern, but the outside is a part of the financial history of our country.

A GAIN we are receiving printed statements which give only the name of the bank but not the city, country or state where it is located. This is like throwing kisses at a young lady in the dark—goes to waste.

WHY not sell a little U. S. Steel short?

U. S. STEEL admits it is down to 40 per cent of its capacity now. Note we say "admits" and then string your bets. No, this isn't advice; it is comment.

F & M. NATIONAL, Philadelphia, claims to be giving a continuous performance so far as growth is concerned, and proves it by the figures. Howard W. is president and Henry B. Bartow, cashier.

W G. P. HARDING'S First National, Birmingham, is going along at a fine clip. J. K. Fleming is the new a. c. elected to help keep up with increased business. Capital and surplus now are $2,900,000.

A MERICAN TRUST, same place, has decided to erect another skyscraper, this one to be 16 stories in height. This is a live wire bank and earned 22 per cent on capital last year.

S EABOARD, N. Y., over $28,000,000, last call.

D ID you note in Iowa letter last week what a jump the capital and surplus of McNider's First National took, down at Mason City?

"N O distinction made between large and small customers" is a printed maxim of the Commercial-German National, Peoria. That's good stuff to use.

S TREATOR NATIONAL is out with a new sepia toned booklet, embossed in gold, for which H. W. Lukins, art critic for the bank, is getting many compliments. The new bank building, inside and out, is a thing of convenience and beauty and the booklet is a beauty.

T OOTLE-LEMON NATIONAL, St. Joseph, makes a point that the large increase in savings in Illinois and other states largely was caused by the realization of the high cost of living on the part of the people. They cut expenses and put the money in the bank.

G EORGE H. BURR & CO. report a good demand for Karpen Building 5s, one of the best of the local securities offered in this market for years. Priced at 99 and 99½.

M ONROE NATIONAL, Chicago, increased deposits last year 35%.

B ANK OF PITTSBURGH, National, the oldest bank west of the Allegheny mountains, having been founded in 1810, shows deposits of nearly nineteen millions. It has one of the handsomest bank buildings, exterior and interior, in the country.

E J. GILLMEISTER, Western Trust and Savings Bank, is secretary to the Chicago Chapter A. I. B. banquet committee, dinner to be in the gold room, Congress Hotel, January 28, at 6 p. m.

C HICAGO CHAPTER boys are famous for the good dinners and good programs which they serve up to their guests at these annual talkfests. This year they have the famous Francis W. Walker, Chicago's star attorney; Francis J. Simmons, head of the Lincoln Park Board, and Charles A. Alden, of the Ladies Home Journal.

M R. WALKER will talk on "City Government," Mr. Simmons on "Chicago," and Mr. Alden on "Patriotism." The banquet committee in charge for the chapter is composed of Messrs. P. P. Thorson and E. T. Gillmeister, both of Western Trust and Savings Bank; J. W. Rubecamp, Corn Exchange National; H. Ellefson, Continental and Commercial National; F. E. Musgrove, Illinois Trust and Savings; Robert Gadsden, Merchants Loan and Trust Co.; F. C. Nason, First National; H. S. Smale, Continental and Commercial National; W. S. Blanchard, First National; L. A. Meahl, National Bank of the Republic.

W M. R. COMPTON & CO., Chicago and St. Louis, will send you a fine list of "bond offerings at bargain prices" for the asking. This may be your opportunity. The yield runs from 4.50 to straight six.

T HOMAS B. PATON, general counsel to the American Bankers Association, has sent out to members, and to the state committees, a series of eight pamphlets, containing drafts of proposed laws on eight subjects, recommended for enactment by the American Bankers Association in states where such legislation is needed.

E ACH draft of law is accompanied by a statement giving reasons for its enactment and a list of the states in which the same or a similar law on the same subject is now in force, quoting the exact wording of the law as enacted in such states. These proposed laws have been approved by the law committee and forwarded to secretaries and legislative committeemen of state bankers associations for use in the different states holding legislatures in 1911.

I T is the hope of the association this year to see a number of enactments of these laws in the different states, the underlying object of all of which is the protection of banks, either by making certain acts criminal or by safeguarding specified banking transactions.

O NE of the proposed laws relates to the punishment of those who make false statements to obtain credit. Mr. Paton has furnished a complete draft of this law, and it has been recommended by the law committee which is composed of Pierre Jay of New York, J. F. Hagey of the First National, Chicago, Isaac H. Orr of St. Louis, L. H. Dinkins of New Orleans, Lucius Teter, president of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company, and Thomas B. Paton, the general counsel. This proposed law will make such misrepresentations a felony and punishable by such penalty as the legislatures of the various states may decide upon.

T HIS pamphlet, as well as all of the others, then gives in detail the exact condition of the laws in various states relating to this feature of banking.

A NOTHER pamphlet gives the draft of a proposed law and the punishment of those making derogatory statements affecting banks. Still another pamphlet covers the issuing of checks or drafts without funds. Still another pamphlet covers the subject of burglary without explosives.

O NE of the Paton pamphlets is a draft of an act fixing the liability of a bank to its depositor for payment of forged or raised checks. This will be a very interesting study for those who have this feature of banking service in charge. Then comes the proposed law relative to payment of deposits in two names.

L EGISLATION on this subject has been very unsatisfactory in most of the states, and the pamphlet devoted to that subject gives a full resume of the effective laws in most of the effective laws in most of the states. There are pamphlets covering the payment of deposits in trust and the competency of notaries of banks and other corporations. Every member of the American Bankers Association should make it his business to be informed fully upon all these subjects and to take an active part in securing new legislation or amending old until all of these conditions are satisfactory.

N ELSON H. GREENE, active head of the Peoples Savings Bank & Trust Co., Moline, member-elect from Illinois to the A. B. A. executive council, was in Chicago to attend the Illinois council meeting this week. His bank made big gains in 1910, and the stockholders voted to increase capital from $200,000 to $250,000, and to add $37,000 to their $100,000 surplus. This gives the bank a working capital of close to $400,000.

"P ROTEST CERTIFICATES" to the U. S. Collector of Internal Revenue may be had of the secretary of the Illinois association, at 1030, The Rookery, Chicago.

T HROUGH the courtesy of the Hon. Franklin MacVeagh, secretary of the treasury, Secretary Crampton has secured samples of all the certificates, savings stamps and forms now in use at trial points in each state, and it would appear that the details have been worked out to cause as little injury to the business interests as possible. Those who have been hesitating to open savings departments on account of the government competition should go ahead with their plans, making this feature of their banks as attractive as possible.

I N its onward march the Continental and Commercial National, Chicago, soon will demolish all the buildings on the block surrounded by LaSalle, Adams, Quincy and Fifth Avenue and erect a 20-story skyscraper. This block includes the old Continental National building, the Rand McNally and the McCormick block.

P ROBABLY the bank buildings now occupied by the Continental and Commercial National and by the trust company will be put on the market. They are splendid properties, and have advanced greatly in value since coming into the present ownership.

"C HICAGO, a City of Destiny," will be the subject of the Goode lecture in Booth Hall, before the Chicago chapter on January 24th. There will be stereopticon illustrations.

A MONG the interesting changes taking place in the recent annual meetings in St. Louis banks was the election of William H. Thomson as vice-president of the Boatmens Bank. This was in the nature of a promotion, Mr. Thomson being cashier, and E. M. Hubbard was made cashier in his place. During the last fifty-seven years Mr. Thomson has been in the continuous employ of the Boatmens. He started in as a clerk, and has held every position except that of president. Mr. Thomson is famous for his geniality besides his ability as a financier, and is one of the picturesque figures in middle western banking. Mr. Hubbard was elected a member of the board of directors to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Rufus Lackland.

"F ARRELL gets fifty thousand a year," says a daily headline. We are not just sure that this is J. Fletcher, but it ought to be. (Attention of Mr. Tilden.)

G OVERNOR WOODROW WILSON—that's his title since high noon on Tuesday last.

F LETCHER AMERICAN NATIONAL, Indianapolis, has over $7,000,000 in bankers' balances, slightly more than half their total deposits.

Y OUR Uncle John S. Aisthorpe, of Cairo, has been chosen historian to cover the 21 years of life of the Illinois Bankers Association under the "old" constitution.

Bond Sales

The Chicago Railways Company has sold to the National City Bank and Harris, Forbes & Co., both of New York, approximately $15,000,000 first mortgage 5 per cent bonds.

Chicago city bonds are being closely held by investors. Although a new issue of \$3,500,000 of 4 per cents was put out only last November, very few of the city's securities are now on the market. This issue netted the syndicate a good profit. The larger part of the issue, \$3,150,000 was taken by the syndicate at 98.38. The present price is 99 $\frac{3}{4}$ @100.

The Crane company has increased its capital stock from $13,000,000 to $17,000,000, the shares being $100 each.

The \$60,000,000 4 $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent forty-nine year corporate stock of the city of New York was awarded to the syndicate comprising J. P. Morgan & Co., the National Bank of Commerce and the National City Bank on the joint bid of 100.987 for all or none. There were 549 bids, as compared with 423 bids at the sale last year.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co. announce that the $2,740,000 Illinois Central Railroad Company refunding mortgage 4 per cent bonds, purchased by them, have all been sold.

Increased dealings in the first mortgage 4 per cent bonds of the Northwestern Elevated Railroad Company are beginning to attract a great deal of attention. Sales on the Chicago exchange in one day recently aggregated \$50,000 at prices of 96 $\frac{3}{4}$ @96 $\frac{7}{8}$. The bonds mature in September of this year.

American Can preferred will increase its dividend rate from 5 per cent.

Money Steady

There is greater activity in the local money market than for six weeks past and rates are steady, with a promise of firmness. There is a continued activity in bonds, with a volume of business large enough to have a good effect on the money market. Mercantile and real estate calls for capital are increasing. Counter rates are 5 to 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent; secured loans 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 5; call loans 4 to 4 $\frac{1}{2}$.

C. H. Huttig Likes Aldrich Plan

St. Louis, January 26.—C. H. Huttig, president of the Third National of this city, says of Senator Aldrich's plan of banking reform: "I approve of the Aldrich plan, and believe it to be thoroughly practicable. The mode of electing directors of the bank would give the entire country proper representation and the general features of the bill are such as to preclude either political or Wall Street control. The plan is admirable in this respect, and should meet the approval of both parties and be put through congress on a non-partisan basis."

The text is down to date of December 27th last and those who desire to study it can have a copy on request.

Addison Corneau

Property valued at approximately $3,000,000, the site of the terminal of the Chicago and Western Indiana Railroad, in the vicinity of State and Polk streets, was conveyed this week by Addison Corneau to the Western Trust and Savings Bank of which he is an officer. The property has been acquired piece by piece for more than a year past, and consists of twenty-seven parcels in two deeds comprising 852 feet of frontage. The property was valued by the board of review at $1,366,495. It is subject to an incumbrance of $244,884.

Sees Good Times

J. Hugh Powers, manager of Mercantile Trust Company's bond department, was a St. Louis visitor at LaSalle Street National Tuesday. Mr. Powers reports an active bond business and an improvement in the money market. He says general trade is fully up to expectations all over the Southwest and a satisfactory year's business seems to be assured.

H. M. Whitney Head of Bank

Boston, January 24.—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Boulevard Trust Company of Brookline, Henry M. Whitney was elected president of the bank. The other officers elected are: First vice-president, Frank A. Russell; second vice-president, William A. McKenney; treasurer, George M. J. Bates, and actuary, Roswell C. Downer. The directors are the same as last year with the addition of Mr. Whitney.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

EXECUTIVE Council meeting for the big A. B. A. has been called for Nashville, May 1st, 2d and 3d. This announcement inadvertently was crowded out of last week's issue, but already plans have been laid for a snug little special train from Chicago to carry all those who can come through Chicago. You remember the fifty-two choice spirits who went to the Atlantic City meeting last year in a Pennsylvania special. This will be just as carefully planned and carried out.

PRESIDENT WATTS has been planning for this meeting and promises his friends on the council a fine time. There is a possibility that he will ask them to get in on Sunday morning, so as to include some out-door entertainment, Nashville being well on its way toward summer in May.

SESSIONS will cover the immense amount of new business under way in the council. Committee meetings will be held on Monday, May 1st, and the council meetings on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 2d and 3d. The arrangement of all details for these meetings was left with President Watts and General Secretary Farnsworth with power.

ALL of this was planned by the administrative committee of the association, comprised of the executive officers which met in New York January 16th and 17th. Their deliberations were largely on routine business matters. While some consideration was given to the next meeting place of the association, invitations having been received from San Antonio, New Orleans, Richmond and Atlantic City, the committee did not decide what recommendation it will make to the council in May. That matter will be decided at Nashville.

HOOPES of Texas claims San Antonio has it in a walk and a strong Texas lobby, including a lot of ex-Texans from Chicago and St. Louis, who favor the home state. Chicago has two or three assistant boomers who are advising their friends to "make reservations at San Antonio as a straight tip from me."

M. E. AILES, of Washington, D. C., has been appointed a delegate from the A. B. A. to attend the conference of the Pan American Union to be held in Washington during the week of February 13th.

YOU can have the "Aldrich plan" substantially as printed in last week's CHICAGO BANKER, but in a neat pamphlet form by addressing the National Monetary Commission at Washington

W. L. PARKS, cashier of the LaSalle National of LaSalle, Ill., tops his list of "principal correspondents" with First National Chicago and Continental and Commercial National, Chicago. Not a bad point to make on a statement folder either.

CORN EXCHANGE, Chicago, uses corn color in its paper stock for statements. Corn Exchange of Philadelphia uses for a trade mark an ear of corn, beautifully engraved.

TEXAS is the only state in the Union of such size that bankers in the various large financial centers find it necessary to occasionally charter a special train and spend a week on the road in order to visit their patrons and correspondents. Houston bankers will on January 22d board a private car and will spend four days visiting the cities and towns of South Texas which lie in what is designated as the Houston territory, the tour extending over the Gulf Coast country from Houston to Brownsville. The rapid agricultural development of the past two years and the opening of new banks as well as the creation of new channels for investment and loans have prompted this chartering of the "Houston Bankers' Special." Sixteen bankers and representatives of local trust companies will make the trip.

THE past year has been a very prosperous one for the Houston banks, the deposits for the year ending January 1, 1911, totalling $33,568,267. Houston expended $3,649,495 in new buildings last year and the real estate transactions in city and county totaled $22,083,814. On January 10th, the people of that city voted favorably upon a bond issue of $1,250,000, which is to be added to a like sum appropriated by the Federal government last February for the purpose of completing the Houston ship channel from its present depth of 18 feet to a minimum depth of 25 feet. The bankers of Houston predict for the city and that section a great era of prosperity and large capital will be invested in many enterprises that have been dormant, pending this final step toward the completion of the waterway which linked with Houston's seventeen railways renders it the leading inland port of the Southwest.

ILLINOIS TRUST, Chicago, in its statement folder includes a handy interest table for increasing the savings thrift of its 75,000 depositors, and publishes as proud a list of stockholders as any "doubting Thomas" could require.

NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL, Minneapolis, in its letter says: In the Twin Cities, trade at the close of the year compared quite favorably with a year ago, but owing to the poor crop in the Northwest and more particularly in North Dakota, banks having a large country correspondence show smaller deposits than last year and have been called upon to an unusual extent for assistance by bankers in the affected territory. Local rates for some time have averaged from one-half to one per cent higher than in financial centers further East. A slight sagging tendency developed at the end of the year.

E. C. STUART, who travels out for the Third National, St. Louis, will be authorized to affix a. c. after his name this year. He was promoted on merit.

FIRST NATIONAL AND FIRST TRUST, R. T. Forbes, president, St. Joseph, Mo., shows deposits of $4,723,612.40. Pays 4% for savings.

MOSTLY the Chicago bankers pleaded for time to think it over when asked for their opinions on the Aldrich plan. That's just what it requires, and plenty of it.

MR. REYNOLDS did say that "with such an organization of the banks as the plan provides for there will be eventually such a distribution of credit that the large centers will not have the dominating influence they now have, and with the plan put in full working order the probability of severe financial stress seems to be fairly eliminated.

WHAT Mr. Forgan said in part, was that: "The foundation principles on which it is based are the confederation of the national banks and the concentration of their cash reserves. The lack of these in our present system constitutes its greatest weakness and the plan proposed by Senator Aldrich, recognizing this weakness, evolves a method by which it can be overcome."

I HAVEN'T had an opportunity to digest Senator Aldrich's plan thoroughly," said Ernest A. Hamill, president of the Corn Exchange National. "The establishment of a reserve association such as it proposed is a big proposition. But insofar as the plan proposes a system of note issue somewhat along the lines of the issuance of clearing house certificates, as was done in the large cities during the financial stringency three years ago, I regard it with favor."

IT IS a large proposal and one I should not want to comment on until I can make myself thoroughly familiar with its details, as well as the general outline," said John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Trust and Savings Company. "I shall study it over with considerable interest at the earliest opportunity."

I CANNOT give an opinion on the practicability of Senator Aldrich's plan," said Orson Smith, president of the Merchants' Loan and Trust Company. "It is too momentous to be discussed without thorough study, and even then I don't know that I would want to express an opinion."

E. J. PARKER, president of the famous State Savings, Loan and Trust Co. of Quincy, reported to his annual meeting that "it has not been necessary this year to charge up anything to profit and loss." The board was increased in number and the old officials reappointed. Deposits are close to five millions.

IN three years the Northwestern State and National banks of Birmingham, Wash., combined, show an increase in deposits from $257,000 in 1908 to $874,691 in 1911. The officers are the same in both banks. I. J. Adair is president, C. K. McMillan and B. T. Drake are cashiers.

THIRD NATIONAL, St. Louis, reports $33,602,033.09, and keeps putting on speed. MECHANICS-AMERICAN, St. Louis, shows $32,660,347.41. Capital and surplus runs to $5,000,000.

The Quincy Plan

The Clearing House and the Chamber of Commerce, Quincy, Illinois, have a plan of their own which is the natural answer to "How do you like the Aldrich plan?"

Quincy, Ill., January 23.—When the Quincy, Ill., bankers received a letter from Secretary Crampton, of the Illinois Bankers Association calling their attention to the Aldrich plan and inquiring how they liked it, they merely pointed to the "Quincy plan" as prepared by the renowned economist and banker, E. J. Parker and a joint committee of which he was chairman. The committees represented the clearing house and the chamber of commerce and their plan was formulated in reply to a request for their opinion sent out by the National Board of Trade. It expresses the views of the Sage of Quincy and his associates as follows:

To the National Board of Trade:

Gentlemen: The undersigned joint special committee representing the Quincy Chamber of Commerce and the Clearing House Association, Quincy, Illinois, appointed to consider and prepare a paper containing suggestions on the national monetary question, begs leave to report as follows:

The Honorable A. Piatt Andrew, assistant secretary of the treasury and special assistant of the National Monetary Commission, Washington, D. C., read a paper in November, 1910, before the American Academy of Political and Social Science. We state substantially a few points made in his paper.

"About three years ago most of us found ourselves in a country where business was conducted by curious methods. It was a large and prosperous country whose people had long prided themselves upon their achievements in business and upon the superiority of their commercial and financial equipment; yet, singularly enough, in all of the leading cities of the country coin and legally authorized currency circulated at a premium; while the usual means of payment were inconvertible notes issued without sanction of law, by banks, railroads, mining companies, firms, and many other organizations. Obligations were met by such issues and not cash—nothing like them seen in this or other countries. Twenty-five thousand banks suddenly curtailed the facilities which they usually extended to the public. These banks for the most part unrelated and independent of each other, and simultaneously engaged in a life and death struggle.

"Harvests were plentiful, yet dealers in produce were refused credit when it was indispensable.

"Railroads were burdened with idle cars, thousands of men were thrown out of employment, thousands of firms went into bankruptcy; trade came to a standstill; the credit system ceased to operate. This too in the United States—not in South America or Islands of the seas.

"In the panics of 1873 and 1893 banks suspended specie payments as well as in 1907, and inconvertible illegal paper money took the place of coin and legal tender.

"In Europe no such general collapse of credit and general suspension has ever taken place, except in times of revolution and war."

Bankers and banking associations have endeavored to change such menacing conditions; congress, however, has paid but very little attention to their suggestions. Political measures and tariff schedules have taken precedence, and currency reform movements have been set aside. As a result panics have come on, enormous losses have been sustained and foreign and domestic commerce have become disorganized and their development retarded. It is reported that Senator Aldrich put the losses in the panic of 1907 at two billion dollars.

At last congress has appointed a National Monetary Commission and a partial statement of their investigations has been printed in many books, which men in active business will have but little time to read. Much of foreign banking methods cannot be made applicable to our own country. It is well that the commission is authorized to take several years in making its investigations and final recommendations.

It is our opinion that the present congress should not attempt to pass a measure which, like the so-called Aldrich-Vreeland bill, will be inadequate to meet conditions which will recur under our present mixed, rigid and unscientific currency system.

Commercial bodies in the leading cities have been asked to submit to the meeting of the National Board of Trade to be held in Washington January 18th, suggestions as to the legislation needed to avert panics and such conditions and losses as have been hereinbefore mentioned.

The Aldrich-Vreeland bill has, at the suggestion and urgent solicitation of the Honorable Franklin MacVeagh, secretary of the treasury, brought into existence a small number of National Currency Associations comprising a comparatively small number of national banks. Such National Currency Associations do not even represent all the assets of national banks, to say nothing of the very large assets represented by state banks, trust companies and private banks comprised in our present clearing house associations, and the assets of many large banking institutions scattered over our great country, not now members of clearing house associations.

Many bankers cannot realize the amount of currency which is absorbed in the West and South during the crop moving period. We should avail ourselves of our full banking power to meet such situations, especially as state banks and trust companies, as well as private banking institutions are increasing more rapidly in number, capital and deposits than national banks. To illustrate, we make the following comparative statement of the number of deposits of state and national banks of North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Iowa for the past twelve years:

In 1898 those states had 780 state banks with $90,823,000 in deposits. In 1909 they had gained 2,473 state banks and $389,856,000 in deposits. In the same states the nationals advanced from 288 to 824, a gain of only 536, or one third of the gain in state banks. The deposit gains about equaled the state bank gains.

On December 1, 1880, the deposits of national banks of the city of Chicago were $44,634,000.

On December 31, 1908, they were $378,197,678.

On December 31, 1891 (when the new State Banking Law was adopted) the deposits of the State Banks of the City of Chicago were $44,442,399.

On December 31, 1908, they were $362,165,080.

This we think will prove that the business of such sections of the country will require assistance and immediate relief through issues of clearing house associations and that they should not be compelled to rely solely upon the bond secured issues of national banks, which cannot respond to the business demands of the country; restricted, also, in using their reserves in times of stress; and whose currency issues are not retired when not needed—thus encouraging speculations, with the low rates of interest prevailing in congested centers.

Considering our vast and sparsely settled country; the great variety of climate, soil and seasons of production; traditional prejudice against government banks, and therefore against a great central bank, is there not something else to be considered? We think there is.

Congress should provide for the incorporation of clearing house associations under federal law, clothing them with larger authority than they can possess as private bodies; and give them the power of issuing clearing house notes, as well as clearing house certificates. Then the clearing houses would do legally, for the benefit of the community at large, what they now do in the issue of clearing house certificates extra legally and for their own benefit. (Chicago issued both clearing house notes, and clearing house certificates, in the panic of 1907, to the great advantage of all interests in this section of the country.)

This object might be attained by amending the Aldrich-Vreeland bill and giving to the currency associations therein provided for the additional powers necessary to enable them to act as clearing houses. Membership in such associations should be enlarged to include state banks which should be required to carry reserves on demand deposits equal to those required in the national banking act of the various classes of national banks.

This would prevent what we have at present, namely, the centralization and congestion of money in commercial centers, and speculation as an inevitable consequence. As things are now we contract credits instead of expanding them in times of great financial revulsion. This is precisely what we could avoid by issue of clearing house notes as well as clearing house certificates. Thus interest rates would be more uniform in all sections, and ample preparation could be made for the issue of currency based upon the assets and joint guaranty of clearing house members. Situations in the movement of crops of other unusual or extraordinary emergencies could be anticipated. Such clearing house issues, based only upon business transactions, could be made to operate immediately and automatically, that is to say, furnished when needed, and retired and redeemed when not required.

How slow, expensive and ineffectual a method of obtaining circulation would it be, for individual banks in every section of the country to send securities to a central eastern point to be used as a basis for currency issues.

Instead of such a bungling method, clearing house committees—in all sections of the country—could daily, and hourly, if necessary, pass upon the value of the assets of bank members (chiefly commercial paper, bonds, mortgages) as a basis for credit and note circulation. There is too much pyramiding of deposits in financial centers. Banks should have more gold and currency available in their vaults. If we are to have but one issue, secured by gold and a deposit of bank assets as security, to be periodically redeemed as were the note issues of the New England banks through the Suffolk Bank, Boston, and without loss; then it would seem with our vast extent of territory that federal clearing house associations, combining practically all the banking powers of the several states and territories and banking experience of practical men; entirely disassociated from political parties, could more readily and safely put out circulating notes, to both national and state banks, under limitations, as to the amount to be issued, and provision made for their redemption—than a so-called central bank not centrally located.

Central and government banks in England and on the continent have world wide business connections and fix rates of interest; we have not even developed banking relations on the western continent, nor in the orient.

Clearing house associations originally organized to facilitate daily settlements between banks in times of financial disturbances, might gradually be developed to enter these fields also. If the system of the subtreasury were changed they could secure the deposit of government revenues in the banks. Ultimately the demand issues of the government might be retired through their agency. Clearing house associations even now gradually are developing many other most important banking functions, to wit:

A—The installation of a system for the collection of country items. The first step in this direction was taken by Boston, and the example was soon followed by other clearing house associations with satisfactory results.

B—The introduction of a clearing house examiner, with power to examine, and without notice, the condition of its members. This movement was first taken up by Chicago and later followed in other centers.

C—The systematic investigation of commercial credits is another developing feature in the banking world. The co-operation of individual banks with the examiners of local clearing house associations, as well as the interchange of credit information between the clearing house associations of the different cities, will come in time, and greatly minimize, if not almost completely prevent losses, many times occasioned by the lack of information regarding the condition of borrowers.

The New York Clearing House Association issued certificates in as many as eight panics as follows:

In 1860, $7,357,000; 1861, $22,585,000; 1863, 11,471,000; 1864, $17,725,000; 1873, $22,400,000; 1884, $25,000,000; 1890, $16,000,000; 1893, $41,500,000.

Although an attempt was made in 1907 to handle the situation without the assistance of clearing house certificates, the New York Clearing House finally issued a large amount of them. In almost every instance the clearing house certificates were retired within four months after their issue.

Rate Decision is Deferred

News that the Interstate Commerce Commission had requested a postponement of the higher freight rates of the Western railroads until March 15th caused no surprise, as it had been expected generally in view of similar action by the commission in regard to the Eastern rates.

Those who subscribed to the $15,000,000 Chicago and Northwestern Railway general 4s, sold in December at 99, the same price at which $6,000,000 Delaware and Hudson 4s have just been placed, sold their bonds at a profit of better than one point in some cases.

Banking Opinion

"The money market is steady and the volume of bank transactions is increasing," said W. C. Cook, vice-president of Western Trust and Savings Bank, Wednesday.

"There is not much Western money in railroad stocks, and that explains in a measure the easy tone of the financial market here. Capital is being employed liberally in real estate as well as in manufacturing and jobbing, and the only unusual thing is the lack of investment in stocks.

"I am satisfied there will be a lively stock market as soon as the rate cases are decided. Naturally the market will boom if the decisions are favorable to the railroads. There may be a bad slump if the result is unfavorable to the companies. In either event there must be greater activity and that would mean more use for money. I am not advising speculation, but merely describing the money situation. Things are about normal in other lines.

"Merchants are prosperous, as their sales and collections indicate. Matters are less strained in the country. Farmers are selling their produce and liquidating their accounts. I am told that there will be a large acreage of grain and cotton again. It is reasonable to look for a bigger wheat crop than was harvested last season. All those things mean trade expansion and improvement, with a legitimate demand for capital at good rates. The tone of business has improved since New Year's so far as the West is concerned.

"Money has become easier in New York, while it has firmed up a little in Chicago. A rate decision favorable to the railroads would start business humming in the East. Bond activity in the local market has kept up. Sales are numerous in the line of gilt-edged securities. Perhaps they are better than they will be after the speculative markets become more lively. Real estate loans in this market are made on a 5 per cent basis. Money on call can be had around 4 to 4½ per cent. The general run of mercantile loans are 5 to 5½ per cent.

Another Security Bank

Stockholders of the Security Bank will vote shortly on a proposition to authorize an increase of $100,000 in the capital, the new stock to be sold at $200 a share. This will give the bank $400,000 capital and a surplus of about $250,000. It is understood to be part of the plan to declare a dividend of 50 per cent on the increased capital, the $200,000 thus produced to be used as the capital stock of a new bank, to be known as the Second Security Bank and located further out on Milwaukee avenue.

Philadelphia Clearing House Association

At the annual meeting of the Clearing House Association, Francisco B. Reeves, president of the Girard National Bank, was re-elected president of the association, and John C. Boyd, secretary.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

During the past three or four weeks an enormous amount of corn has been sold throughout the state. The hope of farmers embraced in the remark, "I'm waiting for forty cents," a remark which bankers had learned to expect from their agricultural patrons, became a reality. Corn did go to 40 cents and at some points touched 41 cents. As a result of this advance in prices a deluge of corn was thrown upon the market. Many way-stations bought more corn in a day or two than they had purchased in many days before. One of the smaller counties in the heart of the corn belt placed a million bushels of corn upon the market which means at forty cents a bushel that $400,000 would find its way into that county as soon as the corn was in the hands of the dealers. And a country newspaper in that small county remarked that this sum placed in the hands of farmers and merchants will help "to relieve the pressure." Surely the enormous sales of corn since the market "went up" will help to make farmers and bankers "easier" than they were when corn was being held for the most part.

The New State Bank of Ramsey, near Vandalia, has opened for business. H. L. Hunt is president, S. C. Morrison is vice-president, and H. L. Haynes is cashier. This is the second bank for Ramsey, the other being the Fayette County Bank.

Joseph G. Cannon Buys Bank Stock

A change in the directorate of the Second National of Danville has increased the share holdings of "Uncle Joe" Cannon in that institution. Orville W. Cannon, a director in the bank since the death of the late William P. Cannon, his father, who was the founder of the bank, resigned his office and placed his stock on the market for sale. President Michael E. King took up the shares and divided them between himself and the Danville congressman. This transfer makes President King and "Uncle Joe" owners of all of the thousand shares of the bank excepting about one hundred. They are now equal share holders. The Second National is a highly prosperous bank with the largest deposits of the six banks of Danville. As "Uncle Joe" is a director and a stockholder in the First National of Tuscola, where he spent his "starving days" as a young attorney, he is closely identified with the banking interests of Illinois.

Bloomington may Have New Bank

A new bank may be established in Bloomington as the result of the consolidation of the First and Third Nationals of that city. The Bloomington Pantagraph does not mention any names in connection with the new bank proposal but states that there are strong probabilities of the new movement being a success. It is said that some of the stockholders of the consolidated banks are dissatisfied with the movement. A meeting of those interested in the new project is to be held at an early date.

Report of State Banks

The report of State Auditor McCullough on the condition of the 518 state banks in Illinois at the commencement of business on January 9th, gives their total capital, surplus, contin-gent fund and undivided profits as $103,684,862.

This is an increase since November 11, 1910, the date of the last report, of $1,313,483. There were 505 state banks at the time this last report was made.

The total deposits, including the amount due to banks, is $574,344,266, an increase of $22,972,713. The per cent of reserve to deposits is 27.14.

Savings deposits, subject to notice, total $236,001,799, an increase of $6,874,483. Time certificate deposits aggregate $54,214,841 and demand deposits subject to check amount to $222,402,908.

The total loans on real estate amount to $73,161,982; on collateral security, $190,377,925. Other loans and discounts make a total of $144,020,203.

Bloomington Banker Stricken

A. B. Hoblit, cashier of the State National of Bloomington, is critically ill at his home in that city. He suffers from a stroke of apoplexy which prostrated him as he was returning to the bank after lunch a few days ago.

From the Frying Pan into the Fire

After being released from the Peoria county jail and giving bonds for $1,500, E. W. Butler, the banker of Ellisville fame, was immediately re-arrested and placed in the Fulton county jail in Lewiston. The way of the transgressor is not any easier than it was in the days of the Biblical writer.

Edward Hight, who recently failed at Macon, is conspicuous by his absence. He was last seen in Decatur January 6th. His case is now before the Macon county grand jury and a criminal charge of receiving deposits after he knew that his bank was insolvent may be preferred against him.

St. Louis Capital Buys I. T. S. Stock

The Illinois Traction System has sold about $900,000 of its stocks and bonds to investors in St. Louis. A syndicate was established in St. Louis recently by John Nickerson, Jr., of that city and W. G. Browne of Montreal for the disposition of $500,000 of the preferred stock of the I. T. S., or the "McKinley lines." This venture was a success and together with the stock already held in St. Louis brings the total of McKinley securities in that city up to almost a million dollars. Much of this preferred stock was held in Montreal from whence has come most of the funds used in the building of the Illinois Traction System. The McKinley people have sold this stock to St. Louis people as a first step in the listing of their securities on the St. Louis Stock Exchange.

Illinois Notes

Two new presidents of Illinois banks are E. R. White, of the Neoga National of Neoga, Cumberland county, and George Trenchard, of the First National of DeLand, Piatt county.

M. W. Busey, president of Busey's Bank of Urbana, is recuperating at West Baden Springs, Indiana. Mr. Busey has been in the banking business in Urbana for thirty-five years and during all of these years has not absented himself from the bank longer than five weeks at a time. He is known as one of the most careful and conservative private bankers in the state.

J. E. Amerman is the new cashier of the First National of Stronghurst, near Monmouth. Mr. Amerman is at the present time treasurer of Henderson county. Former cashier Elmer Taylor is removing to California.

A new state bank will be established at Danvers, McLean county, and will be known as the Danvers Farmers' State Bank. It will be capitalized at $40,000 and the stock will be distributed so that no one person will own more than ten shares. The men back of the movement are among the best in the vicinity of Danvers.

The will of the late Samuel Woolner, millionaire distiller and financier and a director of Peoria and Chicago banks, has been filed for probate at Peoria. Jewish orphanages and hospitals in Cleveland, Cincinnati and Denver are remembered while the bulk of the estate goes to immediate relatives.

Principal George R. Ray of the Elroy, Wis., public schools has instituted a savings bank in the local schools which bids fair to promote the habit of thrift among the pupils.

Those western financiers and speculators who acted on the straight tips given out last fall with respect to steel securities have had a prosperous season. There was a lively upward move in many speculative stocks during October. A money stringency late in the year, together with pessimistic railroad talk, caused a weak stock market, and steel remained a leader, whether going up or down.

Since the beginning of the new year money has been remarkably easy and stocks and bonds have had some advantage on this account. Another factor in the market has been the large holdings by bankers, both East and West, who got into the game when the Pearson syndicate collapsed. It was to the interest of banks to take over a large portion of this syndicate's collateral. Otherwise there would have been a general smash among the speculative element. The bankers have been liberally paid for their part in the operations and the knowledge that strong financiers who are not speculators in the ordinary sense were interested in stocks has kept many others on the bull side, despite Mr Hill's gloomy predictions.

Big Profits for Holders

There was an advance of seven points in steel during the first half of the present month and on this turn there were vast profits for the speculative field. Several of the western contingent made money fast on the last rise, getting in and out of the market from day to day and pocketing their earnings. They knew that so long as the bankers were holding the market the bull side was safe. This situation continues to this day, but with the advance many of the most sagacious men operating in steel have unloaded. The best advice that brokers are able to give at present is to sell on all two-day bulges and buy whenever there is a positive break.

Bankers as well as brokers feel that they are pretty near the top and that nothing short of an early decision by the Interstate Commerce Commission in favor of the railroads can enable them to hold securities on the present level. Since the first of the week there has been quiet unloading by a number of western people. In fact the market has had its main support in the concerted action of those who have agreed to remain on the holding side until the end of this month or until all complications connected with the Pearson deal are adjusted.

Easy Money a Market Factor

Since the end of the monetary stringency came in December stocks have been helped by the easy condition of the financial market. The fact has long been recognized in speculation that cheap money helps the security market. When capital is not actively employed in mercantile and manufacturing lines it turns naturally to bonds and stocks. By this reasoning a good many operators foretell a strong stock market all winter, for there is a prospect of a comfortable money market right up to crop moving time next summer.

While real estate is active, particularly in Chicago, there is nothing in the building program to seriously affect discount rates at the banks. Banking funds are in a large measure disassociated from real estate projects. To liven up the money market a large movement of merchandise, a demand for railroad supplies and a call for crop moving funds are essential. Money rates are steady but there is still an unusual amount of idle capital awaiting the spring's developments and stocks are being helped thereby. Taking all these considerations together an interesting speculative situation results. Another train of argument is to the effect that stocks will be pretty apt to boom again in the spring when railroad business is heavier than at present and after the Interstate Commerce Commission has lifted the uncertainty regarding rates.

Every market has its bull crowd—men who never see the top—and these speculators at present believe that the support which the market is getting from bankers and the coming improvement in general business will keep things humming for months to come, especially if the rate decision be favorable to the corporations.

Structural Iron is Active

Western orders for structural iron and building hardware have rapidly increased since the beginning of the year. Real estate development is more noticeable in the West than in the East. The many large projects in Chicago have been a source of animation in the market.

There are some fairly good-sized contracts for rail orders in the market which are expected to be placed within a short time. Negotiations are still pending regarding the Pennsylvania and the New York Central requirements, but it is expected that a final decision will be arrived at within a short time. The New Haven Railroad may close a contract soon for 20,000 tons of rails, and the Boston & Maine is in the market for 30,000 tons. The Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad has ordered 3,000 tons of heavy section rails from the Pennsylvania Steel Co., and is said to have asked bids for 10,000 tons additional.

Quite a few orders for bridge and pier work are in the market. The Pennsylvania Steel Co. will furnish 150 tons for an overhead bridge in Baltimore for the Pennsylvania Railroad and another bridge contract in the same city for 1,500 tons.

The Oregon Railroad & Navigation Co. has placed a contract for the Willamette River bridge with the American Bridge Co., calling for 9,000 tons.

prices for cattle in the near future. Interior bankers say that the cattle business has been far from satisfactory to farmers and those whose interests are identified with theirs. The high price of meat in recent years has not to any great extent represented profits for first owners, but rather for feeders, packers and butchers. The man who raises the animal and bears the heaviest risk in getting him to market is the poorest paid of all who have anything to do with the business. This claim is made in good faith by cattle raisers and is supported by bankers who have close relation with farming.

According to this opinion the farmer must get more for cattle or quit this branch of his business. That many land owners are curtailing the production of live stock for the reason outlined can be officially demonstrated. Estimates of the department of agriculture show that the production of beef cattle has not kept pace with the growth of the population, and although the census statistics are not yet available it is certain that even the department's estimates are decidedly too high. In Iowa, for example, for which the census figures are available the total number of neat cattle falls 1,000,000 short of the estimate—a discrepancy of 25 per cent.

No Further Decline Likely

Despite these conditions, corn-fed steers are from a cent and one-half to a cent and three-quarters cheaper than they were a year ago. While conditions may be satisfactory to the consumer, they are decidedly unsatisfactory to the farmer, and as long as they remain so the decrease in the supply of cattle will continue. But already there are indications that the bottom has been reached and that in the not very distant future the price of beef cattle will advance.

The comparatively low price of corn does not explain why beef should be so low. The simple truth is that in recent manipulation of the market stock raisers have had the worst of it. The price of beef cattle to first owners has for years been below the cost of production, and the farmer has had every incentive to give up cattle raising and to sell his grain. The short pasturage in the corn belt and the rapid disappearance of the range, accentuated the past season by the drouth, have accelerated the movement, and during the last year young cattle, breeding cattle and half-fattened bullocks have been sent to the shambles.

Buyers and packers have continued to make fair profits from beef, for while retail prices have been somewhat reduced the cut has come on the farmer and not on the middleman.

Busy Yeggs

From the accounts in the local press of the Middle West it is noted that the "Yegg" burglars have been very busy since what is known as the "Yegg" season opened, which is about September 1st of each year. Of all the burglaries and hold-ups in the states where the "Yegg" burglars have been operating very extensively since September 1, 1910, namely; Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma, none of the above crimes have been committed on a member of the American Bankers Association, or even an attempt made since the date above mentioned, which covers a period of over four months. It can readily be seen that the "Yeggs" avoid members of that association, for they know that the sign of the American Bankers Association stands for money, and if they attack any of the members of that association, they will be vigorously pursued until they are apprehended, regardless of the cost.

The following is a copy of a letter recently received by the American Bankers Association from one of its members in the state of Kansas, which speaks for itself:

"We wish to say that two or three banks at this place were robbed last Friday night and our safe was not touched. We believe we owe our escape from attack to protection of the American Bankers Association."

Trade Improving

Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Wholesale operation in the dry goods and notions during the week have shown activity in the large volume of orders for immediate delivery. Retailers, who have been buying conservatively, find that their stocks are low and the demand on the part of consumers continues so heavy that they are compelled to do an extensive filling in business.

"Large numbers of Pacific coast and intermountain merchants have been in the market placing orders for both immediate and future shipments. One Western man, characteristic of many from that region, reports a 22 per cent increase in his business during January up to date over the corresponding period a year ago.

"Merchants, alive to market conditions, realize that linens can be purchased now cheaper than they can be six months hence, and are placing large orders for general lines, such as crashes, damasks, toweling, etc. The shortage of last year's flax crop may possibly mean a scarcity in these lines before long."

Valentine P. Snyder Resigns as President

Valentine P. Snyder, president of the National Bank of Commerce, announced his determination to retire after more than forty years of continuous service in the banking field of New York. President Snyder has had it in mind for several years past to give up active work, and retained the presidency of the National Bank of Commerce during the last year only at the solicitation of the board of directors. The board accepted his resignation to become effective April 1st, and passed resolutions extolling his services, saying that during the entire period of his presidency the bank had in volume of business been second to only one other in this country, and "in point of character second to none."

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Since the first of the year business in Milwaukee has shown signs of considerable improvement as indicated by bank deposits and the daily clearings which have held well up to normal. Where a few months ago there were numbers of rumors concerning the closing down of some of the larger manufacturers in the spring there now appears to be a more optimistic trend and the number of idle men will not amount to more than usual at this time of the year.

Demand for loans is not above normal and banks generally report collections as fair. In the bond trade there has been considerable awakening and a number of large sales are reported while the general small trade is well up to the average.

First Savings and Trust Company

The organization of the First Savings and Trust Company, successor to the Milwaukee Trust Company and the Fidelity Trust Company of Milwaukee, both of which were taken over recently by the First National Bank, was completed at a meeting of the stockholders held January 23d.

The old officers of the Milwaukee Trust Company were elected as officers of the First Savings and Trust Company and Charles P. Wild, of the law firm of Winkler, Flanders, Bottum Fawcett, was elected trust officer.

The following new directors were elected: Charles F. Pfister and William Bigelow of the First National Bank and Howard Greene and Ludington Patton, formerly of the Fidelity manager of bond department, N. D. Jay, and directors, Robert Camp, D. C. Green, Charles Allis, John I. Beggs, Fred T. Goll, George P. Mayer, Fred Vogel, Jr., Charles F. Pfister, William Bigelow, Howard Greene and Ludington Patton.

The company will continue the business of the Milwaukee Trust Company and of the Fidelity Trust Company under the new name but under different stock ownership. The First National Bank owns the stock of the First Savings and Trust Company and in due course of time will turn it over to the stockholders of the bank under a trust arrangement. Under this arrangement the trust company stock will belong to the bank stock but will not be transferable separately. By this plan of stock ownership the control of the trust company will always vest in the stockholders of the bank.

Kenosha Banker Succeeds Bergh

A. E. Kuolt of Kenosha is named as banking commissioner to succeed M. C. Bergh. The nomination of Mr. Kuolt to succeed Commissioner Bergh was somewhat of a surprise though for some time there have been vague whisperings that the transmutation of politics might thus eventuate. Mr. Bergh was first appointed when J. O. Davidson was state treasurer and when the law was changed he was reappointed by Governor La Follette.

A. E. Kuolt is well known in Madison official circles, having been employed in various capacities during the Upham term. For a time he held a clerical position in the office of Secretary of State Henry Casson. He then went into the insurance commissioner's office under Commissioner Fricke and afterward became associated with Commissioner Bergh as one of the deputy bank examiners. He resigned this position about four years ago to become cashier of the Merchants and Savings Bank of Kenosha.

In an open letter to the Milwaukee Sentinel, George D. Bartlett, secretary of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, has the following to say concerning Mr. Bergh's tenure of office:

"Those who have been familiar with banking legislation in Wisconsin have long known that Commissioner Bergh has remained in that office for some time at a financial loss to himself, as compared with other positions he might have had, and it was largely because his office was not considered a political one that he has been willing to give so much of his energy and study to perfecting the Wisconsin banking laws in a way that would give depositors in Wisconsin banks the greatest possible safety. That he has succeeded is evidenced by the fact that no depositor in a state bank of Wisconsin has lost a dollar through bank failures in the last five years, a record which should be given some considerable weight before attempting to change bank commissioners."

Annual State Convention in July

The annual state convention of the Wisconsin Bankers Association has been set for about July 20th, the exact date to be later announced. This date, so far as other schedules have been announced will not conflict with other state conventions and will give the various groups of Wisconsin an opportunity to hold their annual meetings before the state meeting.

$2,000,000 in New Buildings

There will be about $2,000,000 invested in new bank buildings in Milwaukee in the next two years if plans under way are carried out. The plans for the new Marshall & Ilsley bank building are nearing completion and while no statement has as yet been made as to the cost of the building it will undoubtedly be one of the finest structures in the middle west and for a long time to come will rank all other Milwaukee bank buildings.

The stockholders of the Second Ward Savings bank have approved the project to replace the present building and while definite plans have not been announced, President Uihlein is quoted as saying: "We will have sketches made and selections soon and we shall try to erect a building that will be an ornament to the city. The new home of the Second Ward Savings Bank will probably not be more than one or two stories in height and it will be for the exclusive use of the bank. This bank is also erecting two modern branch bank buildings which will be ready for occupancy within a short time.

The First National Bank and the First Savings and Trust Company will also occupy a new home within the not distant future but the site has not as yet been fully decided upon. Options have been secured upon property about a block distant from the present site but it is thought by many that a new building will be erected upon the present site of the Milwaukee Trust Company, recently absorbed by the First National Bank as this is the logical location for the new building, all things being considered.

Some Needed Legislation

At the meeting of the executive council of the Wisconsin Bankers Association held at association headquarters during the past week considerable time was spent in discussing proposed bank legislation in this state.

One of the measures discussed was some method which would result in a decrease of forgeries in Wisconsin and to this end banks will probably be compelled by law to keep all blank checks off from counters or where the general public has ready access to them. Arrangements will also probably be made with some manufacturer of paper stock to produce a special paper suitable for checks, etc., bearing a watermark consisting of the now well known emblem of the triangle of the state association. This paper will be supplied to such printing firms as have the endorsement of the association and banks will have their checks printed by them.

Lombard is Re-elected President

J. W. P. Lombard, president of the National Exchange Bank, was re-elected president of the Milwaukee Clearing House Association at its annual meeting held during the past week. Other officers who were re-elected are as follows; Vice-president, James K. Ilsley, president of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank; manager, George W. Strohmeyer, president of the Milwaukee National Bank; clearing house committee, Frederick Kasten of the Wisconsin National Bank; William Bigelow of the First National Bank; Washington Becker of the Marine National Bank; Charles C. Schmidt of the Second Ward Savings Bank, and Alfred G. Schultz of the Germania National Bank.

Oliver C. Fuller Enjoys New Distinction

Oliver C. Fuller, president of the Wisconsin Trust Company, enjoys the distinction of being the first Wisconsin golfer to be elected to an office in the Western Golfing Association, having been elected as treasurer for the ensuing year.

Mr. Fuller is one of the best known Milwaukee golfers and is the president of the Milwaukee Country Club.

Notes About the State

The Oshkosh Clearing House has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Herman Eilers, cashier of the South Side Exchange Bank; vice-president, Charles Schriber, vice-president of the Old National Bank, and manager, C. H. Krippene, secretary of the Oshkosh Savings and Trust Company.

W. S. Henry, assistant cashier of the Farmers & Merchants Bank of Jefferson has resigned both as an officer and director and his position has been filled by the election of Lynn H. Smith as a director and W. A. Much and W. S. Kispert as assistant cashiers.

J. H. Taylor, vice-president of the McCartney National Bank, of Green Bay, his wife and daughter, have left on an extended tour of Europe and Mediterranean ports. They will remain away for four months.

Articles of incorporation of the Farmers State Bank, with Frank J. Beau, Otto J. Beau and Henry S. Beau, of Calvary Station have been filed. The new bank will be located at Calvary Station, Town of Marshfield, and capital stock of $15,000, divided into 150 shares of $100 each.

Changes in La Crosse Bank

A. Hirshheimer, president of the La Crosse Plow Company, has been advanced to president of the Batavian National at La Crosse, and Cashier E. M. Wing succeeds Mr. Hirshheimer as vice-president. Forgers Becoming Active

During the past few weeks there appears to have been an epidemic of check forgers and swindlers throughout the state and as yet most of these operators are at large. Walter Christianson was recently arrested at Racine for having uttered a forged check and presenting same at the Commercial & Savings Bank. He has since confessed to prior similar work. At Burlington, two men giving the names of Carswell and Lovejoy issued checks drawn on the German-American Bank of Milwaukee, which were returned marked "no funds." The two men are reported to have worked the same swindle at New London a few days before.

Salt Lake City, January 23.—State Bank Examiner C. A. Glazier to-day assumed charge of the affairs of the Utah Banking Company's banks at Lehigh and American Fork, Utah.

The two institutions closed this morning. Heavy demands upon the banks, a steady withdrawal of deposits and inability to realize promptly on assets are blamed for the suspension. Ira D. Wines is president of the company. It is declared the banks are prepared to pay depositors in full.

Money Market and its Control by Laws of Supply and Demand

Charles Thornton Libbey, Portland, Maine, has designed and keyed an explanation of his theory that the general law of supply and demand controls and always restores the equilibrium of the money market or "demand for money" so called. This is the way he states it and it deserves some study.:

If supply is fortuitously increased, price falls, supply is checked—equilibrium restored.

If supply is fortuitously decreased, price rises, supply is stimulated—equilibrium restored.

If demand is fortuitously decreased, price rises, supply is stimulated—equilibrium restored.

If demand is fortuitously decreased, price falls, supply is checked—equilibrium restored.

1. Supply of gold for free coinage, or for bank reserves, or supply of loans resulting in bank deposits or "cash in bank," or supply of banknotes, or of fiat money, or supply of foreign exchange drawn against loans borrowed abroad or securities sold abroad, or law reducing bank reserve requirements.

2. The price of money in goods, etc., falls, i. e., the prices of the goods rise.

3. To check the supply of money in response to a rise in commodity prices requires that the tendency of bankers be overruled, but the community will insist that this be done when once they understand. Just as there would be a public outcry against tampering with the length of the yardstick, so there will be against increasing the supply of money when the demand is decreasing, once it is commonly understood.

4. The opposite of 1.

5. The opposite of 2.

6. To increase the supply of money when falling commodity prices show an increase in the demand for cash requires that the tendency of bankers (to contract the currency when the demand for loans falls off) shall be overruled, but the community will tolerate no other course when once they understand.

7. If a movement to turn goods, etc., into cash springs up.

8. If a movement to hold goods for higher prices springs up.

9. A condition where business men as a whole expect neither higher nor lower general prices; where the monetary situation is not threatening either inflation or contraction; where there is neither over-ordering caused by a cheapening buying value of the dollar nor under-ordering caused by an enhancing buying value of the dollar; business is progressing "on an even keel."

Mr. Libbey further explains the monetary paradox in his own language as follows: "The explanation is that when money begins to lose its purchasing power a demand for loans always sets in by people wanting to buy things 'for the rise,' that is, when the demand for money, represented by the amount of products, goods, etc., offered for a dollar, decreases, the demand for loans increases. On the other hand, when the demand for money, as shown by the amount of products, goods, etc., offered for a dollar, is increasing, the demand for loans decreases, because people wish to delay buying things when the prices are going lower, and so do not require borrowed money.

"The practice of bankers has been to try to swell the volume of loans and currency when the demand for loans increases and to contract them when the demand for loans decreases, which is just the opposite from making money respond to the law of supply and demand.

"If the volume of cash, on hand and in bank, can be increased when the demand for money (NOT loans) increases, and decreased when the demand decreases, an end will be put to our disastrous fluctuations or 'cycles' of good times and bad times.

"Monetary equilibrium, free from any tendency, either to make extra purchases 'for the rise,' or to delay making customary purchases for fear of falling prices, will be maintained, because the least wavering in either direction will be at once corrected, merely by applying the law of supply and demand truly.

"Once the community at large understands this, they will insist on its being done, for they will not tolerate, unnecessarily, either a period of spurting business, day and night shifts, help drawn away from the farms, and money that falls down when they go to spend it, nor the alternate periods of business prostration, idle men and machinery, transportation facilities run at a loss, and the fresh help from the farms retained in the mills while others useless on the farms are turned out of work."

Deposits Gain a Million

Another million dollars has been added to the deposits of the banks of Madison county, Ill., during the past year.

Haitien Banking

Another financial situation in Latin-America is seriously engaging the attention of the state department with a view to protecting American interests in the confused monetary condition of Haiti.

It is proposed by Haiti to substitute for the Haitien National Bank, a French corporation which controls the financial dealings of the country, a similar banking concession to be granted to a group of German, French and American bankers, the German interests predominating. Some time ago the United States protested against the proposed arrangement on the ground that American interests were not properly protected. Since then the Haitien government has made some modifications in its original plan. The changes have not been sufficient, however, in the opinion of the state department, to warrant the withdrawal of the American protest.

In connection with the national bank concession, Haiti is endeavoring to float a loan to fund its interior debt.

F. & M. National Holds Reception

Indianapolis, Ind., January 26.—The Farmers' & Merchants' National of Wabash held an informal reception for the public last evening. The hours were from 7:30 to 9:30 and the officers and directors welcomed all desiring to inspect the elegant new banking home, the massive vaults and all the facilities of the new institution. The ladies were especially invited and all who may visit the institution Wednesday evening are assured a courteous welcome. A number of out-of-town bankers were present.—Wabash Plain Dealer.

Judge James Madison Pereles, former president of the Citizens Trust Company of Milwaukee, who died recently, left an estate of $100,000 with an annual income of $7,000. The widow is authorized in the will to continue the charities to which Mr. Pereles has contributed for so many years.

The Onida State Bank, S. D., temporarily indisposed because of withdrawals, was announced to open January 8th under management of C. L. Mellett of Fort Pierre. It has been re-organized with Charles T. Towne, of Midland, as cashier. Depositors are not to lose.

Editorial Comment

Rough Weather for Banking Legislation

Publication of Senator Aldrich's plan for a new banking and currency system has stirred up all the old fighters on this and kindred subjects. While it isn't likely that any bill of this importance would get through congress without trouble it is expected that the Aldrich plan will meet with rough weather from the start. It may be that the whole thing only is a demonstration on the part of the administration that it really tried to make good on party platform pledges. Likely there will be some fair activity from that quarter, for President Taft believes that his administration should go before the country with a currency plan for party reasons.

The chief executive is in harmony with congress in the whole matter, but just now congressmen are busy hunting up old bills that they may go before their constituents and claim Aldrich only copied their earlier, much earlier, efforts. Our old friend Fowler has led off in this direction, and many influential papers credit him with the best part of the Aldrich plan. Not one of these discoverers wants to see his own ideas put into law—not if Aldrich is to have the entire credit. The senator, if not up in such matters, might have a compiler go through his plan and give credit where honestly due.

Nothing can be done at this session. The absence of Senator Aldrich would be reason enough for not calling the matter up. After March 4th the house will be Democratic, and the first move probably will come in the senate. The real trouble will come in the house where the representation is much more direct. This always has been true, but will be greatly emphasized by the change of party power. The house with a new banking and currency committee, with a new chairman in Vreeland's place, may formulate a plan of its own. Many of the old time currency members have come back to congress on the tidal wave, and this will help roughen the weather for the Aldrich plan when put upon passage.

Freight Rate Decisions

Railroad officials and their attorneys have been led to expect decisions in the freight rate cases between this time and March 1st. It is a general expectation also that the decisions will be favorable to the companies.

According to experts the decisions will be for or against the railroads with no compromise. To grant a percentage of the increase is apparently impossible, for to do so the commission would have to open up the whole matter and decide which rates should bear the percentage of increase and how much.

road Company. They are not regarded as serious and are expected to be adjusted within a short time, but under the terms of the original issue the notes are said to be illegal in that the company by some oversight failed to comply with the law.

Federal Supervision

Federal supervision received support in high quarters, this week, when George M. Reynolds tentatively indorsed that advanced governmental theory. He did not enthuse, but in his usual fair minded way stated that he "favored federal supervision as a safeguard for the future." He did not indorse federal control, however, and clearly defined his objections to going so far. Mr. Reynolds would like to see an end to roads being built "for sale" to a trunk line. These enterprises, he said, are the chief offenders in the stock watering jobs of which financial men and the public are so tired. One of his utterances was that "Capital can be no more patriotic than the men are who control it," and most persons will agree that the mere enactment of laws cannot change these conditions much. In conclusion Mr. Reynolds said: "Railroad securities are becoming more widely distributed in the West than ever before, and if this section of the country enjoys another twenty-five years as prosperous as the last twenty-five the whole western country will participate as largely in financial undertakings as the East does now."

Improve the Bank Inspection

One conclusion stands out conspicuously in connection with recent bank failures in the United States and Canada. This is that there is crying need of better bank inspection. All banks should be inspected and the inspection itself should be improved.

The important failures in New York and Canada this winter probably would not have occurred had there been rigid, impartial, thorough inspection. At least there would have been no loss to depositors. Likewise the collapse of several private concerns in Illinois would have been prevented had they been subject to such an inspection as would have detected the misuse of funds.

Dickens once wrote that while picking pockets is dangerous, a man has only to rig up an office with fancy brass grill-work and gilt signs and call it a bank, and people will rush in and hand their money over the counter without a murmur.

Some of the recent bank closings in New York are taken to show that the methods in vogue in the days of Dickens are still in style, and one of the "bankers" now in jail is being classed with famous criminals of days gone by who were clever enough to dupe trusting depositors, but not clever enough to see that honesty is the best policy. In New York during the past few weeks a state bank, a savings bank, and a trust company carrying deposits amounting to many millions of dollars have been closed by order of the state superintendent of banks, while a number of other big financial institutions were only saved from disaster during the panicky period which followed by the prompt intervention of the Morgan interests. Although the effects of this sudden breakdown were promptly circumscribed, it served, as many papers remarked, to flash once more a glaring light on "weak spots" in our banking system.

Good Showing of Western Banks

Of the thirty $25,000,000 national banks in the United States a small majority reported lower deposits in their statements as of January 17, 1911, than were shown in the figures of November 10, 1910, and two-thirds of the list showed material decreases from the deposit figures of January 31st last year.

Naturally the most significant decreases were reported by the larger banks of New York. A very large part of the deposits in those institutions represent the balances of outside institutions, which for several months of the last year drew money out of New York.

The largest of the Chicago banks reported decreased deposits on January 7th, but they held more even amounts than was the case with the leading New York banks. Several of the more important national banks in middle Western cities had larger deposits on January 7th than at the time of the calls two months and a year before.

Forgan on the Aldrich Plan

James B. Forgan, who returned Monday from New York, has been asked to review the Aldrich national reserve association plan for President Taft. He will write his findings and suggestions in the near future and send them on to Washington.

Mr. Forgan looks more favorably on the plan now than he did after his first reading of it. "The more I study the matter," he said, "the more I am convinced that the scheme has been ingeniously worked out and that it will be of value to the country. There are several changes which practical bankers can suggest, but they really affect only minor matters. With proper amendment I believe that the Aldrich plan can be worked up so that it will almost perfectly meet the financial necessities of this country."

Union Trust

F. H. Rawson has issued a tastefully printed "annual statement" showing the growth of the Union Trust, Chicago. Deposits are $16,470,562.38. He is emphatic upon the success of the women's department established in 1909.

Ask A. B. A. Honors

Citizens of San Antonio expect to be able to secure the next A. B. A. convention and give strong assurances of being able to accommodate the usual gathering of from three thousand to five thousand persons. On this point W. H. Hurley, assistant cashier of National Bank of the Republic, said to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER the fore part of the week:

"No doubt many are of the opinion that San Antonio cannot entertain the convention on account of inadequate hotel accommodations. That is a mistake, however, as the best hotels in the South are located in San Antonio. They are modern hotels operated on the same plans as the hotels in the largest cities of the country. San Antonio is a popular winter resort, and thousands of people from the states in the North and West spend the winter there to benefit by the climate. There are numerous private hotels, and one can secure almost any kind of accommodations desired.

"San Antonio is a very interesting place to visit from an historical standpoint, as it is there that the Alamo stands—that little stone building where a handful of Texans resisted an attack by a large number of Mexicans, until by pressure of numbers they were compelled to capitulate and were slaughtered, fighting to the last. The slogan, Remember the Alamo, will be handed down from generation to generation. The old missions still stand and are objects of great interest. There are a number of beautiful parks and other places to visit.

"San Antonio is not a Mexican town. It was at one time, and still has a very large Mexican population. Many of the narrow streets have been widened, and while it still possesses characteristics peculiar to itself which add to its interest, San Antonio has developed into a beautiful city of which any state or country in the world might well be proud. Commercially the city occupies a very important position, as it has a wide expanse of country to cater to and its business extends into Mexico. It has a great many very strong financial institutions.

"San Antonio is an accessible town, as the main line of the Southern Pacific System passes through en route to Los Angeles, crossing a beautiful stretch of country. Those coming from the East can make direct connections at New Orleans, and those living in the Central West can come in over the Iron Mountain and connect with the I. N. & G. N. at Longview. Besides these roads, the M. K. & T. and the Santa Fe also have direct connections, either on their own lines or by arrangements for using the tracks of other railroads.

"It would be worth while for the bankers from the centers to visit the great Empire of Texas. Just think what that state means to us. What would we do to offset our balance of trade were it not for our cotton exports? And Texas produces one-third of this crop—so Northern bankers should go down and get acquainted with her people.

"Should San Antonio be selected, those who attend will have no cause to complain of the treatment accorded. Southern hospitality is proverbial, and all may count on having a good time. The entertainment will be varied, and I hope that the executive committee of the American Bankers Association will select San Antonio as the place for the next meeting of the association."

The retiring state treasurer of North Dakota, G. Luther Bickford, was arrested this afternoon on a warrant charging him with misappropriating $74,000.

Wheat is Active

Wheat has been active this week, with exciting fluctuations. On Monday the May option dropped to 98 cents, a decline of nearly 5 cents from the highest point. Before the day closed there was a sharp recovery under buying by large houses.

The course of the market since then shows that holders are in control, but it is evident they are not receiving much encouragement from Europe. The price for May holds around $1.00, and for July 95 cents.

Apprehension regarding the safety of the winter crop, especially in the Southwest, where the plant had been stunted by lack of moisture, formed one of the principal features in favor of the bull movement, aided to some extent by the moderate movement in the West, which for five days amounted to about 1,000,000 bushels under that of last year.

Markets abroad continued to show reluctance over the bull movement here, and a foreign authority stated that while European import requirements this season would prove much larger than last season, the export movement from principal shipping countries already had been heavy and for the remainder of the season European requirements would probably not be more than normal. The milling demand in the West continued disappointing, while the export movement from the United States was light.

Corn also moved within a narrow range, holding close to the 50c. mark for May in Chicago.

Directors of the Germania Bank, Minneapolis, have declared the 4 per cent semi-annual dividend and increased the surplus to $20,000. They set aside $675 for the undivided earnings column.

Bank Expansion

Rapid growth of business and urgent need of new departments have compelled Fort Dearborn National to procure more spacious banking quarters. For several months President Wm. A. Tilden and his associates have been casting about for the purchase of a suitable building. This week they have secured the American Trust building at the northeast corner of Monroe and Clark streets.

The price paid is in excess of $2,900,000, which gives the transaction the distinction of being the largest single one ever concluded in the city, exceeding by a small margin the recent purchase by Mrs. Mollie Netcher of the fee under Hillman's for which she paid an even $2,900,000.

The property was purchased specially as a home for Fort Dearborn National, the buying syndicate being headed by President Tilden and his brother, Edward Tilden. The bank is to get possession of its new three million dollar home April 1st, and will remove to the new location as soon thereafter as the offices can be remodeled to suit the business.

Trust and Savings Departments

Fort Dearborn National up to this time has refrained from organizing trust and savings departments simply because its old offices do not afford the necessary room. These branches are urgently needed by its customers, and will be organized as soon as practicable after the removal next spring. A foreign exchange department was organized several weeks ago, and this will be enlarged to correspond with the general expansion. The officials state that so urgently have they needed a savings department one would have been established within the year by some shift even had the negotiations for the American Trust building not materialized. This building is now occupied by Continental-Commercial Trust, and is a model of its kind. It has a frontage on practically 125 feet on Clark Street and 90 feet on Monroe Street, and cost its builders, the American Trust and Savings Bank, about $1,500,000 in 1905.

Between this time and April 1st the Continental-Commercial Trust offices will be removed to the building of the bank proper, at Clark and Adams, where it will have ample room and the advantage of President Reynolds' direct management. It is expected that the Tilden organization will continue to accommodate the many other tenants of the Trust building.

Fort Dearborn's Growth

Remarkable growth is shown by Fort Dearborn National, and its new departments will make it one of the largest banks in the country, as it is to-day one of the most active and popular. Its great success is due to the progressive spirit of the entire official staff.

An evidence of the growth and strength of the bank is shown in the deposits. Three years ago this month Fort Dearborn National's deposits were $9,887,954. Last month when the comptroller's call was made they footed up $16,736,997. In the three weeks since that date they have mounted to $19,000,000. When it is considered that the bank has not conducted a savings department the officers feel that the record of their institution is worthy of note. All branches of commercial banking will be conducted in the new building with a vigor which is expected to largely and quickly expand the business as a whole.

Values Advance Rapidly

The land involved in this three million dollar deal cost the American Trust $960,000, and the property, improved, represented an investment of $2,500,000. Such was the rapid advance of land values on Clark Street following the bank's purchase, however, and largely because of it, that it is said the bank refused an advance of $250,000 for the ground before even preliminary work had begun on the building.

As it is the present sale represents a profit of nearly $500,000 to the bank. The determination to sell the property was fixed immediately following consolidation with the Commercial National Bank, which gave it the large quarters of the latter.

The Continental-Commercial has another big deal on and that is the sale of its present building at Clark and Adams streets and it is understood the Commonwealth-Edison is the prospective purchaser. Its engineers have decided that it will fully meet the company's needs, but it may be some time before the deal is closed, as the bank does not count on getting into its proposed new building at LaSalle and Adams inside of three years.

Chicago Bank Gets Full Amount

A decision handed down by the local circuit court Thursday in the suit of the Mutual Bank of Chicago, to collect a $50,000 certificate of deposit in the Euclid Avenue Trust Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, gives the Chicago bank the full amount. The certificate was issued to P. J. Kieran, of the Fidelity Funding Company, and was turned over to the Mutual Bank to secure a loan of that amount that Kieran had negotiated. It was this certificate of stock that precipitated the exposure of the Kieran transactions.

The annual election of the Chicago Clearing House was held last week and resulted as follows:

Women Bankers

Central Trust Opens Women's Department

Central Trust Company of Illinois has recently established a women's department, which occupies the beautifully appointed room immediately at the left after entering the main banking room.

No bank in the city is better fitted by its location and arrangement to care for its women patrons than is Central Trust Company of Illinois. Situated on Monroe Street, between Clark and LaSalle, it is easily reached from all parts of the city, the north side cars passing its door, and many of the south side and west side lines passing within a block; the banking department, on the street level, does away with any climbing of stairs or tiresome waits for elevators. The beautiful room, with its marble walls and mahogany finish, its handsome table for writing, and the comfortable chairs, its soft lights and generally restful and satisfying appearance, makes the transaction of business here a pleasure to women who appreciate surroundings that are artistic as well as convenient.

Miss H. W. Waters, who is the manager of this new department for women, has come to the work qualified by many years' business experience, both in this bank and elsewhere in other lines of business, and has a practical knowledge of banking from both sides, that of the customer and that of the bank. She personally attends to the opening of new savings accounts for women, and will be glad to direct them as to the best manner to accomplish what they desire in a business way.

Banker is Found Guilty

William Adler, former president of the defunct State National Bank of New Orleans, was found guilty in the federal court on 80 counts, charging misapplication of the funds of the bank. This was the second trial of the former banker. At the first one, more than a year ago, he was found guilty and sentenced to six years in the federal prison.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

Savannah Chapter

The regular meeting of the Savannah Chapter was held in the chapter rooms on January 12th. Business of a routine nature was transacted and final plans made for the oyster roast on January 19th; the birthday of Gen. Robt. E. Lee. The law class continues its study, having secured a member of the Savannah bar as instructor.

Savannah Chapter notes with much pleasure the appointment of F. R. Nesbit, of Macon, Ga., as a member of the Transportation Committee of the American Institute of Banking. Georgia is proud of the fact that just at this time she is so well represented in institute matters as the state now has the treasurer of the institute and also the appointment of Mr. Nesbit on one of the important committees for the Rochester convention. We are an ambitious set down here in this Empire state of the South, and we want to see a Georgia man on the executive council of the American Institute of Banking. Why not?

On January 19th twenty-five of thirty of the active members of the chapter partook of the annual oyster roast which was held at the Isle of Hope. The day was fair and mildly cool and lent zest to the hearty appetites of the hungry Savannahians. The oysters were large in size and quantity and roasted to a turn by Barbee's black chefs. Pabst (near) beer was also present, and never more delicious or nearer the real article. After the roast the members strolled about the island while others danced on the pavilion to the music of a whole brass band at a cost of a nickel per. A dozen of the more venturesome went out for a ride in a launch with a cranky disposition from which they eventually escaped without serious result.

The launch party pushed off into the stream and when the engine refused to start were drifted away by the strong tide. Two would-be rescuers secured a batteau to tow the launch party back to shore, when just they arrived on the scene the engine started and they were asked to paddle their own canoe. A short while after the launch party were sighted again flying signals of distress a mile up the river. Another rescue party put off and after much joshing and hilarity towed the would-be seamen ashore. The launch being deserted even by its owner, the party returned home in the early afternoon after having had one of the most pleasant outings ever undertaken by the chapter.

Portland Chapter

Portland, Ore., Chapter A. I. B. is at the height of its season's work. We are taking the lecture course of study as prescribed by the parent institution. From the interest that is being manifested in this course of study, we have no hesitancy in saying that the seed is falling on good ground.

The course of lectures, particularly as applied to the active bank work is just what is required for the young man who is starting out, making the bank profession his life's work.

We are also endeavoring to discover and develop oratorical talent latent in our members by inaugurating three minute impromptu speeches. This is a matter which should be given greater attention, for varied reasons.

Bankers, as a rule, are not great orators, they being required mostly to listen to the eloquence of the other fellow in presenting his side of the case, and the efforts of the banker are mainly confined to a decided negative or affirmative.

The young man, however, who has schooled himself to talk fluently for a few minutes at a time on any subject, gradually gains confidence in himself and in his ability to pick out the stronger or weaker parts, as they are presented.

In this connection the debate has a significance which should not be overlooked. At our next meeting we expect to have our debating force at work. At the present time it is a difficult matter to have any but a few of the most prominent members take part in any discussion, but by reason of the above mentioned three minute talks, and debating we hope to eventually overcome this timidity.

The bankers of this city are recognizing the importance of having their banking quarters improved and enlarged to conform with the modern ideas of banking, and also in preparing for the increase of business attendant upon the development of the state of Oregon, which is at present claiming an ever increasing share of the attention of business men and capitalists.

Two of our institutions, the First National Bank, and Bank of California N. A., are at present in temporary quarters while their permanent quarters are being remodeled and enlarged. The Security Savings & Trust Co., and Ladd & Tilton Bank have now got settled in their elegant new quarters, and the United States National Bank has also finished remodeling their interior, and these banks will now compare favorably with those of any other city in the country. The charter of the latter bank has just expired and been renewed by the comptroller.

The year just closed has been a banner year for the business of Portland and of Oregon, as evidenced by the figures for Portland clearing house just compiled. The total clearings for 1909 were $391,000,000, while the total for 1910 is $517,000,000, thus showing a very substantial increase, and the indications are that this year will be even better.

This prosperity will have its beneficial effect on our local chapter of the American Institute of Banking, and we hope to be able to report to you later on an improvement both in quality and quantity of our membership.

$100 a Day to Postal Bank

Manitowoc, Wis., January 22.—One hundred dollars a day is the average of deposits in the postal savings bank here. The success of the scheme has been demonstrated, according to Postmaster H. G. Kress, beyond question, as far as Manitowoc is concerned. About seventy accounts have been opened, laboring men and working girls making up most of the depositors, the farmers not taking strongly to the bank.

Terwilliger & Co. at Ashland Avenue and Division Street. Mr. Terwilliger will be president of the institution.

Legislation in Oklahoma

That state banks in Oklahoma can continue to use national banks as reserve agents, if they wish, was the decision of the senate, when it killed the provision of the Roddie banking bill intended to prevent them from so doing. This was regarded by Roddie as the most important feature of the bill. The amended measure was advanced to third reading and final passage.

New Clearing House Plan

At the adjourned meeting of the Chicago Clearing House Tuesday afternoon the clearing house certificate proposition was adopted. The plan involves the rental of a depository for the storage of gold and currency to be deposited by the member banks, and against which clearing house certificates will be issued. These certificates will be payable only to member banks, and will be used only in the settlement of clearing house balances. The plan will be more convenient than the present one.

Travel with the Gross Tours

The illustrations herewith are views of tourists abroad with "The Gross Tours," an international travel organization managed by Frank A. Gross, 302 Ellicott Square, Buffalo. He is a brother of Harry A. Gross, general agent of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway at Chicago, who conducted the bankers specials from Chicago to Los Angeles last fall, and to Denver two years ago.

The group picture represents the Gross party last May before the Mosque of Omar, in Jerusalem. In 637 the city fell under the dominion of Omar, when he built the mosque which was given his name. This mosque is considered by the Musselmans one of their principal sanctuaries. Formerly Christians

Mohammed being mounted on El-Borak, the white horse, which was a present from the Archangel, set out for Heaven to arrange important affairs, but the rock "Sakhrah" arose to follow him. God, not wishing to deprive the world of the rock, sent the Angel Gabriel who with his hand restrained its movements. Gross and his party will spend about twelve days in the Holy Land and Jerusalem, beside visiting Athens, Constantinople, Smyrna, Vathy on Isle of Samos, Palestine, Egypt, part of Italy. This party will have an opportunity of seeing the Azores, Madeira, Gibraltar and Algiers on their way East. It has been said that Mr. Gross has the finest tour ever arranged since the near East has been open to travellers.

Canadian Bank Reform

Ottawa, Ont., January 24.—The constantly increasing disclosures concerning the recently failed Farmers Bank of Canada are greatly disturbing Canadian banking circles. The disclosures made yesterday when the correspondence between the New York Superintendent of Insurance and the Canadian Minister of Finance was published, showing, as it did, that the New York official had called the attention of the minister of finance to the bank's irregular transactions a year ago, resulted in a flood of resolutions and questions to be asked of the ministry in the house of commons.

The decennial bank act is now before the house of commons, having been introduced several weeks ago by the premier. It renews the bank charters, all of which expire by limitation on July 1st. The bank act now pending in the house of commons contains some important changes, but makes no provision for government inspection of banks, the demand for which is steadily becoming more insistent. In the meantime a petition is being circulated asking the government to postpone the enactment of the new bank act for a year to give parliament time to decide upon necessary amendments in the light of recent events. This request is being made by the members on both sides of the house.

Will Put an End to Laxity

Frankfort, Ky., January 24.—Fifteen of the 17 state banks in Kentucky that failed in 1910 refused to sign up when Secretary of State Bruner sent circulars to them asking that the banks pay a fixed fee for their examination. All banks examined have paid the fee without protest. Mr. Bruner finds that there are a number of banks organized under the old legislative acts, permitting the sliding scale for their capital stocks, and he has decided that the banks must reorganize and have for their capital stock the amount actually paid in.

Mr. Bruner said that the call for bank statements in the fall caught a large number of the banks with their legal reserve impaired. The banks were notified that this condition will not be tolerated.

A feature of the tour is that it will be in these countries after the crowds of excursionists and pilgrims have ceased crowding the hotels and places of interest.

Mr. Gross has developed a system of tours of Europe in his own automobiles not costing over ten or twelve dollars a day. These are very popular. He has had 30 years' experience and protects his patrons from extortion and annoyances. A new booklet will be out in a few days, ready to be sent free to those interested.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Wash., January 24.—Spokane banks have on hand in cash and exchange 36.6 per cent of their entire deposits, or 11.6 per cent more than is required by the federal laws.

This condition was shown when Comptroller L. O. Murray called for a statement of the condition of local banks at the close of business January 7. The statement shows deposits to $28,860,961 and cash on hand of $10,563,631.02. In addition to this the loans, discounts and over-drafts have been reduced by more than $1,000,000 since the last call, November 19th. The statement taken as a whole, while it shows a decrease in deposits of a little more than $1,000,000, is considered extremely satisfactory considering that the volume of funds which found their way through the various banks of the country during the holiday season has not returned its share to Spokane.

The fact that Spokane has 36.6 per cent of its deposits on hand or in available exchange is looked upon as indicative of the sound condition of the city financially. The legal reserve is 25 per cent, which gives Spokane 11.6 per cent more than is required by law, at one of the critical times of the year. Spokane was made a reserve city about two years ago, and prior to this time 15 per cent of deposits was all that was required. As it is, state banks are required to reserve only 2 per cent, but instead show reserves of more than 30 per cent in practically every instance.

The loans of the local banks in being decreased practically $1,000,000 shows that the country banks are beginning to obtain returns from the farmers, who have been selling their crops more freely during the last few weeks. The loans at this time are about the same as a year ago.

Accept Canadian Money without Discount

Spokane banks now accept Canadian currency without the discount of 1 per cent, which has been the prevailing custom for many years. The action was decided upon at a meeting of the Clearing House association and the new rule went into effect on the opening of the banks January 3d. "The discount was never imposed to make a profit," said W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National, "and has only paid the expense of handling the currency. There is a federal law which provides a penalty of 10 per cent for paying out this money, and this law makes a good deal of trouble. However, people have done a good deal of complaining and it was hard to make them see our difficulty."

Large Mortgage Filed by Electric Company

The largest mortgage ever placed on record in Chelan county, Wash., was filed last week by the Wenatchee Valley Gas & Electric Company. It was a first mortgage of the corporation for $2,000,000 drawn in favor of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company as trustee. The mortgage is to secure bonds to be issued for the purpose of refunding the present indebtedness of the company and to make extensions and betterments. The bonds are to be issued in denominations of $1,000 each, dated October 1, 1910, and payable October 1, 1930, at a rate of interest not to exceed 6 per cent. It is stated that arrangements have already been made for the sale of $350,000 of the bonds.

Ralston McCaig Moves to Republic

Ralston McCaig, cashier of the Bank of Rosalia, has gone to Republic, Wash., where he becomes financial manager of the North Washington Power & Reduction Company. Mr. McCaig has been in business in Rosalia for the past 20 years and has done much to develop that section of the state.

Dispute over Depository of Indian Funds

Senator Jones to-day laid before the President a request of R. L. Rutter of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company that the Colville Indian funds be deposited in state as well as national banks. This question was considered by the President and cabinet a short time ago because of the fact that a million dollars is soon to be paid over to the Colville Indians by the government. It was then decided not to deposit Indian money in state banks because there is no method of inspecting such banks, whereas national banks are constantly under government supervision. The President told Senator Jones he would give his request further consideration, but the probabilities are that the Colville money will be deposited entirely in national banks. "To withhold the deposit of Colville Indian funds from the state banks would be an extremely foolish stand for the government to take," said R. L. Rutter, secretary of the Spokane & Eastern Trust company, when apprised of the fact that the matter had been laid before the President and the objections made on the ground that the funds would not be protected by national inspectors, as in the national bank vaults. "The converse of such an argument would be that state funds should not be deposited in national banks because, unlike the state banks, they had no inspection by state inspectors. Government funds are fully protected in state banks by bonds. The new postal savings bank law recently passed states specifically that state banks should be allowed the same privilege of handling government funds as the national banks. The state banks have made a concerted move in this instance, and I am certain that it will be decided in our favor and that the Colville funds will be deposited with the state banks.

Loan Society Pays 3½ Per Cent Dividend

At the annual meeting of the Fidelity Building and Loan Society, held last week, a semi-annual dividend of 3½ per cent was paid to the stockholders, making a total of 7 per cent for the year. The company is capitalized at $2,000,000. At the meeting of the trustees Secretary F. S. McWilliams made a report showing the sales of 117 shares of paid-up stock at $100 per share and 7,058 shares of installment stock during 1910. The loans made during the same period amounted to $40,665. The officers for the ensuing year are: President, Otto W. Sperling; vice-president, O. C. Jensen; secretary, F. S. McWilliams; assistant secretary, G. D. Robinson; treasurer, I. W. Bedle; trustees, M. C. Dunne, E. F. Cartier Van Dissel, J. Grier Long, M. B. Connolly, Robert Weir and Thomas F. Conlan.

January 3d Record Breaking Day

The Spokane banks broke all previous records on Tuesday, January 3d, in the amounts of deposits received. The fact that it was the first of the year brought out hundreds of the savings depositors who were on hand to claim their annual or semi-annual interest dividends. It is estimated that between $75,000 and $100,000 in interest was paid to the savings depositors on the $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 in the savings deposit vaults of the various banks. From the time the bank doors opened until they closed the different banks were crowded and in some instances jammed at times with people. It is estimated the deposits made on the day were the heaviest ever made in Spokane banks in a single day. The deposits in the downtown banks ran from $500,000 to more than $1,000,000 each, making the total for the day between $7,000,000 and $10,000,000.

Power Company Distributes Extra Dividend

The Washington Water Power Company made its stockholders a New Year's gift of practically $25,000 on January 1st, in the form of an extra dividend of 7 per cent on the outstanding stock, which amounts to about $9,000,000. The annual dividend of the company is 7 per cent on the outstanding stock, and is paid in quarterly instalments of 1¾ per cent at the end of each three months.

Spokane Building and Loan Society

During the twelve years the Spokane Building & Loan Society has been in existence it has furnished the means for 600 people of this city to build their homes. The twenty-fourth semi-annual dividend is now being paid to the stockholders by Secretary Frank S. Chase. The dividend is on the basis of 8 per cent annually. During the eight years Mr. Chase has served as secretary of the company the business has increased from $60,000 to $3,000,000 annually.

Harrington State Bank

The Harrington State Bank held its annual meeting January 3d, when C. D. Ellis, cashier reported that the earnings for the past six months under the new organization had proven very satisfactory, amounting to about 10 per cent on the capital stock. The officers elected were: President, John E. Russell; vice-president, J. A. Talkington; cashier, C. D. Ellis; assistant cashier, H. O. Jones; trustees, J. E. Russell, J. A. Talkington, J. J. Cormana, F. C. Krumholz and C. D. Ellis.

Lincoln County State Bank

The Lincoln County State Bank of Davenport, Wash., is strictly a home institution, every dollar's worth of stock being owned by business men of Davenport or prosperous farmers of Lincoln county. F. W. Anderson, cashier, states that the year 1910 has been the most prosperous year in the history of the bank and the indications for the coming year appear favorable to still greater business prosperity.

North Yakima Clearings Increase 22 Per Cent

The bank clearings for North Yakima for the year 1910 amounted to $24,593,339.73, an increase of $5,426,935.22, or 22 per cent over 1909. The clearing house was organized in April, 1909. From April 14, 1908 to April 14, 1909, the first year of record, the clearings reached the sum of $14,629,416.69, therefore the clearings for the year just passed show a gain over the first year of nearly $10,000,000.

Banking Notes

The State bank at Orient, Wash., an institution opened in Orient last spring, is flourishing accordingly to the last financial statement, which shows $20,000 deposits on hand. P. H. Blom, cashier, states he is well pleased with the amount of business being handled through the bank.

The third annual statement of the financial condition of the Glenwood State Bank shows that this institution in our progressive little neighboring town is prospering and that it is filling a needed place in Glenwood and surrounding territory. The present officers of this bank are: E. W. Ansted, president; Dr. H. H. Elliott, vice-president; T. G. Richardson, cashier; B. F. Thiebaud, assistant cashier. Directors, E. W. Ansted, L. T. Bower, John F. Carlos, James McCann, H. H. Elliott, B. F. Thiebaud and T. G. Richardson.

E. H. Stanton Packing Company of Spokane has just floated a bond issue of $250,000 to run seven years at 5 per cent. The first $50,000 will be retired on January 1, 1912, and $50,000 each year following until the issue is exhausted. The Spokane & Eastern Trust Company handled the bond, also floating a $75,000 issue for the Northwestern Harvester Company of Spokane. The bonds run five years and draw 8 per cent. The money derived from the bonds will be used in extending the business of the two concerns. The Stanton Company is completing an abattoir and packing plant to cost $375,000 and will increase its yearly business

Yakima Valley Telephone Company has given a trust mortgage to the Central Bank and Trust Company of North Yakima, Wash., for $25,000. The telephone company which operates at Zillah, Wapato, Sunnyside, Mabton and Grandview, mortgages its system to cover an issue of 250 bonds of $100 each, the proceeds of which will be used in development work.

Exchange National Bank of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, has instituted suit in the district court against Albert R. and Grace P. Featherstone and P. T. Nixon, asking that a temporary receiver be appointed for the electric light plant at Bonners Ferry, Idaho, and that the concern be turned over to the bank to satisfy a mortgage, on which $13,501.50 is past due.

J. Grier Long, vice-president of the Washington Trust Company, and Mrs. Long entertained R. A. Maynard, formerly assistant editor of The Denver News and Mrs. Mila Tupper Maynard, formerly assistant editor of The Denver Times at their home several days the third week in December.

W. P. Edris, postmaster of Spokane, reported the sale of $4,698.86 worth of postage stamps in one day the week before Christmas. That sum would provide more than enough 2-cent stamps for two letters for every man, woman and child in the city, the population of which is 104,402, according to the census of 1910.

The directors of the First National of Pasco, Wash., have just declared a dividend of 6 per cent on its new $50,000 capital stock, and have added $1,000 to the surplus fund. The bank is in a most prosperous condition and its business is constantly growing.

The Spokane and Inland Empire Electric Railway Company has improved its power plant during the year 1910 by additions to the Nine Mile plant amounting to $145,000. A new substation in Spokane has been built and equipped at a cost of about $150,000. A sum estimated at $110,000 has been expended in 60-volt high-tension lines. For irrigation purposes, power has been generated at a cost of $40,000.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

E. W. Decker, of the Northwestern National, succeeds F. A. Chamberlain of the Security National as president of the Minneapolis Clearing House Association. Perry Harrison remains as manager. F. M. Prince of the First National was elected vice-president to succeed E. W. Decker, advanced to the association president.

The association was organized Dec. 18, 1880, and in that time has had only two managers—the late W. E. Burwell, and Perry Harrison, who succeeded him January 3, 1888. At organization the association was composed of the Security, City, Hennepin County Savings, Northwestern National, Merchants National and Citizens' banks, and V. G. Hush, a private banker. Its members now are the Northwestern National, Security National, First National, Hennepin County Savings, German-American and St. Anthony Falls banks, other Minneapolis banks clearing through those six.

Farmers' & Merchants State of Galesville, Wis.—President, A. O. Nelson; Vice-President, H. F. Claussen; cashier, J. A. Berg; assistant cashier, George Hagen.

Deposit Bank, Winona, Minn.—President, S. L. Prentiss; cashier, F. A. Lemme.

Union National, Winona.—President, Stephen Collins, succeeding D. H. Beecher; cashier, A. L. Hunter.

First National, Winona.—President, C. H. Bendeke; cashier, S. S. Titus.

State of Hoople, N. D.—President, J. A. Dinne; Vice-President, Stephen Collins; cashier, N. C. Olson; additional director, M. F. Murphy.

Minnesota's Bank Tax System Satisfactory

Governor Eberhart in his message said of taxation of banks: "The present system of taxing banks has been very satisfactory. The assessor takes the total capital stock of the bank and adds to that the surplus fund. From this total is deducted the total assessed value of all the real and personal property of the bank. The excess is listed for taxation along with the valuation of the real and personal property. The banks have not complained of this system and the general public regards it as fair and reasonable. At the same time we cannot see why banks should pay taxes on more than their real and personal property, while corporations in general do not. The state tax commissioners think it would be a proper move to tax corporations in general, just as banks are taxed."

Bank Money Order Cheaper Than Postal

Banks are now able to underbid the postoffice on foreign money orders, says F. E. Holton, cashier of the Northwestern National. The reason is, he gives, that the postoffice has practically doubled rates to Asiatic and European stations. It costs 35 cents to send $20 away, formerly 10 cents. To send $5 costs 15 cents, and by bank traveler check less money.

"It will take some time however, before the banks notice the difference appreciably," said Mr. Holton. "The class of people that use money orders would rather deal with the government than with banks until they get used to the idea of banks."

Suggestions by Bank Examiner

Anton Schaefer, public examiner, in a report to the governor, suggests increase of fees for examination of banks. The result of the present system is that the Twin City banks pay the cost of the examination in the district, and northern banks should do the same for their part of the county. He thinks that the bank examiners should examine the building associations also.

Plan Bank for the West Side

Capitalists are planning a bank in the Sixth ward of St. Paul. This will give merchants on the West Side banking facilities without going to the financial center on the East Side. The West Side club is interesting men of money. It called a mass-meeting to arouse banking investment spirit.

Anti-Shark Loan Company Opens Feb. 1st

The Provident Loan Company, the anti-shark organization in St. Paul, is expected to start February 1st. A. W. Gutridge of the committee in charge of stock disposal, has put out several blocks of $1,000 each.

Re-elected Treasurer of Agricultural Society

In a complete overturn in state agricultural society affairs E. L. Mattson, assistant cashier of the Northwestern National, is again made treasurer. His regime for one term was said to have been highly satisfactory in its technical workings and results. Mr. Mattson admits that he comes from a family which has farmed fifty-eight years, and that he owns farms himself. Mr. Mattson's father settled in Minnesota in 1853, five years before the state was formed, was colonel of the Third regiment in the Civil War, secretary of state, and consul to Calcutta. E. L. Mattson was born in 1871, in 1888 became connected with the Swedish-American National, of which he was cashier at absorption by the Northwestern. The salary of treasurer will be a princely addition to Mr. Mattson's income, or $71 a month.

Annual Election of Dayton Banks

The two national banks of Dayton, Wash., held their annual elections last week. Those for the Columbia National are: President, Levi Ankeny, of Walla Walla; vice-president, Andrew Nilsson, Dayton; cashier, J. W. Jessee; assistant cashier, J. W. Jackson; directors, A. Nilsson, G. F. Price, E. E. Eager, G. W. Jackson and Levi Ankeny. The officers of the Broughton National are: President, C. J. Broughton; vice-president, J. L. Dumas; cashier, A. P. Cahill; assistant cashier, S. Z. Varnes; directors, C. J. Broughton, J. L. Dumas, A. P. Cahill, W. E. Cahill, Miles C. Moore, David Barclay. Both institutions report the year's business fully up to the standard, and both predict an unusually good business for 1911. The Columbia National is regarded as one of the strongest banks in the Northwest outside the large cities. Its deposits range from $500,000 to $700,000. The Broughton National, which is a comparatively young institution, has deposits amounting to $101,563.55 and a reserve fund of $40,940.84.

Banking Notes of Interest

Charters have been issued recently as follows: Farmers State Bank of Nelson, capital $10,000; Farmers State Bank of Spring Valley, capital, $25,000; Richfield State Bank, capital $15,000; Mount Hope State Bank, capital, $15,000; Farmers State Bank of Calumet Harbor, capital, $10,000; State Bank of Tomah, capital, $25,000.

The State Bank of Mosinee has increased its capital stock from $8,000 to $12,000.

The newly organized Eastman Bank, located in the village of Eastman, fourteen miles east of Prairie du Chien is open for business with D. Harry Pier as cashier.

More than 2,000 manuscripts were offered in the farm children competition for the Joseph Chapman, Jr., prizes, as supplemented by C. M. Loring. The contest closed January 1st. The prizes are $20, $15, $10, ten of $5, one of $3 and one of $2 for the best essays on "Why I Want to Leave the Farm," and "Why I Want to Remain on the Farm." Professor G. F. Howard of the extension course of the farm school is reading the papers.

H. L. Moore, treasurer of the Minnesota Loan & Trust Company, has been elected president of the Dartmouth Alumni Association of the Northwest. Men of renown in the business and professional world are members of this organization, or are alumni not yet numbered on the roster. Mr. Moore plans an active year with a record making dinner at the end of the year at which President Ernest Fox Nicholson of the college will be present.

Cash balance in the Minneapolis treasury at the end of the fiscal year was $835,118, compared with $2,068,954 the year previous. Disbursements were $16,351,594 in excess of receipts, which were $15,117,759. Net earnings including interest on daily balances were, in the treasurer's office, $22,888.

THE WALE'S is the one machine that combines exclusive features of convenient operation with mechanical perfection of construction.

Some of these features are the Self-Correcting Keyboard—that corrects automatically when the right key is pressed—and the Non-add key that adds without printing.

It is the only machine that is perfectly visible at every operation, showing totals and printing, in the same field of vision.

A glance gives you the number as it prints and the total up to that point. In construction the WALE'S is superior to all others.

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

Tom Randolph, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, sees nothing in the signs for the near future other than easy money and plenty of it. "The way deposits are piling up," said Mr. Randolph, "there is little likelihood, in my opinion, that the next few weeks, or perhaps months, will develop any hardening in rates here. Ditto for the entire West and the East also. A lot of things have tended to loosen up funds, whose resting place is St. Louis banks when not otherwise engaged. Cotton has been moving freely for export from Southern points, which releases our quota of money that went into financing the crop. The country contributory to St. Louis has been fortunate in the matter of crops, and is rich. Many farm mortgages are being taken up, and the country banks appear to be relatively as well supplied with loanable resources as is the case with institutions in central Western reserve centers. Business is good, but it is largely of a routine nature, nothing much in the way of new enterprise being under way at the moment. Perhaps the present low rates may coax out initiative and start something new. I believe, however, that the banks are pursuing a rather conservative policy, and are not encouraging anything other than strictly legitimate things. There is little new in the situation to comment upon."

Huttig Favors Aldrich Plan

Charles H. Huttig, chairman of the executive committee of the American Bankers Association and president of the Third National, has just returned from New York, where he went to attend the meeting of the administrative committee of the association. This committee is formed of the officers of the association. Mr. Huttig expresses himself as being quite decidedly in favor of the Aldrich reserve association plan. "The plan now," said Mr. Huttig, "is of course merely an outline, which must be worked out in detail, but I am strongly in favor of it. In my opinion it is a step in advance. If perfected and put in operation the scheme will tend to lessen extremities in economic stimulation and depression. Of course the pendulum of industrial conditions will continue to swing back and forth, but it will be kept from swinging so far out at the ends of its arc. I found that the bankers I met in the East are for the most part favorable to the plan, and are likely to give it their support. There is little use of my going into details, as the matter has been pretty well threshed out up to its present stage of development. Eastern financiers do not look for anything but low rates for some time to come. There seems to be nothing right now in the financial horizon which will tighten the market. General conditions are basically healthy and promising for the year, but for the next few months money will doubtless be plentiful and cheap.

Pays Extra Dividend

The St. Louis Union Trust Company has declared an extra dividend of 4 per cent on its capital stock of $5,000,000, which will be payable February 1st. The regular dividend of 16 per cent per annum, so that a total of 20 per cent, or $1,000,000 will be distributed among the stockholders as a result of last year's business. President N. A. McMillan of the company says that the extra disbursement is by no means an assurance that the regular rate is to be raised from 16 to 20 per cent, but is simply an additional sharing of the year's profits. A goodly part of said profits, it is understood, accrued from the St. Louis Union's skilful handling and financing of the Brownsville, Tex. deal. This deal was originated by Colonel S. W. Fordyce, a director in the company, and one of the leading builders and developers of the great Southwest.

Postal Earnings Show Gain

As a barometer of growth in any community the postal earnings are regarded as about as good as anything, outside of bank clearings. The St. Louis postoffice shows increased earnings amounting to $191,118.08 for 1910 over 1909, according to a statement prepared this week by Postmaster Akins. The receipts were $4,539,185, against $4,294,134.

New Outlying Bank Projected

Stock subscriptions for the establishment of a bank in the vicinity of Taylor and Easton Avenues are being taken among merchants and residents in that district. The new institution will have a capital stock of $100,000, and the proposition is to have the shares as widely held as possible. The Easton and Taylor Avenues Business Men's Association is fostering the enterprise, but it has not progressed far enough to discuss directors and officers.

Mortgage Company Incorporated

The company promoted early this year by Tom W. Bennett, president of the Mortgage Guarantee Company, to deal in small mortgages, was incorporated this week with a capital stock of $500,000. The incorporators mentioned in the charter are: Mr. Bennett, Fred G. Zeiberg, J. D. P. Francis, Dwight F. Davis, Aaron Fuller, H. B. Collins, Edward L. Pectorius, Rella Wells, A. L. Shapleigh, Moses Schoenberg, Richard T. Shelton, Lloyd P. Wells, Eugene F. Williams, Lawrence Kennard and O. W. O'Meara.

Lowell Bank Elects Officers

Directors of the Lowell Bank, No. 5000 North Broadway, at a meeting on Monday, elected the following officers: August F. Klasing, president; William Koeneman, vice-president; Henry Arnold, secretary; and L. L. Will, cashier. The directory is composed of Henry Arnold, George Hilke, William Koeneman, A. F. Klasing, Henry Mueller, J. F. Rupp, F. J. Schwierjohn, Henry Schenkel, Sr., and J. B. Toensikoetter.

Clarkson is Young Bank President

George W. Clarkson, the new president of the Grand Avenue Bank, is the youngest presiding official in a financial institution in the Mississippi Valley. He is just 35 years old. He was born in Missouri, and says all he possesses, including education, money and esprit, were obtained in this state. He started into business as a clerk in a milling concern in Bismark, Mo., and later was instrumental in founding a bank at that place. The other officers in the Grand Avenue Bank are E. E. McGill and vice-presidents, and W. L. Nichols, cashier.

Bank Change at Clifton, Tex.

The Farmers Guaranty State Bank of Clifton, Tex., has succeeded to the business of the Clifton State Bank. The deal was in the nature of a reorganization of the old bank, with the same officers, viz.: H. H. Baley, president; Tom C. Parks and T. W. Anderson, vice-presidents, and J. M. Jensen, cashier.

Changes in Clearing House

Edwards Whitaker, president of the Boatmens Bank, and G. W. Garrels, president of the Franklin Bank have been elected to the committee on management of the St. Louis Clearing House Association. They succeed William H. Lee, president of the Merchants-Laclede National and John F. McCluney, president of the State National. Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Company and Mercantile National, will probably be Chairman of the Committee on Management, succeeding Mr. Lee. Charles H. Huttig, president of the Third National, was re-elected president and W. W. Hoxton continues secretary and manager of the association.

New Trust Company Opens

The City Trust Company, at Eleventh Street and Franklin Avenue, opened for business on Wednesday. The company is capitalized at $100,000, and occupies the old quarters of the City National. H. R. Rehme, former cashier of the City National, is president and J. F. Matoushek, secretary. It is the purpose of the company to do a regular trust company business along small lines. Mr. Rehme has been in the banking business in St. Louis for the last quarter of a century.

Banking Notes

Counterfeiters have been manufacturing bogus bank notes in Kansas and Missouri lately. J. G. Durham, of Licking, Mo., was arrested last week charged with having counterfeited $5 bank notes of the National Bank of Beloit, Kan., in Texas county, Mo. Reports from Wichita say that the southern part of Kansas has been flooded with counterfeit bills of $10 denomination representing the bills of the National Bank of Commerce of Wichita.

Senator Humphrey, of Missouri, has introduced a bill abolishing the building and loan department of Missouri and returning the work of inspection to the state treasurer. Another bill in the Missouri legislature fixes a maximum fee for examination of banks at $15 for a capital stock of $10,000 and up to $200 for each million.

There has been a great deal of agitation in Kansas against the wildcat investment companies that have been selling worthless stock to the investors of that state. Joseph N. Dolley, state bank examiner, has been conducting a vigorous campaign against these concerns for two years. Through his influence Senator Quincy has introduced in the Kansas senate a bill to stop investment companies and brokers selling worthless securities in Kansas. It will compel the listing with the bank examiner of all securities to be disposed of as well as the financial standing of the institutions having them for sale.

The Bankers' Club of Kansas City was organized last week at the Kansas City Athletic Club. The business meeting was preceded by a dinner at which sixty-five bankers were present. The officers of the new organization are: George S. Hovey, president; Charles H. Moore, vice-president and Jerome Thralls, secretary and treasurer.

Alabama Bankers Indorse New Law

The specially called Alabama Bankers Convention indorsed the new banking bill as printed in these columns, which put all forms of banking under strict supervision. There is every hope that the bill will pass as indorsed. Everybody and most bankers see the advantage to a state of a safe banking system under state supervision.

From Louisville, Ky., comes the news that fourteen banks holding state charters failed during the year, and Secretary Bruner declares that this is an obvious argument in favor of a system of inspection. He believes that even under the present makeshift system by which banks are examined, provided they agree to pay the expense of the work, the number of failures will be greatly reduced.

English Bank's Big Deficit

London, January 24.—The official receiver of the Charing Cross Bank, which failed on October 17th of last year and in which the late Dr. Crippen had his finances, has issued a statement on the bank's liabilities. According to the statement, the bank has a deficit of $8,496,165. The receiver points out, among others, the loss of $500,000 in the petroleum oil trust which was promoted by Alfred Carpenter, the owner of the bank, to purchase properties in Gaspe, Quebec.

Bank Clerk Sentenced

Tacoma, January 24.—Frank J. Fuhrman, defaulting cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, who pleaded guilty, was sentenced to six years' imprisonment in the U. S. penitentiary at McNeil Island by Federal Judge Donworth in the U. S. District Court. It was discovered last month that Fuhrman had embezzled more than $93,000, investing most of the money in timber lands, logging equipment and a shingle mill. These he transferred to the bank.

Bank Examiners to Meet

The comptroller of the currency feels that the state and national bank examiners could hold a joint meeting at least once each year for the purpose of discussing methods of bank examiners. It would be of great benefit and tend to increase the efficiency of both, and has, therefore, invited the state superintendent of banks of all the states to have the state examiners meet with the national examiners early in July.

Pension Funds

American bankers, Chicago, St. Louis and elsewhere, are adopting pension fund systems for superannuated employees, and in a few instances the bank employees, as in Pittsburgh and St. Louis, have organized benefit associations. From London we have secured a resume of the bank pension fund system as developed in Britain and in the colonies, as shown by reports of the annual meetings of their governing boards. Their number and the distribution of banks conducting a pension system are as follows:

United Kingdom—England and Wales, 17, Scotland, 5 and Ireland 3, total, 25.

Colonies—Africa, 5, Australasia, 14, British Guiana, 1, Canada, 2, India, 6 and Mauritius, 1, total, 29.

English banks doing business abroad, 8, foreign banks, 3, and kindred institutions, 3, general total, 68.

The total number is exactly the same as last year, but the distribution is somewhat different. The numbers in England and Wales have diminished through amalgamations, but in the British colonies they have increased both for the banks in Africa and Australia. The Bank of Mauritius mentions such a fund for the first time, the grant of money to it being especially referred to in the report as appropriated to the establishment of a staff pension fund. When this record started thirty-five years since, in 1876, the numbers mentioned were much smaller than they are at present, and the references to the colonial banks were not many. Taken together they are now more numerous than the banks in the United Kingdom.

There are also a great many banks which maintain funds of the same description, but which do not mention the fact at all or the amounts employed in this manner. These are frequently large. The utility of these funds is very great. They link the staff together and assist in the formation and maintenance of a good feeling between the members, with an interest in the prosperity of the bank which they serve. Cases continually occur in which the capacity to continue work ceased long before the age at which pensions naturally are looked for, and in the instances known are always treated liberally.

Last year the association at a bank of France was formed by the employees themselves for the purpose of establishing a fund for the advantage of the children of the staff of the bank. Such a fund would be extremely useful if established on good business lines. It might be possible to include in it a system of insurance against the time when the parents of children have either to meet considerable expense for the education and outfit of their children, or have to feel that it is not possible for them to fulfil this important obligation. Provision is sometimes made for these claims through the assistance of those insurance offices which will grant policies of this description. Parents may begin when the children are very young, a small payment is made annually, and when the boy or girl reaches the age when schooling becomes seriously expensive, or an outfit for starting in life is required, a fixed sum is paid down or a short annuity commences, which continues till the time when the child should be able to earn on his own account. In case of the death of the child before reaching the age when the policy matures, the amount of the premium is returned. It is more easy for a parent receiving a certain though not large income to put by £8 or £10 a year whilst his children are quite young than to find the £40 or £50 a year required during the later school years of the child's life, or the sum needed for the outfit.

A system of this kind could be worked more advantageously by the officials of banks than by any other body of men. Those who carried the work on would not expect to be paid, but would give in their gratuitous labor a handsome assistance to their own staff and to the scheme. There would be no expenses incurred for advertising or for collecting the premiums or paying the amounts due, and the investments of the fund in hand, which form considerable items among the charges which have to be met by insurance offices, could also be carried out in the most favorable manner.

Bank officials should thus be able to obtain the advantages of such a fund on better terms than those persons who take out ordinary policies of insurance for such purposes. The fund would thus be a mutual insurance association, those who joined in it being persons who had all passed the medical examinations required by banks on admission. The complete staff of any one bank would probably not furnish a sufficiently large number to carry the plan out effectively, as any insurance scheme requires a considerable number to provide a suitable average. But if the scheme were taken up by larger banks, and there is no reason either why all banks should not be included, an adequate field might be attained.

In time also probably some assistance might be given by the governing bodies of the banks themselves, for those who help themselves earn the respect and frequently the co-operation of others. It has been well said, "The object of insurance is to spread the burden of losses, which to the individual would be crushing, over a large body of insured, and so render that burden easy to bear." The complete value of mutual insurance cannot be measured by figures. It represents the great principle of self-help, which fosters above all things the sense of common interest, the basis of the strength of our industrial life.

Aldrich Plan to Stop Panics

The currency reform plan advocated by Senator Aldrich was indorsed as a "panic preventer" by President George M. Reynolds of the Continental National Bank in an address at Calvin Durand commons, Lake Forest University, Tuesday night.

"Our present system of banking was outgrown twenty-five years ago," Mr. Reynolds said, "and because it so crippled and handicapped American trade and commerce we had the panic of 1893. Although few people knew of it, we came near having another panic last winter, when money in the shape of grain was tied up by bad weather."

Mr. Reynolds said he believed Senator Aldrich was sincerely trying to serve the people and not the money interests. He predicted that under the new system America would lead Europe in magnitude of its banking interests and that Chicago would supplant London as the financial center of the world.

Ex-Presidents of Illinois Bankers Association Dine

Nearly all of the ex-presidents of the Illinois Bankers Association met in Chicago Monday night for their annual banquet. The present president, E. E. Crabtree, was the guest of honor. This event is very highly prized by the distinguished men who have come up through the chairs of the Illinois association.

Des Moines, January 26.—The banking reform plan of Senator Aldrich has proved a fertile topic of conversation among bankers of Iowa the past week. If the sentiment of all Iowa bankers is similar to that of leading Des Moines bankers, the proposed plan looks good to the financiers of the state. It seems to be the consensus of opinion that the plan will eventually wipe out state banks and on that account, it is probable that the owners of these institutions will not take as kindly to the scheme as do the national bankers.

Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National and a recognized authority on currency reform is quite in favor of the proposed system. He believes that it will tend to put state and savings banks under government control which, in his opinion will make them better protected and give them better facilities. Mr. Reynolds has opposed the central bank of issue and believes that the Aldrich plan is much better.

Points Out Advantages

"The recommendation for a central association is fine," says Mr. Reynolds. "It will in effect be a central bank with numerous branches and will afford every bank the same protection. The bank with a small capital will have the same protection as the larger one. The central bank as proposed would have given the reserve centers protection but would protect the smaller institution only through the reserve centers. Under the proposed plan, state and savings banks will be quick to apply for national bank charters which would permit them to do a general banking business and in addition rely upon the central association for relief in time of need."

Homer A. Miller, president of the Iowa National, regards the provision for making mortgage loans on real estate by conducting a savings banks department as one of especial attraction to the average banker. Other bankers regard a single banking system as preferable to the dual system now in effect throughout the United States.

Bank Taxation Bill

Here is an important bill on bank taxation introduced in the house of representatives by Jacobs of Calhoun: "Shares of stock of national banks and state and savings banks and loan and trust companies shall be assessed to the individual stockholders at the place where the bank is located. At the time the assessment is made, the officers of national banks and of state and savings banks and trust companies shall furnish the assessor with a list of all the stockholders and the number of shares owned by each and he shall list to each stockholder under the head of corporation stock the total value of such shares. To aid the assessor in fixing the value of such shares, the corporation shall furnish him a verified statement of all the matters provided in Section 1321 of the Supplement to the Code 1907 which shall also show separately the amount of capital stock and the surplus and undivided earnings and the assessor from such statement and other information he can obtain including any statement furnished to and information obtained by the auditor of state which shall be furnished him on request, shall fix the value of such stock taking into account, the capital, surplus and undivided earnings. In arriving at the total value of the shares of stock of such corporations, the amount of their capital actually invested in real estate owned by them and in the shares of stock owning only the real estate or in which the bank or trust company is located shall be deducted from the real value of such shares and such real estate shall be assessed as other real estate and the property of such corporations shall not be otherwise assessed."

The committee on banking in the Iowa house of representatives is headed by Karl Johnson, a well known Osage banker. His associates are Representative Beebe, Beane, Ripley, Moore, Bowman, Dewey, Felt, Finlayson, Schee, Brown, Crist, Campbell, Brady, Grout, Hogan, Hutchins, Hixon, Koontz, Dabney, Kull, O'Connor, Fletcher, Griggs, Leach, Murtagh, White, Linnan. This includes every banker in the lower body of the legislature.

Identified by His "Load"

Here is a story from Mason City, vouched for as accurate. A man appeared at the window in the First National of that city and demanded that the cashier draw on the First National at Lyle for $10.

"Have you an identification?" asked the wary cashier.

"I have no cards but if you will call up the bank at Lyle, I'll pay for the telephone message," was the reply.

The cashier stepped to the phone and told the Lyle banker the name given by the man.

"He has but 18 cents and wants ten dollars," he said to Lyle.

"Is he loaded?" was the question that came at once from the Lyle cashier.

"Yes, and to the guards," was the reply.

"It's him; give him the money."

Important Banking Decision

The Iowa supreme court has handed down an important bank decision in holding that the shares of stock in national banks are not assessable because if they are taxable, national banks would be discriminated against in favor of state and savings banks which are not thus assessed. Two judges handed down a dissenting opinion to the effect that the capital alone is taxed in state and savings banks and that there would be no discrimination. The appeal was taken by the First National of Estherville which brought suit against the city council as a board of review. The lower courts held against the bank but the latter took its case to the higher court and has won the day.

Two bills have been introduced in the Iowa legislature that are of particular interest to bankers. One is the bill of Senator Webber, of Ottumwa for the repeal of the tax ferret law. The other is the bill abolishing the office of school treasurer, introduced by Senator Hammill of Britt. The Webber bill provides that county supervisors shall not make contracts with tax ferrets but provides that county treasurers may investigate taxes and accomplish the same results in the main as are now accomplished by tax ferrets. Whether this is sufficient relief is a mooted question but bankers are inclined to believe that if the bill is enacted it will help considerably. As the office of school treasurer is usually held by a banker, it will be seen that the Hammill bill is of wide interest.

Bills were introduced in the senate and house providing that funds in savings banks may be invested in bonds and notes secured by mortgages on unincumbered Iowa real estate or

Reports from Decorah bear out the suspicion of the first week of the postal savings bank that the people are not falling over themselves to put their funds in the hands of Uncle Sam. The post office officials are saying nothing but it is generally understood at Decorah that there are very few deposits being made and none of the deposits are of large amounts, so it is reported.

Death of a Banker

Sidney W. Richardson, president of the First National at Creston and one of the leading central Iowa bankers died in the hospital at Creston of uraemic poisoning. He had been ill for two weeks but his condition was not thought serious until a short time prior to his death. Mr. Richardson was 53 years of age and had been for sixteen years at the head of the bank in which he owns a controlling interest. He is survived by a widow and one son.

Edward A. Slininger, cashier of the People's Savings Bank for the past eight months has been made a member of the board of directors. For seventeen years he has been with the institution in which he started as messenger boy.

The German State at Dyersville has voted to erect a new bank building in the summer. All the officers were re-elected.

E. C. Purdy has resigned as cashier of the Commercial State at Independence after eleven years service. M. O. Fouts, formerly pension examiner at Milwaukee has been chosen cashier.

Lawyer Moving to Chicago

Charles L. Powell, brother-in-law of George M. Reynolds, of Chicago, who represented the Des Moines National banks in their suits before the United States supreme courts to secure exemption from assessment on government bonds, will remove from Des Moines to Chicago. He will enter the law firm of Meyer, Meyer, Austrian & Platt.

J. H. Hockett has resigned as cashier of the LeGrand Savings at LeGrand to become cashier in a big furniture store in Des Moines.

The Des Moines Bankers Club had an especially enjoyable session last week. State Senator J. U. Sammis was the chief speaker of the evening. Senator J. F. Webber of Ottumwa and former State Senator G. M. Titus of Muscatine, both interested in repealing the tax ferret law, were guests of the club.

William Shattuck has retired as president of the First National of Garner and Representative A. C. Ripley will succeed him. E. C. Wickham has been made vice-president and F. M. Hansen, cashier.

Miss Rachel Clark of Des Moines has been named director for the University State Bank of Des Moines. She is said to be the only woman on the directory board of any of the larger banks of the state.

Martin Klang, thought to be insane, has been arrested at Forest City where it is charged he tried to shoot B. A. Plummer, president of the First National of that city.

Old Cashier Resigns

C. O. Harrington was for thirty-eight years cashier of the Farmers National of Vinton. He has resigned and Assistant Cashier George D. McElroy succeeds him while Frank Gerberich becomes assistant cashier. It is stated that Mr. Harrington has been an active cashier longer than any other cashier in the state.

N. E. Isaacs has been elected president of the First National at Thompson succeeding C. H. Kelley.

The prospects of a third bank at Hopkinton have vanished and the banking war is said to be over through the selling of a controlling interest in the Farmers State of that place to the "insurgents," A. W. McDonald and W. S. Johnson. Johnson has been elected president and McDonald cashier.

G. D. Ellyson of the Commercial Savings of Des Moines had the tonsillitis instead of the typhoid and is practically recovered.

Homer Miller of the Iowa National, Des Moines has returned from New York where he attended the meeting of the directors of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad.

F. F. McElhinney, president of the Black Hawk National at Waterloo, has purchased a controlling interest in the First National at Berwick, and has been made president, according to rumors from Waterloo.

As has been predicted Senator Quincy, of Kansas, has introduced his bill on bank guaranty providing a way for national banks to participate in the state guaranty fund.

Kansas City

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

National bank federation under the plan suggested by Senator Aldrich has been approved in a general way by those Kansas City and Central West bankers who have had the time to study it. The recently organized Kansas City and St. Joseph National Currency association is intended in a restricted way to carry out some of the ideas given out by Senator Aldrich, and President J. F. Downing, of that association, who is president of the New England National Bank of Kansas City, is favorably disposed toward the Aldrich plan. When asked to give his opinion Mr. Downing said:

"The new proposition of Senator Aldrich needs study to thoroughly master its details, and there has hardly been time for bankers to understand the thorough workings of the plan since its publication. However, I am inclined to view it with favor, but in making this statement I wish to be understood as not indorsing it in detail. It closely approaches the central bank plan, with some of the features to which objection has been made as to a central bank, eliminated. As proposed the federation takes the place of the central bank. It is in reality a central bank without that name. I am in favor of such a bank. This country needs such an institution, and Senator Aldrich seems to have shown the way to put our financial system on a sound financial basis. We are way behind the times as regards a proper national currency system. Every civilized nation in the world is ahead of us in this respect. Japan started off with our system but had to abandon it.

Panics a Thing of the Past

"As the plan appears at first glance, it is proposed to pass up bank collateral to the big national center, this collateral being guaranteed by the branches through which it passes. Upon this currency may be issued, etc. With such a plan in operation panics would be a thing of the past. No sound bank could fail. Runs on sound banks would be an unknown thing. Why? Because with such a law in operation the bank could put its assets into cash immediately, pay its depositors in full when demand was made without sacrifice, and with such a condition existing there could be no panics. They do not have them in other countries with the central bank system and we would not have them here. There will be some discussion as to the government of such an institution as is proposed. That, bankers do not yet understand. As to the governors being appointed by the President, that might possibly give a political tinge to the affair, but as they would be removable for cause that objection may be put aside for the present. The proposed institution must be free, in the minds of the people, of all control of Wall Street or any particular section of the country or financial interests, and the manner of choosing the directors is one of grave import for the success of the plan if it is finally adopted. To allot representation in accordance with the stock interests would be to give control to the larger institutions. If the plan is to have directors from the various reserve centers, then such a suggestion has much merit, as the representation would be equalized throughout the country and sectionalism, or Wall Street domination, removed.

Currency Associations a Basis

"I would not be surprised if it were not in the mind of Senator Aldrich to use the national currency associations as the basis for starting the plan. There are at present about fifteen such associations located in the various financial strongholds or reserve centers and the plan seems to be patterned in a measure after the mode of operation which would be followed in case the currency associations were called upon to act. As to whether it would be advisable for other than bankers to be on the various boards is a debatable question, as a man might be proficient in a certain line of business and yet not be adapted to guide banking affairs, just the same as a banker might be lost in some particular line of business. There are other features which will require discussion, broad discussion and consideration, but we must go into the consideration of the plan with the idea that in principle it is sound, and will be an effective bar to panics and in line with financial soundness. Having adopted this idea, then the matter of detail may be adjusted with satisfaction to the banking and business world. It puts a bank's assets into immediate available cash when necessary. Nothing could be a greater safeguard to business or depositors."

Board of Directors Named

The board of directors of the Interstate National Bank of Kansas City has been selected as follows: Charles W. Armour, president of the Armour Packing Company; Charles Baird, J. R. Burrow, president of the Central National Bank of Topeka; W. H. Burks, cashier Security State Bank of Wellington, Kan.; Lee Clark, chairman of the board; R. M. Cook, vice-president and John M. Cragin, president of the First National Bank of Joplin, Mo.; D. W. Evans, discount teller; H. S. Ferguson, Henry C. Flower, president Fidelity Trust Company, Kansas City; John J. Grier, William C. Henrici, cashier; George S. Hovey, president; Thomas G. Hutt, L. E. James, Henry Laird, M. A. Low, Topeka; C. F. Morse, president Kansas City Stock Yard Company; W. M. Peck, cashier Cloud County Bank, Concordia, Kan.; E. B. Stevens, president First National Bank, Parsons, Kan.

Committees of the state banking associations of Missouri and Kansas were in Kansas City the past week making arrangements for the annual joint meetings in Kansas City May 24th and 25th. The Kansas association was represented by W. H. Burks of Wellington, president; W. W. Bowman of Topeka, secretary; W. M. Peck of Concordia, vice-president and M. H. Mallott of Abilene, treasurer. Missouri's representatives were: A. O. Wilson, St. Louis, president; A. H. Waite, Joplin, vice-president; W. S. Keyser, Sedalia, secretary, and R. R. Calkins, St. Joseph, treasurer. Indications point to the largest attendance this year since the joint meetings were instituted.

Since the decision of the supreme court sustaining the validity of the Oklahoma bank guaranty law, the Oklahoma state banks have been rushing in their 1911 assessments to the state banking board. Many of the banks have been holding back for fear that, if the decision was unfavorable they would not get their money back. M. M. Henderson, secretary of the state banking board, reports that 85 per cent of the state bankers have sent in their assessments. They have until March 10th to do so.

Robberies Lead to Organization

On account of the many bank robberies in Kansas it is likely that the smaller banks will either join the Bankers Protective association or start a similar institution on their own account. State bank commissioner Doley is working hard to arouse the smaller bankers of Kansas to the necessity of doing something to protect themselves against robbers. Within the last six months about forty small Kansas banks have been robbed and none of them delonged to the Bankers Protective association. Each of the robbed banks saved $25 a year by keeping out of the association, but they lost in the long run.

The stockholders of the Western Exchange Bank of Kansas City have filled the vacancy on the board of directors by the election of J. Q. Watkins, county collector. This makes the personnel of the board: J. Z. Miller, Jr., Henry L. Waldo, D. S. McGonigal, H. Koehler, William H. Lucas, William T. Johnson and J. Q. Watkins. The new officers are: J. Z. Miller, Jr., president; William T. Johnson, vice-president; H. Koehler, cashier; C. F. Adams, assistant cashier. Mr. Miller is also vice-president of the Commerce Trust Company, and recently bought a controlling interest in the Western Exchange Bank from Jere S. Lillis, who has retired from the banking business.

Prosecution of Cashier

M. E. Church, former cashier of the Holyrood State Bank of Elsworth County, Kan., is being brought back to Kansas by Sheriff R. W. Bradshaw of Elsworth County, from Bakersfield, Cal., where he was arrested charged with making false entries on the bank books and receiving deposits when the bank was insolvent. For several years prior to a year ago F. E. Thomas was cashier of the Holyrood Bank, and it was through a bucketshop partnership with M. E. Church that the shortage occurred. Thomas resigned as cashier and Church was elected in his place. Church, it is alleged, knew all about the shortage of Thomas, which amounted to about $65,000, and covered up the condition of the bank. When a bank examiner went over the books of the bank Church left, and his whereabouts was unknown until he was arrested at Bakersfield. Thomas was never located. D. L. Church, father of M. E. Church, was president of the bank when the shortage was discovered, and he turned over $35,000 worth of farm lands. This ruined the aged man, and the bank leased him a small plot of land upon which to make a living.

American Union Trust Opens

The newest financial institution of Kansas City, the American Union Trust Company, opened its doors for business Monday morning, January 23d. Its home is in the remodeled banking rooms of the New York Life Insurance Company building, and for months the workmen have been transforming these quarters until every detail of arrangement and ornamentation is perfect. This institution was chartered some time ago, but the opening for business was deferred until the banking quarters could be completed. The morning of the opening all the officers were at their desks, and all the desks were almost buried in flowers. A gratifying number of accounts were opened the first day. The president of the American Union Trust Company is H. W. Richardson, the organizer who has had wide banking experience. The other executive officers are: Vice-president, Harry L. Coombs; vice-president, H. H. Hettinger; secretary, A. W. Ehrlich; treasurer, George W. Allison; assistant treasurer, E. J. Hilkey; assistant secretary, F. L. Johnson; trust officer, Judge J. W. Thompson; general counsel, Ernest D. Martin. In the department handling stocks, bonds and investments, J. A. Roberts is chief and Charles Ross Dale is assistant. Joel I. Adcock will look after the real estate department and Frank L. Johnson will have charge of the safe deposit and storage vaults. The directors are: George W. Alison, Lanville A. Brown, Harry L. Coombs, A. W. Ehrlich, A. R. Fuller, J. R. Greenlees, E. Lee Harrison, Joseph D. Havens, H. H. Hettinger, E. J. Hilkey, Charles H. Hill, Frank L. Johnson, John E. Lach, Ernest D. Martin, J. C. McDowell, James Muir, H. W. Richardson, T. A. Robert, J. Sidney Smith, J. W. Thompson and Fred Weber.

Two of the Newest Books

"Opal," a novel by Bessie R. Hoover (publishers: Harper Bros.), is a love story of real life among the humble folk of a Michigan town, and the author depicts types of working people who are devoid of all pretense and artificiality with a real sympathy for her subject. The heroine, youngest daughter of the Flickinger with whom Miss Hoover's readers have already become acquainted in "Pa Flickinger's Folks," has been well educated and is quite a young lady when this story begins. Her efforts at reforming the grammar, table manners, and general conduct of her people and their equally determined resistance to anything that will change their old, established customs are described with a skilful contrasting of the simple, natural impulses of the latter and her own acquired ideas. Opal wishes her family to reach the standard set her by a certain young man who reciprocates her interest, although they are estranged for some time. The story is full of humorous and at the same time pathetic situations,—the humorous is blended so well with the pathetic that the reader is kept wavering between joy and sorrow, but after all, humor is uppermost. The story is full of such good common sense and wholesomeness that is well worth the reading, and the happy ending which is accompanied with the tune of wedding bells is a fitting denouement to the whole. The price is $1.20 net.

"Gwenda," by Mabel Barnes-Grundy, published by the Baker & Taylor Company, is a story of modern, up-to-date English life, and has instead of the usual conventional pair of lovers, two pair; only one pair fails, while the other, following, succeeds. The book is written in the form of letters instead of chapters,—one of the best ways to acquaint the readers with the heroine, for she writes all of them and wins the interest by her own striking personality and quaintness. The book is full of fun, humor that is all the more enjoyable for being unexpected. There is plenty of warm, not burning, sentiment, and a plot that is well arranged and greatly enlivens the book. Other books by this author are "Hazel of Heatherland," "Dimble and I," "Hilary on Her Own," and other books of fiction. This latest book, "Gwenda," sells for $1.50.

"A Life for a Life"

In the greatest relief one may turn from the light and trifling novel of the day to any of the recent works of Robert Herrick. "Together" set people to thinking and now comes "A Life for a Life" of still more important and serious aspect. It probably is his most significant work, and deals with present day America. The conflict of regenerating and destroying forces in society is the key note. Not many characters are introduced to the reader but they seem real and earnest. Each is an individual before you get far into his pages. The finish is not of the quickly forgotten kind. Herrick arouses new views and new mental activities. The purposefulness of Mr. Herrick's work has been recognized for some time and those who read his previous book, "Together," do not need to be assured that "A Life for a Life" is a novel of interest. In a recent number of the The North American Review, W. D. Howells concludes an exhaustive analysis of Mr. Herrick's writings with these words: "Mr. Herrick's fiction is a force for the higher civilization which, to be widely felt, needs only to be widely known. What I should finally say of his work is that it is more widely based than that of any other American novelist of his generation." A most graceful tribute to a young worker in the field.

Published by the MacMillan Company, New York. Price at all book stores, $1.50.

Another Wallingford Story

There is a new story—"The 43d Pumpkin" out by George Randolph Chester, author of the "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" stories. It is complete in the February Lippincott's with a lot of short stories which go to make up the best reading magazine published.

No Extra Session

Washington, January 24.—Contrary to the general opinion in the West, it is commonly understood here that there will be no extra session of congress. Neither party desires to take up such important matters as tariff revision and monetary reforms in a summer session. The one promise that comes from Democrat leaders is that they will not attempt radical legislation. They are unprepared for quick action on the two great problems confronting them and are wise enough to admit this fact.

Republican leaders are well aware that no satisfactory tariff and money bills can be shaped up in the time which would be at their disposal in an extra session. Men who are experienced in Washington will not stay here through the entire summer except under compulsion. President Taft is believed to have given up all thought of calling congress together after the March adjournment and in coming to such a conclusion he is supported by the wishes of both parties and the business interests of the country.

Tariff and currency bills are likely to be brought forward next winter and will put both the great parties to a test in statesmanship. The 62d congress will be a notable one, and its acts will have a bearing on the business of this country. The election of 1912 will be governed to a great extent by the record made by the rival parties. In connection with this fine political game which must be played a revision of the tariff and the financial laws will have a direct effect on the prosperity of the United States. By the fall of 1912 people all over the country will have their minds made up whether to trust the Democratic party with full control of the government or not.

The tariff will be revised downward next time, but no one should get the idea that the work can be done in a day. It will be a matter of a year at best. At this time it would seem to be impossible to frame an adequate currency law inside of two or three years.

Exports of Coal Growing

Coal is becoming one of the important articles of exportation in the foreign trade of the United States. The important items of exportation are: Cotton, approximately 530 million dollars; meat and dairy products, 130 million; copper and mineral oil, about 94 million each; lumber, about 40 million; corn about 28 million; wheat, approximately 23 million; leather, 38 million, and tobacco, 36 million. While, of course, cotton, meats, copper and mineral oil are of much larger value in their respective totals, coal now exceeds in value of its exportations corn, wheat, tobacco, lumber, leather and numerous other articles which have been looked upon as important factors in our export trade, and the growth in the exportation of this article, coal, has been more rapid than that in many other leading articles of exportation.

About one-third of the 45 million dollars' worth of coal exported, or say 15 million dollars' worth in round terms, is anthracite; about 27 million dollars' worth bituminous coal, and about 3 million dollars' worth coke.

Would Include State Banks

The National Board of Trade has adopted resolutions favoring membership for state banks as well as national in the proposed reserve association.

The resolutions declare in favor of "a central banking organization" on the following principles:

"1. That such central organ be a corporation endowed with a large stock capital and not merely an association of banks.

"2. That its stock capital be owned by incorporated or state charter, willing to assume equal duties as a basis for equal privileges.

"3. That its administration be divided between the government the member-banks and the commercial classes, in a manner which will safeguard against individual, sectional or political domination.

"4. That its business be limited to transactions with the government and with the incorporated banking institutions which become stockholders, i. e., member-banks.

"5. That dividends on its stock be limited to a fixed moderate return and profits in excess of such dividends, after providing for a reasonable surplus and emergency fund, be turned over to the government.

"6. That its business be conducted through the branches to be established in the banking districts into which the country shall be divided, the member-banks of the several districts constituting joint associations and sharing in the administration of the branches.

Security Selling Below Par Proper

E. K. Boisot, vice-president of the First Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago, testified before the Railway Securities Commission that any federal regulation should allow latitude in the selling of securities below par. This, he said, was essential to promote the extension of small railroads between small towns.

A. J. Merickel and W. D. Merickel of Wadena, Minn., have sold the First State of Eagle Bend to J. A. Thronson of Clear Lake, S. D. The Merickels control the First National of Wadena and banks at New York Mills and Sebeka, Minn. Mr. Thronson is associated with John Swenson and others in controlling five banks in the two states.

RICHARD WANGELIN, our youthful friend at Belleville, Ill., reports close to two millions in his savings bank. Mr. Wangelin has not missed a convention of the Illinois Bankers Association in the 21 years of its existence.

W. I. PRINCE, cashier of the City National, Duluth, reports close to three millions in deposits. The City National is a leader in the far Northwest.

STATE BANK OF CHICAGO has $23,739,212.17 in deposits. Its savings business has grown rapidly. In total deposits the gain for 1910 was $3,200,000, which comes near to violating the speed ordinance for "conservative banking."

CONTINENTAL AND COMMERCIAL NATIONAL, Chicago, shows $86,528,324.39 in deposits from banks. Just think that over, you fellow who "do not solicit country business."

GEORGE B. CALDWELL, manager of the bond department of the Continental and Commercial Trust of this city addressed the Marquette University College of Economics recently on his pet hobby of "Stocks and Bonds." He touched upon the new commerce court of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and evidently believes it will be a useful ad-

MR. CALDWELL paid a high tribute to the Wisconsin commission and hoped a law might be passed in Illinois and Wisconsin similar to that in Michigan and Indiana, making municipal bonds issued within the state tax exempt.

MERCANTILE TRUST AND MERCANTILE NATIONAL, St. Louis, report jointly $38,500,000 in deposits. Growth has been steady at all times.

CONTINENTAL NATIONAL, Indianapolis, only began business in 1909, and the first call had $242,000 in deposits. It now reports $1,188,896.39.

OTTUMWA NATIONAL, AND WAPELLO COUNTY SAVINGS, Ottumwa, Iowa, report jointly more than $1,250,000 in deposits.

MR. JOHN FLETCHER will continue as the active executive officer of the Drivers Deposit National Bank.

EDWARD TILDEN, President.

ABOVE paragraph is quoted from the announcement sent out over the signature of Edward Tilden. A generous man thus gives credit where credit is due, and modest John Fletcher would have been the last one to proclaim it for himself. There are two—no, two and one-half times two—mighty nice men in that bank.

HALF of the stock and all of the big surplus of the First National, Kansas City, have been "earned."

WISCONSIN NATIONAL, Milwaukee, announces "special facilities for prompt collections on Wisconsin."

WE are teaching housewives how to pay bills by check, and put a stop to foolish errands. We have prepared a special circular of information called "A better way to pay bills." A request by 'phone or post card will bring it to you.—First National, Englewood.

"A COLLECTION of Newspaper Bank Advertising Copy" is the title of a booklet of the souvenir kind given out by the First National of Montgomery at the Alabama bankers convention. This is a new field and a useful one. The book is fully illustrated and any local printer could make zinc etchings from the cuts and reproduce them at small cost.

WE do not know what our friends Cradick and Morrison may think of this free competition, but maybe there will be a field in preparing such booklets for the larger banks for convention uses. C. L. Chilton, Jr., is the author, a staff man of the First.

MORE than half the book is devoted to readers intended to teach the saving habit, the use of the safety vault, checking accounts and other commercial lines of conservative banking.

MARCUS P. BEEBE, president of the Bank of Ipswich, South Dakota, visited Chicago Friday last and handed out post cards advertising the Ipswich Bank and including the following suggestion as to his side line—"farming, and treats of the subject of alfalfa."

HE visited Mr. Edens, the farm member of the Central Trust staff, and gave him some stimulating "dope" on alfalfa, which Mr. Beebe says beats even a bank account. He is one of the back to the soil advocates to a finish.

B. F. HARRIS, Champaign, Ill., is off for a South American cruise by the way of the Panama Canal. He expects to be home again in March.

BENJ. L. BRUNER, secretary of state, has tabulated the 485 Kentucky state banks which show resources of $102,666,352.55. The total deposits are $65,978,939.81. The combined capital is $20,917,940.66.

BEIERLIN & REYNOLDS, First National Bank building, have out a very attractive bond list, including municipal and corporation bonds with attractive yields.

J. A. S. POLLARD starts off his bank statement folder for the Fort Madison (Ia.) Savings Bank with the head lines: "This Bank is under State Supervision and is Examined Regularly by the State Bank Examiners." This is good advertising policy.

WALKER D. HINES, chairman of the executive committee of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company, contends, in substance, that rates must be advanced in order that surpluses may be increased for the purpose of raising money with which to protect the railroads from depreciation or obsolescence and to improve and extend.

R. L. RUTTER, vice-president and secretary of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, Spokane, Wash., and J. E. Ferris, assistant secretary of the Union Trust and Savings Bank of Spokane, were guests at the executive council dinner, given in the gold room of the Congress Hotel, the evening of January 17th. Mr. Rutter is a native of Philadelphia, but is not at all sleepy. Mr. Ferris is from Illinois, hailing from Carthage, and a brother of J. C. Ferris, president of the Hancock County National.

CONVENTION dates for 1911 as thus far announced are: Minnesota, Bemidji, June 20th; Missouri, Kansas City, May 24th and 25th; North Carolina, Kanauga Lake, June 21st, 22d, 23d; Texas, Dallas, May 16th, 17th, 18th. Illinois will meet at Springfield in October and South Dakota at Sioux Falls in June.

F. A. BLACKWELL, president of the Idaho and Washington Railway Company, Spirit Lake, Idaho, and who is interested in a number of banks in Idaho and Washington, visited Chicago last week and met many of the Illinois bankers who were in attendance on the council meeting. Mr. Blackwell is one of the strong men of Eastern Washington, and expresses a supreme confidence in the future growth and development of that territory, and still believes that Horace Greeley's advice to young men is a good proposition to follow even at this day.

FRED B. GRINNELL, a director of the Old National, Spokane, and a dealer in real estate in a larger way, was also in Chicago with the Spokane crowd.

MICHAEL CODY, president of the clearing house association of Montgomery, in welcoming the Alabama bankers to that city, came out very strongly for supervised and inspected banking. Among other things he said:

"FOR more than forty years no patron has suffered the loss of a dollar by any organized corporate bank in this city. During all these years they have been profoundly cognizant of their responsibilities—they have known that upon the integrity and stability of banks, more than any other class, must depend the perpetuity of community confidence and business expansion."

Motor Truck Supplants Money Wagon

For twenty-seven years the United States government has used a single money wagon, drawn by three handsome white horses hitched abreast, to transfer the newly-made greenbacks and postage stamps from the factory to the treasury and the postoffice department in Washington. But now the three white horses have been sent to the stable, and the old money wagon to the dump, while a modern motor truck has taken their place.

The old wagon, during all the years of its service, plied daily between the bureau of engraving and printing, where the money is made, and the treasury, and on every trip it was loaded with rectangular packages of twelve and one-half pounds each. In each package were 4,000 bills. If the bills were at the lowest denomination, the package was worth $4,000. If of the highest $10,000, it was worth $40,000. One package of this value once rode in the wagon. On each trip throughout its career it was accompanied by five men heavily armed, four of whom rode in the wagon and one of whom was mounted. These men were carefully selected, as one might imagine. They were formerly non-commissioned officers of the army, and that they are the right persons for their peculiarly responsible task is proved by the fact that not a cent was lost from the wagon.

It would take a string of hay wagons twenty miles long to hold all the money that has been passed through the old money wagon. If the packages were piled one in top of the other they would make a monument 15 miles high. If the bills were placed end to end the string would be 250,000 miles long, or equal to ten times the distance around the world. They would carpet a road fifty feet wide from New York to San Francisco. Their weight in coal would supply the average family with fuel for 250 years. Had an expert begun counting this money in the time of Columbus he would have been half done when Mr. Taft was inaugurated president.

Swedish Savings Banks

According to statistical reports there were 431 savings banks in Sweden in 1909. The largest is the Savings Bank of the City of Stockholm, with 77,732 depositors having $11,950,000 to their credit. The Savings Bank of Lund has 27,979 depositors and $6,030,000 on deposit. The Savings Bank of the City of Gothenburg has 54,728 depositors with $5,963,000. The total number of depositors for the whole country was 1,523,333, and their deposits aggregated $203,800,000, an increase in the year of $12,550,000.

Banking Opinion

"There is likely to be considerable idle capital for at least a month to come," said President Ernest A. Hamill of Corn Exchange National to a representative of the THE CHICAGO BANKER on Tuesday. "The year's volume of business will be fair, but hardly up to the average in my judgment. Things have taken a slow start, and three months of stagnation will make a decided difference in the sum total of trade."

"What influences are expected to improve the situation in the spring?" he was asked.

"Money will come into large and more general use with the close of winter. No doubt the railroads will absorb a great deal of idle money when the time comes for construction work. They will take a lot of this capital while it is cheap—more if the rate decisions are favorable than if they are unfavorable, of course. The railroads are not going backward. They must go forward even if they get a pretty hard blow from the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"While the corporations are expected to become the largest customers in the use of money the moment they set the wheels in motion there will be a general trade improvement, with some unavoidable expansion. Mercantile and manufacturing demands on financial houses will be heavier in the spring and to a considerable extent that class of business will be governed by the feeling in railway circles.

"General investment buying is helping the money market a little this winter. People are critical in a time like this, but they are willing and able to buy gilt-edge securities although the business of the country taken altogether is not at its best. The somewhat free buying of real estate and of high grade bonds this winter has had a steadying effect on money. It gives us a good basis to work on and with the spring improvement in sight bankers are confident that the worst is over. That feeling is tending to give the money market firmness. Naturally any signs of trade revival will stiffen quotations.

"Later in the year there will come the inevitable demand for capital with which to move grain and cotton. By that time there ought to be a sufficient readjustment of financial affairs so that the last half of the year will be the best.

More Bank Space

Owing to the continuous and rapid increase in the number of savings depositors, First Trust and Savings Bank has been compelled to make immediate provision for larger quarters.

Arrangements have been completed which will enable the trust department to occupy the large rooms located on the Dearborn Street side of Trust National Bank building and formerly used by Ely Meyer's tailoring house.

The apartments there vacated will be fitted up for and used by the savings department in addition to the present banking rooms.

JOHN G. SPANGLER

Washington National Absorbed

The American Trust Co., St. Louis, has taken over the business of the Washington National, of the same city. President Van Ruyper of the American has invited all of the Washington National depositors to make themselves at home in the trust company.

Tour of South

Vice-President F. A. Crandall of National City Bank returned Wednesday from a months tour of the South. He spent most of his time in Arkansas and Alabama.

The trip was in the interests of the bank and Mr. Crandall came in touch with leading financial men of those and other states. He had an excellent opportunity to study conditions in the cotton belt and was strongly impressed with the prosperity which prevails. There is a confident feeling in business and agricultural circles.

While the cotton crop was not above the average the price was high, so that returns to farmers are large and there is promise of an increased acreage this year. Southern farm products are fairly diversified and land owners are keeping up with the times.

With the large returns from cotton the banks have an abundance of money. There is a promise of idle capital for several weeks and new industrial enterprises are finding rates unusually favorable.

Petit's Enterprise

The interesting news comes from Milwaukee that the Black property, comprising the block now occupied by the Waldheim Furniture Company, 407-411 East Water Street, has been bought by President L. J. Petit of the Wisconsin National Bank.

According to Mr. Petit's statement, a large office building as high as the adjoining Pabst building, will be erected on the site, the two lower floors of which probably will be used by the Wisconsin National Bank and the Wisconsin Trust Company, to enlarge their present quarters.

The property has a 60-foot frontage on East Water Street and runs 120 feet to the river. The purchase price is understood to have been about $150,000.

It is not definitely known when building operations will be commenced. Victor Waldheim of the Waldheim Company says that he secured a five-year lease on the property on January 1, 1911, in which case he may continue to occupy it until 1916, if he desires to do so.

There is now only thirty-six feet frontage on the block between Wisconsin and Mason Streets on the west side of East Water Street not owned by financial concerns. Last week the First National Bank acquired the Brodhead and Iversen property at East Water and Mason Streets. The Marshall & Ilsley bank has purchased the property adjoining that purchased on Monday by Mr. Petit.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

RUMOR has it that States Attorney Weyman is about to sue for absolute divorce from the Chicago Tribune. Non-support and other allegations likely are to be made. Cross bill might contain about the same specifications—and each will be telling the truth.

RESPONSES indicates that the Nashville mid-year meeting of the council will be, in part, a society event—so many ladies going. The section councils likely will be called also, and taken together with the various committeemen, all entitled to go, the meeting will be large. President Watt invites “you all” to get there on Sunday morning.

THIS will give “you all” a fine chance to see the inside of Nashville’s famous churches and the golf links will be in full bloom at that date. Now, I guess you’ll take notice.

JOHAN C. RICHBERG, Chicago’s noted attorney and president of the Illinois Commission on Uniform Laws, will address a banquet meeting on the dangers of the initiative and referendum, Saturday evening, February 4th, at the Hotel LaSalle. Frederick V. Holman, head of the state bar association and J. Lawrence Laughlin of the University staff also will speak. All will be under the auspices of the Civic Federation.

A GAIN! If you are thinking over this savings bank question, don’t wait. The situation may not keep. Ask the First National, Peoria, about its success with the Savings Bank of Peoria. This is the finest end of the banking business.

NORTH SHORE NEWS (Evanston) has been saying some mighty nice things about Charles N. Stevens and his fine bank, the City National. Among the directors are such men as David R. Forgan, James A. Patten, and Mayor Joseph E. Paden.

ONE of the changes in New Orleans banking circles on the first of the year was the election of R. S. Hecht as trust officer of the Hibernian Bank and Trust Company. This institution is the largest trust company in the South and has for many years given special attention to its trust, bond and real estate departments—the position of trust officer is therefore a very important one and the many friends of Mr. Hecht will be pleased to learn of his flattering promotion.—Gulf States Banker.

MR. HECHT’S former Chicago associates will learn of his promotion with much pleasure. He is well known and kindly remembered by the Chicago Chapter A. I. B. boys.

GEORGE S. PARKER, president of the Live Stock National, Sioux City, Iowa, has remembered his friends with a very handsome calendar.

A FRIEND writes in and wants to know “how the Security National of Minneapolis can get its statement out on the street by 10 A. M. on day of call?” Probably Pomeroy and Harrison sit up nights along about call time. At least one of their slower contemporaries alleges this.

THOS. H. GARDINER, “socialist,” of Los Angeles takes the Chicago Banker to task for a headline “The Government will Give the Postal Savings System a Try Out.” Mr. Gardiner cites statistics to show that postal banks always have been a success from the start. Most of what he had to say would start a controversy, if nothing more serious, in a bankers’ convention.

JOSEPH T. HOWELL, late of the Carnegie Trust, has gone back home where he is appreciated and where they do their banking with real money and real credits. He has been elected president of the Cumberland Valley National of Nashville, Tenn. Before going to New York Mr. Howell had built up the Fourth National successfully, in the same city.

CHASE’S paper, tired of being known widely as “the best paper of its kind printed in Omaha” will appear simultaneously hereafter in both Kansas City and Omaha. Nothing since the Lillis and Hyde episodes has created so much excitement at the mouth of the Kaw.

EDWARD F. LARSON, cashier of the Citizens State Bank, at Nampa, Idaho, is classed as a “booster” by his fellow townsmen. He learned the value of boosting in Iowa.

FORT DEARBORN NATIONAL has sent out a beautiful desk or wall calendar, the number pad being only about two inches square and tastefully mounted on aluminum.

OLD DETROIT NATIONAL and American Exchange National are one now, with deposits of $20,000,000.

“BILLY” REED it was when he traveled out for the First at Pittsburgh. Los Angeles was his last trip of the kind. Then he went back home to “Old Smoky” and married the beautiful Miss Miller, daughter of Reuben Miller, one of the powers in the iron world. Now he is William McKennan Reed, president of the Third National. To a lot of the boys he’ll be just “Billy” for some time to come.

BUT twice in 1910 was the average price of twenty-five leading stocks so low as it has been since January 1st. This is, in a sense, a business barometer.

A GLIB-TALKING young man has been buying scholarships in business colleges with certified checks on the Continental National of Indianapolis—but taking always “the change” in small bills. Secretary Crampton has made him the subject of a special circular. “W. E. Story” is the name he has used.

“A CHARIOT OF FIRE” by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps sells for only fifty cents, but is worth ten times as much. It tells how a poor laboring man was enabled to reach a dying son by means of an automobile (the chariot) given to the service by its rich owner.

SECURITY SAVINGS, Los Angeles, is sending out the California Banking Laws, bound in flexible leather. All Californians are proud of their new laws and of their splendid administration by the present commissioner. The laws are fully indexed.

JOHAN PERRIN suggests that the “Big Council” ought to ask the monetary commission to meet with them, especially since the Nashville Club links are so fine.

THE 24th annual convention of the Kansas Bankers Association will be held at Kansas City, Kansas, May 24th and 25th, 1911. Readers will note this is the same date of the Missouri convention which will be held at Kansas City, Mo. Arrangements are being made for one joint session and a joint entertainment of the two associations on the night of the second day with which the entire convention will be concluded.

THIS joint meeting will be a big hit and second only in importance to the A. B. A. itself. When Illinois and Iowa held their joint session at Davenport-Rock Island, it was the event of the year. State secretaries can’t do a better thing. Ohio and Michigan, or Michigan and Wisconsin might go boating together any time. They all are amphibians in convention matters.

BOWMAN and Keyser are live ones and you can put your “May 24th Outing” down in red ink.

ACCORDING to present arrangements, a joint session will be held on the evening of the first day, when addresses will be delivered by speakers of national prominence. One afternoon and the evening of the last day will be given over to joint entertainment, which will be provided by the Kansas City Clearing House. The rest of the time will be reserved for individual meetings of the two associations—Missouri in Kansas City, Missouri, and Kansas in Kansas City, Kansas. This ideal arrangement coupled with the characteristic hospitality of Kansas City bankers insures an unexcelled convention, as to both profit and pleasure.

HERE is another wise move. The Missouri council of administration recommends that each member of the association provide some effective means of preserving circular letters received from the association. A suitable device for this purpose can be procured at a nominal cost, and Mr. Keyser hopes that each member will comply with this very important suggestion.

IN THE last few months there have been many reports of burglaries of banks in this state (Ohio) by yeggmen and also of operations by other criminals directed against banks. Burglary insurance is a safeguard against loss which no banker should neglect to have and it costs but little compared to the protection which it affords.—S. B. Rankin.

Colonel Farnsworth Endorses Currency Plan

Frederick E. Farnsworth, secretary of the American Bankers Association, made the following statement to a representative of The Journal of Commerce in regard to the Reserve Association plan proposed by Senator Aldrich.

"The American Bankers Association is not committed specifically to a central bank or to the proposed plan for monetary legislation submitted to the National Monetary Commission by Hon. Nelson W. Aldrich, and termed 'reserve association of America.' The bankers of the country, however, realize the importance of advanced and new banking and currency legislation. They also realize fully that our present banking system is very nearly fifty years old; that it was a war measure, and that very little change has been made in the original law; and while an excellent measure when placed on the statute books in many respects it is now obsolete and entirely inadequate for the needs of the banking and commercial pursuits of the nation.

"Recurring panics, strenuous periods of depression, lack of currency in crop moving seasons, and no modern methods whereby currency could be secured when most desired, resulted in a very full discussion of the deficiencies of our banking and currency laws, at the annual convention of the American Bankers Association held in St. Louis, Mo., in October, 1906, and the authorization of the appointment of a Currency Commission of the Association to be comprised of fifteen members, five of whom were to be the then legislative committee, the other ten members to be selected with due reference to national and state banks and trust companies, said commission to confer with the Chamber of Commerce of New York City, and after a careful investigation and study of the plans submitted, to co-operate with the proper congressional committees with a view to the enactment of a law covering the subject. It did not appear to this commission at the time of its appointment that it would be wise to attempt an entire revision of the banking and currency laws; but that a period of education would have to intervene before the country would be ready for radical changes; hence in 1907 the commission prepared and had introduced into congress an asset currency bill. In 1908 this was repeated, and there was brought out at the same time the Aldrich bill, the Fowler bill and some one hundred other measures, all of which gave way to the Aldrich-Vreeland bill which became a law and which was intended as a temporary measure to provide for emergency currency.

"The agitation at this time brought about the appointment of the National Monetary Commission. This commission has made a very exhaustive research of the banking and currency systems of the world of the past one hundred years, and has brought out as a result of these labors several thousand pages of literature on the subject, which will be valuable for all time to come. In the meantime educational work has been going on and to-day the business and banking interests of the country are in a receptive mood, while ten years ago, at the annual convention of the American Bankers Association, when plans were proposed for a modern banking and currency law, the speaker, a prominent member of congress, addressed an audience which was not in sympathy with his ideas and was hissed.

"Great changes have taken place during this decade. The Aldrich-Vreeland law was an advance. During the past year the question of a central bank has occupied a prominent place in the discussions by bankers' associations and business organizations throughout the land, and has brought about the conviction among very many leaders that a central bank, or some kindred plan would be the most desirable outcome of the ten years' discussion of the wants and needs of the United States. Where weakness has developed in the carrying out of some such plan as has been suggested, it has been owing to the fact that communities or individuals have not understood what was contemplated. In other instances where the central bank plan has been discussed by competent financiers who have understood the subject, it has brought with it conviction. In two Western states which perhaps are known to be as radical on legislation as any of the states of the union, at recent bankers' conventions held by these states, after listening to an able arguments of the central bank plan, unanimously passed resolutions endorsing a central bank.

"Any expression of opinion which I may make is a personal opinion and not official. I believe that the proposed plan of Senator Aldrich is a splendid foundation for what is now required—a modern, up-to-date reserve association which can provide for the needs of our great and growing country. I also believe that Senator Aldrich and the National Monetary Commission are influenced only for the greatest good for the largest number, and what they have brought out has been the result of careful study and based on experience of nations and the requirements of this nation. As stated by Senator Aldrich, the plan is a tentative one, and has been proposed at this time for the purpose of a thorough discussion and an analysis of the subject, inviting the criticism of the commercial and banking bodies of the country, students of economics and individuals who have made a study of this broad subject. It is fortunate that the present session of congress is a short one, and that the usual pressure of important legislation at this time will crowd out the consideration of banking and currency legislation. This, however, will give plenty of opportunity for an educational campaign and a thorough consideration of the proposed bill, so that when it is taken up by congress it will, without doubt, be in a perfect state, and the result should be the enactment of laws that will fill all requirements, and which can remain on the statute books for many years to come without radical amendments."

Texas Currency Association

Dallas, Texas, January 24.—The organization of the first currency association in the Southwest has been effected here. Fourteen national banks in Dallas and surrounding counties have joined the association, calling themselves the National Currency Association of Dallas.

Look for Decision

According to current expectation, in the best informed governmental circles, an early decision in the corporation tax cases will probably be rendered by the supreme court of the United States. This is earnestly desired on very many accounts, and there seems reason to suppose, although of course no official or authorized statement on the subject exists, that the court is well aware of the feeling of the administration and desirous to reach a decision as soon as it can consistently with good work and a proper treatment of the subject. It is the opinion of those who are familiar with what was done last spring at the time when a reargument was ordered, that the judges then on the bench had definitely made up their minds as to the merits of the case, and that all that is necessary is to give the new members an opportunity to do the same. This is a matter that ought not to take very long.

The situation is simplified by the fact that the recent reargument has not developed anything of very novel importance. Practically the same points were covered as in the former case, and those who attended the sessions did not feel that the attorneys had changed their line of argument in many important respects.

Shows Merit of Aldrich Plan

A. Piatt Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury department, declares that the Aldrich currency plan goes a long way toward removing the deficiencies of our banking system. He points out that it provides for greater unity of policy and uninterrupted exchange among the banks in different parts of the country; it eliminates the present inflexibility of our banking reserves; it provides for a national discount market; it does away with the bond-secured currency and offers a flexible note issue based upon commercial assets in its stead; it removes the objectionable features of the independent treasury system, and it proposes to eliminate the irregularities which now exist between the Federal and the state banking system. At the same time it carefully aims to provide against control either by financial or political interests.

The plan embodies most of the features which are common to the banking system of other important countries and which we hitherto have lacked. Yet it does not attempt to reproduce in this country any institution existing elsewhere.

The Reserve Association is not like the Reichsbank, or the Bank of France, or the Bank of England, yet it embodies among its functions the valuable features common to all of these institutions.

Large Investment

"Instead of $20,000 as recently stated, the New York Life Insurance Company has $302,450 invested in Spokane real estate and other forms of security," said J. R. McKnelly, Inland Empire agency director of the company. "It was recently announced that the New York Life had invested its first $20,000 in Spokane real estate when the mortgage on the Baldwin building on Sprague Avenue was purchased. That purchase is just a part of the capital represented in Spokane investments. The New York Life holds $282,450 in Spokane school bonds, besides the $20,000 mortgage."

The essays must be written by June 1st. The institutions included in the offer are the universities of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Iowa. These prizes are offered annually.

Anna Banks Elect Officers

The directors of the First National of Anna have elected the following officers: R. Johnson, president; W. Grear, vice-president; Edward Sampson, cashier; and Allie Willoughby, assistant cashier. The Anna National has elected L. J. Hess, president; A. N. Session, vice-president; John B. Jackson, cashier; and C. L. Burton and Ethel Davis, assistant cashiers. Anna is one of the better towns in "Egypt."

Paxton Bank Has Ample Security

The agricultural operations of W. A. Rankin, of Tarkio, Missouri, have attracted wide attention. Mr. Rankin is one of the largest land owners and operators, not only in the state of Missouri, but in the United States. He also owns extensive land interests in Illinois and retains his legal residence at Onarga, Iroquois county, Illinois. Mr. Rankin is interested in Illinois banks as he is president of the Paxton Bank of Paxton, and of the bank of Rankin, Whitham and Company of the town of Rankin. This latter village in Vermilion county is named for Mr. Rankin and it was near this town that he began his business operations more than forty years ago.

The Paxton Bank was established January 1, 1894, by Messrs. W. A. Rankin and B. H. Durham. The following fall W. J. LaTeer, then of Hoopeston, where he was a partner of John L. Hamilton, became associated with the bank and has since served as cashier and the resident managing partner. Mr. Durham is a resident of Onarga where he is associated in the management of the Onarga Bank, the old Durham Bros. Bank, and has been a banker "of the old school" of success and conservatism for the past forty years. He is also a large Illinois land owner. E. D. Durham of Onarga and a partner of B. H. Durham is well known to bankers both of the national and state associations as he has been a frequent attendant at various bankers' meetings and in 1905 was president of the Illinois Bankers Association. W. J. LaTeer is now a member of the executive council of the Illinois association. Messrs. Rankin and Durham hold the positions of president and vice-president of the banks at Paxton and Rankin.

The Paxton Bank is one of the best private banks in the state as it has the entire financial responsibility of Messrs. Rankin, Durham and LaTeer behind its operations. The bank has assets of $400,000 employs a capital of more than $75,000 and has a responsibility of one and a half millions. Mr. LaTeer says: "The bank has always been so conducted that investigation by any government official would not disturb the management of the bank in the least."

O. J. Engell has been assistant cashier for many years and N. V. LaTeer, a son of the cashier, has been with the institution for the past five years.

Illinois Notes

At a meeting of the directors of the Exchange National of Polo the following officers were elected: J. L. Moore, president; S. Beard, vice-president; W. T. Schell, cashier; and E. R. Antrim, assistant cashier.

The First National of Sullivan has installed a system of intercommunicating telephones in their office.

A miser who lived in the vicinity of Maeystown, near Chester, was found to have $300 secreted in an old log in the cellar of his hut. He was Jacob Zeis, aged 74, and placed his money in the log and sealed up the holes over the gold coins. When the hermit had not been seen for several days a neighbor went to the hut and found the aged man dead in bed. A note on the table written by the miser explained the whereabouts of the money. As there were no immediate relatives the money was turned over to the officials of Monroe county.

Bank clearings in Danville for the week ending January 26th were $405,586. There has been a steady increase in Danville clearings for several weeks. Possibly sensation is a good thing for a town.

The Lincoln National is about to get into its new quarters. The front of the building is said to be especially artistic and the structure will be one of the best business houses in Lincoln.

The Centennial National of Virginia, Ill., has received full settlement from the burglary company which had insured the vault of this bank. It will be remembered that a very bungling piece of bank robbery was attempted some weeks ago at Virginia and the only result of the episode was about $100 worth of damage to the front of the vault. Patrick Kenney, the night watchman who was beaten and gagged by the robbers, is slowly recovering from his experiences.

Eli Peck, who has been cashier of the Citizens' Bank of Cerro Gordo, is the new cashier of the First National of Blue Mound. Both of these towns are in the vicinity of Decatur.

A permit to incorporate a new state bank in the city of Chicago has been issued to Thomas P. Hicks, Fred Swigart, H. C. Taylor, F. L. Johnson, and A. W. Fulton. The institution will have capital of $200,000. Newspaper reports state that the name of the bank will be the Madison Street Bank.

New Counterfeit Bank Note

A new counterfeit $10 bank note is described as follows: "On the Merchants National Bank of Providence, R. I. Check letter 'B'; series 1902; J. W. Lyons, Register of the Treasury; Ellis H. Roberts, Treasurer of the United States; charter number 1131; bank number 15995; treasury number VII3529; portrait of William McKinley.

"This counterfeit appears to have been printed from very crude wood cut plates and is so poor that a detailed description of it is deemed unnecessary. One hundred and eighteen of these counterfeits were found in the possession of two Italians arrested at Taylor, Pa."

Reserve Center Legislation

Representative Crow of Missouri has stepped into the realm of finance. He introduced a bill providing that "whenever three-fourths of the national banks situated in any city of the United States having a population of 200,000 shall make application of the comptroller of the currency in writing, asking that such city may be a central reserve city, like the City of New York, the comptroller may, with the approval of the secretary of the treasury, grant such request."

Money, Banking and Finance from Chicago Viewpoint

Senator Aldrich has given to the country a topic for discussion which will last for some months and possibly for years. The subject of a national reserve association in place of a central bank came upon the public suddenly and unexpectedly. As a general thing bankers were slow to make up their minds as to the merits of the proposal. It is apparent, after a couple of weeks of debate, that Chicago financiers are favorably disposed toward the plan.

Questions asked in this connection are instructive. Will not the democrats in congress oppose the Aldrich measure and bring forward a plan of their own? Has not the country secured elastic money and the power to quickly increase its volume through the currency associations? Have we not already gained a method of preventing panics and giving the banks all the cash they need in any and all circumstances? These are some of the questions heard at the local banks and in political circles. They suggest their own answers.

There will be Opposition

While it is clear enough that financial men as a whole will support the Aldrich plan there will be strong political opposition. Naturally this opposition will be voiced from the democratic side. The whole idea of centralization will be fought. The measure is likely to win in time but it may be opposed for years. It is thought now that the presidential election of 1912 will be out of the way before the country gets a new money law. Tariff revision will be pushed ahead of financial legislation. With one element of congress opposing the Aldrich method because it looks to them like centralization and another fighting it because it is the proposal of a republican leader whose principal views are objectionable to them there is sure to be a long period of discussion before a conclusion is reached.

After the presidential election is out of the way both parties will be freer to take up the intricate currency question. Tariff amendments will in all probability be put through next winter but there will be little chance for a money bill at that time.

Political Aspect of Plan

Any plan which contemplates the establishment of a new financial institution of such scope and powers as the reserve association must guard most carefully to avoid control by particular interests or subjection to political influences. The Aldrich plan presents ingenious and carefully contrived arrangements for preventing both of these contingencies. Monopoly of stock control is out of the question for the capital stock is not subject to sale or transfer and can only be held by banks in proportion to their capital. Domination of the directorate by the banks of any locality or any group of interests is also guarded against by the carefully devised provisions through which the directors of the reserve association and its branches are to be selected by a distribution of voting power among local associations of banks in different geographical areas. No political party can gain control or influence over the association for the same reasons. The governor is to be selected by the President from a list to be submitted by the board of directors, and, like the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, will practically serve for life. The intrusion of politics is further prevented by a regulation that no member of any national or state legislature can serve as director either of the reserve association or of any of its branches or of any local association.

Scope of the Association

In the plan as developed this association is to be the depository and fiscal agent of the national government. It is to have the sole issue power. It may receive deposits from those national banks which are stockholders in it. It shall establish branch banks. It may buy and sell government and state securities, and foreign government securities, and gold coin or bullion. It may rediscount paper for banks depositing with it. It may buy acceptances of substantial houses—and no bank wants any other kind.

As no provision for retiring the greenbacks is suggested it is presumed that Senator Aldrich considers it unwise to attempt that movement at this time. With the present political attitude of the country congress is not likely to interfere with the government's issue of money. It is clear that the reserve association is intended to operate with the emergency currency associations. It would serve to strengthen and unify the national banks and could quickly give to the country all the currency needed in any stringency. No one need expect the full development of this or any other currency plan inside of four years and yet the Aldrich suggestion is in the right direction and will meet general approval.

Chicagoans in Land Deal

Considerable Chicago capital is to be put into a great land deal in the upper peninsula of Michigan. This enterprise is along a line suggested some weeks ago by THE CHICAGO BANKER. The transfer was that of W. G. Mather of Cleveland, Ohio, to H. H. Hamilton and associates of St. Paul, Minn., of 712,000 acres of land for $2,500,000.

It is understood that H. G. Haugan of Chicago, formerly auditor of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, is interested in the deal. It is the intention of the new owners to cut the land up into suitable tracts to be sold to individuals.

There is land enough in this tract to give snug little farms to 10,000 persons. It is the intention of the new owners to make the sales in small parcels, preferably 40 acres each, but there will be no restriction on those who are able to buy 160 acres.

The land has cost about $4 an acre and will sell readily in little farms at $10 to $25, according to location. This is a feasible and legitimate method of making money. With suitable dwellings erected there would be a rush for these farms at prices that would be fully satisfactory.

Postal Banks a Success

Postal savings banks are a success in this country as far as they have gone. That fact seems established by reports reaching the post-office department from the postmasters at whose offices banks have been established. It would seem that the popular criticism of the law is the limitation imposed as to the amount of money which may be accepted from patrons.

Many persons want to deposit more than $100 a month. A considerable quantity of money has been brought out of hiding and, as was expected, foreigners are bringing their savings to the banks.

That the banks have come to stay is the opinion of the postal officials. From all over the country the reports are glowing. Many children with their small savings are attempting to accumulate a nest egg by purchasing the cards and adhesive stamps.

Tone of Business Improves

Merchants and manufacturers agree that the tone of business has greatly improved in the last couple of weeks. Bankers are in a position to bear out this claim. The general trade of the country is excellent. Money circulates freely. Buying is extensive in all branches.

It is thought to be noteworthy that business is better all over the country than was anticipated earlier in the winter. A spirit of caution spread abroad in the fall and many persons were bound to have a spell of hard times in spite of anything. There has been a gradual lifting of the pall. There is actual surprise everywhere at the steadily increasing volume of business and the improved financial condition. Even the rail mills are getting busy. Labor is quite largely employed both in city and country.

George S. Parker

George S. Parker, president of the Live Stock National, Sioux City, Ia., has been unanimously elected president of the Sioux City Commercial (boosters) Club. He also is president of the clearing house. These three jobs are quite likely to cut down Mr. Parker's hours at golf this season.

C. F. Childs & Co. Open for Business

The firm of C. F. Childs & Company, with a fully subscribed capital of $500,000, which opened for business February 1st in temporary quarters at 159 LaSalle Street, will not only transact a general bond business but will also serve this community and the banking fraternity by arranging to syndicate among prominent underwriters and dealers in Chicago many attractive issues which are now financed elsewhere. Such services should prove to be valuable to any corporation desiring to finance its requirements locally and place in responsible hands an issue of bonds for distribution. Also such services will be acceptable to the underwriters and dealers in securities in that they can participate in the underwriting of a portion of an issue which so frequently is dependent upon the willingness of one or two of the larger institutions or eastern banking houses to underwrite. The company will co-operate with all the bond houses and bond departments of the Chicago banks and will endeavor to secure for this market many issues which are now first financed and placed elsewhere and then ultimately offered for sale publicly in this market. The company will serve the mortgagor in the underwriting and marketing of his bond issue by putting the proposition in bondable, bankable form for presentation to dealers and underwriters. Although several banking houses in New York serve the distributing dealers and bond departments in this way, no similar company exists in Chicago.

In addition to this department of its business the firm will have a special department for the handling of government bond transactions. Through arrangements and connections which have been made in Washington and New York, the firm will be able to give the banks of the middle west special services for depositing and withdrawing government bonds at the treasury department as security for national bank note circulation and government deposits. Acting as dealers, and not brokers, no commission charge for such services will be made but all prices quoted will be net to the customer.

It is understood that among those interested in the company as stockholders are many of the most prominent capitalists, bankers and business men of Chicago and it is generally felt that Chicago has long appreciated the need of the very services which this company will undertake to offer.

We understand the initial subscriptions for the stock were considerably more than the total capital stock available and accordingly an early increase in the company's capitalization is expected.

The president and manager of the company, C. Frederick Childs, was for many years manager of the western office of Fisk & Robinson and during the past year organized and managed the bond department of the Commercial Trust & Savings Bank which by consolidation became the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank. He is a graduate of Yale University and a member of Chicago's most prominent clubs, including the Chicago club, University, Yale, and Onwentsia at Lake Forest, of which city he is also mayor. He is well known in banking circles as a specialist in government bonds and is generally well known by the bankers throughout the country. Mr. Childs will have in his organization a thoroughly experienced corps of assistants, including many members of his former office force.

Charles E. Arnold, for many years vice-president of the Wisconsin National of Milwaukee, recently resigned, has been elected treasurer of the N. R. Allen's Sons Tannery Company of Kenosha.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER

By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Considerable falling off in the demand for money has been evidenced of late at the various Milwaukee banks and this also holds true in the country towns where the smaller banker is commencing to cast about for investment of his surplus funds. Clearing house returns show a good volume of business transacted for the past week and collections are reported as generally satisfactory.

As evidence of the condition of the manufacturing interests is the statement coming from the Allis-Chalmers Company to the effect that their bookings thus far in 1911 are greatly in excess of the same period one year ago. Inquiries are said to be of a highly satisfactory character but consumers appear to be awaiting some important development affecting the general business situation before definitely closing contracts for improvement work.

New Home for First National

The First National Bank of Milwaukee has purchased the property of the Brodhead estate and the Iversen block at the southwest corner of East Water and Mason streets, with a 120 foot frontage on East Water Street, and will erect a bank building on this site. The consideration for the transfer is $275,000. This was the testimony given in court during the past week by the trustee of the estate of Edward H. Brodhead, deceased.

The matter came out on an application of the trustee to sell what is known as the Brodhead block. The trustee stated that the First National Bank was to purchase the property and that consideration would be $200,000. He stated, furthermore, that the same interests had purchased, or arranged to purchase, from the Daniel Wells estate, the Iversen block, the consideration in this instance being $75,000. The two properties will give the bank a frontage of 120 feet and will extend to the river on the west side.

The new building will also be the home of the First Savings and Trust Company, the new institution that succeeds the Milwaukee and Fidelity Trust companies, both of which have been merged with the First National Bank.

Bankers to Prevent Fraud

The Wisconsin Bankers Association is in correspondence with state police departments for a campaign to obtain the passage of a law such as is in force in Iowa, providing fines and imprisonments from five to fifteen years for men found with burglary equipments.

"Six yeggmen, carrying burglars' tools were arrested at Hudson, Wis., six weeks ago," says Secretary Bartlett of the association, "and the only charge that could be preferred against them was that they resisted arrest, when it was quite apparent that they had come from St. Paul to commit burglary in this state."

It is likely that the safety paper which has been submitted to the association for inspection by its members will be adopted for use for checks and other documents, to prevent fraudulent changes. The papers come in various light shades. A series of waving, parallel lines run through it and any erasure or use of acid at once takes off a surface covering revealing a lighter color below and making detection of changes easy. The paper is patented and will be issued to no other banks in Wisconsin than those in the association. It will contain the triangular emblem of the Wisconsin Bankers Association as a watermark.

Joins Wisconsin Trust Company

Clement C. Smith, president of the Columbia Construction Company and vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company when it was absorbed by the First National Bank, was elected a director of the Wisconsin Trust Company at a special meeting of the stockholders held recently. This company has filed with the registrar of deeds an amendment to its articles of incorporation increasing its number of directors from eleven to twelve. This was made necessary by the addition of Mr. Smith.

Mr. Smith is one of the best known electric railway builders in the West. He also has become known as an operator of electric railway and lighting corporations. He is president of the Eastern Wisconsin Railway & Light Company; president of the Wisconsin Electric Railway Company; vice-president of the Sterling, Dixon and Eastern Electric Railway Company of Dixon, Ill., and vice-president of the Lee County Lighting Company of Illinois which controls the water power, gas and electric light plants of Dixon.

The list of directors of the Wisconsin Trust Company now includes the following: Oliver C. Fuller, president; L. J. Petit, chairman;

Requests for Directory Pour In

Willis V. Cheney, assistant cashier of the Wisconsin National Bank, reports an influx of requests for the Wisconsin National Bank state bank directory which will run that edition into many hundreds more than issued last year. This directory is put up in convenient vest pocket form and was given away as a souvenir at the Wisconsin Bankers Association state convention one year ago. The same policy will be adopted by the bank at the state convention this year and that the directory will be up to date is evidenced by the large amount of preliminary work being devoted to it by Mr. Cheney, who originated the scheme.

M. C. Bergh in New Position

Marcus C. Bergh, for many years commissioner of banking of the state of Wisconsin, has been elected vice-president of the Stondall-Toftoy Company and will be at the head of the company's Madison office.

The Stondall-Toftoy Company has its home office in Madison and is capitalized at $1,000,000. The company was organized by Albert M. Stondall of Madison, president of the Merchants and Savings Bank; Holger Toftoy and Andrew Eiken of St. Paul. The company will deal extensively in western lands.

Bankers Meet in Milwaukee in July

The seventeenth annual convention of the Wisconsin Bankers Association will be held in Milwaukee, July 19th and 20th. The committee on arrangements is already engaged in preparing a program which promises to eclipse anything ever undertaken before. Extensive plans will also be made for the entertainment side and those who have before tasted of the hospitality of Milwaukee bankers know that there is a treat in store for them.

Former Selection is Ratified

H. P. Andrae, L. M. Alexander, J. F. Conant, Fred Doepke, Nathaniel Green, E. C. Knoernschild, W. F. Myers, W. S. Paddock, Judson G. Rosebush, H. W. Schwab and F. J. Wood were on January 28th elected directors by the stockholders of the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank in Milwaukee.

Mr. Knoernschild and Mr. Myers are the new directors. Mr. Myers takes the place of Mr. Graettinger, formerly cashier, on the board, and Mr. Knoernschild was elected to take the vacancy.

Following a meeting of the stockholders the directors elected the following officers: President, L. M. Alexander; first vice-president and manager, W. F. Myers; second vice-president, W. S. Paddock; cashier, Edwin C. Knoernschild.

Mr. Myers comes to Milwaukee from St. Paul, where he was vice-president of the Capital National Bank.

Association Secretaries Meet

Group secretaries of the Wisconsin Bankers Association met at association headquarters in Milwaukee January 23d to arrange programs for the various group meetings to be held from now until the state convention in July. Those who attended the meeting were Frank Pierce, Group No. 1, Durand; Milo Hagan, Group No. 2, Madison; Ed. Williams, Group No. 3, Oshkosh; H. D. L. Adkins, Group No. 5, Elkhorn; L. H. Larson, Group No. 6, Wautoma; C. J. Wiles, Group No. 7, Bangor.

Bank Guaranty Bill may Pass

Guaranty of bank deposits, the plan which is opposed by the majority of bankers in this state, will again be advocated in the Wisconsin legislature at the present session, and, according to a Madison paper, "there is little doubt of the passage at the present session." One of the reasons assigned for the foregoing forecast is the recent Supreme Court decision of the United States.

However, according to the opinions of some of the better informed bankers of Milwaukee the Madison scribe will fall short of his prophecy for the bill will meet with bitter opposition and those interested are prepared to submit to the legislature a mass of evidence and apparently irrefutable argument against the wisdom of such a course at the present time.

National Bank Official at Madison

Lawrence O. Murray, national comptroller of the currency, was a visitor at Madison January 20th, and passed the day inspecting the work of his subordinates and conferring with local financiers. The occasion was the regular semiannual examination of the Commercial National Bank which was being examined by Examiner Silas H. Cooper, and his desire to inspect the work of the examiner. When asked what he considered the duty of a bank director Mr. Murray tersely said, "To attend to the business of the bank."

Notes About the State

For the second time since the institution was founded the Manitowoc Savings Bank has increased its capital until now it amounts to $200,000, just double the old figure.

Newburg will have a state bank and it is reported that the entire capital has already been subscribed by the stockholders.

W. A. Whitney and his associates are expected to take over the controlling interest in the United States National Bank of Superior.

The Eau Claire National Bank has purchased the property immediately adjoining the present location and in the near future will extend their present quarters to take in the new location.

J. M. Wolf, cashier of the State Bank of Allenton was a visitor at association headquarters in Milwaukee recently.

J. K. Ilsley, president of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank of Milwaukee, left Friday for a visit to various points in California.

N. F. Hawley, secretary and treasurer of the Farmers' & Mechanics' Savings Bank, went outside his financial experience when last week he addressed the Sixth Ward Equality Club on "The City Charter." He is considered a city charter expert.

New Bank for Canada

Ottawa, Ont., January 30.—A big new Canadian bank is to be organized with French capital. Notice of application for an act of Parliament to incorporate it will be given in the "Canada Gazette" to-morrow. The name of the new bank is to be La Banque du Canada, and its proposed capital is $10,000,000, much of which, it is said here, has already been subscribed by French capitalists. Rudolph Forget, the well-known French-Canadian banker of Montreal, who returned from Paris a few days ago, is the moving spirit in the new bank, which will have branches in all the principal Canadian cities.

Money Supply and Panics

Washington, February 3, 1911.—Money panics in the United States are most likely to occur during the stringent money markets of the "spring revival" or the crop-moving season in the fall. This is one of the conclusions drawn from an investigation by Edwin Walter Kemmerer, professor of economics and finance at Cornell University.

Prof. Kemmerer does not mean to declare that the seasonal stringencies are the causes of the panics, but that the months in which they occur are the weakest links in the seasonal chain, and that in periods of extraordinary tension the chain breaks at those links.

Statistics of great value to the student of monetary problems are made available in a volume written by Prof. Kemmerer, just published by the National Monetary Commission, entitled "Seasonal Variations in the Relative Demand for Money and Capital in the United States." It is a statistical study, in which Prof. Kemmerer has gone beyond the range of any previous investigation made in that important field, and on the basis of statistical evidence establishes many facts hitherto obscure.

The object of the work, as stated by Professor Kemmerer, "is to throw light upon the regularity and the extent of these seasonal variations, upon the degree to which our currency and credit system responds to them, and finally to show some of their probable results upon more general economic conditions as exemplified in such phenomena as security prices, commercial failures, and panics." The study is based upon the nineteen-year period, 1890-1908 so far as data for this period is available. The material for the large number of tables found in the volume was, in part, secured by the commission directly from clearing house associations, from individual bankers, and from public officials. It was also, in part, compiled from government reports and financial journals.

In his study the author has looked for the expression of seasonal variations in the demand for money and capital in such market data as interest rates, bank loans, deposits, and reserves, domestic exchange rates and interior currency shipments, foreign exchange rates and the movement of gold, amounts of money in circulation, and clearings. His method of using this data has been to tabulate the figures themselves and also to construct an index number for each figure. Then for the period as a whole he has made, first, a simple average of the figures themselves, and second, a simple average of the index numbers.

Professor Kemmerer considers in turn the changes in the demand for moneyed capital in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans, and San Francisco. As the best available criteria of this demand he has selected interest rates and the ratios of bank reserves to deposits from 1890 to 1908. A study of the data for New York City leads the author to the conclusion that there are five periods in New York's money market.

First, throughout January there is a rapid decline in the relative demand for money, making the last part of January and the fore part of February a time of very cheap money. This "easing up," Professor Kemmerer states, is due to the fact that the crop-moving demand for money in the West and South has spent its force. The cash is flowing back to New York City. Among other causes he mentions the natural reaction after the heavy strain on the money market incident to January 1st settlements.

The author puts the beginning of the second period at about the middle of February, the relative demand for money advancing rapidly to a high level and maintaining it through the fore part of April. The cause of this upward movement he finds in the encouragement to investment given by the low interest rates and the high reserves of the former period. "A second reason is to be found in the increase in certain lines of trade activity which normally takes place at about this time of the year. The Great Lakes, the Mississippi River, and other inland waterways are opened to traffic during this period. Railroad traffic is released from the incubus of cold weather and snow."

The third important seasonal movement, ac-

We particularly desire the accounts of country banks. Our officer in charge is personally acquainted with conditions in your section. We know your wants and we wish to serve you

According to Professor Kemmerer, is a rapid decline from about the middle of April, ending with a very weak money market in June and July. These are the hot months of the summer, comprising the vacation period and the period before the great crop movements of the fall.

The fourth period the author dates from the first week in August, "when call rates begin their upward movement and when bank reserves, both in amount and in percentage to deposits, begin their decline. The money market continues to tighten until about the 1st of October. The principal cause of the increasing demand for moneyed capital during this period is the call made upon the New York City banks by banks in the West and South for cash needed for crop-moving purposes.

"The last seasonal period in the New York market dates from about the first week in October to the opening of the new year. During this period the relative demand for moneyed capital exhibits many minor fluctuations, but remains at substantially the high level reached the fore part of October."

The author turns from his study of seasonal variations in the demand for moneyed capital in certain representative cities to a consideration of the demand for money in one section as compared with the demand in another. In making this investigation he has made use of the rates of domestic exchange between the principal cities and of the movements of cash between the various sections of the country. The figures for currency receipts and shipments are based upon replies received to a circular letter of inquiry sent out through the office of the comptroller of the currency to the managers of the clearing houses. These figures are for the years 1905 to 1908, inclusive.

As between Chicago and the Eastern States, Professor Kemmerer finds that throughout January money in Chicago relative to that in New York City is cheap. Exchange rates on New York are high and there is a considerable movement of cash from Chicago to the Eastern States—particularly to New York City, where it can at least earn the 2 per cent paid by banks on bankers' balances. From the last of January to the fore part of March the demand for money in Chicago relative to that in New York rapidly rises, due to the anticipated and actual opening of navigation on the Great Lakes and to the spring needs of the western farmers.

Then comes a decline in Chicago's demand from early in March until late in May, the demand being comparatively small from then until the fore part of July. About the 1st of July the relative demand for money in Chicago begins to rise, advancing rapidly until early in

Builds Up Oregon Bank

J. W. Roberts is a young aggressive cashier who is up to date and is a great believer in publicity. He organized the First National Bank of Bandon, Oregon, and in the face of heavy opposition managed to secure over $50,000 deposits at the end of five months. He went to Bandon a total stranger but with good recommendations, having had nine years' experience in all branches of both state and national banks. His deposits at present are $52,320 and are still increasing and he has one of the finest banks in Southwestern Oregon with good fireproof vault, burglar-proof safe and safety deposit boxes, and the banking room is finished in a style superior to many banks in larger cities. Mr. Roberts exposed the illegal methods used in one banking institution with which he was connected, causing several thousand dollars to be refunded.

September, and then maintaining a high level until the fore part of November. The average of the reported receipts of cash by Chicago banks from eastern banks rose from $2,500,000 in June to $2,704,000 in July, $17,910,000 in August, $11,789,000 in September, and $21,843,000 in October. During the last six or eight weeks of the year the crop-moving demand having to a large extent subsided, the relative demand for money is stronger in New York City than in Chicago. Exchange rates in Chicago on New York rise, and cash moves eastward.

After having determined the degree and extent of the relative demand for money and moneyed capital, the author next considers seasonal variations in the absolute supply of money, with the object of discovering to what extent, if any, the supply of money in circulation varies during the seasons in response to seasonal changes in the demand. The various kinds of money in circulation he groups under two headings, "Presumably elastic money"—gold (including gold certificates) and bank notes, and "Presumably inelastic money"—United States notes, Treasury notes of 1890, and silver, nickel, and copper coin, money whose amount in circulation is determined directly by the government.

The figures show larger deposits of gold bullion at the mints during the crop-moving season. This is simply a fortunate coincidence, however, dependent, the author believes, on the conditions surrounding the production of gold. The national bank-note circulation does not, in Professor Kemmerer's opinion, exhibit any appreciable seasonal elasticity. The increase in circulation which takes place normally from year to year, does, however, take place in the fall and early winter. Banks intending to increase their circulation apparently postpone doing so until the crop-moving season approaches. Professor Kemmerer, however, finds no evidence of contraction when the crop-moving demands are over.

Deposit currency, or check circulation, as shown by the bank clearings, does, however, in the opinion of the author, exhibit a high degree of elasticity, expanding and contracting in accordance with variations in trade demands. Professor Kemmerer states that it is the one truly elastic element among our media of exchange.

In an endeavor to ascertain the effect of seasonal variations in the demand for moneyed capital upon prices the author has made a very elaborate study of the prices of railroad bonds,

Let the Nation Rejoice

It is a settled conviction in the minds of public men at Washington that there will be no extra session of congress this year. President Taft of course will be guided in the matter of issuing a call by public necessity as voiced by leading statesmen. The belief now is practically unanimous that it would not be feasible to summon congress for a summer session after the March adjournment.

It is because the new congress will not be in a position to accomplish anything of importance with reference to finance and the tariff that an extra session is inadvisable. The Democrats seem disposed to take a safe and sane course on these subjects, and therefore will not be apt to rush through tax and financial bills. Were they to become radical in trying to reverse laws for which the Republicans are responsible they would be held in check by the senate.

No hasty legislation is wanted on any subject. It is better for the country to have a rest from political agitation than to have ill-considered revisions of existing statutes. This is the general feeling in both parties at Washington and Democrats are on this account strongly opposed to an extra session. It is greatly to their credit that they are inclined toward conservative action, especially in view of the conceded fact that last fall's election indicated a public demand for a change in the order of things at Washington. The business interests of the country have good reason to rejoice. There is a popular demand for certain reform legislation, but with it is a distinct desire for caution and mature study. Agitation and demagoguery in connection with financial and trade subjects would be exceedingly unpopular all over the country at this time.

Supervised versus Private Banking

To the legislature in session at Springfield the following official data may be useful when new banking legislation for the state of Illinois is being considered. It will have little to do with the question of bank guaranty, but is conclusive and emphatic as to the safety of banking under state or national inspection and supervision when compared with private and unrestricted banking. The state of Illinois is far behind other states in this respect and time is ripe for a new, better universal state banking law covering all forms of banking, not national.

From the last annual report of the United States comptroller for the year 1909, the following information with reference to national bank failures in the state of Illinois has been collected:

1869, First National of Rockford failed but paid 41.90%, depositors losing $34,000; 1875, Scandinavian National Bank, Chicago, failed but paid 57.46%, depositors losing $107,000; 1875, Cook County National Bank, Chicago, failed, but paid 14.94%, depositors losing $1,292,000; 1876, Fourth National Bank, Chicago, failed, but paid 51%, depositors losing $15,000; 1876, City National Bank, Chicago, failed but paid 77.51%, depositors losing $165,000; 1877, First National Bank, Winchester, failed but paid 63.60%, depositors losing $45,000; 1877, Third National Bank, Chicago, failed but paid 100%, depositors losing nothing; 1877, Central National Bank, Chicago, failed but paid 65.57%, depositors losing $95,000; 1878, German National Bank, Chicago, failed but paid 100%, depositors losing nothing; 1884, First National Bank, Monmouth, failed but paid 100%, depositors losing nothing; 1884, Farmers National Bank, Bushnell, failed but paid 100%, depositors losing nothing; 1890, Park National Bank, Chicago, failed but paid 100%, depositors losing nothing; 1893, Columbia National Bank, Chicago, failed but paid 81%, depositors losing $10,000; 1893, Chemical National Bank, Chicago, failed but paid 100%, depositors losing nothing; 1896, Second National Bank, Rockford, failed, but paid 98.40%, depositors losing $3,000; 1896, National Bank of Illinois, Chicago, failed but paid 100%, depositors losing nothing; 1905, Peoria National Bank, Peoria, failed but paid 100%, depositors losing nothing; 1909, Coal Belt National Bank, Benton, failed but paid 100%, depositors losing nothing.

Deductions from these figures are as follows: From the inception of the national banking business in the United States to January 1, 1911, only 19 national banks in the state of Illinois have gone into the hands of receivers. Nine of these banks paid out in full, the amount they paid being $16,051,924. The ten banks that did not pay out in full were able to pay $1,630,837, leaving depositors unpaid to the amount of $1,774,000. Of this loss to depositors $1,292,000 came from the Cook County National Bank, Chicago, 1875, so that aside from that bank, depositors in national banks in the state of Illinois from the inception of national banking in 1865 have only lost $482,000. In the last 31 years, that is, from 1878, 10 banks have failed, 8 of which paid out in full, 2 only being short a total of $13,000.00. As the deposits of national banks in the state of Illinois amount to about $600,000,000, this shortage is infinitesimal; in fact, the entire loss in this state of all national banks of $1,774,000 is only equivalent to .0025 per cent of the total bank deposits. In the last 14 years, or since 1896, only two banks have failed, and both of these paid out in full, so that there have been no losses to national bank depositors in Illinois in 14 years.

The state auditor of Illinois reports that so far as the data in his office shows, there have been only four state bank failures in Illinois with loss to depositors.

February, 1897, The Globe Bank, Chicago, lost $207,800.00; October, 1903, Exchange Bank, Lockport, lost $50,000.00; October, 1900, Lemont State Bank, Lemont, lost $3,600.00, August, 1906, Milwaukee State Bank, Chicago, lost $845,000.00.

The state banks, therefore, in the state of Illinois in their 13 or 14 years show a total loss of $1,166,400.00, while during the same period no depositor has lost anything through the failure of a national bank.

From Bradstreet's Journal of January 14, 1911, the following data with reference to the suspension of national, state and private banks throughout the United States for the last 18 years from 1893 to January 1, 1911, is compiled:

The indicated total assets of suspended national banks were $229,681,728, and their estimated liabilities were $232,806,132, or a net loss of $2,875,000, equal to 1.23 per cent of their liabilities.

The indicated total assets of suspended state banks were $135,518,078, and their estimated liabilities $149,018,944, or a net loss of $13,500,000, equal to 9 per cent of liabilities.

The indicated total assets of suspended private banks were $86,936,084, and their estimated liabilities $143,016,802, or a net loss of $56,000,000, equal to 40 per cent of their total liabilities.

In these percentages it must be borne in mind that the national bank liabilities were $83,000,000 more than those of the state banks and $89,000,000 more than those of the private banks. If the private bank liabilities had been as large as those of the national banks, the losses of the privates would have amounted to $92,000,000, while the national losses were only $2,875,000; in other words, the private losses were 32 times those of the national banks. These figures show very clearly the advantage of legally organized and supervised banking methods; for the organized banks that suspended had 2¾ times more liabilities than the suspended private banks, yet the losses of the private banks were 3½ times greater than those of all the organized banks; but if figured on the basis of the same liabilities in each case, the losses of unorganized banks were ten times greater than those of the organized banks.

The above statistics are believed to be absolutely reliable, and they furnish unanswerable arguments favoring a new banking code for Illinois.

Sunday in Nashville

President F. O. Watts of the American Bankers Association, who has asked the members of the executive council to meet in Nashville, suggests that the Chicago special train should arrive in Nashville on Sunday morning.

"I think it would be a very nice thing for you to get up a special train from Chicago, arriving in Nashville on Sunday morning, April 30th," writes President Watts. "I am sure that all those coming over on the train would find that the day could be spent very pleasantly here, and this would be especially true of those enjoying golf. I hope that you will be successful in making the arrangement."

Already enough reservations to fill three compartments have been made through THE CHICAGO BANKER. If, as Col. Farnsworth thinks likely, all committees and the councils of all the sections are called, there ought to be as many more to go.

Savings Banks in Schools

A school savings bank will be inaugurated in the near future in the Oak Park common schools as the result of a suggestion of the Parents and Teachers' Association of that suburb of which Walter S. Holden is president. The plan was suggested by Prof. J. E. Adam and was received favorably by Supt. W. H. Hatch, who has recommended the innovation to the Oak Park board of education. Arrangements now are being made to open the bank to pupils.

President John R. Mitchell of Capital National, St. Paul, arrived in Chicago Monday on his way home from New York. He stated that he found a spirit of confidence among eastern business men which was not in evidence two months ago.

"The nation has had time to take inventory at the beginning of the year," said he, "and it finds the situation entirely satisfactory. A fear of dull times which prevailed a few weeks ago has been dissipated. Trade in all departments is picking up. The spring is likely to see the usual activity and prosperity."

Express Lobby Conducts Fight

An express company lobby it is charged, is responsible for the threatened defeat of the limited parcels post, which Representative Mondell of Wyoming has introduced. Mr. Mondell charges that the lobby is secretly directing its powerful influence through local merchants to defeat his bill, which is along the line recommended by the President, but also includes star routes with rural free delivery routes.

"Since I introduced the bill I have been flooded with protests, letters and typewritten petitions," said Mr. Mondell. "The jobbing houses seem behind them, but I am inclined to think the express companies are back of the jobbing houses."

It is declared the express companies fear that if the limited service is established it will lead to extension in the near future.

Tricks of "Kitters"

As a hold-up weapon the innocent-looking check book has the mask and revolver "beaten to a frazzle." In the hands of a shrewd crook the check book becomes the terror of the bank teller and the handmaiden of graft. For it is the "gentleman crook" who carries the check book, while the desperado has been the type of man who use the ordinary gun methods of highway robbery. The "check kiter" has schemes whose execution would not even lay him liable to criminal prosecution in the event of their miscarriage.

Suppose a businesslike gentleman has a deposit of $1 in one bank and $4,000 in another. Suppose he needs $10,000 more, quickly—must have it. By means of clever syphoning of his deposits between the two banks at which he has accounts, through a legitimate use of his personal checks against his respective credits, he obtains possession of $14,000 in cash belonging to the bank, and within an hour after he first appeared at the teller's window at the first bank he is able to discharge his pressing obligations.

Perhaps it was necessity that first told men how to evade the iron-clad regulations of the clearing house; perhaps it was cupidity pure and simple. Anyway, "check kiting" is known and practiced wherever strong banks flourish, for the "kiter" cannot operate on poverty-stricken communities.

The details of a "kiting" trick are not densely intricate. Upon entering the bank where the depositor carries his large account he gives a check for $4,000, the amount of his credit at the neighboring institution. This increases his account to $14,000. Then he hurries over to the other bank, and there deposits his check for $10,000 drawn against his account of that amount at the first bank, thereby establishing immediate credit for $14,000, with the latter. He now has an available capital of $28,000, or just twice as much as he in reality possesses. For 24 hours, or the time necessary for the checks to pass through the clearing house, he may use his doubled capital in any way he sees fit, provided only at the end of that time he has the cash on hand at the banks to cover the shortage incurred. With the twenty-four hour limit at his disposal he manages without much difficulty to hustle up loans sufficient to make good the $10,000 he has used in discharging his obligations.

There are scores of formulas in general use by the "kiter" to extract a bank's funds without exciting suspicion. Some are comparatively simple; others are so complex that it requires the closest scrutiny and watchfulness on the part of the expert detectives to uncover them. Where two or more depositors operate in confederation, and where they apply one of the more elaborate systems open to the clever "kiter," the day when the inflated accounts must be balanced at the banks can be indefinitely postponed, and the tricksters may be in actual possession of an institution's funds to the amount of thousands of dollars for weeks at a time.

The loss of the interest alone on the cash in possession of the "kiter" when such possessions extend for a period of months runs up into the thousands of dollars for the banks implicated. The "kiter," if not otherwise benefited by his fraudulent transactions, gains by just this much—the saving of the interest on his "loan" from the banks. Even where one man operates alone he can enjoy such an involuntary loan for three to five days by "kiting" his checks between banks in different sections of the country, say, for instance, Portland and St. Louis, points between which the clearance of checks would require several days' time.

It is estimated by those who have interested themselves in gathering statistics that fully one-fourth of all losses suffered by banks through various swindles and hold-ups, including robberies, are directly traceable to check "kiting."

Another example of ingenuity in connection with this transfer of deposits with fraudulent intent is the following cited by a banker:

"Not referring particularly to any guilty individual," says this official, "we will say that John Doe is engaged in selling lumber to a large dealer in Chicago. Doe has a good standing with his bank and draws on the representative of the Chicago firm for shipments of lumber. In the beginning this is all legitimate; the drafts are properly covered in due time. As time goes on, either through poor management or sudden depreciation of his property, John Doe loses money, and in order to keep his credit good he draws on his bank against fictitious shipments to the Chicago dealer.

"He could make it appear that the delay in covering the draft was occasioned by the assignment of the shipment to a third person by the Chicago firm, and could even draw a draft on this third consignee if his credit were unusually good. This latter explanation of a transferred consignment would be that most probably offered in case the draft against the Chicago firm should be returned to John Doe's bank unhonored. Another ruse which might be employed to gain time in this connection would be to make it appear that the car in which the shipment had been sent had gone astray.

Money Firmer

Money continues fairly active and rates are somewhat firmer in the Chicago market. Investment buying of bonds and real estate accounts in part for the improvement. The mercantile demand for funds is normal. Counter rates for loans are 5 to 5½ per cent; secured paper 4½ to 5; call loans 4 to 4½.

Falling Off in National Bank Deposits

Washington, January 30.—Deposits of individuals in the 7,200 national banks of the United States decreased $191,566,488 between November 10th and January 7th—a situation probably unprecedented in the reports made to the comptroller of the currency.

Of that sum more than $150,000,000 was withdrawn from the thirty-nine national banks of New York City. No two officials of the treasury agree as to where the money went. Some are of opinion that part of the money might have gone to strengthen the New York state banks and trust companies during the flurry caused by the so-called Robin failure early in the month. Other think the huge withdrawal represented interest payments piled up in anticipation of the January dividend days. All the treasury officials, however, expressed great interest in what explanations the New York bankers might give.

A comparison with the national banks of Chicago shows that the drop was confined almost entirely to New York City. The eleven Chicago banks reported a loss of about $9,000,000 in individual deposits. The reserve banks of the western and Pacific states and the New England states all show losses, but comparatively small ones.

The unexpected call on January 7th served to show the condition of the banks at a new angle. Not since 1879 have they been called upon so early in the year. There were no January calls whatever from 1880 to 1903, and there had been none since 1907.

Some officials think if the call had been made as usual, late in the month or early in February, the money, if it were withdrawn for dividend payments, would have found its way into the banks again.

City Bonds as Bank Surety

To require New York City bonds as bank security for the city's deposits is the object of a bill introduced by Senator Thomas F. Grady in the New York legislature.

Senator Grady said that the national and state deposits are protected by national and state bonds, and this principle is intended to apply to city deposits by the bill introduced last week. City deposits are protected now by surety bonds.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

Work of the Cuban Chapter, A. I. B.

Havana, January 30.—Cuban banking affairs are attracting attention, in the United States, and we on the other hand are learning at the feet of our prosperous and advanced brotherhood.

Bank clerks at Cienfuegos are to form a chapter of the American Institute of Banking, having obtained a charter from the American institute.

The creation of the new chapter at Cienfuegos comes as a result of an effort on the part of several officers and employees of the National Bank of Cuba in that city to organize a school of banking, finance and commercial and banking law on the same basis as that prevailing in Havana, where the main chapter was organized a year ago.

The authorization to open a branch of the institute at Cienfuegos means much to the young bankers of that city, judging by the experience of those affiliated with the Havana organization; and the prompt response of George E. Allen, educational director, is a source of great satisfaction to the association here, as it is a closer tie between the banking men of the Island and those of the United States.

It is expected that Mr. Allen will take a trip to Havana in the near future, as he has expressed a great desire to make the personal acquaintance of his associates here, and as his policy is that of the central organization in educational matters, his presence is awaited with interest by his Havana friends.

It was early in November that the Cuban chapter opened its campaign of education. It was then that the "Havana Post" called attention to the work as follows:

"That the Cuban chapter of the American Institute of Banking is an educational factor in Cuba is shown this week by the opening of a school for the study of English at its headquarters in the National Bank of Cuba building. Last month the chapter commenced its fall work with a full enrollment, and a movement was soon initiated to form an English class for the benefit of the members. To this idea the officers of the National Bank of Cuba lent their support, and they have dedicated a suitable office for the sessions, which began on Tuesday under the direction of W. H. Morales, the bank's secretary. The phonetic system of instruction has been implanted, with a view to simplifying the pronunciation of English sounds, which is the chief difficulty in the English study. As the class membership is composed chiefly of National Bank of Cuba men, whose success in life depends partly on their ability to handle foreign correspondence and foreign business in English, the organization of this new school is an important adjunct to their education, and the chapter intends to stimulate the work in every way possible. The work of Cuba chapter is a matter of congratulation to the young bankers, who find in the new school the solution of a long felt want."

W. H. Morales, secretary of the National Bank of Cuba, stated conditions on the Island very fully when he said:

"Modern banking in Cuba commenced nine years ago, prior to the establishment of the republic, since when a banking system has grown up which affords the entire island with a means of employing its financial and credit resources on a sound, economical and effective basis. To appreciate the importance of Cuba as a banking country, certain facts should be recognized. Cuba contains an area of 45,883 square miles, including her adjacent islands, somewhat more than Pennsylvania and a little less than New York state. Her population amounts to 2,048,980 according to the census of 1907, and should be five times that amount to make her in any sense a populous country. She is situated on a highway of commerce, between North America and Europe on the one hand, and Mexico, Central and South America on the other, while the Panama Canal will make her the commercial key to the Pacific Ocean. The great source of wealth of the country is agriculture, sugar and tobacco being her leading products. Of the 3,974,000 tons of sugar produced in the Western Hemisphere this season, Cuba supplies 1,700,000. This is more than the production of the United States, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippines combined, which countries yield 1,232,000 tons altogether. The annual tobacco exports of Cuba range between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000. The island's exports have steadily grown from $78,382,600 in 1902, the first year of the republic, to $117,564,000 a year ago, and $150,000,000 the present fiscal year. The soil of the country is such that cereals, vegetables and fruits are profitably grown at all seasons of the year, and the climate is delightful, attracting thousands of tourists to the island every winter, who find it a sanitarium. These facts, taken in connection with the extent and character of American interests in Cuba, the island's position with respects to the United States, her history, political institutions and economic future, and the bearing of the Platt amendment on the mutual relations of the two countries, make Cuba a singularly interesting field of banking.

"During the Spanish times the banking of Cuba was chiefly done by banker merchants in connection with their regular line of business. The banking institution of that period was the Spanish Bank, the official organ of the Spanish government, but the general circulation of checks, credit transfers and savings bank and trust company facilities, with modern banking conveniences and inducements were postponed to the period of American intervention, when the National Bank of Cuba, with a liberal charter covering the entire field, was organized. This bank has been the official government institution since its creation under the Intervention Government in 1901 and throughout the history of the republic. It has moreover been the sole Cuban depository for funds of the United States government proper at each intervention period."

W. A. M. Vaughan, of the same bank paid a high tribute to the A. B. A., when he said

"Cuba appreciates the honor of her membership in the American Bankers Association and she is truly a part of your territory well worth cultivation by the bankers and their customers. No state in the union promises such future development of business with any other state as does Cuba with all your states. Surely, no country has ever struggled against such changing political conditions as has Cuba during her entire existence, and at the same time shown such tremendous wealth of natural resources and commercial stability. I beg of you in thinking of the history of Cuba to distinguish between her commercial history and her political history, and if you have occasion to criticize the latter, you will admit that in a corresponding degree you must commend the former. She is interesting to you in that she sells abroad practically all her products, which are the necessities of your lives, and she buys abroad everything you have to sell, making a reciprocal market. Her foreign commerce amounts to well over $200,000,000.00 and which must grow rapidly. There is a preferential duty in favor of the United States and yet you sell her less than 50 per cent of her imports at the present time."

Mr. Morales mentioned above is the vice-president of the Cuba Chapter, A. I. B. Herman Olavarria is president. Other officers are: A. Ruz Sauvalie, treasurer, J. F. Rivera, secretary, J. A. Solberg, assistant secretary, and Ramón Fonts, B. Figueredo, F. O. Pérez, Francisco Mayoz, committeemen.

Pittsburgh Chapter in Dutch Lunch

At a Dutch luncheon given by the members of the Pittsburgh Chapter, American Institute of Banking, in the Chapter rooms, Wabash building, last Tuesday evening, National Bank Examiner Henry A. Williams was the honor guest. Mr. Williams made an address in which he explained the duties of a bank examiner, and also outlined the relations that should exist between the representatives of the state and national banking departments and bankers. Mr. Williams highly recommended the bonding of all bank officials and cited instances where banks had failed because of the wrong-doing of some official who had not been placed under bond.

A musical program had been arranged for the evening and this included a piano solo by Harry Evans of the First National Bank and selections by the Smoky City Imperial Quartet were enjoyed. The candidacy of B. O. Hill of the Second National Bank for election to the executive council of the American Institute of Bank Clerk was unanimously endorsed. The election will take place in September at Rochester, N. Y.

St. Louis Chapter

Hon. Frederick W. Lehmann, U. S. Solicitor General and Chairman of the Board of Freeholders of St. Louis, delivered an address on the New City Charter before the Chapter, December 27, 1910.

Mr. Lehmann spoke to a large and appreciative audience, this subject being of vital interest here at this time.

Mr. Franklin L. Johnson, Asst. Cashier of the Mercantile National Bank, former President of the National Organization, American Institute of Banking, spoke before the Chapter.

Best of the Season's New Books

In William Dana Orcutt's new novel, "The Lever," the author has taken for his hero a man who is in the grip of a wonderful idea,—namely, to make combination of all the important industries of the world which will benefit all human kind. Robert Gorham is a financier, dreamer, and altruist whose business projects and their influence on those about him is pictured with the attention of the reader drawn more to the personal side of the man than to his business make-up. In his desire to perpetuate his regime, he determines to marry his daughter, Alice, to Covington, an unscrupulous person who strives to undermine Gorham's whole scheme while retaining his hold on father and daughter. Alice is kept from realizing that she loves Allen Sandford, her real lover who has known her since the "pig-tail" stage, while Eleanor, Gorham's wife, seeing her husband's utter absorption in his plan, puts off the hour when she will tell him of her past life. The situation is dramatically worked up to the climax where Covington seeks to hold the whip-hand over the magnate by threatening to expose Eleanor's past life. The result is that he is disgraced; Allen, who has mistrusted him all along and has not lacked the courage of his convictions, is justified; while Gorham gives up his ambition, saves his honor, and everything is just as it should be. There is plenty of fine humor worked into the story, not the least noteworthy of which is the marked loyalty of "Lady Pat," Alice's ten year old sister, for Allen. The reader cannot fail to regret the failure of Gorham's wonderful idea, but this regret is almost lost in the thorough happiness of all those deserving it. "The Lever" is published by Harper & Bros. Price $1.50.

"Fraternity"

"Fraternity: A Romance of Inspiration," by an unknown author (Harper & Bros., publishers), is endorsed on its outer cover by J. Pierpont Morgan as being "one of the most helpful books published during these latter years." The scheme of the story is laid in Wales with characters taken from all classes. The hero whom his friends call Edmund Haig, although supposedly nameless, has been brought up by a community of the English church, and has always regarded all men as equals and brothers, believing only in the aristocracy of the soul and intellect. The time comes, however, when all his beliefs seem to be shattered and that is when he falls in love with Blodwen Trevor, and forces himself to leave her because he has not even a name to offer her in exchange for her position. By this action he needlessly causes both Blodwen and himself unhappiness. Of course all comes right in the end when he learns what his rightful name is and he and Blodwen enter into missionary work together. The story is told in a quiet, interesting manner, and closes with the keynote of the whole story, the watchword, "Fraternity," which the author wishes to exchange with each reader before leaving him. To again quote Mr. Morgan, "It exemplifies the spirit that should animate human kind in the endeavor to develop civilization through real co-operation." The price is $1.00 net.

"The Castle Builders"

In "The Castle Builders," the author, Charles Clark Munn, has written a story better than anything he has previously written. It is an old-fashioned love story, far removed from the superficial, and teeming with filial devotion and business honor. The chief "castle builder," a young man with plenty of brains and an enthusiastic engineer, Stacy Whipple by name, has come to a dull, little sea coast village with the healthy desire of changing it into a great manufacturing city. Here he joins forces with "Uncle Asa" Webster, a delightful old man who dispenses with a quaint and homely philosophy that is very refreshing. Of course the course of true love never did run smooth, and our hero finds the sole obstacle to his complete felicity in the deep and pure affection between Hazel Webster, a beautiful, intelligent, but simple country girl, and her father, "Uncle Asa," which renders her impervious to all his wooings. However, even this block in the road to our enterprising hero's perfect content is finally removed, and we see him a successful and happy young man, for he has accomplished his purpose in this town, although in a slightly different manner than was planned. Upon closing the book, the reader cannot fail to have assimilated "Uncle Asa's" cheery advice, to "Live, love, laugh, be happy, 'n' pass it along." "Uncle Asa" is only another of Mr. Munn's unique characters, and we feel confident that he will linger long in the memories of the readers of this book. "The Castle Builders" is published by Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co. Price $1.50.

"The Purchase Price"

"The Purchase Price" by Emerson Hough, a Chicago writer, is as good a novel as either "The Mississippi Bubble" or "54-40 or Fight," his former works, and ranks easily among the best of the year. It is an American historical romance, and the author has given a better account of the conditions prevailing and leading up to the Civil War than many a historian has done. The story centers about Dunwody, United States marshal and state senator of Missouri, and the mysterious and beautiful Josephine, Countess of St. Auban. The latter, an American-Hungarian, banished from her native land and coming here as an emissary of Kossuth, has all the enthusiasm of the world-revolutionist and the abolitionist, and expresses herself quite freely in the cause of humanity. Washington authorities saw the danger of having such a fascinating person around proclaiming such views, and commissioned Captain Carlisle to kidnap and "lose" her anywhere below the mouth of the Ohio. The captain became ashamed of his task and played poker to decide her guardianship. He lost her to Dunwody who takes her off to his secluded plantation where the chief events of the story occur. The story is told in excellent style, the plot is strong and unusual, while it would be difficult to find two better contrasted characters than are seen in Dunwody and Josephine. This book is published by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

Stopping a Bank Run

Many years ago, in consequence of a commercial panic there was a severe run on a bank in South Wales, and the small farmers jostled each other in crowds to draw out their money. Things were rapidly going from bad to worse when the bank manager, in a fit of desperation, suddenly bethought him of an expedient. By his directions a clerk, having heated some sovereigns in a frying pan, paid them over the counter to an anxious applicant. "Why, they're quite hot," said the latter, as he took them up. "Of course," was the reply, "what else could you expect? They are only just out of the mold. We are coining them by the hundred as fast as we can."

"Coining them," thought the simple agriculturist; "then there is no fear of the money running short." With this their confidence revived, the panic abated and the bank was enabled to weather the storm.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Wash., February 1.—The January disbursements have been heavy. The dividends of national, state and trust banks which have been paid since the first of January, amount to nearly $250,000. The regular quarterly, semiannual or annual dividends which the national banks at Spokane have declared and paid out recently are $133,000. The state banks and trust companies paid out, or set to surplus and undivided profits, between $90,000 and $100,000, and the dividends paid by the building and loan associations will increase the amount practically $25,000. The annual net earnings of the local institutions will exceed $600,000 for the year 1910. Few changes were made in the elections of officers at the annual meeting of the local banks.

Scandinavian Bank Successful

One of the important developments in local banking circles last week was the declaration of an eight per cent dividend by the Scandinavian-American bank. While practically all of the banks of the city declared dividends the paying of $8,000 as the first dividend earnings of the Scandinavian-American came as a surprise to the local bankers. The institution was established in 1908, practically two years ago, and its stockholders are scattered throughout the Northwest, but the directors are all local men. It has a capital stock of $100,000 and its deposits have made a steady advance. Although a tremendous gain was shown at the last report given to the comptroller when the deposits jumped from $688,520 on September 1st to $796,803 on November 10th, and the surplus and undivided profits from $12,136 on the former date to $17,335 when the call came. This was an increase of $108,000 or the largest increase by $25,000 of any bank in the city. The last call showed $714,793.

Work of Loan Company

The Pennsylvania Mortgage and Investment Company, a corporation composed of Spokane and Pennsylvania capitalists, held its annual meeting at the hall of the Doges at Davenport's restaurant, last week, and elected the following officers: Glancey Wilson, president; R. L. Webster, vice-president, and S. A. Nivin, secretary. J. G. Long was re-elected manager and I. W. Bedle assistant manager. The annual statement of the company showed that $200,000 was placed in loans in 1910. Since the company was organized in 1889, more than $27,000,000 has been placed. The average amount of city loans outstanding are now $1,306, and farm loans amount to $1,806.

Banks Get Public Funds

Zach Stewart, treasurer of Spokane county, has notified the commissioners of the amount of county funds to be deposited in the designated banks as follows, these figures being the maximum amount to be deposited in each of the institutions: Exchange National Bank, $100,000; Fidelity National Bank, $25,000; Farmers & Mechanics Bank, $50,000; Bank of Commerce, $20,000; Northwest Loan & Trust Company, $20,000; Old National Bank, $25,000; Scandinavian-American Bank, $10,000; Spokane & Eastern Trust Company, $25,000; Spokane State Bank, $5,000; Traders National Bank, $25,000; Union Trust Company, $20,000; Washington Trust Company, $15,000; First National Bank of Hillyard, $10,000, and First National Bank of Medical Lake, $5,000.

Honors for Spokane Men

Spokane supplies officials for a large number of banks throughout the Inland Empire. At Colfax, Alfred Coolidge is vice-president of the First Savings and Trust Company and is also president of the Colfax National Bank. A. F. McClaine is vice-president. Thos. H. Brewer is vice-president of the Security National Bank of Cheney. E. T. Coman has been elected president of the Bank of Rosalia.

R. B. Sells, for some time in the employ of the Traders National Bank of Spokane, has accepted the position of cashier of the Bank of Kennewick. Mr. Sells was the second clerk of the Traders, who has left within the last year to accept positions of responsibility with other banks, Francis Brown having a few months ago become cashier of the Vollmer State Bank of Vollmer, Idaho. Law to Aid Depositors

A feature of the banking bill which is being prepared in the office of the attorney-general is a provision whereby the state examiner in the case of insolvent state banks, will be made receiver without expense to the depositors. In the same manner the attorney-general, in the case the services of an attorney are needed by the receiver, will be the attorney by virtue of his office. In case the failed bank pays its depositors 100 cents on the dollar attorney fees will be allowed, otherwise no expense will be placed on the bank, or more directly, on the depositors. This bill will be fathered by John L. Mohundro, state bank examiner. It is believed that it will be of considerable value to the depositors of insolvent banks on whom the expenses of receivership often fall heavily, few banks settling for every dollar paid in.

R. Lewis Rutter, secretary of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company, backed by W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, and E. T. Coman, president of the Exchange National Bank, has made an assault upon the state legislature with regard to banking. He desires the legislature to enact laws which prevent any bank being opened in a city even of the fifth class, with a less capitalization than $25,000, and that no man shall become a director of such a bank unless he proves his interest in that institution by the ante of $1,000.

Idaho Banks Prosperous

The showing made by the banks at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, indicates a prosperous year just passed. The Exchange National Bank reports a net dividend of $17,000, divided as follows: Paid to stockholders, $12,000; added to undivided profits, $4,000, and to surplus, $1,000. The officers of the bank are: President, William Dollar; vice-presidents, F. A. Blackwell and J. B. Taylor; cashier, C. O. Sowder; assistant cashier, F. D. Wearn. The American Bank and Trust Company declared a quarterly dividend of 3 per cent, and added $544.24 to the undivided profits. The officers of the bank are: F. A. Blackwell, president; J. H. Harte, vice-president; I. H. Shallis, cashier, and A. V. Chamberlain, secretary and treasurer. The First National Bank declared its regular semiannual dividend of 6 per cent and an added 6 per cent was placed in the undivided profits account. The following officers were elected: J. T. Carroll, president; T. W. Tinkel, vice-president, and J. R. Nevers, cashier.

Bank Occupies New Building

The Union State Bank of Nez Perce, Idaho, has moved into its new $25,000 brick building. The building is a two-story brick and concrete structure, and is handsomely fitted for banking purposes. The Union State Bank was organized in October, 1909, and its deposits on the close of business on December 31, 1910, were $90,000. The officers are: W. S. Johnston, president; C. W. Booth, vice-president, and E. L. Klein, cashier. The majority of stockholders are well-to-do farmers, in the vicinity of Nez Perce.

J. J. Browne of Spokane has been re-elected president of the Columbia Valley Bank of Wenatchee, Wash., and Guy C. Brown vice-president. Announcement was made of a surplus of $15,000, after a dividend of 10 per cent had been made. This institution is the oldest of its kind in central Washington and has increased in the last 10 years in deposits from $54,932 to $567,000 at the beginning of the present year.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Lewiston National Bank, Lewiston, Idaho, which was taken over a year ago by the Union Securities Company of Spokane, J. K. McCornack was elected president to succeed F. A. Blackwell, president of the Blackwell Lumber Company. No other changes were made in the officers or directors. A 22 per cent dividend was declared and a large sum added to the undivided profits account.

Guaranty Act

Montana seeks a bank guaranty act. Such a law has been introduced in the legislature, to be known as the George bill, an act to create a depositors' guaranty fund. It is a combination of the Kansas and Oklahoma laws, framed to conform to the Montana statutes.

It provides that any three or more persons approved by the state examiner, a majority of whom shall be residents of this state, may execute articles of a banking corporation. When the capital stock shall have been paid up, the president or cashier shall transmit to the state examiner a verified statement showing the names and places of residence of the stockholders and the amount of stock subscribed and paid in by each.

Such corporations are authorized to receive money on deposit to such an amount in proportion to its paid-up capital and surplus as may be fixed by the state examiner and to pay interest thereon at a rate not to exceed the rate that may be fixed from time to time by the examiner, and also to engage in a general banking business. Ten thousand dollars is fixed as the minimum capital stock in towns and cities of less than 2,500 inhabitants; $15,000 in cities of from 2,500 to 10,000, and not less than $25,000 in cities of more than 10,000.

The capital stock may be increased or decreased at any time by a three-fourths vote of the stockholders. The affairs and business of such institutions shall be managed or controlled by a board of directors ranging from three to thirteen selected from stockholders, and who must own at least $500 each of the capital stock. From these a president, secretary and cashier shall be selected. Any officer found to be dishonest, reckless or incompetent shall be removed by the directors upon the written request of the state examiner. Violation of any of the provisions of the act shall be sufficient cause to cause closure and liquidation of the bank by the state examiner, while shareholders shall be additionally liable for the amount of stock owned and no more.

The state banking board shall be composed of the governor, attorney-general, treasurer and auditor.

Countess Flogs Bank Cashier

Seattle, Wash., January 31.—Lured to a room in the Hotel Archibald on the pretext that an old Alaskan friend wanted to see him on urgent business, A. F. Ruser, cashier of the Dome City Bank of Dome City, Alaska, was set upon by two huskies and held on a bed, while Countess A. B. Charbonneau flogged him unmercifully with a horsewhip and generally beat him up. After they had whipped him until he lost consciousness the trio fled.

The Countess Charbonneau, together with her sister, Miss Margaret Mulrooney, both of whom are prominent in society here, formerly controlled the bank of which Ruser is now cashier. The other stockholders recently sued Miss Mulrooney, alleging that as secretary she had stolen $10,500 worth of stock certificates.

RESOURCES OVER FIVE MILLION DOLLARS.

Large Reserves

Kansas City banks have larger reserves on hand now than at any time in their history, according to J. W. Perry, president of the National Bank of Commerce. There are several things that contribute to this not altogether desirable situation from the bankers' standpoint. "Business always slacks up at this season of the year," said Mr. Perry to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER. "A tightening up of things in the East has helped fill the eastern banks with money while in this territory the cattle feeders have begun marketing their stock. This means a lessening of demand among the country banks and those banks are sending their money to the reserve centers. Merchants are getting rid of their surplus goods at prices that mean realization of cash and this cash, of course, goes into the banks."

Mr. Perry's opinion is practically the same as that of various other Kansas City bankers who were interviewed. Thornton Cooke, treasurer of Fidelity Trust Company, is inclined to be more optimistic than he was a few weeks ago. He is finding from his investigations that the farmers of this section have done less speculating lately and are either holding their money or making substantial improvements in their farms. In either case it is an encouraging condition. "I have been talking with retail lumbermen in the Central West," said Mr. Cooke, "and I find that trade in this commodity is unusually good. There is no better barometer of conditions among the farmers than their purchases of lumber. Of course in some places where the crops have not been so good it is shown in a falling off in the demand, and that is not so satisfactory. But as a general proposition I believe conditions in this territory are encouraging."

San Francisco Wins in Congress

Washington, D. C., January 31.—San Francisco defeated New Orleans to-day in the first battle for government indorsement of the exposition to be held in celebration of the opening of the Panama canal in 1915.

The house of representatives decided for the claims of the Pacific coast on a roll call that disclosed 188 congressmen favoring San Francisco and 150 voting for New Orleans. It is expected the senate will take similar action.

The San Francisco resolution does not ask for government aid in any form. It simply authorizes the president of the United States to invite foreign nations to participate in the fair.

An effort to amend the resolution to include provisions for an international naval parade from Hampton roads through the Panama canal and up the west coast to San Francisco was defeated on a parliamentary point of order.

The New Orleans bill called for an appropriation of $1,000,000 for a government exhibit and the creation of a government commission.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

W. B. Dean, elected vice-president of the Second National, is a prominent citizen of St. Paul. He is a member of the wholesale hardware firm of Nicols, Dean & Gregg, and director of the Great Northern railway. He succeeds F. D. Montfort, resigned, at the bank. The duties will not be active. The additional director, Edwin Mott, who succeeds Mr. Montfort, is assistant cashier and with the bank twenty-five years. Mr. Dean was among the thirty-nine original applicants in 1864 for the bank charter and one of the first to subscribe for stock. In 1874 he was made a director. In 1854 Mr. Dean came west from Pittsburg. In 1861 he became member of the firm of Nicols & Dean, succeeding Nicols & Berkey. Later Mr. Gregg was admitted.

Mr. Dean is a director of the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company and trustee of the State Savings Bank of St. Paul. In 1890 he was nominee of both political parties to the state senate and was a Minnesota elector to vote for James G. Blaine.

Discuss Aldrich Plan

Twin City bankers have various ideas on the Aldrich "plan," but a few will require more time to consider before they pass final judgment.

Perry Harrison, manager Minneapolis Clearing House Association: "The general idea looks good to me. The proposed reforms are the result of years of study. If the propositions will work practically I believe they will have the public's support when presented to congress."

G. A. Lyon, assistant cashier First National: "It would, I believe, from what I know about it, operate to keep the money in circulation, the same as a central bank, but would not go against public opinion. The issuance of currency would be taken out of the bank's hands and placed in those of the association."

J. S. Pomeroy, cashier Security National: "Some such reforms are just what the country needs. Repositories will be established for the government's money, which will be kept in circulation. There will never be occasion for a shortage of money and hard times."

F. A. Chamberlain, president Security National: "It is a new proposition, the result of two years' work and thought. I think it would prove a panacea for many of our financial ills. The provision of fifteen branches appeals to me particularly, and I regard it as an improvement over the idea of one large central institution. In providing a great reserve fund it would give the nation something to call upon in time of need."

E. W. Decker, vice-president of the Northwestern National, said: "It is a plan evidently carefully thought out to give the country the benefits that would follow the establishment of a central bank, without the evil effects, or criticisms that would result. I believe the senator has succeeded in devising that form of organization that would make it absolutely impossible for any man, or group of men ever to control the association, unless we admit the possibility that one influence might own all the national banks of the country, which is too remote to be given serious thought."

"The greatest objection has been to a central bank. Some of this goes back to the time of Andrew Jackson. Some of it is of more recent origin. In any case I think it is no mistake to say that a central bank, no matter how carefully the plans for its organization might have been drawn, would not escape criticism. Regardless of the good that it might do, there would always be the suspicion of control or influence from one source or another. That it would be a popular institution under any circumstances is not probable.

"Senator Aldrich seems to have arranged his plan so that the control, as distributed with limitations through fifteen local associations, and with limitations all along as to sale of the stock in the parent association and representation of associations, makes safeguards.

"He has made what seems to me a plan that is absolutely safe against the criticisms that might be directed against a central bank. He has worked out a plan that if adopted ought to give every opportunity for the exercise of those functions that, because of no centralized action, except through groups of influential men, have been lacking in the past, when most needed. At the same time he has fenced it in, and very securely, I believe, against the evil that has been feared from a central bank.

"It strikes me favorably, and I believe that Senator Aldrich has given the country something of the greatest value. If it is not carried out exactly as he has planned, his is the ground work, at least, upon which a good workable plan ought to rise."

F. E. Holton, cashier of the Northwestern National, has been re-elected president of the Minneapolis Association of Credit Men. This association entertains the national organization in 1911. Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president, has been elected on the board of managers of the Minneapolis club, also Robert W. Webb, secretary-treasurer of the Minneapolis Trust Company.

At its first annual election last week, the Market State Bank, organized December 17, 1910, re-elected Adam Hannah, who is president of the Savings Bank of Minneapolis, the president. The vice-presidents are Henry Bachman and N. H. Reeves. Paul Ochu is retained as cashier. E. J. Anderson was added to the board. The bank serves the market and produce commission district.

Organization of the Bank of Shell Lake, Wis., has been perfected with $15,000 capital. Officers are: President, H. M. Lawsen; vice-president, George L. Cott; cashier, Charles A. Shaver. The latter has been register of deeds in Washburn county. Stockholders are citizens of Shell Lake.

The Merchants State of Little Falls, Minn., has elected as follows: President, G. F. Kirscher; vice-president, C. A. Sprendel; cashier, Joseph Moeglin; assistant, Charles Jensen; directors, C. A. Sprandel, Robert Muske, Jacob Kiewel, G. F. Kirscher, Joseph Moeglin.

Adam Hannah has been elected president of the Minneapolis Savings Bank to succeed John McCulloch, resigned. He has been secretary-treasurer since the bank was formed in 1889. B. W. Smith was re-elected vice-president. J. L. Larson was advanced from assistant to secretary-treasurer. Additional trustees are: W. B. McCormack, secretary Produce Exchange; E. C. Best, commission; Henry Bachman, vice-president Market State; James Gray, editor.

Winona men have bought the First State of Badger, Minn. O. E. Tawney, president of Farmers & Merchants of Roseau and Greenbush, was made president and A. G. Lokken vice-president. G. I. Brant is cashier.

Bills have been introduced in the legislature to raise the interest rate on Minneapolis permanent improvement bonds from 4 to 4½ per cent, and to provide for bonds as follows: Revolving fund, $400,000; drainage, $50,000; bridges, $850,000; $100,000 engine houses. The board of education will ask for $1,800,000 bonds, $1,000,000 of which is for grade schools. The board has $250,000 unsold.

The St. Paul water board is trying to induce the city council to give authority for $100,000 bonds for improvements and extensions.

Kelsey S. Chase, new superintendent of banks, is trying to organize a general Minnesota alumni association at the capital. Many officials, officers and legislators are graduates of the state university. Mr. Chase is one.

The Scandinavian-American, Fargo's fifth bank, opened January 3d. North Dakota Scandinavians are large stockholders. Officers: President, H. J. Hagen, Abercrombie; vice-president, Lars Christianson, Fargo; cashier, R. C. Belland.

THE WALES is the only completely visible adding and listing machine on the market. All the operator needs to see is right before his eyes; totals, printing—everything.

¶ Users of the WALES say this complete visibility increases operator's speed and accuracy at least 25%. Combine this feature with light key touch and quick and easy operation of handle and you have the reason for WALES speediness.

5-Year Guarantee Against Repairs

¶ The WALES is the only adding machine with a 5-year guarantee. Why buy an adding machine with a 1-year guarantee, when the WALES gives you five times more protection?

An important decision was recently handed down by the Supreme Court sustaining the position of the Wilkes-Barre stockholders in protecting the WALES against "trust" acquisition.

Deposits Shrink

Deposits of individuals in the 7,200 national banks of the United States decreased $191,566,488 between November 10th and January 7th—a situation probably unprecedented in the reports made to the comptroller of the currency.

Of that sum, more than $158,000,000 was withdrawn from the thirty-nine national banks of New York City. No two officials of the treasury agree as to where the money went. Some are of opinion that a part of the money might have gone to strengthen the New York state banks and trust companies during the flurry caused by the so-called Robin failure early in the month. Others think the huge withdrawal represented interest payments piled up in anticipation of the January dividend days.

A comparison with the national banks of Chicago shows that the drop was confined almost entirely to New York City. The eleven Chicago banks reported a loss of about $9,000,000 in individual deposits.

Another feature of the situation which greatly puzzles the treasury experts is that in spite of the enormous slump in deposits the banks are still holding a higher percentage of reserve than they were in November.

New Members Illinois Bankers for January

The new members of the Illinois Bankers Association reported for January are:

Bethany State Bank, Bethany; Beardstown State Bank, Beardstown; First National Bank, St. Peter; North Shore Exchange Bank, Michigan Avenue Trust Company, and Edwin T. Johnson & Sons, all of Chicago.

ter on the evening of January 10th. Mr. Johnson handled his subject, "The General Books" in an able manner, showing clearly his thorough knowledge of the banking business.

On Tuesday evening, January 26th, Hon. Thos. J. Akins, Postmaster of the city of St. Louis spoke before the chapter concerning "Postal Savings Banks." Mr. Akins prefaced his address of the evening with a five minute genesis of the postal service tending to show that the postal service has been conducted in an efficient and satisfactory way with small cost to the people. He then began his talk of the evening by voicing the opinion that the government would show the same results in taking care of the savings of the people.

Mr. Akins believes the postal savings bank law is the result of a popular demand extending back forty or fifty years, that the postal savings bank has come to stay, although there are many details still to be worked out concerning the receiving and handling of the funds.

Ralph H. MacMichael, with the Mellon National Bank of Pittsburgh, president of our national organization, was with us on January 26th and spoke before the Chapter in the evening. Mr. MacMichael spent the day visiting the banks and other places of interest. Mr. MacMichael was guest at dinner at the Mercantile Club; those present were Byron W. Moser, Louis W. Fricke, Franklin L. Johnson, James M. Turley, Henry Ahle, Fred L. Denby and Frank C. Ball. All felt drawn to Mr. MacMichael on account of his genial personality and were much interested in his valuable suggestions. Mr. MacMichael makes friends of all with whom he comes in contact and is certainly a credit to the organization he represents as well as to his bank and chapter.

Guy Wickes Cooke

The department of advertising and new business of the First National Bank, Chicago, is to have a new head in the person of Guy Wickes Cooke, who for the past ten years has managed the printing department of the bank.

Leigh Sargent who has been advertising manager has been put in charge of the "in mail" department as manager with 90 men under him. Both promotions were upon merit.

C. R. Laws has lately been elected assistant cashier of the Boatmen's Bank. Mr. Laws has long been an active member of the chapter and his promotion is merited.

Also am glad to announce that Lawrence L. Will, another active member of the chapter, has recently been promoted to an assistant cashier of the Lowell Bank.

These promotions speak well for the A. I.
FRANK C. BALL.

Brooklyn Bank to Liquidate

The directors of the Terminal Bank at 81 Sands Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., at a meeting held on Saturday last decided to liquidate the institution. Every depositor, it was announced, would be paid in full upon presentation of his pass book. The official statement of the bank regarding the closing and liquidation was as follows:

"At the meeting of the board of directors of the Terminal Bank it was decided that steps should be taken to liquidate the bank. The depositors can be paid immediately, there being sufficient cash on hand to cover the amount due them and any creditors of the institution."

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, February 2.—Continued easy money for St. Louis and the region surrounding for "some weeks to come" is how W. L. McDonald sizes up the monetary situation. Speaking of the outlook Mr. McDonald said: "The principle reason to which I attribute the present low rates is the lack of business demand. Our merchants here all say things with them are active, but that is not universally the case. As a result of the recent panic, country merchants are disposed to purchase only enough to supply needs. They are not laying in large stocks, as once was the case, but are letting their shelves become as near empty as expedience will permit. This is due to the experience they had in the panic. Many were caught with large stocks, bought in advance, and when the depression came, they suffered. Now it will take some time for the memory of that to pass, but when it does, things will work back to the level which obtained prior to the panic. I should say a season more will be sufficient to wear off the keen edge of that unpleasant memory. Another thing is that the railroads are not borrowing much money. The larger systems are doing little unnecessary improving and purchasing of equipment, which fact is responsible for much idle money. If the Interstate Commerce Commission allows some slight advances in rates, doubtless things in that direction will pick up, and we will have the railroads in the market for funds. But money is plentiful. Take our own case, for instance. Under the last previous call we showed deposits of about $55,000,000, while the total under the January call was $62,233,000, a gain of over $7,000,000. Receipts of funds from the interior, principally the South and Southwest are large. They are paying off their obligations down there, a veritable flood of money is turned into this center. I do not think the developments of last year will be duplicated. Then there appeared prospects for long continued low rates, when almost overnight the market tightened. This season all sections are too well supplied with funds to permit any sudden advance in rates."

Granite City National

The Granite City National celebrated its eighth anniversary this week. No ceremony marked the occasion, but what was more to the effect, the officials announced that the surplus of the institution had grown to $50,000, and that its affairs are in a most flourishing and prosperous condition.

Trust Company Buys Bank

The chief item in banking circles this week was the purchase by the Title Guaranty Trust Company of the Washington National. The assets of the Washington National were turned over to the American Trust Company, the banking department of Title Guaranty. By the scheme of consolidation, the stockholders receive for every two shares Washington National $140 in cash and one share of Title Guaranty stock, which latter stock is selling around $98. S. Nicolls, cashier of the Washington National, will be vice-president of the American Trust Company, and five directors of the latter institution will be elected to the directory of the merged company. By acquiring the Washington National the American Trust Company will have deposits of about $3,000,000. The Washington National was the only downtown national bank conducting a savings department. The Title Guaranty, the holding corporation, has a capital stock of $2,500,000, and surplus and profits of $160,000. The American Trust Company is capitalized at $1,000,000, and has a surplus of $69,500. The Washington National's capital was $200,000, and total assets $1,220,000.

According to the statement issued by the St. Louis Stock Exchange, the total sales of stocks and bonds in 1910 reached only $7,123,937, as compared with $9,320,698 in 1909. A total of 6,651 shares of bank stock were dealt in, valued at $1,527,109, and 6,475 shares of trust company stocks, valued at $1,119,172. As usual the most active stocks were tractions.

One-Man Bank is Embarrassed

The German-American Bank of Lonsburg, Ill., was closed under a writ of attachment last week because there were no funds on hand to honor a check for $117.23. Oscar L. Lancaster opened this institution a few months ago in a room back of Frazier's notion store. The visible assets were a safe of ancient vintage, a typewriter, one adding machine and a desk. Lancaster announced he would do a general banking business and invited deposits. In response to this invitation one William Muser deposited $330, and from time to time drew against this sum until only $117.23 remained. Then he decided to close his account, and presented a check for his balance. Lancaster, who was president, cashier, receiving and paying teller, bookkeeper and office boy, received the check as paying teller, but did not hand over the $117.23. He was sorry, he said, but the bookkeeper had reported to the president that the receiving teller had not turned over to the cashier sufficient funds to honor the check. Muser then swore out a writ of attachment and a constable was put in charge of the assets of the institution.

Eugene H. Benoist Promoted

Eugene H. Benoist was elected vice-president of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company at a special meeting of the directory of that institution this week. He succeeds August A. Busch, who resigned about a year ago. Mr. Benoist was the first real estate officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, and returns to an official connection with it after an absence of six years. He took charge of the company's newly created real estate department in 1898 and held the position of real estate officer until 1905, when he resigned. Mr. Benoist was born in St. Louis, and is a member of the pioneer French family of Benoists, which has been prominent in St. Louis banking for nearly a century.

Bankers Trust Company Meeting

The Bankers Trust Company of St. Louis, which owns stock in about 100 banks in Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas, held the second convention of the officers of its subsidiary institutions on Monday. Seventy-five bankers attended the meeting, and J. E. Franklin, president of the institution presided. The following addresses were delivered: "The Achieving Banker," J. T. M. Johnson, president of the Western Reserve Bank of Kansas City; "Country Bankers," W. H. Garanto, president of the First National of Little Rock, Ark.; "Guarantee of Bank Deposits," W. F. McCaleb, president of the West Texas Bank and Trust Company of San Antonio, Tex.; "The Country Bank and Its City Correspondents—Their Relation," J. A. Lewis, president of the National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis; "Needed Banking Legislation in Arkansas and Difficulties of Obtaining It," O. N. Killough, president of the Bank of Wynne, Wynne, Ark.; "Molasses Catches More Flies than Vinegar," L. W. McCrory, cashier of the First National, Eureka Springs, Ark.; and "Temptations of an Amateur Banker," W. E. Talley, vice-president of the Bankers Trust Company, St. Louis.

Bank Officials Get Married

Something unique in the history of Golden City, Mo., was recorded this week when two bank officials were quietly married. The high contracting parties were C. H. Button, cashier of the First National of that place, and Miss Bessie Pence, the assistant cashier. The Buttons are now away on their bridal tour. It was stated that upon their return, Mrs. Button will resume her duties as assistant cashier, while Mr. Button will again occupy the cashier's chair.

Activity in Bonds

There has been continued activity in the Chicago bond market, several financial houses reporting the heaviest security business in January that they have ever known.

Idle capital and a desire for high-class investments of a non-speculative character are given as the causes of the activity in bonds. Most of the transactions are in local securities. The large real estate issues have been specially active.

Several blocks of New York 4¼ per cents have been absorbed in Chicago this week. Local railway securities also have been greatly in evidence.

Sales of new securities in January reached a total of $170,000,000. The compilation does not include the $60,000,000 New York City bonds or other issues of municipal securities, but only the bonds, stocks, and notes sold by the railroads and industrial corporations. Railroad bond sales amounted to $67,000,000, and the $22,000,000 New Haven notes sold in Boston brought the total of new railroad security issues up to $89,000,000. The total of $170,000,000 is $55,000,000 greater than the total for January, 1910.

Negotiations were concluded Tuesday for the purchase by the Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh of $5,000,000 first mortgage 4 per cent 50-year gold bonds of the Winston-Salem South-bound Railway Company of North Carolina. The bonds are dated July 1, 1910, and are payable July 1, 1960, the interest periods being January 1st and July 1st.

The Winston-Salem Railway is jointly owned by the Norfolk & Western Railway Company and the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company and runs 89 miles from a connection on the north with the Norfolk & Western at Winston-Salem, N. C., to a connection on the south with the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad at Wadesboro, N. C.

Harris, Forbes & Co. and the National City Bank of New York are offering at 98 $15,000,000 first mortgage 5% bonds of the Chicago Railways Company maturing 1927. The company through sale of these bonds financed its capital requirements including the purchase of the lines recently acquired from the former Consolidated Traction system. The bonds are a first lien on the entire property. When the proceeds of the bonds have been expended the valuation as fixed by the city will be about $71,734,875 against $40,955,000 of the bonds outstanding. The city shares in the profits of the company.

A block of $1,000,000 new New York City 4¼% bonds when issued, due 1960, sold at 101⅞. This is the largest single block ever sold on the New York Stock Exchange.

The balance of the $1,350,000 Bloomington, Decatur & Champaign 5% bonds offered by N. W. Halsey & Co. has been sold.

Lee, Higginson & Co., have bought $4,000,000 American Agricultural Chemical Company first mortgage 5 per cent convertible gold bonds, due October 1, 1928.

The Union Trust Company, of Pittsburgh, has disposed of $6,000,000 of the new Pittsburgh Crucible Steel Company 5 per cent first mortgage thirty-five year bonds at par and interest.

A private cable from Paris reported the sale of $25,000,000 Southern Pacific 4 per cent bonds in Paris, with an option of $25,000 additional.

Business Improves

Vice-President R. J. Beatty of Inman Steel Company was a visitor at Western Trust and Savings Bank the fore part of the week. His views on the business outlook were much in demand, as the steel industry through the early part of the winter seemed to represent the one weak spot in trade. Mr. Inman was in a cheerful mood and said the Inman Company's business was steadily improving. He thought the same was true of the country as a whole.

South Dakota Banker Here

Cashier R. L. Dennis of Sioux Falls Savings Bank was a caller at La Salle Street National Wednesday. Mr. Dennis was in an optimistic frame of mind as to South Dakota's prosperity. He said that land values had advanced owing to large and uniform corn crops until they are on a parity with those of Iowa. The region around Sioux Falls has both corn and wheat as well as big live stock interests. That section has suffered little from drouths.

F. M. Gettys in Town

F. M. Gettys, cashier of Union National, Louisville, was a visitor at Fort Dearborn National recently.

Visit of St. Louis Broker

E. C. King, a partner in the firm of Geo. H. Burr & Co., at St. Louis has been in Chicago this week on bond business.

Annual Banquet

The tenth annual banquet of Chicago Chapter American Institute of Banking was held last Saturday evening in the Gold Room of the Congress Hotel. Hon. Francis W. Walker delivered an address on the basic principles of city government; Charles A. Alden talked on "Modern Patriotism" while Francis T. Simmons took the subject of "Chicago in the Abstract."

The speaking without exception, proved a treat, particularly that of Mr. Alden, who was described by Mr. Simons in the following terms: "With the form of a Hercules; with the voice of a god; with the philosophy of a Socrates and with the eloquence and oratory of a Webster."

Chicago bank clerks have been fortunate in hearing some of the best speakers at their various functions, but seldom, if ever, have they listened to a speaker of such dramatic eloquence as Mr. Alden. He held the interest of his audience from beginning to end.

The opposition of the Civic Federation to the initiative and referendum was criticized.

"It is nothing less than supreme egotism," he declared without mentioning the organization to which he referred, "for any bunch of men to come out with a verdict against the initiative and referendum when we have voted for both rights by 3 to 1."

The Harmony Trio, composed of Oscar J. Kloer, John S. Meck and Leon Crozier, whose specialty it is to dispel any somnolent tendencies, filled in the gaps with songs, dialogues and minstrel jokes.

Goes on Bank Directorate

Clyde M. Carr, vice-president of J. T. Ryerson & Son, has been added to the board of directors of the Corn Exchange National to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Isaac G. Lombard.

National Surety Has Good Year

The National Surety Company has issued its annual report for the twelve months ending December last, which shows large gains over the previous twelve months.

Goes South for Bank

Assistant Cashier Charles Fernald of Fort Dearborn National leaves next week for Texas, Oklahoma and other parts of the South and Southwest in the interests of the bank.

Des Moines, February 2.—The influence of the Iowa bankers in opposing the tax ferret law was quite noticeable in the house of representatives when that body voted to repeal the measure, by a decisive vote. It is expected that the senate will take a similar view and there is every reason to expect that the statute which has become odious to Iowa people in general will be laid on the shelf. The Fulton bill repealing the statute and which was passed by the house, makes it illegal for cities, towns or counties to employ a tax ferret. The debate on the bill was interesting but it was shown that the tax ferret bill has outlived its usefulness. The bankers of Iowa are particularly interested in this measure. For one thing, the tax ferrets have been boasting that they would secure the enactment of a law permitting them to examine the books of the various banks so as to assess the amounts therein deposited by the patrons of the institution. It was this fact that stirred the legislative committee of the Iowa Bankers Association to urge upon bankers the importance of making a fight on the tax ferret system.

State Guaranty Bill

The bill for state guaranty of bank deposits has made its anticipated appearance in the Iowa legislature and has attracted little or no attention. The sentiment that seemed somewhat in evidence in favor of the measure two years ago, seems lacking now. The bill gives the state auditor almost unlimited power in controlling banks, and provides for a guaranty tax of 1 per cent of the daily deposits. New banks formed after the statute becomes effective must pay 3 per cent of their capital stock. The auditor is given permission to summarily oust any bank official of whom he is suspicious as to dishonesty, recklessness or incompetency. When the guaranty fund is depleted, the auditor may levy another tax of 1 per cent to build it up. National banks may get in on the guaranty by paying the annual 1 per cent tax.

Improved Conditions

Financial conditions in Iowa are visibly improving according to Des Moines bankers. There is an active demand for money and the bankers are filling the demand in good shape. Farmers are disposing of their live stock and crops and there are indications of a continued revival of commercial activity. Reports of an easing up in money matters in the East have found a reflection in the Middle West.

Proposed Taxation Change

Senator Jewell of Winneshiek county, has introduced a bill in the Iowa legislature for a repeal of the law taxing moneys and credits and replacing it with a flat tax on mortgage statute. The measure provides that a flat tax of 50 cents for each $100 mortgages shall be paid as a filing fee when the mortgage is filed. Another bill of interest to bankers has been introduced by Senator Bennett of Adams county. It places private banks upon the same footing as state and savings banks as regards control, regulation and examination. Senator Bennett declares that there should be some method of becoming acquainted with the conditions that prevail in institutions of this character.

Sending Money to Europe

Cyrus Barr, cashier of the Des Moines National, has noticed that the foreign population in Des Moines is decidedly loyal to the folks back in Europe. Every day, he says, he draws drafts for Des Moines foreigners in favor of relatives in the "old country." This was particularly true at Christmas time.

Among out of the city bankers in Des Moines recently were Cashier R. R. Craig, Corydon Bank; Cashier L. N. Swindler, Yale Savings; Vice-President R. E. Jones, Farmers Bank at Webster City; President J. B. Elliott, Knoxville National at Knoxville; President S. C. Culbertson, Citizens State, Panora; President J. A. Johannason, First National at Colfax; President J. H. Brown, State and Savings, Chariton; Cashier W. A. Fawcett of the Atkins Savings; Cashier Lovell Swisher, First National of Iowa City; Cashier J. W. Bowman, First National of Marion.

Secretary P. W. Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association, was not successful in trapping a forger named W. C. Williams, alias C. F. Brown, who passed a fraudulent check on a real estate company for $375, and made his escape despite the efforts of the doughty little secretary to land him. However, through the efforts of Mr. Hall, the forger was induced to give up the amount of money that he had secured. When the detectives arrived, the man fled. Brown, or Williams, is wanted at Albia for forgery, according to reports which reached Secretary Hall.

E. J. Curtin, president of the Citizens Savings of Decorah, was in Des Moines last week. He talked at length regarding the postal savings bank established at Decorah. Mr. Curtin says that little is heard of the institution at Decorah and he sees no indication whatever that it will interfere in the slightest degree with the deposits in the ordinary banks. The bank was placed at Decorah largely because of the foreign population in that vicinity.

The bankers at Mason City held a meeting last week to plan for entertaining the Iowa Bankers Association at the state convention in June. The session was held at the City National. Committees were appointed to make preliminary arrangements. The bankers are enthusiastic and it is quite evident that the visiting bankers will be well taken care of by Mason City, which has a reputation for hospitality.

A bill was introduced in the Iowa legislature Saturday, compelling the county treasurer and

Smith's Financial Dictionary

By HOWARD IRVING SMITH

Recently Issued

Cloth. 543 Pages. Price, $4.50

This work is indispensable to a bank in answering questions that daily arise. It is the only Financial Dictionary published. It is more than a Dictionary, however; it is likewise an Encyclopaedia. It describes in fullest detail, in clear language, Banking, Money, Credit, Securities, Contracts, Commercial Paper and other Negotiable Instruments, Domestic and Foreign Exchange, Speculation in Stocks and Bonds, Grain, Cotton, Coffee, Provisions, etc. It is a complete financial library in itself.

Smith's Financial Dictionary is adapted not alone for banks and bankers, but for corporations, brokers, exporters, importers, manufacturers and merchants, and also for lawyers. It is an entirely new work, consisting of 543 large pages, printed from clear type, on superior paper, and strongly bound. It contains no advertisements.

school treasurers of Iowa to put the public money in the banks. The bill provides that the money shall draw 2 per cent on 90 per cent of the daily balances. The bill is similar to a measure which was before the Solons at the last session.

George L. Dobson, county treasurer of Polk county, is seeking to persuade the people of Des Moines to purchase the $185,000 refunding bonds to be sold by Polk county February 7th. The bonds bear 4½% and are a good investment, says the county treasurer, who is seeking to urge Iowa people to keep their money at home.

John Olson, state bank examiner, has resigned. It is understood that he will be a candidate for national bank examiner to succeed W. P. Jones, who resigned recently. Mr. Olson lives at Forest City. He will quit the service of the state as soon as his inspection is completed in Western Iowa.

Official announcement has been made that Sioux City will become a reserve center on March 1st. It is anticipated that much of the money from South Dakota institutions will be handled by Sioux City banks after that date. This money is now handled through Des Moines, Omaha and Minneapolis.

J. G. Rounds has returned to Des Moines after a stay of several weeks in Mexico, where he has been inspecting the so-called revolution at short range. Mr. Rounds is inclined to believe that most of the revolution is newspaper talk. He is president of the Citizens National, Des Moines.

Saloon keepers in Des Moines are stirred up over a proposed law making it illegal for saloons to cash checks. This custom has prevailed for years in Des Moines, especially by laboring men who are paid in checks on Saturday afternoon after the banks have closed.

Sidney Wayne Richardson, president of the First National at Creston, whose death occurred at that place, was laid to rest at Sidney. the funeral was largely attended. Mr. Richardson was one of the best known of southern Iowa bankers.

Des Moines bank clearings for the week ending January 28th, showed a slight decrease as compared with the clearings for the corresponding week last year. The total for the week was $3,391,799.88, a decrease of $160,433.37.

Glen Reibsamen has been elected cashier of the Le Grand Bank, succeeding J. W. Hockett. O. M. Thatcher will be vice-president. The bank was purchased by Reibsamen's father, Mr. Thatcher and the People's Savings, of Des Moines.

County Treasurer Dobson has turned over to the Polk county treasury $16,424.53 as interest collected on the county funds for the past two years.

Mrs. C. V. Arnold, wife of a well known retired banker at Mt Pleasant, died at her home in that city last week of paralysis.

The First National, at Milford, has announced the erection of a new bank building this coming season.

Slump in Wheat

A variety of influences have combined in the last week to cause a slump in wheat. The local market broke to 95 for May and 93 for July. Since the extreme depression prices have been steadier under more confident buying. Fair weather throughout the West, a free movement of country supplies, lack of damage reports and different foreign buying have helped the bear side. Business at the board of trade is not large, comparatively speaking, but it is rather more active than during the weeks when the market stood above the dollar level.

"For over Forty-five Years this bank has been in business, under government inspection and supervision. It enjoys the distinction which comes from age, experience and successful management" is the telling paragraph used at the top of its statement folder, by the National City Bank, of Ottawa, Ill. It has a beautiful building of its own, of the monumental type and shows deposits of $1,635,026.63. In Illinois it is quite the fashion to advertise that a bank is under supervision and inspection by state or federal officers. Publicity has made other kinds of banking very unpopular.

Carmichael is Promoted

R. A. Carmichael, district passenger agent of the Illinois Central, has been advanced to division passenger agent. He is the official who handled the bankers special to the Cairo convention last fall so acceptably.

Kansas City

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

The state legislatures of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma are all considering bills of various kinds affecting banking and trust business, but no bill has yet appeared that contemplates radical changes from existing laws. In Oklahoma a spirited contest has been going on in the senate with reference to the formation of a state banking board. The so-called Roddie bill providing for a state board of bank commissioners to consist of the governor and two other members to be appointed by him finally passed by a very close vote. The chief matter of discussion was whether the two other members of the board should be experienced bankers. As finally passed in the senate the governor may appoint anyone whether he is a banker or not. The Oklahoma senate also voted to reduce the salaries of state bank examiners from $2,400 a year, which was provided in the Roddie bill, to $1,800. The compensation of the members of the banking board came in for heated argument, but it was finally decided to allow them $6 a day and expenses, which was a reduction from $10 a day and expenses provided by the Roddie bill.

Question of Reserve Agents

Another important piece of legislation in Oklahoma was also a senate bill allowing the state banks to use national banks as reserve agents. The fight on this proposition was very bitter as some of the senators were interested in national banks. The Roddie banking bill above referred to provided that state banks must carry their reserves with banks within the state of Oklahoma that were protected by the guaranty fund. They were to be allowed to carry not more than 10 per cent of their capital and surplus in banks within the state that were not protected by the guaranty law. It was intended to prohibit Oklahoma banks carrying any part of their reserve deposits in banks in Wichita, Kansas City, St. Louis, Fort Smith, Dennison and other outside cities. When put upon its final passage the Roddie bill was so amended that the state banks will be allowed to place their reserves where they please within or without the state.

An amendment to the Oklahoma state guaranty law was passed by the senate which permits banks to retain their contributions to the state guaranty fund until such a time as it is needed.

Trust Company Organization

The organization of trust companies in the smaller towns of Oklahoma is allowed by a bill introduced by Senator Stewart. The present law fixes a minimum capital of $200,000 for trust companies regardless of the size of the town in which they are located. This has prohibited the formation of trust companies in the smaller towns. The Stewart bill allows a capital of $25,000 in towns of from 5,000 to 20,000 population and $50,000 in cities from 20,000 to 50,000. The bill as originally drawn made a minimum of $100,000 in all cities of 50,000 and over. This would apply to Oklahoma City alone, and the financial interests of that city agreed to ask that the minimum be made $200,000, which was done. An amendment to the Stewart bill, which was adopted without opposition, provides that no trust company engaged in the banking business may carry the stock of any other bank as an asset and still another amendment makes the double liability feature of the bank law apply to stockholders in trust companies.

The Missouri state bar association some time ago appointed a committee to draw up a new incorporation act for business and manufacturing concerns. The new law will have several salient features, chief of which will be an absolute honest appraisal of capitalization assets, to which the capital stock will be limited. In addition no charter will be issued unless the whole stock is taken up, either in cash or by subscription, and before a charter will be issued these facts must be attested before a circuit court. Some means will be provided also to examine stock of foreign corporations which is offered for sale in Missouri. This is the same plan as that proposed by Bank Commissioner Dolley of Kansas to prevent the selling of "wildcat" stock in that state.

There have been no new bank bills introduced in the Kansas legislature since those reported in THE CHICAGO BANKER of last week.

Banking Notes

Chief Wilkie of the secret service bureau has declared that the $10 counterfeit certificate drawn on the Wichita (Kan.) National Bank is the most perfect counterfeit bill he has seen in many years. The lathe work by which most spurious bills are so easily detected, has no flaws, and the bill itself bears none of the earmarks which usually disclose counterfeits. It is believed that several thousand of these bills have been circulated in Kansas.

At the preliminary hearing of Alex. Menard, who was arrested at the home of his brother at Wymore, Neb., suspected of belonging to the famous Wymore gang of bank robbers, was bound over for trial under $2,000 bond. He was charged specifically with helping rob the Beattie State Bank November 8th.

The three men charged with robbing the Strasberg, Mo., bank December 23d, George M. Rogers, James Smith and Edward McGaormick have been held for trial by the district court at Pleasant Hill, Mo.

A charter has been issued in Missouri for the American Trust Company of Kansas City. The new company has an authorized capital of $1,000,000, of which $250,000 has been subscribed and $125,000 paid in.

William T. Kemper, president of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City and H. C. Flower and A. D. Rider of the Fidelity Trust Company, spent several days last week in Jefferson City on business with the state banking department of Missouri.

Secret service men from Kansas City have rounded up a gang of counterfeiters in the Ozark mountains of Southern Missouri. One of the gang is believed to be J. B. Durham, of Licking, Texas county, Mo., who is now in jail. The bills attributed to this gang are excellent imitations and are on the German National Bank of Beloit, Kan.

Neil Muleahy, who was arrested in Kansas City some time ago suspected of being a Kansas bank robber, was identified by witnesses at Waterville, Kan., of being one of the men who robbed the bank there three weeks ago.

J. J. Toevs, president of the German-Swedish State Bank of McPherson, Kan., died Monday, January 23d, at his home in that city. Mr. Toevs was born in southern Russia in 1861, and came to America as an emigrant in 1871, and settled in Morris county, Kan. He learned the banking business, and after years of experience organized the German-Swedish State Bank of McPherson. He died worth several hundred thousand dollars.

J. G. Streat of the J. G. Streat Investment Company of Kansas City has returned from a business trip to Chicago.

The Missouri Savings Bank of Kansas City has moved into its new building, 920 Walnut Street. This is one of the handsomest bank buildings in the West, being erected for the exclusive occupancy of the Missouri Savings Bank.

Can You Beat These People?

When the town of Lamro, S. Dak., lost to the town of Winner, a hotly contested campaign for the honor of being the county seat of Tripp county, did it retire into political sulks or plot any form of political revenge?

Not for a minute!

It executed a coup d'etat, truly Napoleonic and in one stroke turned Defeat into Victory and reduced the Winner of the Conquest to the consistency of Futile Whispers. In this manner:

As soon as it was learned in which way the question had been decided, the "business houses of Lamro" (to quote the local historian) "were placed on wheels and taken across the prairie to the new town," and Presto! they were the County Seat! Nor is this all. The Farmers' State Bank of Lamro, in a manner known to South Dakotans only, was found in the trip across to have increased its capital 100 per cent.

Used Oak Log for Bank

A heavy oak log with veins of $10 gold pieces was discovered in the cellar of a hut occupied by Jacob Zeis, aged 74, a hermit of Maestown, Ill.

Herman Klasterman, who lives on a farm near the Zeis hut and who had not seen the old man for several days, went to his home to investigate the cause of Zeis' absence. Zeis was found dead in bed. A note on the table said he was too ill to go to a doctor and that he had considerable money secreted in the cellar. Search of the cellar revealed a heavy oak log in one corner, and when this was closely examined a number of small holes with wooden plugs were seen. One of the plugs was extracted and gold pieces fell to the floor. An hour's work rewarded the coroner with a pile of $10 gold pieces amounting to $300.

Crooks Stir Up Indiana

Warning is being sent out to Indiana banks by the State Bankers Association notifying bankers to be on the watch for several clever swindlers who are working a "smooth game." The crooks operate under a number of aliases, one of which is "Lon Hamilton," the name used to defraud a Hartford City bank a week ago when a forger deposited two checks for $187 and $179 and received a certificate of deposit from each bank, later presenting the certificates and receiving the money. The warning says that "Perry L. White" is one of the crooks engaged in the deception.

THE INVESTORS'

PRIMER

JOHN MOODY

There has long been a demand for a concise handbook which would give, in simple, understandable language, definitions of all the important terms and phrases employed in the investment and banking business. This little book represents an effort to in some measure supply this demand.

The book is really in two parts, the first part covering the general definitions of finance; the second giving specific information regarding the various issues of preferred and guaranteed stocks which are generally classed among the investment issues. Many other small books furnish information regarding bonds, quotations, etc., etc., but this specific and useful information has not, as far as the writer knows, been heretofore presented for popular uses, in this particular way.

The only amendment made on the third reading named the bank commissioner ex officio secretary of the board.

Favor Government Supervision

Testifying before the Railroad Securities Commission in Chicago, General Counsel Hanson of St. Paul, said: "I think Federal supervision of securities extremely advisable and it may be entirely practicable. If issue of securities by interstate carriers comes within its right to regulate commerce congress could exercise that power to the exclusion of the states. Two kinds of such regulations are obviously impossible."

The Railway Securities Commission was impressed by the testimony by railroad executives to the effect that exclusively Federal regulation of securities if practicable would be beneficial with certain limitations, and that interference with instruments of credits should involve corresponding protection, such as limiting of possible rate reductions.

In a sensational statement, Rufus Dawes said: "No greater blow could be delivered to the hopes of rate reductions than to check the flow of capital toward railroad investments."

J. J. Mitchell said Federal railroad regulation would anticipate future evils besides curing many present ones, but he could not see how states could be forced to yield regulatory power. If banks can capitalize surplus railroads should have the same privileges. Prices of new securities are determined by credit of roads' values and interest rates. Buyers and sellers fix terms regardless of interference.

"Banks do not ordinarily buy railroad bonds. They take bonds of commercial industries, which pay higher returns. Bonds are bought when there is a plethora of money. When money becomes scarce, and it is desirable to realize on bonds, securities are found to have fallen several points below purchase price and it is necessary to wait half a year before they can be sold at original cost. Banks have avoided railroad bonds, but I feel that it might have been better if they had kept to apparently less profitable securities."

Standing of National Banks

This statement has been given out by Secretary MacVeagh: "The relative strength and conservative management of banks are indicated in a material measure by the protection afforded depositors in the accumulation and maintenance of a substantial surplus. As a general rule, the larger the surplus the greater the volume of deposits; but it is evident taking all national banks into consideration, that the relative increase in deposits is greater than the increase in surplus. In 1907 the ratio of capital to individual deposits was $1 to $4.82 and in 1910 $1 to $5.13. The ratio of capital, surplus and profits to deposits in 1907 was $1 to $2.65, while in 1910 it was $1 to $2.74. The deposits of lawful money in bank to individual deposits varies but slightly. In 1907 the banks held $1 for every $6.16 of individual deposits; in 1908, $1 for $5.24; in 1909, $1 for 5.87, and in 1910, $1 for $6.04 of individual deposits."

Will Open Trust Department

The Real Estate Title & Trust Company of Chicago has given notice to its stockholders of a meeting to be held in the afternoon of February 25 in the offices of the company, 96 La Salle Street, to create $300,000 worth of treasury stock, all of which is reported to have been subscribed for "by strong financial people not heretofore connected with the company." After this step is completed a trust department will be opened.

President Gorham in Chicago

Among the visiting bankers in Chicago Wednesday was President C. E. Gorham of First National, Marshall, Mich., who comes over annually to swap stories with Vice-President August Blum of First National.

Swan Creek, Ill., Bank Robbed

Monmouth, Ill., January 31.—The Swan Creek private bank, fourteen miles south of here, was robbed of over $3,000 in stamps and cash last night. The safe was blown to pieces by six charges of nitroglycerin.

The reports aroused everybody in the village but no move was made to capture the robbers, who were seen escaping in two stolen livery rigs.

A young man about 22 years old was arrested on his arrival here to-day on a train. He had a grip filled with money, stamps, pistols, burglar tools and nitroglycerin. He gave his name as A. C. Carroll of Chicago. Cashier Stice of the Swan Creek Bank identified $2,500 in bills as belonging to his bank.

Another suspect, who gave the name of James Reed, was taken from a train also. He was armed and had a supply of nitroglycerin.

Bank Stock Stolen; Mail Robbed

A duplicate certificate, numbered 89, for ten shares of Kenwood Trust and Savings Bank stock owned by F. N. Webster, was stolen on Monday night, and banks and brokerage firms in Chicago have been warned against buying in the stock. The theft of the certificate occurred when a drug store in 55th street, where the certificate had been registered for mailing, was broken into by thieves and the stamp and cash drawer rifled.

The certificate, which is in the name of E. O. Heyl, 3812 Forest Avenue, was in the hands of Zeiler, Fairman & Co., for transfer to Mr. Webster.

Cotton Controversy Again

At the annual meeting of the London City and Midland Bank Sir Edward II. Holden, the managing director, referred to "the unrest among European bankers and cotton brokers, caused by large losses through forgeries in cotton bills of lading."

He said that the suggested validation certificates were unsatisfactory, and added: "Further proposals will be made to the American railroads, which, if accepted, will place Europeans in a much safer position, but whether the railroads will grant the concessions asked remains to be seen."

Colossal British Savings

The people of the British Islands in 1910 saved one billion, seven hundred and four million, five hundred thousand dollars. This unprecedented sum is mostly being exported to augment the five billions of British capital invested in North America, the two billions invested in Argentine railways, the other billions invested in Australia, China, India, South Africa, in nearly every corner of the earth.

Light the Great Political Antiseptic

Washington, D. C., January 31.—Publicity in the administration of the public business, publicity in party management, publicity in the processes of choosing candidates for public office, publicity in the committee rooms of congress—in fact, publicity in all branches of politics was the "hobby" which Gov. Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey to-night told the members of the National Press club he most cherished.

For Panama Bond Bill

Washington, January 31.—Chairman Hill of the special subcommittee of the committee on ways and means, after a meeting of his subcommittee reported favorably the measure recommended by Secretary MacVeagh, which provides for an issue of $100,000,000 of Panama bonds without circulation privileges.

POWHATTAN BOLLING (some name) who formerly represented McCoy & Co., of this city, in Ohio, has united with Weil, Roth & Co., of Cincinnati.

B. B. SEYMOUR, formerly bank superintendent for Ohio, has been elected president of the National Bank of Ashtabula, and is glad to be back in the harness.

PRESQUE ISLE COUNTY SAVINGS, Rogers City, Michigan, will be in their new banking room by July 1st. A. H. Andrews & Co., of this city are building the fixtures in the latest and best style.

JOSEPH CHAPMAN, JR., will leave Minneapolis on the 7th for Panama and South America, going via New Orleans. Will be gone about a month.

GEORGE GUCKENBERGER, of the trust company section, may not be able to attend the Nashville meeting, being ill at his home in Cincinnati.

SECRETARY HOOPES of the Texas association will start his annual swing around the group circle on February 11th at Dallas. Then the big special train will go to Hillsboro (13th), Austin (14th), San Antonio (15th), Houston (17th), Brady (20th, and Fort Worth on the 22d. The boys who travel out for the reserve banks just revel in this early spring outing. Mr. Hoopes does the worrying for them.

SOME of those "down state" papers which rail at our referring to him as "Farmer Edens" are due for a call down. From a prominent man in Deadwood, S. Dak., we learn that as a boy W. G. was a real farmer on his farm in Michigan. This was in — but here we refuse to give the year.

BUT the Deadwood man writes that "I felt then and still feel that the qualities (this will cost a dinner) which won the confidence and esteem of all with whom he came in contact would certainly be the means of bringing him into a position of honor and trust." This is real and the farm was "Bay View Farm, Bingham, Mich."

MONROE NATIONAL held its first annual president's dinner at the Chicago Athletic Club, last week. The menu was bound up in a statement folder, and was duly sealed and stamped with every emblem in use in the bank. There were twenty in attendance. The piece de resistance was a "Show-me" chicken—that came from Missouri. The dinner is to be an annual event.

YOUR old friend Luther Drake has packed his golf clubs and Omaha will be in mourning while he plays havoc with the greens down in Georgia during February.

BANKING in California is a fairly remunerative business. McCloud National paid 24% last year. F. W. Clark is the new cashier, to succeed William Thompson. Mr. Clark formerly was cashier of the Exchange State Bank at Lime Springs, Iowa. Deposits average half a million with new accounts being constantly added.

C. H. McNIDER, Mason City, will join the pilgrimage to the "Big Council" powwow at Nashville May 1st-3d. Don't forget, you committeemen that you are entitled to go (expenses paid) and to have just as large a time as Mr. McNider or anybody else on the council.

GEORGE F. ORDE, Minneapolis, says "sure I'm going and want to join the party at Chicago." Orde is the new member for Minnesota. He was obliged to miss the Los Angeles trip and hasn't gotten over it yet. He is whetting up his nibble for Nashville.

ANDREW J. FRAME, member for Wisconsin is going along also, but he is very formal even in little things, hence he writes "and in answer thereto will say, I approve of the same. He ought to get "upper 3" for that but gets a compartment instead.

MERCHANTS, NORTHERN AND HARRIS trust companies are united in offering Chicago Railways Company five per cent gold bonds at 98 and interest. Should be a strong favorite in investment circulars.

C. FREDERICK CHILDS has gotten his bond house launched with half a million of paid up stock and we expect to see "things doin'" over in his corner. Experience, energy and money to work on—well, we see no handicap on the outlook.

BACHE & COMPANY must have a grouch on, for to them "the wheels of business are not turning with any speed. There is a slow, steady revolution from day to day to meet hardly more than daily needs. Such a thing as energy or enterprise applied to new projects is almost unknown these days."

AREN'T you glad no big Chicago firm sends out such blue stuff? Of course, down East, they all talk "shop" greatly in their circulars, and in past decades they made it pay. Everything is booming when they want to sell and the country is going to demnation when they want to buy.

NOW here's a little breeze from the Coast. The American National, San Francisco, says: "Timely and abundant rains, breaking the longest drouth recorded for many years in California, encouraged the belief that the present year will repeat the generous harvests of 1910 and ensure a continuance of prosperous conditions. The ground is now in shape for plowing, and a large acreage will be sown with grain. The heavy snowfall in the Sierras provides a sufficient supply of moisture in the great valley, and the agricultural outlook is altogether promising."

WHEN we get a letter from Mr. Lugenious Blue of the East it is cheering, in the same mail, to get a breezy whiff from Mr. Optimus West.

FREDERICK E. FARNSWORTH is the real goods. It's a good deal of a man when the good, old Journal of Commerce interviews him for a front-page story, with big black headlines. You can read it in another column of this issue.

YES, and doesn't it make you swear (almost) when you remember those dirty pikers with their bogus telegrams and innuendos at Los Angeles. "Going to beat Farnsworth," was their cry (if far enough behind his back) but beating a landlady out of her bill, we think, is more in their line.

"THE ROOT OF EVIL" by Thomas Dixon, is a new Doubleday, Page & Co., story which you must read. You know Dixon and you deal largely in the "root" so there you are. Says Dixon, in one paragraph: "Surely his like had never been seen in the history of man—this modern money-maniac, this strange creature of iron muscles, always hurrying, darning, scheming, plotting with never a moment's relaxation, day or night, eating or drinking, working or sleeping, in his office or in his home, going or coming in his yacht with wireless tower, his private car with telegraph office, his secretary always by his side, a telephone always at his bed, with no time to live, with no time to love, with only time to fight and kill and pile the spoils of war on high!"

GERMAN-AMERICAN, down at Bloomington, had a full page spread in one of the local papers. The bank is nine years old and deposits have grown from $25,291.51, May 12, 1902, when it made its first statement, to January 1, 1911, when they were $1,240,244.72. The bank issued "Good will" drafts to all callers, drawn on the Corn Exchange National, Chicago, good for 365 cheerful days.

THE GERMAN-AMERICAN has the choice of men of the city among its stockholders and on its board.

GATES A. RYTHERS vice-president of the Live Stock Exchange National, has returned from an 8,000-mile trip through the West. He says the bankers along the Pacific coast feel a little apprehensive on the business outlook for the next two or three years as a result of the present prosecutions of corporations and rate controversies, but that in the territory farther inland there is more confidence.

WT. FENTON, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic, has sailed for a six weeks' vacation trip in Europe.

BANKERS differ in kind. Take the little instance in mind touching the reservations on the "Nashville Special" to the Big Council meeting. One banker will cautiously inquire "for the itinerary" (a one night ride) before he ventures to reserve a berth. "Yes, indeed, and thank you" telegraphs another hearty soul. Another "hasn't heard yet officially that the meeting is to be in Nashville and when he does will 'let you know.'"

"I AM pleased with your action," writes one nationally known banker. Why is it the big fellows are so tarnal nice and the little ones so suspicious? Then comes another which make a fellow feel good. He says "I thank you for the courtesy. It's mighty good of you to arrange this service for the fellows, and while I express only my own appreciation, I want you to feel that everybody else feels the same way about it." There's one of the elect, when it comes to being a big, generous, kindly banker in the A. class.

"I APPRECIATE your kindness," says one from the far north. A few there be who think we are having a big profit out of a special train. Yes, almost as much as the drug clerk makes on two cent stamps. But we like it and the good fellows all like it, so there you are.

OUT in Iowa they say that Federal Judge McPherson certainly is making good as a first aid to the injured corporation. In one day last week he restrained the city of Des Moines from enforcing an ordinance lowering the price of gas and the Iowa Railroad and Warehouse Commission from putting in operation a rule reducing the freight rate on coal.

PERHAPS Deneen really has no bona fide candidate for mayor of Chicago, but only is stalling Vail and Smulski the better to extract pledges for his friend Eckhart, to be his own successor at Springfield.

THEN suppose Harrison should promptly declare for Graham, when he is nominated? Wouldn't that make the Only Carter the democratic candidate for governor? Yes, and—but what's the use? This is for the politically minded only.

FINGAL, N. D., (yes, it's on the map) and it's where C. E. Batcheller of the "Big Council" lives (when at home) and is cashier of the First National. This all is preliminary to the big calendar which he sends out containing a beautiful "Christy Lady" in an oval setting. She's a peach!

Walsh Dividends

As a result of careful financiering by the Chicago Clearing House Committee the forty-five bankers who have been carrying the Walsh securities are steadily acquiring dividends which eventually will return the seven millions advanced to prevent loss to depositors in the Chicago National, Home Savings and Equitable Trust.

At Tuesday's meeting of the committee dividends were declared as follows: Three per cent cash on the outstanding participation certificates; 28 per cent in income bonds of the Terre Haute and Southeastern Railway Company, newly organized to take over the Walsh railroads, and 14½ per cent in stock of that company.

Previous to this the dividends amounted to a fraction less than 25 per cent. The total to date, therefore, is about 70 per cent, and there is a certainty of further disbursements within the year, according to bankers who are familiar with the Walsh properties.

First Trust and Savings Bank is trustee for all the bankers concerned and President J. B. Forgan was authorized by vote to make the disbursements as described.

There have been years of labor and anxiety in connection with the adjustment of Mr. Walsh's affairs, and still there never has been a moment when the many bankers directly interested doubted the wisdom of the policy adopted to save the city from a financial crash at the time of the failure. Nor has there been the slightest doubt as to the ability and integrity of the clearing house committee in carrying out the program agreed on by the forty-five banks and individuals participating.

Few incidents in the financial history of the United States have aroused equal interest with this. The outcome of the experiment is being watched by bankers and other students of economics the world over. The final success of the plan will be striking evidence of the need in every community of public spirit and unity in banking, for in the Walsh case these principles have had their highest exemplification.

Asks a Million

In order to extend the postal savings bank system, after the test made in connection with the depositories established at one postoffice in each state, the immediate appropriation of $1,000,000 will be urged.

Postmaster-General Hitchcock states that reports thus far received from the postal savings depositories covering business of the system during January, the first month of its operation, showed most gratifying results. If the necessary appropriations were available, he says, the department would immediately establish banks in 500 cities.

Deposits for January probably will amount to $60,000, and if this average is maintained, the year's aggregate for the forty-eight initial depositories will be close to three-quarters of a million. This indicates what can be expected of the system with the establishment of many additional offices. The average amount of deposits being received per postoffice, as indicated by the January returns is larger than the corresponding average for the most successful year in the history of the British system.

Twelve million dollars worth of new buildings have been erected in Minneapolis in the past five years to meet the requirements of increasing business development.

The immediate appropriation of $1,000,000 is asked to permit the prompt extension of postal savings facilities to a considerable number of the numerous postoffices that are applying to be made a part of the system.

Money Steady

Money is steady in the Chicago market at the somewhat higher range reached last week. Counter rates for loans are 5 to 5½ per cent, nearly all of the larger transactions being made at the inside figure. Secured paper is quoted 4½ to 5. The small business reported in call loans is around 4 per cent. The inquiry for money indicates a broadening of general business. There is fair activity in bonds. It is thought the railroad situation will steadily improve in view of assurances that a reasonable advance in freight rates will be permitted.

Railroads to Win

"Sentiment among financial people in New York is better than I have found it for a year," said George M. Reynolds, president of Continental-Commercial, who returned from the East. "Business generally, and more particularly the steel business, is better, though there is not much snap to it yet. Less attention is being paid in New York to the coming supreme court decisions, for it is the general belief that they will not be so drastic as was supposed some time ago. It is also the general belief that the railroads will get enough of an advance in freight rates to make a sentimental help if it does not amount to much in actual dollars and cents.

"There is a plethora of money, of course, and rates are low, but it is considered that this will be reflected in the prices of highclass bonds and investment stocks and that we may get back to the old levels of security prices."

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

WE suggest that the esteemed Chicago Tribune allow its friend Wayman to try his hand at earning that "$1,000 reward." There ought to be something he can do except to cause the tax payers to shiver every time a grand jury meets.

IF the present plans are carried out, the national monetary commission will meet with the legislative committee of the American Bankers Association probably at the Nashville meeting of the big council and make plans for some measure of monetary relief which will be urged on congress when it meets in December.

W. J. KOMMERS, so long and intimately connected with the affairs of the Old National at Spokane, has been elected cashier of the Union Trust & Savings of the same place. Now if they wish to erect a skyscraper they will find that also to be in Kommer's line.

IN banking there is a Rubicon which may not be crossed.

EVEN private bankers may well keep a little shy of the shore. Just the other day the cashier of a down-state national, a bank of finest reputation, was a caller. He said, "I have noticed your paper is strictly in favor of publicity, supervision, and inspection for all forms of banking. You're right about it."

"BEFORE going into a national I was cashier of a private bank, one of the best of them. The proprietor had three business enterprises in the town of which he was the sole owner. The ostensible heads of the concerns were, in fact, his employees. All bills for goods, supplies, improvements, etc., for those concerns were paid right out of the bank funds, out of the depositors' money."

"WELL, it all turned out right in the end. Lands bought in the Northwest, likewise with the bank's money, advanced in price and saved the day. It was enough of that kind of banking for me."

"HOW about your capital?" was asked. "There wasn't any capital at all and our balances in Chicago, New York and elsewhere were carried in the proprietor's own name."

MOST of our readers in Illinois will recognize the accuracy of this man's description of how unsupervised banking was done even in "one of the best private banks in the state."

THREE compartment cars now are "full-up" for the Nashville pleasure jaunt of the big council, the little councils and the various A. B. A. committees. One cautious member, whose bank is just in the edge of the big woods, writes in "I would like to go with you, but (notice the 'but') I want to go with the crowd." The world is full of him and they don't recognize the crowd when they see it.

L. G. KAUFMAN, who still is president of The First National of Marquette, and a member of council for Michigan, hopes to come to Chicago and go down with his friends of the West. He is the president of the Chatham-Phoenix combined nationals in New York and is welding up a big, showy bank.

BANKERS Club of Chicago will hold their 115th meeting in the ball-room of the new Hotel Sherman February 13th. The guest of honor and orator of the evening will be the eloquent Martin W. Littleton, member of congress from New York.

A NEW YORK jury has decided that bank wrecker Robin is not insane. Only his creditors belong in the foolish house.

SAN FRANCISCO won the fair in a walk and thus disturbs our confidence in Sol. Wexler, for he assured us he had it all fixed for New Orleans.

NEBRASKA bankers are being taken in, in a small way, by a man who negotiates (liberally of course) drafts on Wisconsin banks, and by another individual who uses an Alliance, Ohio, pass-book showing $1,000 credit. Same old story of trying to bag a commission on cashing checks for a stranger.

HUGHES' protective department has scored another complete victory in the capture of the guilty one in the famous "Sible Forgery Case," the crime being committed on a Nebraska bank. Took time and money.

NEBRASKA has, since last May, returned in commissions direct to members, $3,400 earned on typewriters, and other supplies. This service is real and the saving to any bank will more than pay all association dues. Then there is the protective feature as well. The association spent $200 getting Sible and the loss by his forgery was only $154. It pays that bank pretty well.

LONDON NATION selects from fiction publications of 1910 fifteen works which it considers notable. Among these only six were published in America—"A Motley," by John Galsworthy, "Tales of Men and Ghosts," by Edith Wharton, "The Finer Grain," by Henry James, and "Celt and Saxon," by George Meredith, "Clayhanger," by Arnold Bennett, "An Affair of Dishonour," by William de Morgan. Of these the first four were published by Charles Scribner's Sons of New York.

NO junior officer, nor department head is half so necessary to the successful operation of the bank as he thinks his president thinks he is. We know of a case or two where too much was "banked" on this very assumption.

VERMONT will hold its second annual state convention at Brandon on February 22d. The program opens at 2:30 P. M. and provides for a banquet in the evening. At least 75 bankers are expected to attend. F. H. Farrington of Rutland Springs is secretary. Good speakers will be in attendance.

THE BOOSTERS COMMITTEE of Fort Madison, Ia., is circulating a postal of heroic size showing that city as a regular skyscraper metropolis in 1915. The imaginative artist is none other than your old friend J. A. S. Pollard, a cartoonist of ability.

BANK Commissioner Zimmerman of Michigan, just before quitting his office for a more lucrative one, put on file an opinion from Attorney-General Franz C. Kuhn, putting the ban on private banks as public depositories. Mr. Kuhn, in his opinion said:

"I AM of the opinion that the statute should not be construed to include private banks. Generally, when reference is made to a bank this means an incorporated bank and not a private bank. For example, when a note is made payable at any bank in a city, this is held to mean an institution incorporated for banking purposes and does not include a private bank."

GEN. KUHN cited cases, of course, to show that the courts in other states had invariably held against private banks being acceptable public depositories. His own decision was based upon Act 99, passed in Michigan in 1899. The Attorney-General went on to say that:

"THE legislature has passed a law providing for the incorporation and organization of banks and making them subject to the state supervision. Under that law, as under the federal law providing for the organization of national banks, the stockholders are liable in double the amount of the stock held by them. It seems to me that when reference is made in the statute to a bank, it means an incorporated bank organized under the state or national banking laws. A private banker, so-called, conducts his business under Chapter 133 of the Compiled Laws of 1897, the same being an act relative to brokers and exchange dealers. The law prohibits the private banker from advertising or putting up any sign tending to convey the impression that the place of business is an organized bank. If he advertises, he must use his individual name, and may add thereto "bank," "banking office" or "exchange office." I do not think the place of business of one conducting a private bank is a bank within the meaning of Act 99, Public Acts of 1909."

IT seems that the same question was brought up and decided once upon a time in Illinois.

THE case in question was that of the City of DuQuoin vs. Kelly, 176 Ill. 218. An ordinance was passed by the city requiring the treasurer to keep the city funds in a regularly organized bank. It was held that the ordinance contemplated a bank organized under the state or national banking law and not a private bank owned by an individual. The court said:

"WE ARE of the opinion that the term 'regularly organized bank,' in the city and village act, means a bank organized either under the state law or the act of congress, and that it was not intended by the legislature that a city officer who has given bond for the safe keeping of the funds in his hands should be

Banking in Russia, Austria, the Netherlands and Japan

Washington, February 10.—“Banking in Russia, Austro-Hungary, the Netherlands, and Japan,” is the title of the most recent volume which the National Monetary Commission has added to its series of publications on banking and currency. The article treating of the banking system of Russia by Profs. Idelson and Lexis, the Netherlands by R. Van der Borgh, and Austro-Hungary by Prof. Zuckerkandl are translations from the third edition of Conrad's Handwörterbuch der Staatswissenschaften. The banking system of Japan is fully described by Marquis Katsura, finance minister of Japan; Baron Sakatani, ex-minister of finance; S. Naruse, a private financier; and Prof. O. M. W. Sprague, of Harvard University.

The publications of the National Monetary Commission serve two purposes; first, they furnish the material necessary for an intelligent revision of the banking and currency laws of the United States and, second, they are invaluable sources of information both for the student of finance and the practical financier.

Organization of Banking in Russia

The first banks in Russia were established by the government in 1754. In this year two banks were organized to “loan money on the precious metals and on precious stones, and to grant credit on the security of mortgages on estates cultivated by serfs.” A third institution “was to be a commercial bank for the merchants of St. Petersburg.” All three banks were allowed to receive deposits of private individuals. Their capital was supplied by the state. By 1785 these banks had been closed because of mismanagement. From this time until 1860, when the Imperial Bank was established, various state banks were organized. Their history presents the following characteristic features: “The dominant role played by the state banking system and the consequent close connection between the banks and the national credit; the late beginnings of private banking and the complete absence of private banks of issue; the tendency toward a comprehensive regulation of private banking by the state.

The Imperial Bank is a purely state institution directly under the control of the minister of finance. “The central administration consists of a council of the bank, a governor, and two deputy governors.” The capital of 50,000,000 rubles was supplied by the government. There are a number of main and secondary branches.

“The business of the bank comprises the discounting of bills and other paper maturing at a fixed date, the granting of loans and credits, the taking of deposits, and the reception of valuables for safe-keeping, the purchase and sale of bills and other paper, the issue of drafts drawn in one locality upon some other place, and buying and selling on commission. * * * No other state institution has hitherto attempted to grant credit to agriculturists and manufacturers so readily and with the exercise of such leniency in the event of difficulty of payment.”

Since November 26, 1897, the bank has been bound to make specie payments and to redeem its notes on demand. The redemption of the notes is guaranteed by the entire resources of the government. The Imperial Bank is allowed to issue notes as needed by the money market up to 600,000,000 rubles against a gold reserve of 50 per cent. Any issue in excess of 600,000,000 rubles must be fully covered by a gold reserve.

In 1908 the notes in circulation amounted to 1,155.1 million rubles, the deposits to 606.8 million rubles, and the gold reserve to 1,161.5 million rubles, making a good reserve of 66 per cent against demand liabilities.

Banking accommodation is also provided in Russia by joint stock banks, municipal banks, and mutual credit associations, of which classes of institutions the first is by far the most important.

The Bank of the Netherlands

The Bank of the Netherlands, a central bank of issue, is a joint stock company created by the royal decree of March 25, 1814. “The supervision over the bank has been exercised since 1863 by a royal commissary.” The management of the institution is carried on by five directors, elected by the shareholders, and the president and secretary, appointed by the sovereign. The capital of the bank is 20,000,000 florins. Since 1863 there has been no limit to the amount of note issue. “The ordinance of 1864 prescribed a metallic reserve of 40 per cent against bank notes and all other demand liabilities. The rest of the circulation is covered by bills and collaterals on loans.” The notes are redeemable on demand at the main office, subsidiary office, and at the 102 (on March 31, 1907) branch offices. Although the Bank of the Netherlands was originally given a monopoly of note issues, this express monopoly was taken away in 1863. However, no other bank has been granted the privilege of note issue.

The bank is obliged to act gratuitously as the fiscal agent of the government and as collecting and disbursing agent for the postal-savings banks. Out of the net earnings an amount equal to 3½ per cent of the original first of all goes to the shareholders. Ten per cent of the remainder is to be assigned to the surplus until it reaches 25 per cent of the capital. Three per cent of what is left is then allotted to the directors and commissaries, and beyond that the profits are distributed in the proportion of two-thirds to the state and one-third to the shareholders.

During the year 1906-7 the bank notes in circulation amounted to 270 million florins, the demand deposits to 5.6 million florins, and the metallic reserve to 135 million florins, or 49 per cent of demand liabilities.

The Austro-Hungarian Bank

“The Austro-Hungarian Bank was instituted in 1878 as the successor of the Chartered Austrian National Bank. This had been established in 1816, mainly for the purpose of undertaking the withdrawal from circulation of the paper currency of the Austrian Government.” Throughout its history the bank has been intimately connected with the government and with the reform of the currency.

The governor and the two vice-governors of the bank are appointed by the Emperor on nomination of the ministers of finance. The shareholders are represented by a council of twelve, whose resolutions, however, must be passed upon by the governor of the bank. The bank has a privately owned capital of 210 million crowns, and has 254 branch offices. Bank currency is issued subject to the provision “that if the circulation exceeds the metallic reserve (in which foreign bills up to 30 million florins might be included) by more than 200 million florins, the bank is to pay a tax of 5 per cent on the excess.” The bank notes have been redeemable in gold since the removal of the legal-tender quality from government notes in 1903.

The government participates in the profits of the Austro-Hungarian Bank as follows: “Out of the net annual earnings a sum is first of all to be distributed among the shareholders equal to 4 per cent of the paid-in capital; after that 10 per cent of the net earnings is to be allotted to the surplus and 2 per cent to the pension fund; of the remainder, in so far as the total dividends do not exceed 6 per cent of the paid-in capital, one-half is to be assigned to the shareholders and one-half to the joint governments; of what remains after that one-third is to be distributed in dividends to the shareholders and two-thirds are to go to the two governments.”

At the end of 1907 the loans and discounts of the bank amounted to 873.3 million crowns, the note circulation was 2,028 million crowns, the deposits were 151.7 million crowns, and the metallic reserve was 1,380.8 million crowns, or 63 per cent of the deposits and circulation.

The “giro” system, which provides for payment by means of additions to or deductions from accounts current, is very highly developed.

The Banking System of Japan

The banking system of Japan is unusually interesting for several reasons. It has been entirely developed in 40 years; “it affords a unique instance of a central bank working among a numerous company of other banks”; it offers a good illustration of special banking institutions organized for specific purposes; it offers an instance of the establishment of a banking system originally modeled on the national banking system of the United States.

In 1872 an imperial ordinance was promulgated authorizing the establishment of national banks which were to be allowed to issue notes secured by government bonds. The national banks had difficulty in keeping their notes in circulation because of the large amount of inconvertible government paper. In 1882 the minister of finance strongly urged the establishment of a central bank. In accordance with this recommendation the Bank of Japan was founded in October of that year to facilitate currency reform and to regulate the rate of interest. “Its charter and by-laws were closely modeled upon those of the National Bank of Belgium, with the exception of provisions regarding the issue of notes, as to which the example of the Reichsbank was taken.” No renewals of the 20-year charters of the national banks were granted and, consequently, the last charter expired in 1899.

At present the Bank of Japan, consisting of a head office and eight branches, has a privately owned capital of 30,000,000 yen. Its governor and vice-governor are appointed by the government. It is privileged to issue convertible bank notes. Any issue beyond 120,000,000 yen and not fully covered by gold is taxed at least 5 per cent. The minister of finance is authorized to fix the tax at 5 per cent or more.

In 1909 the Bank of Japan held government deposits amounting to 182.2 million yen, other deposits amounting to only 5.6 million yen, and had notes outstanding amounting to 352.8 million yen. Among its assets its "loans and advances," "domestic bills," and "foreign bills" amounted to only 69.9 million yen, or but 11.4 per cent of its total assets, while "deposits with foreign agencies" and "gold coin and bullion" amounted to 228 million and 221.5 million yen, respectively. This shows that nearly all the credit operations involve the issue of notes and that the domestic loans are comparatively insignificant. The connection between the Bank of Japan and the deposit banks, numbering 2,155 in 1909, is not intimate. The Bank of Japan is a government and currency institution rather than a bank for banks.

The Yokohama Specie Bank (24 branches) is "under government control, and its chief object is to act as a financial organ for foreign trade." The Hypothec Bank of Japan acts mainly as the financial medium of agriculture, and was founded on the lines of the Crédit Foncier de France. "Its principal business consists in making long-period loans at low rates of interest on the security of real estate, for the purpose of the improvement of agriculture and industry." It operates through the 46 agricultural and industrial banks which were established for the same purpose. The Industrial Bank of Japan is designed as a credit institution for industry. "Its scope is limited, in the main, to making loans on the security of national loan bonds, local loan bonds, or shares of companies, receiving deposits of money, and taking charge of goods intrusted to it for safe-keeping."

Prof. Sprague is of the opinion that, because of the great differences between the United States and Japan, "the experience of the Bank of Japan, while interesting in itself, does not yield much in the way of guidance for this country."

Banking Opinion

Sir Edmund Walker, C. V. O., LL. D., D. C. L., president of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, head office at Toronto, in speaking of the general business conditions in Canada, said:

"Doubtless the feeling most strongly present at the moment regarding business conditions in Canada is that we are enjoying a prosperity as great as we have ever known. Whatever significance the check of 1907 had at the time or should still have, even the memory of it seems to have passed away, and with larger foreign and home trade, larger bank clearings, a larger amount of building in cities, a larger amount of railway construction and larger immigration than in any previous year, it would be strange if we felt otherwise. Our Western crops were not to our liking this year; bankers know that a little more expansion may make money scarce, and the pace of real estate speculation has brought on the inevitable temporary exhaustion, but important as these things are, they have little effect on the situation as a whole. Even the large reduction in the volume of business in the United States is regarded as mainly due to political unrest and as have no direct bearing on our position. That we are experiencing very great prosperity is a matter evident to all, but if we examine in detail the circumstances accompanying this prosperity, there is much that is not satisfactory. Great Britain is a country which can afford to import much more than it exports because the world owes it annually an enormous sum for interest and other things for which it must of course take payment mainly in merchandise. The United States is a country which should export annually about $500,000,- 000 more than it imports in order to pay for interest, and for the money drawn from the country by permanent absentees, tourists, emigrants to Canada, etc., and because it cannot afford to increase its debt to foreign countries, having already about 100,000,000 people and a scarcity in many raw materials. Canada is one of the new countries which is entitled to, and which must, during its period of rapid settlement, import more than it exports. The difference is met, however, by debt obligations which must some day be paid. The question, then, as to how much we should go into debt is the same which confronts the individual in trade, but the considerations are so large and so complicated that it is hard to know when we are wise and when unwise. What is certain, however, is that when a man is in debt he should live sparingly, not extravagantly, and that if, with the money he has borrowed, he has put himself in the way of making a product with which he hopes to pay his debt, he should strain every nerve to make and sell as much of that product as he can, in order to reduce his indebtedness to the lowest point possible. Now Canada is somewhat like a man who, having a rich inheritance in land, borrows to develop it, and, confident of its future value, spends freely for his present gratification, while he does not make effort enough to create the needed present revenue from his property."

Hetty Green's Millions

Edward H. R. Green, son of Mrs. Hetty Green, says plans are being formed to conduct the various enterprises in which the family is interested from headquarters in New York City, and that a trust company with a good-sized capital is to be formed and backed by the Green interests. The company will be organized under the laws of New York state. Mr. Green said:

"The establishment of this trust company will have no effect upon our present connections with New York bankers, but it will be the medium through which we will principally handle our business outside New York City; in fact, a center in the East here we will concentrate our Western and Southern interests. The suggestion was made that we absorb one of the old trust companies, but I favored starting with a clean slate, with no taint of somebody else's past, which course has been practically decided upon."

In taking over the management of the $100,000,000 fortune of Mrs. Green, Col. Green becomes a prominent factor in the world of finance, with the rank of captain of industry. He is a jovial, shrewdminded bachelor of 44. Mrs. Hetty Green is 75 years old.

Frank T. Ransom, formerly vice-president of the Stockyards Bank of East St. Louis, has removed to Wichita, Kan., where he becomes president of the Union Stockyards National Bank of that city. Mr. Ransom began his banking career as messenger for a bank in St. Joseph, Mo., where he was born.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS More Supervision

By C. C. Burford

O. B. Gorin, president of the Milliken National of Decatur and B. O. McReynolds, president of the National Bank of Decatur, are members of the committee to meet President Taft at Bement and conduct him into Decatur Saturday, February 11th. President Taft will speak at James Milliken University and then proceed to Springfield over the Illinois Traction System to attend the Lincoln Day Banquet. He will be the guest of Representative McKinley while traveling over the interurban lines.

One Banker Has Too Much Money

Richard Snell, president of the DeWitt County National of Clinton, is one of the few men who has admitted that he has more money than he needs. He secured $700,000 from the estate of the late Colonel Snell after the will of the latter had been broken and then voluntarily relinquished half of the sum leaving himself $340,000. He disposed of $100,000 to Hannah Snell, widow of the brother of the deceased Colonel Snell and then gave $250,000 to three other heirs, Lena, Harry and Thornton Snell, grandchildren of Colonel Snell. This division was made a number of weeks ago but it was only within the past fortnight that reporters for the Decatur Review "got wind" of the incident and wrote a capital article out of it. The Snell case has made a great line of newspaper "dope" for Central Illinois papers especially those of Bloomington and Decatur.

Counterfeiters in Rock Island

Three alleged counterfeiters have been arrested by the police of Rock Island. Their plan was to enter saloons at a late hour Saturday evening and to buy drinks passing over bogus half dollars and receiving the change. One of the trio had in his possession a mold made of plaster of Paris and he admitted that he had made twenty-nine pieces of bad money. The coins were made of babbitt metal.

The bad check epidemic is still hovering over Illinois. One of the latest towns to be victimized is Decatur where a laborer forged the name of his employer. As he was in the habit of receiving money on his employer's checks the merchants and saloon-keepers readily cashed some other checks which were forged. He made a successful get-away after cashing seven forged checks.

Yeggmen Continue Operations

The Swan Creek Bank, in a village of the same name near Galesburg, recently received a visit from yeggmen. The gang entered the town and cut all the telegraph and telephone wires except one private wire which they overlooked. Breaking into the bank they applied six charges of nitro-glycerine to the safe and it finally yielded. About $2,500 worth of money and stamps were placed in a grip and the gang left the town in buggies, part of them going one direction and part another.

The next day a young man was arrested at the Burlington depot in Monmouth and was found to be carrying a satchel containing about $2,500 in currency and stamps. The suspect was placed in the Monmouth jail but remained very indifferent to his surroundings. Cashier James Stice of the looted bank went to Monmouth and identified the money. A second suspect was also arrested. As the first man had the stolen money in his grip the actual loss to the bank will be but little. The bank opened up in a day or so following the robbery and is now doing business as if nothing had happened. The Monmouth officers did good work in securing the burglars without serious loss to the bank. Bank burglar insurance was carried.

The private bank of Green & Company at Kane, near Jerseyville, was also looted recently. The postoffice at Franklin Grove, near Dixon, has also been "touched." Illinois is not so far behind Kansas after all.

Illinois Notes

Charles Macklin, who has been connected with the Peoria office of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company for several years, has been transferred to Detroit where he takes charge of the Detroit territory for the Burroughs people.

Vespasian Warner, president of the banking house of John Warner & Company of Clinton, will erect a new $10,000 residence in Clinton this summer. Mr. Warner has served as congressman from the nineteenth Illinois district and later was commissioner of pensions.

The Ridgely National of Springfield will remove to its new quarters Monday, February 13th. The new home is on the southeast corner of Fifth and Monroe streets. All of the Springfield banks will close on that day and the Ridgely people will take advantage of the holiday to move.

A number of Springfield bankers will take part in the annual Lincoln Day banquet to be given Saturday evening, February 11th. The Farmers National and the Ridgely National will have tables for their officers and directors.

Now a State Bank

Frankfort, Ky., February 8.—Permission was granted to-day to the Grayson County National Bank to denationalize and incorporate as a state bank, so that this financial institution will be known in the future as the Grayson County State Bank.

Under the provisions of a bill reported favorably by the Kansas senate committee on banks and banking, the Kansas bank commissioner's duties are so enlarged that they will practically include supervision of investment companies offering stocks, bonds or other securities for sale within the state. The bill provides that every corporation, copartnership, company, association or individual, other than insurance companies, state and national banks and building and loan associations, which shall offer to sell any stocks, bonds or other securities other than government, state or municipal bonds and notes secured by mortgage on real estate, shall be subject to the supervision of the state bank commissioner. Before selling any bonds or securities not excepted in the bill, the corporation or individual must file with the Kansas bank commissioner a statement showing in full detail the plan on which it proposes to transact business, a copy of all contracts, bonds or other securities it intends to offer for sale, together with an itemized account of its actual financial conditions, the amount of its property and liabilities, copy of its articles of incorporation, constitution and by-laws and such other information touching it as the commissioner may require. This bill subjects such companies to the same kind of control as far as examination and reporting to the bank commissioner, that is now provided for state banks. An assistant bank commissioner is also provided for, who shall have charge of this class of business.

Ceres, Cal., Gets State Bank

The town of Ceres, Cal., is to have a state bank with capital of $25,000. The bank will go into operation about April 1st. It is promoted by L. M. McDonald, president of the Bank of Livermore, and among other subscribers are: I. W. Hellman, Jr. of San Francisco, C. R. Tillson of Modesto, C. N. Whitmore, the Warner Bros. and others of Ceres.

Money, Banking and Finance from Chicago Viewpoint

Bankers have been quick to detect signs of improving business. A great deal of capital is being absorbed in one way and another these days and bank rates have a tendency toward firmness.

The railway corporations are inquiring for funds on the present easy-money basis and will require a vast amount in the aggregate. For the present the bulk of the idle money in the hands of local capitalists is going into bonds.

As a result of it all the money market is more active than it was for a couple of months. While quotations are unchanged there is little money going over the counters at less than 5 per cent and much of it brings 5½.

The months of January and February, 1911, will be memorable in financial history owing to the extensive purchasing of investment securities. Speculative stocks and commodities have had a less prosperous season. After several months of extreme dullness in the summer and fall the bond market became active. The winter season has witnessed the best trade known for five years in this line of securities.

On a Five Per Cent Level

Bonds are on a five per cent level in the Chicago market. People are buying critically and still are not disposed to invest extensively in any securities which return less than five per cent. There has been some exceedingly attractive propositions around this figure, one example being Chicago railway bonds. These bonds bear five per cent and were sold to the public at 98. Chicago houses disposed of $15,000,000 of them in a few weeks, the Harris Company and Northern Trust handling the major part.

It is becoming clearer every day that the railroads will absorb a lot of idle capital this spring. Judge Lovett, speaking for the Harriman system outlines a most ambitious program for the double tracking of the Union Pacific from Omaha clear to the coast and for the construction of extensions and tributary lines which, extending over a period of six years, will call for expenditures of perhaps as much as $150,000,000.

Hill must Keep the Pace

The Hill lines are rivals of the Harriman roads and Mr. Hill may be depended on to keep the pace set by his opponent. He can have capital at his own price and probably will be allowed to raise his freight rates besides. This ought to restore his optimism and to prove that it is having such an effect the announcement comes of a proposed consolidation and extension of Hill tributaries in Oregon and Washington under the so-called "North Bank" road, which is the skirmish line thrown out to meet the Harriman invasion, and which has already cost the Northern Pacific and Great Northern little, if anything, under $80,000,000. It is hardly surprising that these announcements have thrown Wall Street into a fever of optimism, which will probably run its course as did the extreme pessimism two months ago. Northern Pacific offers itself as a thermometer by which to gauge the extent of the fever at the moment; its high quotation last week was 128¾, and again, as in its fall, the rest of the market moved with it.

Registration of Paper

As Chicago bankers have had a certain leadership in developing ideas for the registration of commercial paper there is more than ordinary interest in the proposal of the International Paper Company to have its own bankable documents registered. This corporation while one of the soundest in the world is obliged in the nature of things to borrow a great deal of money owing to the fact that its enormous business is carried on through a large number of subsidiary companies, all of which have had the power to conduct their own financial affairs.

The International purposes in future to do such financing as may be necessary for itself and its subsidiary companies through the issue of its own paper rather than through the paper of its subsidiary companies. The company has effected an arrangement for the registration of its obligations in respect to both classes of such paper, and for the purpose of such registration it has appointed the Bankers Trust Company registrar.

The International Paper Company has given notice that all paper issued on and after Feb. 1, 1911, bearing its signature, either as maker, indorser, or acceptor will not be complete and binding on the company unless such obligation has been registered by the Bankers Trust Company.

Currency Association Strength

The capital and surplus of the currency associations thus far formed amount to approximately $480,000,000 and assuming that the banks in these associations have in circulation notes secured by United States bonds to an amount equaling only the required 40 per cent of capital, there would remain as a measure of additional circulation on other securities the difference between the combined capital and surplus and the United States bond-secured circulation, or approximately $380,000,000.

The combined capital and surplus of all national banks June 30th last was $1,634,400,000 and the circulation secured by United States bonds $685,517,000, or nearly 70 per cent of the capital stock. Nearly 80 per cent of the national banks have United States bond-secured circulation equal to or in excess of 40 per cent of their capital, and up to this date no bank circulation has been issued except upon the security of United States bonds. The department and the currency associations are prepared to meet the demand for additional circulation should the occasion arise.

The Hanchett Bond Company

Although the Hanchett Bond Company as a corporation is new to Middle West investors, the principals concerned are well known. Lucius A. Trowbridge is president of the company and has been selling bonds in this field for more than eighteen years. William F. Hanchett is the vice-president and Harold G. Hanchett, secretary. The offices are at 171 La Salle Street, Chicago. This company has issued a booklet giving a few reasons why farm drainage bonds are so highly regarded by investors. It is pointed out that drainage bonds are of right classed along with municipal bonds and that they are based upon taxes levied upon real estate and are collectible by the same process as other taxes.

The Hanchett Company is offering three issues of Illinois drainage bonds, one located in Bureau and Whiteside counties; one located in Saline county, and one in Lawrence and Crawford counties. These are not large issues, but they are probably among the best offered to buyers in this city and have been priced to yield about five per cent per annum. These bonds are subject to registration by the state auditor, which is a very important feature. The state, in the large sense, becomes sponsor for the bonds. The manner of levying and collecting the taxes is such that drainage taxes are levied upon each piece of property in the district. The state law provides that "all laws of this state relating to state revenue shall apply thereto." Under this act the drainage taxes are levied by the state auditor and collected with the state taxes. The state treasurer remits for maturing bonds and coupons.

Mr. Trowbridge and his associates have negotiated the sale of millions of dollars in similar securities and there never has been any loss of principal or interest; no delay except in a single instance and that for a short time only. This firm points out that low lands are the best of lands and that they become the most fertile and productive when properly redeemed by drainage. These low lands have been subject to deposits of alluvial soils and to the accumulation of leaf mold for centuries. Illinois was one of the very first of the states to provide an efficient and beneficial farm drainage act. Under its operation thousands of acres of swamps, sloughs, and bottoms have been put under cultivation. This law has added millions upon millions to the wealth of the state and has been taken as a standard by neighboring states. The laws of Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Wisconsin, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Mississippi are based almost solely upon the principles of the Illinois law. The Hanchett Bond Company are prepared to cite over fifty districts in which they have been interested in financing, all of which have been successful. No higher recommendation could be furnished than this almost twenty years of successful operation.

"The Trail of a Tenderfoot"

The Outing Publishing Company of New York is issuing an excellent new book in "The Trail of a Tenderfoot" by Stephen Chalmers. It is made up of six short stories, all of them highly interesting and full of humorous adventure. As the tenderfoot always has provoked a great deal of mirth, and nowhere so much as among those who have themselves lived through that stage and are therefore all the more ready to enjoy the former's discomfiture, the author has seen and taken the opening for many a splendid yarn in dialect by some native meant to "string" the newcomer whose credulousness gives spice to the telling. However, our tenderfeet who are city men on their vacations and ready for an excitingly good time, are not cowards and quite frequently surprise the natives with their unlooked for precocity in sports so new to them, and in the success of new appliances which the natives regard with withering scorn. The diversions sought are various, some going hunting for deer, others fishing, while we have one group of four men living as savages and roughing it down in Rio Bueno, West Indies. They have some startling adventures and the reader is carried along, in some instances the amused spectator of situations which are entirely serious to the participants. Each story is told in true narrative style, with plenty of dash and snap, while the creatures, both big and little, figure as helpless victims to the superior human beings. The field of nature sports is so well covered, the vacationists return to work feeling so well repaid for their "bully trip" (as one expresses it), and the author takes such evident delight in telling each story, that the book is well worth the reading. It contains some excellent illustrations by H. T. Dunn, C. F. Peters, and J. M. Gleeson. Price, $1.25 net.

It is provided by a Kansas senate bill that state banks may have savings bank departments, the savings deposits to be invested entirely in farm mortgages and to be used only for paying savings depositors.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Milwaukee bank clearings for the past week show a healthy increase in the volume of business transacted and are running something in excess of the clearings of the same period, one year ago. Cash at the various banks in this city is reported easy, with the demand for loans considerably under what it was only a few weeks ago.

Collections are generally reported as fair and commercial paper is being taken up fairly well at maturity. The larger manufacturing interests in and around Milwaukee claim that while business is hardly up to the mark established a year ago, yet the indications point to a fairly good spring. The iron and steel industries show a considerably better tone during the past two or three weeks than has existed for several months and most of the large plants are running full time.

Bond salesmen who have been out through the state during the past week or ten days, report good inquiries for the better grade of bonds.

Local sales are also well up to the mark and Milwaukee bond houses appear to have little difficulty in disposing of their purchases, particularly in the higher grade securities.

January Clearings Establish Record

Bank clearings in Milwaukee in January amounted to $60,755,628.42. This is a new record for the first month of the year, and is regarded as an excellent showing. Clearings for January in 1910 were only $53,724,821.15, making an increase of $7,030,807.27 for the first month of 1911.

Clearings for January were within $344,084.11 of the record established in December, 1910 which was the highest total for any month during that year. Balances at the clearing house for January are reported at $7,658,258.26. This is a gain of $1,521,220.00 over the balances of January, 1910, and is larger than the balances of any month in 1910.

The huge increase in bank clearings and balances is regarded by bankers as nothing extraordinary considering the rapid and steady growth of Milwaukee and the entire state. During January there were some unusually large real estate deals and it is possible that this may have had some bearing on the amount of clearings for the month. Another possible explanation is the fact that the taxes came in during January in larger amounts than usual.

Wisconsin Bank Guaranty Law

Wisconsin bankers have at last awoke to the fact that if they would prevent the adoption of a bank guaranty law, that strenuous measures are necessary and prominent bankers from all parts of the state, assembled at Madison Tuesday and Wednesday of this week to attend the joint hearing upon the bill introduced by Senator Owen providing for the guaranty of bank deposits. Senator Owen realizes that he has a hard fight before him in the passage of the bill which he introduced in the senate on February 3d. He insists however, that he will win out in the end.

The bill provides that every bank doing business in the state on the second Monday of January, 1912, shall credit on its books to the depositors' insurance fund an amount equivalent to one per cent of its average daily deposit as shown by its last preceding report made to the state commissioner of banking, and that every year thereafter it shall credit to this fund one-tenth of one per cent of such deposit until the fund shall contain a sum equal to two per cent of the total deposit.

It is expected that the fund will amount to $1,262,000.00 after the one per cent of these deposits is credited to it, and that it will take about ten years before the fund reaches the two per cent limit fixed for the bill. The fund is to be used to pay the claims of depositors against insolvent banks, and is to be in the control of the state commissioner of banking. It also provides that depositors receiving more than three per cent interest on their deposits shall not participate in the benefit of the fund.

The bill further provides that the state commissioner of banking shall on the first day of July, next, make a thorough and exhaustive investigation of every bank in the state in order to determine whether it is solvent and entitled to participate in the benefit of the bill; empowers the state banking commissioner to withhold charters from banks which in his opinion are not fit to go into this proposed law, and provides that the deposits in an insolvent bank which do not bear interest to the extent of three per cent per annum shall, after the closing of such bank and up to the time the claims are paid, bear interest at the rate of five per cent until the full amount of the claim is liquidated. It describes in detail how the bank commissioner shall take charge of the insolvent banks, pay off the depositors and wind up the affairs of the institution.

Banker Discusses Guaranty Act

In the current number of the Wisconsin Banker James K. Ilsley, President of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank, and chairman of the special committee on banking appointed by the last legislature says in part, regarding the guaranty law:

"The best banks to-day in Oklahoma, are the national banks and the people give evidence of such belief, by patronizing them more largely than they do the state banks. Recent information from Oklahoma gives total deposits in two hundred and twenty national banks $58,000,000.00; total deposits in six hundred eighty state banks $47,000,000.00. This makes an average of $263,636.00 deposits in each national bank of the state and only $69,117.00 in each state bank. This is rather strange, if the guaranty law is regarded as such a safeguard to depositors. The figures indicate that there are many more state banks than are needed legitimately to take care of the business interests of the state, and that competition and strife for patronage will be sure to encourage reckless and unsafe methods.

"In the face of such facts it is hardly conceivable that the present legislature will ignore the recommendations made by the special committee, or that they will inflict upon Wisconsin such a doubtful experiment as is now being tried out in Oklahoma.

"Let the legislature by all means, give greater power to the state banking department and provide for more frequent and more thorough examinations, and by these means prevent, if possible, such failures as the First National Bank of Mineral Point. But in the attempt to provide for such sporadic and infrequent breakdowns, do not let them provide a remedy that would sooner or later weaken the entire banking system and inevitably lead to results that would be many times more disastrous than the failure of any single institution."

More Bills Affecting Banks

Among the bills introduced in the senate

during the last week, affecting banks in one providing for the segregation of the savings deposits of state banks from the commercial deposits, with the savings deposits invested solely for savings depositors. In time of financial trouble, such deposits would have a first lien on these assets.

Another bank bill provides that mutual savings banks cannot loan on personal security. Another bill requires directors of banks to meet once a month and go over the assets, thus obviating the evils of a one-man bank.

Still another bill is aimed at chain banking to prevent the all too prevalent custom of buying one bank and depositing its stock as security for buying a second bank and so on ad infinitum; while still another bill provides that all real estate loans shall be made in Wisconsin or adjoining states.

Bankers Concerned in This Bill

The proposed income tax bill is creating not a little interest among bankers in this state and while it may not be the intention of the father of this bill to mislead the public in making it believe that it is acting as a substitute for the present method of assessing personal property, yet this is the general understanding.

Under the proposed bill, all persons, partnerships, corporations and associations having an income in excess of $500.00 per year, are covered. Banks alone are excepted from this bill. Of the taxes collected under this bill, 85 per cent is to be returned to the town, city or village in which the tax was assessed; 12½ per cent goes to the county and 2½ per cent to the state. The bill provides for the supervision of the state tax commission and the appointment by them of county assessors who will replace the present county supervisor of assessments.

For a Municipal Savings Bank

A municipal savings bank for the city of Milwaukee is desired by the Social Democrats and the initial steps toward such a bank have been taken by the introduction of a bill by Assemblyman Berner. The bill provides for a savings department in the office of the city treasurer and that deposits shall be received in this savings bank of not less than $5.00 nor more than $1,000.00. City bonds are to be deposited with the state to protect such deposits and interest is to be allowed on them at the rate of 3 per cent per annum. Deposits thus made are to be under the supervision of the commissioner of banking and the department thus created will make reports to the state banking department and will be subject to his examination the same as any savings bank.

Banker Joins Mercantile Firm

Fred A. Kirchhoff, assistant cashier of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank, severed his connection with the bank, February 4th. He will enter the firm of Hugo E. Bauch Company, Third and North Avenue, to take part in the management. Mr. Kirchhoff's successor at the bank has not yet been selected.

Mr. Kirchhoff entered the employ of the bank on May 1, 1902, as a clerk. In July, 1909, he was elected assistant cashier. "We are very sorry to lose the services of Mr. Kirchhoff," said one of the officers of the bank, "but we feel that he is bettering himself by accepting his new position. We are always glad to have a man leave us with the same spirit that marked the leaving of Mr. Kirchhoff, as it always assures us an additional friend on the outside."

Officers and employees of the bank presented the retiring assistant cashier with a silver tea and coffee service. Mr. Kirchhoff's engagement to Miss Irma Bauch was announced last week.

Change in Convention Date

In last week's issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER I gave the date of the Seventeenth Annual Convention of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, which will be held in Milwaukee, as July 19th and 20th. This date has since been advanced to July 12th and 13th. The committee on arrangements will endeavor to make the meeting a memorable one and the many out-door attractions and social features will appeal equally as strong to visitors as will the convention features proper, which will embrace one of the best programs ever arranged by the State Bankers Association.

Nassau Becomes a National

The change in the scope of the Nassau Bank of New York by conversion into a national institution will go into effect this month. The application has been approved at Washington. The bank was established in 1852, and is one of the oldest members of the clearing house. Edward Earl is president.

Pittsburgh

Robert J. Stoney, Jr., vice-president of the Anchor National, and prominent in banking and brokerage circles, died at his home in Pittsburgh, on January 29th, aged 61.

In the local market Crucible Steel preferred was perhaps the strongest of the stocks last week, advancing to 85½, the highest since the announcement of the script dividend last year. At this high mark the price was seven points above the lower mark in the early part of the year and 14 points above the low mark of last year made in July. Independent Brewing preferred made a new high mark at 23 and both issues of the Monongahela River Coal Company sold at the best marks of the year.

James A. Huston, general manager of sales of the American Bridge Company and long considered the most expert man in the bridge and structural division of the Steel Corporation, has resigned. R. W. Bailey of Philadelphia, now chief sales agent in the Philadelphia district, succeeds him.

In point of orders entered on mill books, the iron and steel market in this territory made a better showing in January than in any single month during the second half of 1910, reports of one or two steel companies showing the total tonnage entered during the initial month of the year to have been more than double that of either November or December.

Sidney S. Liggett, who for years has been the Pittsburgh representative of the New York banking and brokerage firm of Redmond & Company, has assumed charge of the bond department of the Union Trust Company. Among the successful flotations of the latter last month were the $7,500,000 bonds of the Pittsburgh Crucible Steel Company and the $5,000,000 bonds purchased from the Winston-Salem Southbound Railway Company of North Carolina.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Colonial Trust Company, Pittsburgh, is called for March 16th to vote on the question of decreasing the capital stock from $4,000,000 to $2,600,000.

State Banking Commissioner William H. Smith's recommendation that building and loan associations be required to pay the costs of examinations the same as banks and trust companies found expression in a bill presented to the legislature.

Chairman Gary Makes Denial

Chairman Gary of the United States Steel Corporation denied the story from Pittsburgh quoting a former high official of the United States Steel Corporation as saying that the management plans to retire within a year the outstanding $360,000,000 of the 7 per cent preferred stock. According to the statement the preferred was to be retired around 1913.

Growing West Virginia Bank

Empire National Bank of Clarksburg, W. Va., is one of the successful and growing institutions of that state. This bank was organized in 1903 with a capital of $250,000 and has paid six per cent dividends from the first. Its surplus and profits, which have accrued in seven years amount to $110,000. Deposits now foot up $1,300,000 and total resources $2,000,000. The officers and directors are men of forceful character and large means, who take great pride in the progress of their bank which is conducted on a broad-minded, liberal policy.

The active men in the affairs of the Empire National Bank are V. L. Highland, president; S. S. Faris, P. C. Williams, vice-presidents; E. B. Deison, cashier and James N. Hess, assistant cashier. These gentlemen by courtesy, promptness and thoroughness have given their bank a foremost place in the business of Clarksburg and high standing throughout the state of West Virginia.

Says West is Flourishing

Howard H. Hitchcock, vice-president of First National, returned Monday from a short vacation trip through California. "Everything looks prosperous in the regions I saw in California," said Mr. Hitchcock. "They are expecting the largest orange crop this year the state ever raised. Los Angeles is particularly active. It has developed wonderfully in the last few years."

Bank Change at Spokane

Thomas H. Brewer, for some time a vice-president with the Exchange National, Spokane, has resigned his position. This is the bank of which the energetic Edwin J. Coman is president and C. E. McBroom cashier.

According to reports in Des Moines, the State Saving at Jamaica is to be taken over by the Citizens of the same place.

Philadelphia

Wm. A. Law, vice-president of First National and president of the Pennsylvania State Bankers Association, will address the members of Group Two, Pennsylvania bankers, at their annual meeting to be held in this city February 13th. B. M. Marlin, of Du Bois, Pa., will speak on "The First and Only Postal Savings Bank in Our State."

The annual statement of the Philadelphia Saving Fund Society, contains a table of deposits on the first day of January for the last 30 years. During this period, which covers three severe panics, those of 1883, 1893 and 1907, with their subsequent periods of lean business, the total balance due depositors at the opening of the year has never failed to show an increase. On only one occasion, January 1, 1909, was a decrease in the number of depositors shown over the previous year. The number of depositors on that date showed a falling off of 4,516, but total deposits increased more than $1,000,000, compared with January 1, 1908. The Saving Fund Society for the first time in its history has passed the $100,000,000 mark in its deposits.

Sales of stocks on the Philadelphia Stock Exchange for the month of January totaled 807,408 shares, as compared with 998,221 shares in January, 1910, and 724,622 shares in January, 1909. Bond sales here last month amounted to $2,189,524, as against $1,595,197 in January, 1910, and $1,405,569 in January, 1909. Bond transactions made up the largest total for any January in some years.

Collections from holiday trade are satisfactory. The leather market shows a further decline, purchasing being for immediate needs only. Hides and skins, including goat skins, show a decline. The shoe trade is fairly active with demand improved, prices unchanged and collections fair. Staple groceries are in moderate demand. Tobacco shipments for January have exceeded expectations.

At its last meeting Philadelphia Chapter of the A. I. B. heard two able addresses: Harry M. Albertson, lawyer, talked of the method of accounting as applied to the Adjudication of Estates in the Orphans' Court. The discourse was interesting and instructive, especially to trust company men. Talcott Williams, associate editor of the Philadelphia Press, was the second speaker. His theme was "The Rising Tide of Business Integrity."

Bankers Get Prison Sentence

Philadelphia, Pa., February 8.—Pleading guilty to charges of wrecking the American Trust Company of this city, Dr. J. Kanier Crawford and Joseph S. Crawford, brothers, and vice-president and secretary-treasurer respectively of the institution, were each sentenced to three years in the county prison and fined $500 in quarter sessions court.

The term of imprisonment is dated from May 25th last, when the Crawfords were committed to jail in default of $10,000 bonds.

The American Trust Company was closed by State Bank Examiner Tabor in November, 1909, when an examination of the books gave evidence of the concern's unhealthy condition. A further examination of the trust company's books showed alleged gross manipulations and fictitious and worthless loans amounting to $338,000.

J. P. Fitch

J. P. Fitch, assistant cashier of the Old National, Oshkosh, Wisconsin, visited Chicago Saturday and took a look at the automobile show. Mr. Fitch takes a lively interest in the work of the Wisconsin Bankers Association and the Wisconsin group meetings.

Interest on Open Accounts

By the terms of a bill introduced in the Illinois legislature by Representative Gilbert creditors shall be allowed to receive at the rate of 5 per cent per annum for all moneys after they become due on any bond, bill, promissory note or other instrument in writing; on money lent or advanced for the use of another; on money due on the settlement of account from the day of liquidating accounts between the parties and ascertaining the balance; on money due on open account after payment thereof has been demanded; on money received to the use of another and retained without the owner's knowledge; and on money withheld by an unreasonable and vexatious delay of payment.

Savings Bank Increases Capital

The Chattanooga Savings Bank has amended its charter and will increase the present stock from $100,000 to $300,000 by a 100 per cent stock dividend and the sale of the balance of new stock.

McKinley Grows

The Illinois Traction System, or the McKinley syndicate as it is otherwise called, has entered the Kansas City field. The Strang electric railway connecting Kansas City with Olathe, Kansas, has been purchased by the McKinley people and the Strang Company will extend the line on to Lawrence and Topeka for the purchasers. As the Illinois Traction System now owns the street railway lines in Topeka and has negotiated for the purchase of the lines in Lawrence it is evident that a good start has been made in the Kansas City territory.

A. F. Hunt, vice-president of the Strang Company says of the sale of the line to the McKinley people:

"We will see some remarkable developments in the interurban situation this spring. Kansas City is the logical center of a great interurban system and the field is absolutely undeveloped. McKinley's Illinois lines have showed him the possibilities and he is eager to enter the field."

For two years the Illinois Traction System, headed by Representative McKinley, has been making preparations to enter the Missouri valley and to join all of the larger cities of Kansas and Missouri. And Mr. Hunt continues, "All that is needed is a starter to make Kansas City the center of a system of trolley lines like that which connects Indianapolis with the towns of Indiana." The syndicate has already purchased an interest in the electric light plant at Atchison and there are plans to build a bridge across the Missouri river at that point. The completion of the McKinley bridge at St. Louis shows what can be done by the Illinois Traction Company. Mr. McKinley has already spent thousands of dollars in perfecting the plans for the western extension of his interurban system. A line from St. Louis to Kansas City and one from Atchison to St. Joseph are among the present plans.

Damage Suit against the Pinkertons

Montreal, Can., February 6.—Both the Standard and the Montreal Herald recently have contained full reports of suits entered against the Pinkertons, William A. and Alan, and against several of their managers by David Russell of this city. One suit is to recover $2,000 in fees paid to the agency, the claim being that the reports made to Mr. Russell were untrue and intended to deceive. The second suit is for $200,000 damages for circulating false stories about the plaintiff to his great injury. Mr. Russell employed the W. J. Burns National Detective Agency to collect for him the evidence used in his suit against the Pinkertons.

Against Slander

The Missouri house of representatives last week passed the bill of Representative Gossett, of Kansas City, making it a misdemeanor to slander a solvent bank. The bill specifies that this misdemeanor shall consist in "making, uttering, circulating or transmitting to another or others any statement, untrue in fact, derogatory to the financial condition of banks and other financial institutions with intent to injure," the institutions.

On the day the Gossett bill passed the house a bill was introduced providing that the publication of false or exaggerated reports of the condition of any financial institution will be a felony. This bill aims at fake mining, land and "get-rich-quick" schemes engaged in the effort to entice the elusive dollar from the reluctant Missourian's pocket. There is no way of reaching such concerns at present except through charges of using the mails to defraud.

Separation of Banking Functions

One of the foremost of the able trust company men of the west is Oliver C. Fuller, head of the Wisconsin Trust Company of Milwaukee. Mr. Fuller has served in various official capacities the trust company section of the A. B. A. and now is its president. The question of separation of trust company from commercial banking business is with Mr. Fuller a serious question. It is being agitated in some of the states at the present time and has had official attention in meetings of the section. Replying to an inquiry from an Eastern paper Mr. Fuller goes clearly on record in the following explicit paragraph:

Specialization and segregation are the order of the day in all lines of business, and there is a tendency notable, particularly in the Middle West, to separate the trust company business more than heretofore from the business of commercial banking. In Chicago, for instance, almost every large national bank has affiliated with it, if not actually owned and controlled, a trust company to which is turned over or referred all business offered to or controlled by the bank that comes within the scope of trust company business. This includes not only the mortgaging and trusteeing of property, receiverships, escrows and the like, but also savings and time deposits. On the other hand, the trust companies so controlled or connected are in many instances declining to receive commercial deposits and to handle commercial paper, and are directing that character of business to the banks. This, I believe, is a distinct tendency of the times, and I furthermore am of the firm opinion that it will become more and more the custom until the time shall arrive when the public will understand as clearly what we mean when we speak of a trust company as they now know what we mean when we speak of a bank.

Banks in Chicago for years transacted a large amount of business for their patrons and for the public for which no charge could be made. They also refused much lucrative employment because they were neither equipped nor qualified by law to accept. Trust companies with strong banking support have been money makers from the start. A few years ago the nationals in Chicago nearly all took out charters, partly to protect the good will of their own charter title. Many of them like the Fort Dearborn and the National Bank of The Republic have been waiting upon opportunity or a larger banking room.

Trust company bankers will oppose any new national currency legislation giving their peculiar powers to nationals. The onlooker would regard this as unfair. On the other hand it may be expected that the states will work toward a law compelling the trust companies, as was done in New York to do banking if at all under regular banking restrictions applied to state banks.

Mr. Fuller hopes for uniformity of laws in the states governing trust companies and everyone, except the lawyers, will agree with him. The trust company section has been doing hard work toward this end. Trust company business and trust company banking growth are among the marvels of the business and financial world. Mr. Fuller expects them to continue to grow in usefulness as well as in size.

Farnsworth States the Case

Colonel Frederick E. Farnsworth, secretary of the American Bankers Association, has performed an important national service in connection with the Aldrich currency plan. He has described in a few comprehensive sentences the defects of the obsolete monetary system by which the nation's business is hampered and makes it clear that the Aldrich proposal would be an advantage to the country.

Lack of currency in crop-moving periods, restrictions and stringency in seasons when an elastic currency should be moving most freely and the recurrence of panics, either through fear or improper manipulation of the money market, prove the inadequacy of our financial system. All men agree that these are the principal monetary defects but when it comes to consideration of the remedy it will be hard to reach an agreement.

The emergency law is only a temporary expedient. While it has the possibility of great usefulness it may be found lacking in the principles of unity when put to the test. There is no doubt about the scope and the national character of the proposed reserve association, which embraces the best features of all foreign money systems while excluding those which seem to be objectionable.

Colonel Farnsworth does not speak as a representative of the National Bankers Association, but rather as an individual whose close connection with banking interests fits him to discuss the country's financial needs. His presentation of the case will go far to convince public men that the Aldrich plan is worthy a trial.

Norton may Go to New York

It is rumored that Charles D. Norton, now secretary to President Taft, but who has sent in his resignation, will go to New York as an official of one of the large banks. Both the First National and National Bank of Commerce are mentioned.

Clash Over Reciprocity

A reciprocity treaty between this country and Canada, to which both governments are committed, has started a many-sided row. The National Grange, an organization representing a million farmers, is making a vigorous protest against the reciprocity measure now before congress.

The legislative committee of the grange in calling on all farmers to exert their influence with members of congress for the defeat of the bill sets forth these objections:

"While putting farm products on the free list the reciprocity bill makes no material reduction in the high tariff rates on all the manufactured articles the farmer buys, and therefore gives no relief from the heavy burden of taxation imposed by these duties.

"The enactment of the Canadian reciprocity bill would discriminate against farmers by abolishing the comparatively slight protection now given them while leaving the high protective duties on manufactures practically untouched.

"The Canadian farmers, by reason of their lower general tariff and their preferential trade arrangements, can buy manufactured goods at lower prices than those prevailing in this country. The prices of farm lands in Canada are much lower than in the United States. These conditions give the Canadian farmers an advantage over us and the free admission of their products would submit us to unfair competition."

A strong element in Canada believes that the reciprocity plan presented means the financial and political ruin of that country, with ultimate annexation to the United States. The Unionist party in England is similarly exercised. The influential newspapers are calling on the Imperialists of Canada to defeat the measure.

The chaotic state of public opinion is seen in connection with the sale of reapers and mowers, which many Canadian farmers wish to have on the free list, while manufacturers there desire a tariff. Agricultural implements are reduced by Canada to the United States rates, and this is construed as meaning that greatly increased numbers of farm implements manufactured on this side will be exported to Canada.

Barbed wire fencing, which now goes into Canada free of duty, may henceforth come into the United States free of duty.

Printing paper is to become free on the removal of all restrictions on exports of pulp wood.

Both countries are to greatly reduce, and to the same level, the rates of duty on fresh and canned meats, bacon and hams, lard, canned vegetables, flour, cereal preparations and other foodstuffs partly manufactured, looking toward a wider interchange of these commodities.

Liberal Bankers

Bankers were heavy contributors to the fine arts building fund which was raised in Minneapolis in ninety minutes, at a dinner where three Chicago art men, including C. L. Hutchinson, talked. W. H. Dunwoody, president of Northwestern National, started the fund with $100,000, and other bankers have followed suit, adding their quota daily. John De Laittre of Farmers & Mechanics Savings, added $10,000 to the Dunwoody gift, Judge Koon of the Northwestern, $10,000, and so on down the line. "It was the best thing I ever attended," said Joseph Chapman, Jr., "I certainly have never heard of anything like it." The first amount raised was $350,000.

Works Unique Swindle

Charles H. Everett, alias Roy Hespe, J. O. Ross, G. M. Reynolds and a few more false names, was caught in Hot Springs, Ark., during the past week. He is accused of swindling a bank in Seattle out of $1,821, and various banks in the West out of about $20,000. The Seattle case is typical of his scheme. This he worked as follows.

Everett appeared in Seattle late last summer and retained a Seattle lawyer to collect an overdue note for $2,300 drawn by a man in Alaska. Everett told the lawyer to demand payment, and if refused, to bring suit.

Everett, it is charged, went to Alaska on the same boat with the letter, got the letter from the postoffice, and wrote to the lawyer, inclosing a check for the amount demanded. Everett returned to Seattle, the lawyer notified him of the collection and identified Everett at the bank, and the bank paid the money. That was the last seen of Everett.

Bank Transfer

The Oklahoma City National Bank of Oklahoma City, one of the oldest financial institutions in the state, has changed hands. The new men represented in its management are H. W. Williams, of Greenville, Tex., Don Lacy and M. M. Bonner of Ardmore, Okla. Mr. Williams will be president of the reorganized bank; Mr. Lacy cashier and Mr. Bonner assistant cashier. The capital stock will be increased from $100,000 to $500,000 which will make it the biggest financial institution in the state.

Maintain Bond Commission

A majority of the members of Philadelphia Stock Exchange have voted against reducing bond commission from $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{8}$ per cent.

New Guaranty Bill

Madison, Wis., February 8.—Despite the known opposition of many of the leading bankers of the state, there evidently is a determination to pass a guaranty of deposits bill by the present legislature. A bill with many unusual features which will be recognized at once by bankers, has been introduced by Senator Owen of Maiden Rock. The bill has been agreed upon, so it is claimed, by the majority members of the legislature. It provides that on the second Monday of next January all the state banks shall set aside an amount equal to 1 per cent of their average daily deposits for a fund to be known as "depositors' insurance fund." Every year thereafter they will be required to add to this fund one-tenth of 1 per cent of the average deposits, until the total fund equals 2 per cent of the average total deposits.

Claims of depositors against insolvent banks who have not received more than 3 per cent interest on deposits are to be paid out of this insurance fund, which is to be under the control of the state commissioner of banking. No bank which fails to pass the examination by the state commissioner on banking next July will be entitled to come under this law, and no new bank will receive a charter which cannot qualify as to the insurance fund. The bank commissioner is authorized not to issue a charter to any new bank if he believes there is not sufficient business tributary to the proposed location of the bank to make it a paying institution.

It is expected that the guaranty fund will amount to $1,262,000 after the first 1 per cent deposits have been set aside for it, and to $2,500,000 when the full 2 per cent is paid.

The legislature will hold joint hearings on the bill next week. It is expected that many bankers of Wisconsin will oppose it.

School Savings

After a thorough test extending over a number of years, the Chicago Penny Savings Society has gone out of business. Such stamps as are held by school children or others will be redeemed on presentation to Miss Harriet W. Waters, manager of the woman's department of Central Trust Company. There is an ample fund on hand for paying off claims and it is the hope of the society to bring all accounts to an end at an early date.

This was an experiment in stimulating the saving habit among children, particularly in the public schools, and in the main principle was like the plan which has since been adopted at Minneapolis. The school board sanctioned the efforts of the society and permitted teachers to sell the stamps to pupils. Beyond this it assumed no responsibility in the matter. The business was purely philanthropic and educational. It cost the Penny Savings Society about $200 a month to operate, the expense being for clerical work, stamp cards, etc. This money was contributed by citizens who believed in the theory. The Central Trust Company alone contributed $125 a month for a couple of years to advance the experiment. The funds belonging to the society, or rather to the children, were kept for a time with Central Trust and later with Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company. Although the society has had on hand as much as $10,000, there was little advantage to the banks in this, as the account had to be kept subject to check owing to its fluctuating tendency. Comparatively few individual accounts came to the banks as a result of this system in the schools and the fact that the experiment is abandoned proves that it was not satisfactory in its results.

In many cases children lost their stamp cards after investing anywhere from ten cents to a dollar and this was a cause of much annoyance and dissatisfaction. When pupils brought their savings up to a dollar or more, they were encouraged to open an individual account at the banks. Quite a number did this and became systematic, intelligent savers.

During the operations of this society a number of city banks adopted the plan of furnishing a neat and secure metal safe to any person who would start an account with a deposit of one dollar or more. This method of encouraging the saving habit has been successful from the first. Miss Waters and the other members of the Penny Society believe that the banks have found the best system and one that renders the school plan practically useless.

Such is not the general view taken of the subject in other cities, however. A good deal of enthusiasm is manifest in Minneapolis and in a number of Wisconsin towns. George R. Ray has started school savings banks in two Wisconsin towns. With respect to one inaugurated at Elroy, he says:

"Out of 350 grade children in the Elroy schools 61 opened accounts the first day, January 5, 1911. In four days the number of depositors doubled and the deposits totaled nearly $45. The most money has come from the lower grades, a fifth of it being deposited by the third grade. Teachers can do a great deal to encourage the children to deposit. It is certainly a part of education to instill ideas and habits of thrift in the minds of the pupils.

"The system as outlined is especially adapted to smaller school systems. With certain modifications, however, it could be used in larger places. Where there are several buildings each principal can make his deposit directly with the banks and send his reports to the superintendent each week."

The state of Massachusetts is going into the project under sanction of a state law. All experiments of the kind arouse much interest and it is possible that with state aid permanent success may be attained.

President Otis Sees Improvement

President James E. Otis of Western Trust & Savings Bank says:

"In the last ten days there has been a noteworthy improvement in business. The betterment is not sentimental; it is actual.

"I cannot accept the theory that business must move slowly and big enterprises be held in abeyance until the Supreme Court and the Interstate Commerce Commission have spoken in the anti-trust and freight rate cases now before them. The facts are pointing the other way. Easy money has revived the bond market and the railroads are alert to that fact. Campaigns of extensions and improvements are being taken up.

"I think we are assuredly in line for a period of good times."

Railway Merger

New York bankers, at the instigation of Cincinnati capitalists, plan to merge a number of Ohio traction companies which operate over 300 miles of track. This plan contemplates taking over all the companies which converge in Cincinnati from the north and east of that city and grouping them under one company. Engineers are now examining the situation, and if their report is satisfactory the bankers have outlined a plan of consolidation, the principal feature of which is to place a blanket bond issue over the entire system and retire the outstanding bonds of the subsidiary companies wherever possible.

acteristic of its people, the evidence of which is manifested in its commercial institutions. The character and reputation of its officers and directors, who are all home people, and whose dealings with the people have borne the mark of integrity, have won for this bank the confidence of the business world.

Bank Regulation

The banking bill prepared by W. T. Watson, assistant bank commissioner of Kansas, relating to the management and control of banks, has passed the Kansas house of representatives. It provides that banks shall be managed by a board of directors of not less than five or more than thirteen members. The annual meeting of the stockholders shall be held between the first and tenth of January of each year. A majority of the directors must be residents of the county in which the bank is located. Each director must own five shares of stock worth at least $100 a share. That stock shall not be hypothecated. Certified copies of the reports of the directors' meetings shall be forwarded to the state bank commissioner within ten days after the meeting is held. The bank is not permitted to invest any of its funds in the stock of any other bank or corporation.

Kansas is considering the plan to require its banks to keep fifty per cent of their legal reserves in national banks within the state. A similar proposition has been causing much discussion in Oklahoma and it is believed that it will be defeated in that state. The Kansas bill was drawn by the city counselor of Kansas City, Kan., with a view to increasing the national bank deposits in that city. But the Kansas City, Kan., banks themselves disclaim any responsibility for it and some of them have openly opposed the scheme.

If the Kansas bill passes it will mean the withdrawal of millions of dollars from banks in Missouri, Illinois and other states. It is estimated that it would increase the deposits in the Kansas City national banks at least $15,000,000. Many leading Kansas bankers are vigorously opposed to this bill contending that the Kansas banks ought to have the right to make their reserve deposits wherever they choose.

Notable Rail Contracts

As indicating the trend of business it is announced that the New York Central Railroad has made contracts for heavy section rails for 1911 delivery amounting to 176,750 tons. The distribution includes 87,500 tons for the United States Steel Corporation, 81,250 tons for the Lackawanna Steel Co. and 8,000 tons for the Bethlehem Steel Co. Part of the corporation tonnage may be rolled at Pittsburgh, but most of it at the Gary and South Chicago mills.

Of the total ordered 82,750 tons are for lines east of Buffalo and 94,000 tons for the Western division. The deliveries will be divided among the different lines of the system as follows:

New York Central, 55,000 tons; Boston & Albany, 15,000 tons; Rutland, 2,750 tons; Michigan Central, 15,000 tons; Lake Shore, 22,500 tons; Big Four, 12,000 tons; Peoria & Eastern, 3,500 tons; Cincinnati Northern, 3,500 tons; C., I. & S., 6,000 tons; Indiana Harbor Belt, 2,500 tons; Lake Erie & Western, 5,500 tons; Toledo & Ohio Central, 6,000 tons; Pittsburg & Lake Erie, 17,500 tons.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

Ancient, Curious and Famous Wills

THE CHICAGO BANKER frequently has published articles by Virgil M. Harris, trust officer of the Mercantile Trust Company, St. Louis. Mr. Harris is a literary attorney, and a genius in both directions. He is lecturer on wills in the St. Louis University, and his collection of ancient curious and famous wills is to be printed in book form by Little, Brown & Company of Boston. The book will be furnished at $4.00 and cost of carriage by THE CHICAGO BANKER.

This is an entirely new work and will be of interest not only to the legal profession but also to trust company officials and lovers of history and literature. The author is a writer and lecturer of national reputation, and his experience has brought him into close touch with the subject.

There is no branch of the law the history and study of which are more engaging than that of Wills, and the author has brought together a large amount of interesting and valuable material not accessible in any other work.

The book is divided into seven chapters: Practical Suggestions for Will Writing, Ancient Wills, Wills in Fiction and Poetry, Curious Wills, under Five Headings, Testamentary and Kindred Miscellany, Wills of Famous Foreigners and Wills of Famous Americans.

The words which men desire to have read when they are gone show their characters and idiosyncrasies in their true light; and they also reflect the manners and customs of the times when written, more accurately perhaps than any other documents.

In this collection there are about five hundred wills which have been obtained from various parts of the world; they commence with the dawn of creation and close with that of Mary Baker G. Eddy; among others are those of the Patriarch Jacob, Virgil, Cæsar, Columbus, Izaak Walton, Voltaire, Paul Revere, Washington, Benedict Arnold, Thomas Jefferson, Napoleon, Alexander Hamilton, Dolly Madison, Aaron Burr, Brigham Young, Horace Greeley, Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, Stephen Girard, Jefferson Davis, Robert E. Lee, Mark Twain, and Florence Nightingale. As will be seen, many of these will are the products of the master minds of the world. The vagaries of the human intellect are shown in a finely selected list of odd and curious wills, and the Testamentary Miscellany contains exceedingly attractive features.

Such a work has never before been attempted in America, though in England and in France there are similar productions of high merit. The book is a distinct addition to legal literature, as well as a medium of precedent and aid to trust companies and all who have to do with wills, legacies, and the settlement of estates, and Mr. Harris is to be commended for his exhaustive research and labor.

The fact that the author is a lecturer on wills and a practical will-writer, has enabled him to select the subject matter with a discerning eye, and to arrange it in an attractive manner. The work contains many historical and biographical sketches which cannot fail to entertain and instruct.

Twelve national banks were organized during January.

Spokane Chapter Plans Show

The Spokane Chapter of the American Institute of Banking is planning a genuine black-face minstrel show to take place the first week in March. A professional organizer, with a band of helpers, has been engaged and he will be in Spokane February 10th to commence the work on the production. It is proposed to give the best imitation of a genuine minstrel performance ever seen in Spokane. A feature of the first day will be a march down Riverside Avenue, with every man of the local banking force in line, led by R. Lewis Rutter, of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company. The performers will be in costume and there will be a brass band. A. S. Lindblad, president of the local chapter, will have general charge of the arrangements and committees have been appointed on amusement, publicity, program and tickets.

Seattle Chapter Banquet

Seattle, February 8.—Plans have been perfected by the Seattle Chapter of the American Institute of Banking for what is expected to be the largest bankmen's banquet ever held in this city. The banquet will be held at the Hotel Washington, February 15th. Preparations are being made to seat between 250 and 300 bankers and men closely identified with the financial development of the city.

The program for addresses by several of the city's foremost financiers and professional men. J. W. Spangler, president of the Seattle Credit Men's Association, will be toastmaster.

A special committee, consisting of J. C. Norman, J. C. Glass, E. G. Norris, F. H. Drew, Roy H. B. Nelson, E. K. Riley and George R. Martin, all prominent members of the local bankmen's chapter, have charge of the banquet.

Bank Clerks Volunteer

Three hundred and fifty young men who are members of the Minneapolis chapter of the American Institute of Banking have volunteered their services free of charge for the success of the summer carnival of next July, and A. W. Warnock has been advised by H. E. Cobb, president of the chapter, that he may call upon them individually or collectively. Many of the members are familiar with the locality that will be the center of the celebration, as they are members of boat clubs or owners of sailboats or ice yachts that are used on Lake Calhoun. Others will be available for downtown service as guides.

Yankees Absorb Bonds

It is estimated in financial circles that New England investors have taken in the neighborhood of $50,000,000 of the bonds and short term notes which have been marketed the past two weeks. It has been by all odds the best bond market since the winter of 1909, and some think it necessary to go back to 1908 to find its equal. One of the largest investment houses reports that its business has been larger than ever before in a similar period, especially in the variety of its sales and the number of individual investors who have gone upon its books. The above mentioned house finds the demand for choice investments broadening.

New York Chapter Banquet

The tenth annual banquet of the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Banking will be held at the Hotel Astor, New York City, on Wednesday, Feb. 8th. The speakers and their subjects will be: A. Piatt Andrew, Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury, "America's Banking Problem"; Dr. Chas. B. Medwing, "A Present-Day Reality"; Joseph T. Talbert, vice-president National City Bank of New York, "Loans and Discounts"; the Rev. Jos. E. Kittell, D. D., pastor First Reformed Church, Albany, N. Y., "The Moral Dividends," and Edward J. Cattall, editor "Philadelphia," Philadelphia, Pa., "The Pursuit of Happiness."

Iowa Leaders in Chicago

Vice-President Ralph Van Vechten of Continental-Commercial has been entertaining some of his Iowa acquaintances this week. E. J. Curtin of Citizens Savings Bank was here Wednesday and Homer A. Miller of Iowa National, Des Moines, was in the city Tuesday. These gentlemen are among the business leaders of Iowa and they talked encouragingly of the general prospects in the Hawkeye state.

President Drake in the City

President Luther Drake of Merchants National, Omaha, was a caller at Fort Dearborn National Tuesday. Mr. Drake stated that trade was becoming active but money remained easy owing to good collections. There is a liberal movement of country produce through Nebraska.

Suicide Follows Failure

Robert M. Newton, formerly of Aurora, Ill., a banker and horseman committed suicide in Ottawa, Ill., by leaping into the Illinois River, from a bridge. He was cashier and a heavy stockholder in a Billings, Mont., bank which recently assigned.

Newton went from Yorkville, Ill., his home, to Billings about a year and a half ago when he put all his money into the Billings bank. He lost about $75,000 and friends whom he had induced to invest also lost heavily.

Banker to Start Life Anew

Olympia, Wash., February 8.—Having reimbursed his bondsmen and repaid thousands of dollars to depositors lost by them when his bank failed in 1893, J. K. Edmiston, president of the Walla Walla Savings Bank and the Security Savings Bank of Seattle, who has been a fugitive from justice since his conviction in 1895, was pardoned yesterday by Governor Hay and can now return to this country.

Iowa County Sells Bonds

Des Moines, February 9.—Polk county has sold its $183,000 refunding bond issue to the Iowa National Bank at a premium of $4,552 at public auction. The following Chicago houses were bidders: National City Bank of Chicago, Woodin, McNear & Moore and Harris Trust Company.

Burglar Science

The burglar of to-day, says a London paper, is as far removed from the Bill Sikes of a generation or two ago as the man who skims through the air with the speed of a swallow on his aeroplane is removed from his predecessor who risks his bones in a fire balloon. The modern burglar is often a highly-trained man of science, who knows as much of chemistry, the properties of heat and the resistance of metals as many a professor.

This startling fact is brought home to us by the recent discoveries at No. 9 Exchange Buildings, the scene of the murder of the three city policemen, where a formidable scientific armory was found. This included a cylinder containing 40 feet of oxygen, with a pressure of 1,760 pounds to the square inch, equipped with a dial which registers the amount of gas in the cylinder. There was also a wonderful blowpipe of the latest design, capable of fusing the hardest steel; and a cutter-wrench, 3 feet long, with which the white-hot metal could be cut as easily as a sardine tin with an opener.

Such are some of the formidable weapons with which the up-to-date burglar plies his nefarious trade; and these are by no means the most remarkable weapons in his armory. During the last century the fight between the safemaker and the safebreaker has been waged incessantly, and every step which the one has advanced has been quickly overcome by the other.

The strong oak box, clamped with iron and provided with most formidable hasps and locks, had to give way to the all-iron box, which was guaranteed fire and burglar proof. The safebreaker's reply to this was a tiny hand drill, which speedily cut holes all around the lock in the iron door. The thickness of the iron sides and door of the safe was then increased, and stronger locks and hinges were introduced. But the burglar merely smiled. With his blowpipe he could make the iron as easy almost to cut through as butter.

Again the safemaker took up the challenge. He substituted steel for iron and introduced double doors, locks and hinges. The steel plates were made of exceptional hardness and toughness, able to resist the vastly improved drills and jimmies of the burglar. The burglar smiled again. "There is no such thing as a burglar-proof safe," he chuckled; and to prove it he met the challenge with a small pinch of nitro-glycerine, scientifically applied and exploded. It was even easier than the obsolete method of the drill.

Again the safemaker took up the gauntlet, determined to baffle the enemy at last. He thought he had solved the problem by producing a five-ply welded plate, consisting of five welded layers of steel—the two outer layers of tough steel, the next two of hard steel, and the center a somewhat thicker layer of tough steel. "At last I have done it!" he exclaimed, in his pride.

Once more the burglar smiled. His answer took the form of a retort carbon, a few yards of electric light wire, a pair of black-eyed glasses and a plate pierced in the middle. He attached two wires to the nearest electric wires; one he fastened to the safe and the other to the carbon-stick. He then inserted the carbon through the hole in the plate, to protect himself against the intense heat and glare; and a voltaic arc of immense power between the carbon-point and the metal of the safe was produced, melting the metal with ease.

In imagination, the outwitted safemaker could see his rival, the burglar, melting holes around the safe lock almost as fast as he could count, and laughing at the easiness of the task.

The newest safety vaults are of the "battle ship" type, with six-inch armor plates and twelve-inch doors, marvels of strength and ingenuity, in which the plates are dovetailed and made additionally tight with wedging strips and key-pieces. But even these formidable vaults are not proof against the scientific burglar, who has now enlisted in his service that terrible explosive thermite, which, it is said, nothing made by human hands can resist.

Bankers at Feast

The first formal dinner of the new Bankers' Club of Kansas City was held in the evening of February 7th. Among the speakers were Stanley Young, clearing house examiner, on "The Reserve Associations of America. Thornton Cooke, treasurer of the Fidelity Trust Company, and C. W. Allendoefer, assistant cashier of the First National Bank, also made addresses.

Exports of copper in January were 29,257 tons, against 26,699 tons last year.

Make Good Record

Missouri enjoys the unique distinction of having two cities that hold fifth and sixth places in the national bank clearings record. For more than a year St. Louis has been fifth with Kansas City next in line and below these are such important cities as Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Baltimore, Houston, Cincinnati, New Orleans, Minneapolis, Cleveland, Los Angeles, Detroit, etc. For the week ending January 26th both St. Louis and Kansas City showed a gain. The former had $75,750,000, a gain of 9.8%, while the latter had $52,609,000, a gain of 7%. Omaha with $14,381,000 had a loss of 5.4% and St. Joseph had $6,809,000, a loss of 6.6%. Other cities of the Central West as a rule showed substantial gains.

In the statement of the comptroller of the treasury made public January 28th, the condition of the 201 national banks in Kansas exclusive of reserve cities, was given. The interesting feature of the report is that the national banks of no state appear to make a better showing than those of Kansas since November 30th. The loan and discounts amounts to $50,825,000, which is a decline of only $400,000, while the individual deposits amount to $56,720,000 showing an increase of more than $700,000 since November 30th.

Wells, Fargo & Co. Quit Banking

The National Park Bank of New York made the following statement Monday: "The National Park Bank will at the close of business on February 6th take over the business of Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Bank in New York, Wells, Fargo & Co., having concluded to relinquish its banking business in this city." Wells, Fargo & Co., to avoid any possible misunderstanding, announce that the company is only relinquishing its banking business in New York.

Plan for Trust Company

Toledo, Ohio, February 2.—Spitzer, Rorick & Co., has succeeded the firm of Spitzer & Co., one of the oldest firms of bond dealers in the Middle States. The work of organizing the Spitzer-Rorick Trust Company is now under way. This will not be completed until late in the year, but as soon as it is organized it will succeed Spitzer, Rorick & Co.

THE INVESTORS'

PRIMER

JOHN MOODY

There has long been a demand for a concise handbook which would give, in simple, understandable language, definitions of all the important terms and phrases employed in the investment and banking business. This little book represents an effort to in some measure supply this demand.

The book is really in two parts, the first part covering the general definitions of finance; the second giving specific information regarding the various issues of preferred and guaranteed stocks which are generally classed among the investment issues. Many other small books furnish information regarding bonds, quotations, etc., etc., but this specific and useful information has not, as far as the writer knows, been heretofore presented for popular uses, in this particular way.

By JOHN MOODY

This is a practical Handbook for investors, treating the subject of Wall Street Investing in a sensible and original manner. It is the first modern attempt to cover the subject in an attractive and popular form, and in such a way as to be of interest to the individual investor as well as the more expert banker and broker.

"The book deals in a clear, popular and entertaining way in the methods, terms and phases of Wall Street Investing, giving rules for analyzing railroad securities and statements, and explaining syndicates and reorganizations."—The Wall Street Journal.

"It is lucid, original and sound. I should think it ought to find use as a text-book in University and College Departments of Economics."—Prof. E. Benjamin Andrews.

"It is a book of great interest to business men and investors in general. Mr. Moody devotes a chapter to 'get-rich-quick schemes,' which will be an eye-opener to those guileless ones who are ready victims of the great army of sharpers that infest the land."—Buffalo Courier.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Washington, February 7.—J. P. M. Richards has been re-elected president of the Spokane & Eastern Company, for the twenty-first time, and has started on the third decade as head of what is claimed to be the largest trust company in the Northwest, or west of Minneapolis. The only change in officers made by the re-elected board of directors was the addition of C. W. Winter to the list of vice-presidents.

One of the important details was the election of an executive committee of eight members who meet each morning to direct the operations of the banks and to pass on credits. The members elected were J. P. M. Richards, Henry M. Richards, R. L. Rutter, W. S. McCrea, Walter G. Merryweather, C. W. Winter and Fred Phair.

Farmers Paying Debts

The farmers of the Walla Walla valley are making few new debts, according to reports from the banks of that city. Rather they are engaged in paying up old debts. At the opening of the fiscal year, July 1st, the banks of Walla Walla carried loans totaling $3,845,921. On January 7th this sum had been reduced to $3,566,926. The deposits in all the banks on January 7th, amounted to $3,589,855, which shows an increase since July 1st of $82,291. Another favorable symptom as regarded by bank men is the increase in cash and exchange column of almost 50 per cent in the past six months. On July 1st they amounted to $873,758, and on January 7th $1,328,145.

Bank Consolidation

At a joint meeting of the stockholders of the Odessa State Bank and the First National Bank of Odessa, on January 18th, it was decided that both the interests of the stockholders and the community would be better served by a consolidation of the two banks. A committee was appointed to arrange the details of the consolidation, composed of George W. Finney, C. O. Harvey, Charles T. Deets, W. S. Lesley and J. K. McCornack. The consolidated bank will be known as the Union State Bank and will have a capital stock of $40,000 and undivided profits of $10,000. The officers are: President, George W. Finney; vice-presidents, Joseph Kriegler and W. R. Lesley; cashier, Charles T. Deets; assistant cashiers, Henry W. Reike and Alfred M. Michaelson, C. O. Harvey, cashier of the Odessa State Bank for six years, will remain with the new institution for a short time.

Bank Stockholder Settles

At the time of the failure of the Palouse State Bank, R. H. Hill, one of the directors, held stock in the bank to the amount of $7,000. Suit was brought to recover this amount, Mr. Hill being liable for the amount of his stock.

Mr. Hill offered to settle for $3,200 and a meeting of the creditors was called by George C. Jewett, the receiver, and they decided that $4,000 was small enough to settle for, that being practically 50 per cent of the stock, and Mr. Hill accepted the compromise. Mr. Jewett has announced that a dividend of 10 per cent will be paid February 1st. A dividend of 20 per cent was paid a year ago, and it is believed if the equities held by the bank in real estate can be realized upon the dividends will reach 50 per cent.

Condition is Prosperous

The banks of Chelan county show a large measure of prosperity in their reports made January 7th. The three financial institutions of Wenatchee have aggregate deposits of $1,117,234. Their loans amount to $1,010,551 and their cash on hand totals $234,102. The deposits in all of the banks of Chelan county are $1,738,104 as compared with $2,086,744 in November, its loans, $1,507,615, as against $1,542,292, last call. The reduction of deposits and loans was expected by bankers, but there is a large cash balance in the banks.

Banking Board

Senator Wesley C. McDowell, president of the North Dakota State Bankers Association, has introduced a bill calling for a separate banking department and placing all state banks and financial corporations under its control. The board is to consist of the governor, secretary of state, attorney-general, and ex officio the secretary and president of the Bankers association. The members have no compensation and the last two no vote. The governor is chairman, the attorney-general is counsel, and the bank commissioner is secretary.

Regular meetings are set for the first Wednesdays of January, April, July and October. Rules are to be made by the board for the corporations, within the estate and national laws. The board must examine all reports of examiners. Orders shall be issued necessary to protect depositors and creditors. The commissioner is to be elected at the first meeting at $3,000 a year with $20,000 bond. He is to assume the authority invested in the state bank examiner and is to take over the records and files of previous work. No more than seven examiners may be appointed, subject to approval by the board, on bonds of $10,000. One examiner is ex officio deputy bank commissioner. The commissioner is at once to divide the state into six districts, arranged with reference to economy and convenience, one examiner to each district. These shall have nearly equal number of banks or other financial institutions.

It is provided that no bank or corporation shall be formed in a town of less than 2,000 inhabitants with capital of less than $20,000, in towns between 2,000 and 3,000, $30,000 capital; from 3,000 to 4,000, $50,000 capital; 4,000 to 5,000 inhabitants, $40,000; cities of more than 5,000, $50,000 capital. Stocks must be paid in before corporations are allowed to begin. The appropriation asked for the first two years is $29,000.

Bank Notes in the Year 1399

J. A. Machado, manager of the American Bank Note Co., of Ottawa in an address at the Canadian Institute last week stated that the Chinese were undoubtedly the first people to issue a bank note. This was in 1399, the note being printed from a wooden block, on paper made from the mulberry tree, in size about 9x13 inches. It bore a warning that anyone attempting to counterfeit the note would be executed and his worldly possessions would be given to the informer. This note was obtained by looters at Peking from the palace of the Empress and purchased by the Bank Note Co. for $1,200. It is now on exhibition in the office of the company in New York.

R. C. Menefee, treasurer of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City, has returned after making a tour of inspection in Oklahoma. He reports banking affairs in that state in a highly flourishing condition.

Peoria Bankers Take in Auto Show

Messrs. William M. Meade, cashier, and R. W. Truitt of the Bank of Truitt, Matthews & Company, bankers, Chillicothe, Illinois, and B. M. Mcade, cashier of the Interstate Bank and Trust Company, Peoria, Illinois, dropped into Chicago last week to look at the automobile display and to call on Chicago banking acquaintances. B. M. Meade reports that the Interstate Bank at Peoria has enjoyed splendid growth during the ten months the present interests have operated the bank. Their increase in deposits during this period has been above $125,000, and with the natural growth that all Peorians expect their city to enjoy they feel that the Interstate is bound to be one of the big institutions of the second city of Illinois within reasonable time.

F. H. Elmore Gets a Jump Up

F. H. Elmore, who has been assistant cashier of the Continental and Commercial National, left Wednesday for Missoula, Mont., where he has accepted the position of vice-president of the First National. Officers of the Continental and Commercial presented Mr. Elmore with a testimonial in the shape of a handsome set of silver. Owing to the number of officers of the Continental and Commercial which the recent consolidation made necessary to provide places for, the vacancy caused by Mr. Elmore's resignation will not be filled.

Trust Companies Enter Insurance Field

The Nashville fire insurance situation has been considerably complicated as the result of practically all of the trust companies of that city establishing insurance departments. Similar course was taken at Cleveland, Ohio. It is now reported that one of the leading trust companies in Louisville intends to establish a department. The local agents there are awaiting action on the subject with a good deal of anxiety, as apparently there is no way of preventing the banking houses from entering the business, where their loans give them a great advantage.

Women Bankers Numerous

There are more than 550 women holding official positions in banks in Kansas, while 10 years ago only two women bankers in the state were known. Four of the women bankers of to-day are presidents, 15 vice-presidents, 50 cashiers, 250 assistant cashiers and 250 are directors. This does not take into account stenographers and bookkeepers, but includes only the women who have some say in the actual management of the banks.

Miss Anna Speck of the bank commissioner's office declared recently: "If women were at the head of all our financial institutions there would be little need of bank supervision and there would be no 'bankers' colony' in our penitentiaries." Miss Speck is said to know more about the condition of Kansas state banks than any other person. It is her work to go through the reports of the bank examiners and tell the bankers what ails their institutions.

Represents New Detroit Bank

G. H. Sweet, cashier of Metropolitan State Bank, a new Detroit institution, was a visitor at La Salle Street National Wednesday, in company with other business men of the Michigan metropolis. The new bank has not opened its doors yet but will do so before long. It starts with capital and surplus of $750,000 and is backed by strong interests. Mr. Sweet stated that business in Detroit was in a satisfactory condition, all signs of the depression having disappeared.

Notice to Irrigation Bond Holders

Colonel A. B. MacCaughey, western manager for J. S. & W. S. Kuhns of Pittsburgh, has created a stir among holders of any of their irrigation bonds maturing in 1911. He has offered to take them in at any time presented or sent to any Chicago bank at par and interest. Holders of some issues of irrigation bonds have been having chills and fever ever since the Trowbridge & Niver default, but the holders of Kuhns' securities are on the sunny side of Happy Street. Mr. MacCaughey expects that this offer may be quite welcome to many who wish to take longer time bonds or to use their money otherwise. There are no formalities attached to the offer. Just send the 1911 bonds to any Chicago bank and draw upon A. B. MacCaughey of J. S. & W. S. Kuhns & Co., and get your money.

Mr. MacCaughey is putting out a few short time 6 per cent notes, in which the Chicago banks are investing liberally. Investors who want as much as 6 per cent, on a sure thing, for a year or so cannot do better.

Faith in Walsh Properties

It has been the belief of those who are directly concerned that the Walsh properties would in time develop sufficiently to almost fully reimburse those who advanced the money necessary to liquidate the obligations of his banks. Their hopes may not be realized for two or three years more, but the dividends already paid as well as those assured for the near future are an encouraging sign.

The agreement embraced all the Chicago clearing house members and those institutions affiliated with them for clearing house advantages.

Chicago, Terre Haute and Southeastern is the newly organized company that took over the Southern Indiana and the Chicago Southern railways, the securities of which Mr. Walsh pledged to secure the original loan made by the clearing house banks. This reorganization was conducted by the first mortgage bondholders of the Southern Indiana and the clearing house committee representing the local banks.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

On his return from New York, E. W. Decker of Northwestern National reports that he found a better feeling there than he had seen in the metropolis since 1907. He was guest of honor in the City Lunch Club of A. B. Hepburn to enable to get a general view of the situation at close range.

The opinion, he found, was that general conditions are improving, that the Union Pacific announcement of proposed expenditure and the proposed reciprocity treaty are additional factors of good influence, and the outlook is for a steady, wholesome and general improvement. With a close touch with 1,100 correspondents Mr. Decker was able to give the bankers his idea of the fine quality of conditions existing.

As to reciprocity Mr. Decker says: "Personally I feel sure that it will be a great boon for this section of the country and indirectly for the East. Few yet realize the vast possibilities of Northwestern Canada. It is an immense and very rich territory, and with the tariff barriers removed great quantities of grain would undoubtedly come to the milling centers of Minneapolis and Duluth, and in return agricultural machinery and goods of all kinds would be forwarded from here and St. Paul. These supplies would come to us from further east and the railroads would get the benefit of the traffic. There will be opposition to reciprocity on the part of farmers who fear that the price of wheat may be affected. I doubt if the effect, if any, will be more than temporary, for after all the price of wheat is made in Liverpool. On the other hand, the farmers overlook the indirect benefit that will come to their communities, and thus in the long run to themselves, from the general prosperity."

Gain in Bank Clearings

St. Paul bank clearings for January increased $2,347,323 over the same month last year. The total clearings for January, 1911, were $45,141,784 as against $42,794,461 in January, 1910. All the bankers report a general resumption in business activity, following the inventory season. Most of the merchants are beginning to place orders for their spring and summer goods.

Another evidence of good conditions is the gradual gain in the deposits. Toward the close of the year the deposits fell off decidedly, but this decrease is being overcome. Money is flowing rapidly toward the west from the east, and there is plenty on hand in the local banks.

Bank Report Shows Big Increase

The report of Kelsey S. Chase, superintendent of banks, shows an increase of $17,266,787.11 in the resources of the 696 state banks, compared with the figures of a year ago when 648 banks reported. The greatest increase is in deposits represented by time certificates, which were $55,808,587.10 a year ago and now are $64,982,438.23, an increase of $9,173,851.13. Actual currency on hand in the banks is $4,920,632.28, or $498,187.18 more than a year ago. Deposits subject to check increased $3,014,146.26. This is an increase of $12,187,997.49 in these two deposit items. Loans and discounts of $95,518,651.54 increased $15,146,041.65.

Visit Eastern Friends

Archibald A. Crane of the First National, Mrs. Crane and A. A. Jr., are back from the East, where Mr. Crane spent three weeks in renewing old associations formed when he was officer of the A. B. A., and in estimating financial conditions from the Eastern view point. The visit was primarily for fun. A. A. Jr., went along to show the vice-president of the First a few things about the metropolis that he remembered from a previous visit of two years ago. Junior is now six.

Would Improve Banking System

Northwestern states are busily engaged in trying to perfect their banking systems. Minnesota already has done much to correct errors and put the state banking on a systematic and perfect basis. North and South Dakota and Wisconsin, however, seem to be more in need of changes. Advantage is being taken of the sitting of legislatures in the three states. Few change will be made for Minnesota.

Nine bills were required in Wisconsin. The most important provides for segregation of savings deposits. It provides that in state banks savings deposits shall be kept separate from commercial deposits and invested solely for the benefit of saving depositors. Assets shall be held separate in time of liquidation or trouble and the saving depositor is given first lien on them. On January 15, 1909, there was on deposit in the savings departments of state banks $24,470,614, or about 23 per cent of the entire deposits in state banks. The present system provides as an evidence of the deposit of savings money the pass book requiring notice before withdrawal can be made. Without segregation the natural consequence is to require notice, in case of trouble, from the savings depositors and to pay the funds of the bank to depositor whose account is payable on demand, thus depleting the tangible assets, so that when the limitation of the savings depositor expires little or nothing is left to meet the demands. The wage earner is therefore not receiving protection like the check or demand certificate depositor.

Another bill strikes from the mutual savings bank law, provision allowing any part of the assets to be loaned on personal security. Another makes it obligatory upon directors to meet once a month to go over the assets. The committee report on this phase shows many failures caused by "one man banks," which it is proposed to stop. Chains of banks are discouraged by another bill. Adventurers have started or bought banks and to use the certificates of stock as collateral for a loan with which to buy another bank, repeating the process indefinitely. The bill prohibits the loan of money by a bank on its capital stock and limits to 10 per cent the amount of money that may be loaned on the stock of any other bank. Loans on real estate security are confined by another bill, to real estate in Wisconsin and states immediately adjoining. Card systems are prohibited for original entries.

The estate of the late A. E. Dickey (treasurer of the Wells & Dickey Company, investments, is placed at $168,799. Several bequests were made to DePauw university.

E. L. Berwyn, formerly of the Savings Bank of Minneapolis, has opened an office for handling bank stocks and unlisted securities.

Henry Bachman, interested in the Market State Bank as director, also vice-president, retired capitalist, made his fortune from market gardening. He came to the city a poor German immigrant. He obtained a few acres on the outskirts, after he had earned the advance money as a laborer. His first hot bed was improvised from window sash, and the careful culture of vegetables gave him his start. A substantial hot house followed, and now Mr. Bachman has a modern plant with a good house alone with it.

The Farmers' & Merchants' of Wabasha, capital $25,444, is the first to be authorized by the new Minnesota bank superintendent, Kelsey Chase. He has appointed H. S. Quiggle of Winnebago, deputy, succeeding D. D. Divine of Waseca. Mr. Quiggle was connected with the department as examiner and had been promoted. Pressure for the appointment is said to have been brought by August Widdell of Mankato, business partner of Governor A. O. Eberhart.

Texas Banks Unite

Advices from Fort Worth, Texas, state that First National and Waggoner National have consolidated, and the merged institution will continue the name of First National.

The merger is one of the most important in Texas banking circles in a long time, owing to the importance and wide influence of both institutions concerned. M. B. Lloyd will be president; W. E. Connell, T. B. Yarbrough and R. D. Gage, vice-presidents; Tom Slack, cashier of the First National, will remain in that position, and an official post will be given to Sam Triplett, formerly cashier of Waggoner National.

The present quarters of the Waggoner National and Trust Company will be operated as a savings and trust company department of the merged institution. The combined board of directors includes D. C. Bennett, S. N. B. Bennett, Zane Cetti, George T. Reynolds, M. B. Lloyd, R. B. Masterson, John Scharbauer, R. D. Gage, W. E. Connell, G. H. Connell, T. W. Slack, J. W. Mitchell, C. K. Bell, W. T. Waggoner, William Bryce, T. B. Yarbrough, Erl Baldridge and Mrs. Sicily A. Waggoner. The new bank will have a capital of $1,000,000.

San Francisco

State Senator Estudillo has introduced the administration's bill for the reorganization of the banking department. This bill repeals the act under which Anderson was appointed, and provides for a new department of banks which is to have charge of the building and loan associations as well as the savings banks, commercial banks and trust companies. It abolishes the Building and Loan Commissioners and throws Charles F. Curry and Jacob P. Transue out of their positions.

San Francisco and New York financiers have incorporated here a $500,000 branch of the $5,000,000 Kompolite Company of New York to operate over the Pacific Coast. It will employ 200 men in a factory to be erected in San Francisco.

A banking measure has been introduced in the state legislature providing an amendment to the present law that will permit receivers to deposit with the state treasurer all moneys on hand when final accounting has been made and the final dividends declared, so that the receiver may be discharged from all further obligations. While under the present bank act receivers are no longer appointed, there are still a number in office by virtue of appointment before the present act was passed.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Central Trust Company of California, the agreement of consolidation of this institution with the Anglo-California Trust Company was ratified unanimously. The completion of this amalgamation of these two well-known trust companies is now merely a matter of detail. A meeting will be held for this purpose in a short time.

The monthly letter of the American National Bank of San Francisco points out the fact that the total bank clearings in San Francisco in 1910 were $2,323,772,870, an increase of $343,900,300 over the figures of the previous year. Of this increase about $122,000,000 may be attributed to the operations of the sub-treasury, which became a member of the clearing house last January, leaving $221,000,000 to be credited to actual improvement in volume of ordinary business. The daily average of clearings last year was $7,669,217, as compared with $6,534,232 in 1909, and $5,780,071 in 1908.

The statements of the ten national banks of San Francisco, in response to the comptroller's call as of January 7th, show aggregate resources of $211,671,800, as compared with $215,601,507, on November 10, 1910, the date of the last previous call. Deposits have decreased $3,700,000 and loans $4,000,000, while the cash position remains practically unchanged, indicating a strengthening of reserves.

Los Angeles

Los Angeles national banks carry individual deposits amounting to $34,702,815, according to a statement issued recently by the comptroller of the currency, and their total resources are $65,982,587. They had, on January 7th, gold coin to the amount of $4,057,817, and the total cash on hand made their percentage of legal reserve to deposits 24.42. Loans and discounts of the Los Angeles National banks on that day amounted to $35,954,887.

The enormous sum of $17,577,692, was the total of Los Angeles' bank clearings for the week ending January 25, 1911, an increase of $3,123,553 as compared with the amount for the corresponding period of last year. It beat the corresponding week of 1909 by $6,138,593.

The comptroller of the currency has approved the application for a charter for a new national bank at Ontario, Cal. The institution will be known as the Ontario National Bank, and will be capitalized at $50,000. The promoters are G. A. McCrea, a Minnesota man; W. A. Treemire, president of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce; J. S. Armstrong, J. B. Draper and Dr. C. A. Warmer.

The First National Bank of Ocean Park has elected officers and directors for the coming year. E. J. Vawter was re-elected president. Reports for the year were very encouraging. The gross earnings for the first six months were given as $6,965.42, and for the second half $7,442.89, a total of $14,308.31. A big gain in deposits and number of depositors was also reported. The directorate of the bank includes James Chalmers, John W. Lincoln and E. J. Vawter, Jr. R. B. Harris is cashier.

The Farmers and Merchants' National and the First National Bank of Santa Ana reports for the year show both banks to be in a very prosperous condition. Old directors in both institutions were re-elected, with the exception that R. E. Larter was elected for the Farmers and Merchants' instead of G. J. Mosbough.

Officers of the California Bankers Association held the first meeting recently in their new quarters in the Savings Union Bank Building. Reports read showed the flourishing condition of the association throughout California.

Almost without exception banks have found it advantageous to be protected in this manner against the work of forgers and swindlers. Since May the protective committee of the association has secured eighteen convictions.

The next convention will be held at Lake Tahoe, commencing June 15th.

Henry C. Olcott

Henry C. Olcott, for fourteen years with Harvey Fisk & Sons, of New York and Chicago, has become associated with the bond department of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings, as assistant to Manager George B. Caldwell. Mr. Olcott will make a specialty of handling United States Government bonds and will also be glad to serve investors who buy other classes of high grade bonds.

John J. Mitchell

John J. Mitchell, president of Illinois Trust, reports an exceedingly confident feeling among eastern bankers.

"I have not found them feeling better in New York for years than they are now," said Mr. Mitchell. "The men with whom I talked seem very confident of the future. They are disregarding the coming supreme court decisions and are doing business. Generally they expect that the railroads will be granted a reasonable increase in freight rates, and that the management of the roads will proceed with important work. Some of the railroads have already announced important projects.

"There is an excellent demand for bonds, and the indications are that it will continue. One banking house in New York informed me that it had sold $50,000,000 of bonds in Europe in the past few months. I understand there is to be some important railroad financing in the next sixty days to take care of work that has already been planned.

"We are having a better demand for money. Rates in New York were a shade higher today."

Big Bank Deal

Undoubtedly the most important bank deal in Spokane since the sale of the Exchange National bank to E. T. Coman and associates took place last week when George S. Brooke, for nearly 30 years at the head of the Fidelity National Bank, sold a large portion of his stock to Thomas H. Brewer, vice-president of the Exchange National Bank, Dorman Brothers, wealthy land owners of Spokane, and William Kroll, a wealthy lumberman. The deal involved a cash payment of about $200,000 and 1,045 shares of stock were transferred to Mr. Brewer and his associates. Immediately after closing the deal Mr. Brewer sent his resignation as vice-president and director of the Exchange National bank to President Coman and he will become president of the Fidelity as soon as a meeting of the directors is held. Mr. Brooke retains enough stock to maintain a place on the directorate but will not take an active part in the affairs of the institution.

Mr. Brooke, in company with H. M. Fairweather, established the Fidelity National Bank at Sprague, Wash., in 1882, as a private bank. In 1886 it was incorporated as the First National Bank of Sprague and the capital was increased to $50,000. Mr. Brooke at once became its president and has remained in that office ever since. In the fire of 1895 which swept Sprague the bank was one of the victims. Mr. Brooke soon after secured a special act of congress permitting the removal of the bank to Spokane, the name was changed to the Fidelity National and the capital stock was increased to $100,000. This has since been doubled.

Thomas H. Brewer, the new president, has been identified with banking interests of the Inland Empire for nearly twenty years.

Sees Great Monetary Activity

"The really vital problem before the markets now," says the National City Bank circular, "has to do with the new financing the railroads will be forced to resort to if their equipment is to be kept up to the usual standard. More than $100,000,000 in moderate sized bonds and note issues were sold by the railroads last month. It seems reasonable to expect that during the next five months the aggregate flotations will reach at least $500,000,000. Such an amount will almost certainly be issued unless some unforeseen obstacles are encountered."

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, February 8.—Walker Hill, president of the Mechanics-American National, sees some slight improvement in the demand for credits, but otherwise no change in the monetary outlook worthy of note. Speaking of the situation, Mr. Hill says: "The season of high reserves and plenty of funds is here, but that is nothing unusual, for it arrives about this time every year. It is the natural sequence of things financial. It can be safely said that business is in healthy shape, and the demand for funds is gradually improving. It is being felt by us this week. I can see nothing in the near future which would indicate radical change one way or the other. The railroads are the key to the situation just now. Those institutions are great users of raw material and loanable funds under certain conditions. Such conditions would be brought about by a loosening up by the Interstate Commerce gentlemen in the matter of slight rate advances. Otherwise I do not see how the roads are going to do very much in the direction of betterment and new enterprise this year.

Exit George W. Galbreath

The Pacific coast has charms for George W. Galbreath, cashier of the Third National. When the recent cold wave was predicted, Mr. Galbreath decided it was time to move, and his desk is now occupied by J. R. Cooke, assistant cashier. Mr. Galbreath has an orange grove and bungalow near enough to the waters of the Pacific to hear the waves splash, and spends his vacations there in the winter instead of going away in the summer. He will be in California about six weeks.

Manchester Bank Increase

The Manchester Bank, a prosperous little institution in the outlying district, has increased its capital stock from $100,000 to $250,000. The new stock was placed at $150 a share, half being allotted to the old stockholders, and the other half to merchants and business concerns in the neighborhood. August Bischoff is president, A. M. Becker, vice-president and A. E. Brooker, cashier. The present deposits are approximately $1,120,000.

St. Louis Bank Reserves Heavy

All previous records for reserves in St. Louis banks were exceeded this week, and the local financial institutions have besides established a new record for total deposits and cash and exchange. The deposits aggregate approximately $335,000,000 and cash and exchange $138,000,000. Since the last published statement on January 7th, the deposits have increased 10 per cent, and the other two items 20 per cent. In the past week there has been a decrease in the aggregate of loans and discounts, but until recently discounts and loans were practically at the same level as a month ago. Financial institutions have been trying to invest the surplus reserve funds in commercial paper, and an extremely heavy business has been done in this direction during the past week or ten days. On Monday of this week alone, about $3,000,000 in commercial bills were placed. Brokers are finding a most inviting market from a buying viewpoint, provided, of course their offerings are of the required standard.

Result of Conservative Policy

The present condition of big reserves here, is a result direct of the conservative policy enforced by city and county banks in the Middle West—coupled, of course, with the present limited demand for funds from commercial and general industrial sources. Up until the very end of 1910 the demand for credits continued very active, owing to the belated receipts from crops, more particularly the cotton crop, and the heavy requirements of heavy agricultural production. This being the season of preparation, the demand for funds naturally decreases, let basic conditions be as healthy as they may. Local bankers think the present increase in reserves will continue awhile longer, and meanwhile a demand will be created by ordinary mercantile and agricultural conditions.

Mississippi Valley Elects Directors

At the annual election of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company stockholders on Monday, nine members of the board of directors whose terms had expired, were re-elected to serve three years. They are John I. Beggs, James E. Brock, Charles Clark, Horatio N. Davis, S. E. Hoffman, W. J. McBride, W. D. Orthwein and Rolla Wells.

Boyden Sees Fair Prospects

George Boyden, bank and elevator owner of Buda and Sheffield, Ill., was a caller at Western Trust and Savings Bank Thursday. Mr. Boyden is one of the best informed men in that state on financial and agricultural affairs and his Chicago acquaintances obtained some encouraging views from him regarding the business of 1911. As matters stand to-day the winter wheat crop is safe and there will be a large acreage both of wheat and corn in Illinois. With prices even no better than they are at present there will be large returns to farmers and consequently a good business generally for the remainder of the year.

Kansas City Bankers to Visit Oklahoma

Enid, Okla., February 8.—Announcement is made by W. B. Harrison, secretary Oklahoma Bankers Association, that a special car of Kansas City bankers will visit all group meetings to be held in Oklahoma this month. Sixteen Kansas City banks have accepted the invitation to visit the state and it is expected the total number will reach twenty-five. Invitations have also been sent to St. Louis and Chicago bankers, and there probably will be a good delegation from each city. The group meetings will be held at the following places: Guthrie, February 20th, El Reno, February 21st, Chickasha, February 22d, Ardmore, February 23d, and Claremore, February 24th.

There still are some reservations available, and bankers desiring places on the special car should address Eugene P. Davis, Southwest National, Kansas City.

Group Two, Oklahoma

You are cordially invited to attend the fourth annual convention of Group Two of Oklahoma Bankers Association, which will be held at El Reno, Oklahoma, on Tuesday, February 21st.

No time or money has been spared to make this the banner group meeting in the state and we expect it to be the best meeting ever held by this group. Take a week off and attend all the group meetings and more especially the fourth annual meeting of Group Two.

We want to see a representative from every bank within this group and especially invite the ladies and also the bankers from the other groups and states. This is the warm invitation sent out by Secretary Joseph Dvorak. A good program has been provided.

W. J. Kommers, assistant cashier of the Old National at Spokane, and secretary of the building company which erected their magnificent new skyscraper is not to break off relations, as some supposed, by becoming cashier and director of the Union Bank and Trust Company, which in reality is an allied institution with the Old National. The Union now is housed in the white marble building so long the home of the Old National. Kommers has developed such a prowess for building that they are going to give him a chance to build up a big savings bank. He will retain his former position with the Old National and it looks as though he might easily keep busy.

Favorable Currency Movement

On the currency movement into and out of Chicago in January, the local banks gained $12,405,270. This is by far the largest gain shown by the banks for the first month of any year since the compilation of the figures began in 1906. The excess receipts of currency in January last year were only $2,355,915.

During the last month the local banks shipped to the country the comparatively small amount of $6,414,000. Their receipts of cash from the East and the subtreasury were $2,350,000 and their receipts from all other direct currency shipping sources were $16,469,330.

Aids 2 Per Cents

Washington, February 8.—Senator Smoot's bill to restrain the secretary of the treasury from receiving bonds issued to provide money for the building of the Panama canal as security for the issuance of circulating notes to national banks passed the senate Monday. This bill is designed to prevent depreciation of $790,000,000 outstanding 2 per cent government bonds.

Preliminary steps for selling $100,000,000 of Panama canal bonds will be completed by the treasury department within a few days. It is proposed to have the bonds take date of March 1st. This is an innovation, as previous bond sales have been inaugurated either on January 1st or July 1st.

It is intended to make the loan a popular one. The bonds will be issued in denominations of $100, $500 and $1,000. They will call for 3 per cent interest. Treasury department officials believe the demand for these bonds will be such as to produce a premium of 108 or 109.

After this issue there will remain $40,000,000 available bonds which may be sold for Panama canal construction.

Large Production of Copper

Estimated production of refined copper by the Calumet and Hecla Mining Company and its subcompanies for January totaled 10,684,785 lbs., compared with 11,252,933 in December and 10,800,263 in November.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. Show Gain

January sales by Sears, Roebuck & Co. were 15 per cent larger than in the corresponding month last year.

Wheat is Lower

Weakness in wheat has been more pronounced this week on account of favorable winter weather. The heavy fall of snow in winter wheat states is supposed to be helpful to the coming crop. May and July options dropped to the lowest point of the season early this week, the former selling below 94 cents and the latter around 93 cents.

Local professionals are about as much mixed as to the course of prices for wheat at the present time as the ordinary layman. The lack of any cash business of importance with the visible continuing to pile up in the face of much smaller receipts, has taken away the chief support of the bulls. There is hope of export business, and with the domestic cash trade at a standstill there does not appear to be much incentive for buying. At the same time sellers are not aggressive, and apparently there is no leadership on either side of the market.

Some of the largest cash corn handlers in the trade are bearish on corn. One of them, in explaining his position, said: "Corn has been hanging around this level for over a month. Wheat and oats held well for some time, but when they commenced to slide they went rapidly. The same thing will happen to corn. It must not be forgotten that the open winter has saved more corn than the increased feeding has taken care of. Our stocks are just commencing to pile up, but as we now have almost 24,000,000 bushels of all grain in store it will soon become a question of finding a place to put it. The point is made that the demand will take care of the movement, but the demand is far below the normal, while our receipts are abnormal. The only point in favor of the market is that corn at 45 cents in Chicago is not high, but it may be so before the middle of March."

Bank Notes

Chicago annual budget this year calls for an expenditure of $49,000,000.

Shares of Merchants National, Boston, have advanced to 270.

The Farmers National Bank, the American National Bank and the Peoples National Bank, all of Princeton, Ind., have been officially designated by the postoffice department as depositories to receive postal savings bank funds.

Twenty-two Thousand Dollars for a Single Order of Adding Machines

Twenty-two thousand, eight hundred and seventy five dollars is the exact amount of a check given by Sears, Roebuck & Co., in payment for seventy Wales Visible Adding and Listing Machines, to be used in their general offices. This is the largest check ever written for adding machines to be used in one office. Before placing their order Sears, Roebuck & Co. investigated carefully every style of adding machine on the market. They finally discarded fifteen old style machines in favor of the Wales. The most noticeable thing about the Wales is the fact that both the printed items and the total are in plain view of the operator. There is no necessity for bending forward or backward when operating the machine. Ease of operation, the automatic "clear" signal, the convenient slant of the keyboard are features of the Wales that insure accuracy and speedy operation. The durability of the Wales is vouched for by a five year guarantee. The Wales is the only adding machine on the market with a five year guarantee. Any bank, any mercantile house can get a Wales Visible Adding and Listing Machine for free trial simply by writing to the local agent. This trial is given without the user incurring any obligation whatever. In fact, such trials are gladly given, as 97 per cent of all Wales machines in use have sold themselves after competitive trials.

Will Prosecute Idaho Bankers

Fletcher Dobyns of the firm of Sheriff Bent, Dobyns & Freeman, formerly special assistant United States district attorney, who handled the case of the government in the prosecution of John R. Walsh, has been appointed by Attorney-General George W. Wickersham, as special assistant to the attorney-general, to aid in the prosecution of George H. Kester, William F. Kettenbach and Frank W. Kettenbach, officials of a national bank of Lewiston, Idaho, for the violation of banking laws. The case is set for trial March 13th in Boise City.

Des Moines, February 8.—The opponents of the tax ferret law in Iowa—and that includes the bankers most emphatically—scored again when the senate committee reported the bill repealing the tax ferret law for passage after listening several hours to the frenzied pleas of Major Worthington, of Des Moines, and Judge McCoy, of Oskaloosa, the two leading ferrets of the state. The ferrets made eloquent appeals for the law which keeps them in employment. They submitted huge stacks of figures. But after they had finished the senators calmly voted to recommend the bill for passage. The house had passed the bill the week previous. By time this appears in print, it is probable that the law will be repealed. It can never be revived in Iowa, so it is predicted.

Assessing Bank Shares

It is regarded as certain that the legislature will enact a law placing the assessment and taxation of stock in national, state and savings banks and trust companies on the one basis, that of assessing the individual shareholders. This is particularly true since there is much confusion as to the effect of the recent supreme court decision in the case of the First National of Estherville against the city council of that city as reviewed in these columns recently. The demand for copies of this opinion has almost swamped the clerk of the supreme court. It is probable that Attorney-General Cosson will be asked to give an opinion as to the meaning of the decision, which opinion will be published so that the confusion in the minds of bankers and assessors may be dispelled. To a layman it looks as if the United States supreme court held that the Iowa method of taxing a state bank was illegal, while the Iowa supreme court held that the method of taxing national banks was illegal. It is this tangle that has set the legislators to work in an effort to straighten things out.

Deposits of State Funds

Representative E. R. Moore, of Linn county, a well known banker, has introduced a bill in the Iowa house of representatives providing that any national or state bank, authorized to do business in Iowa and approved by the executive council, may become a state depository upon filing with the state treasurer a corporation bond by a surety company or sufficient municipal, state, county or government bonds. These bonds must be approved by the executive council. The state treasurer will then deposit in these institutions the funds of the state of Iowa. These moneys in the state depositories shall be deemed as in the state treasury. The amount at any time on deposit shall not exceed the paid up capital of the bank or one-half of the penalty of the bond filed nor three-fourths of the value of the bonds filed.

Notable Wedding of Banker

The wedding of William G. Baker of the banking firm of Baker, Watts & Company, of Baltimore, and Miss Mary Drake Sawyers, at Centerville, was one of the largest and most fashionable in the history of Iowa. The event occurred at the Christian church at Centerville and the ceremony was performed by Rev. Mott H. Sawyers of Davenport, uncle of the bride. Over 2,000 invitations were issued to the wedding, some of them going to European royalty. The groom and his party came to Centerville in a private car. Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Shonts of New York also came from New York in a private car. Mrs. Shonts is an aunt of the bride. The bride is a granddaughter of the late Governor F. M. Drake, and daughter of Dr. J. L. Sawyers of Centerville. She met Mr. Baker while attending school in the East. Immediately after the wedding the bride and groom left in a private car for Florida.

Clash over Bond Taxes

The house of representatives developed its first big row of the session over the question of permitting banks to deduct from their property held for taxation, bonds which are exempted under the laws and which they hold in their possession. Representative Fournier introduced a bill repealing the section which permits this deduction. The storm broke and the debate waxed eloquent. An attempt was made to send the bill to the ways and means committee but it finally went to the judiciary where it is reposing at this writing.

Trust Company to Boost City

The trust company idea which has been adopted by Sioux City as a method of getting new factories, is being considered also by the Greater Des Moines committee of Des Moines. The system, copied after the plan at Williamsport, Pa., is for the banks and business men to associate and form a trust company whose funds will be used in securing new industries. John McHugh of Sioux City, investigated the plan and it was upon his return that the new trust company was formed in that city. The Greater Des Moines committee has received many assurances from Des Moines business men that the scheme will be cordially received in this city.

Assailant is Found Insane

Gus Klang, the young man who threatened to shoot B. A. Plummer of the First National at Spencer, has been found insane and sent to the hospital at Cherokee. Mr. Plummer was walking along the street when Klang approached him, produced a gun and declared that the banker was trying to hypnotize him. "Will you quit?" he demanded as he pointed the gun at the banker. Needless to say Plummer agreed to quit. The young man was taken into custody without delay.

Showing of Reserve Banks

The report of the comptroller of the currency as to the showing made by the national banks of Iowa exclusive of the reserve cities pursuant to the call of January 7th shows the average reserve held at 15.95 per cent, as against 16.57 per cent on November 10th. Loans and discounts in December decreased from $103,364,940 to $103,025,506; gold coin from $2,582,692 to $2,435,642; lawful money reserve from $7,912,472 to $7,273,470; individual deposits from $97,800,434 to $97,600,397.

Iowa Banking Notes

The movement which has been agitated at Cedar Rapids and Davenport for having the savings banks open on Saturday nights to accommodate the wage earners, has started in Des Moines. Many of the bankers are opposed to the plan and there does not seem any probability that it will be adopted here in the near future, at least.

Senator Smith of Mitchell, has introduced in the Iowa senate a bill providing that bills of lading shall be made negotiable instruments and uniform. This has been favored by the

An Eastern View

Nelson Royal, president of the Des Moines Trust Company, upon his return from a trip to New Hampshire recently, gave it as his opinion that New England investors have taken an antagonistic view of the West. Mr. Royal ascribes this antipathy to the fact that western people are inclined to be "insurgent" and insist that railroads, for instance, be limited in their returns to an amount based upon the actual investments in these properties. "They have been accustomed so long to the western people uncomplainingly paying interest upon excessive capitalization of railways that, when they arise and enter a protest, the East looks upon it as a danger signal in the financial sky," said Mr. Royal.

John Fowler, arrested in Des Moines and sent to the penitentiary for five years for obtaining money by false pretenses, confessed to a deputy sheriff while enroute to Fort Madison, that he formerly was a bank teller in England and that he stole a large amount from an institution there. Fowler declared that he had a mania for travel and that it was to gratify this ambition that he embezzled the funds. He declared that he has been around the world four times. While the young man seemed to be telling the truth, he refused to give the name of the bank with which he claimed to have been identified in England.

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Banking conditions in the Central West are generally satisfactory although some financiers are not inclined to be optimistic over the outlook for business. Undoubtedly, as is pointed out by J. R. Dominick, president of the Traders' National Bank of Kansas City, and others, there are indications of a slow market in most commodities. Men who handle cattle paper on an extensive scale are somewhat discouraged by the slower prices, which, they say, will cut into the feeders' profits to a serious extent. The present winter has been ideal for feeding. No cattle in the Southwest have been killed by storms or severe cold weather, but the live stock market is slow with a downward tendency.

"There is a good demand for money," said Thornton Cooke, treasurer of the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City, "and I consider conditions favorable for this time of the year. There has not been as much moisture as was hoped for, which is retarding agricultural operations. Little money is being used for speculative purposes and there is plenty available for legitimate business enterprises." Mr. Cooke has just returned from a tour of investigation in central and western Kansas and he is reassured about conditions there. Practically the same situation is reported from most of the Central Western territory although in western Nebraska the drought remains unbroken and the wheat outlook is almost hopeless. There are comparatively few business failures in this district and merchants generally are cleaning up their winter stocks in fairly good shape. The banks have plenty of money and rates are easy. J. W. Perry, president of the National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City, is of the opinion that the banks in this territory will continue to be well supplied with money for some months to come.

Form Alliance against Crime

Representatives of banks in five states met in Kansas City last week to take steps to form a protective association against yeggmen who have been operating so actively in this territory within the past few months. This meeting was the result of many smaller meetings and conferences and was well attended. As the action of the meeting must be ratified by the various state associations represented in the conference—Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Arkansas—it will be several weeks yet before the Bankers' Co-operative Alliance will be fully organized and upon a working basis. The plan decided upon is to establish a detective force to aid country banks. It will have its headquarters in Kansas City because of its central location and will operate in all of the five states in the association. It will do nothing but hunt bank robbers. A resolution was adopted asking each association and company to increase its reward, for each robber caught and convicted to $500. The present reward varies, but the largest amount any one association offers is $150.

When the reward is increased it will mean that $1,000 will be paid for the conviction of each robber, $500 by the state association and $500 by the co-operative alliance. The cost of the detective force will be distributed among the five state associations and six bank insurance companies in the conference. One detective will be on duty at the headquarters to be available immediately upon call. The new association will be called the Bankers' Co-operative Alliance. A. H. Waite, vice-president of the Missouri State Bankers association, was elected president and W. W. Bowman, secretary of the Kansas State Bankers association was made secretary.

Those who attended the conference and formed the Bankers' Co-operative Alliance were: W. B. Hughes, secretary Nebraska State Bankers Association, Omaha; W. W. Bowman, secretary of the Kansas State Bankers Association, Topeka; W. B. Harrison, secretary of the Oklahoma State Bankers Association, Enid; Charles Waite, secretary of the Arkansas State Bankers Association, Little Rock; F. W. Keyser, secretary of the Missouri State Bankers Association, Sedalia; A. H. Waite, vice-president of the Missouri State Bankers Association, Joplin; Albert L. Berger, attorney of the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Company, Kansas City, Kan.; E. G. Bogard, western manager of the Ocean Accident and Guaranty Company, Chicago; T. W. Snyder, manager Kansas Protective Association, Topeka; W. H. Burks, president of the Kansas State Bankers Association, Wellington; James Malone, chief of police, Lincoln, Neb.; R. A. Algire, Kansas manager of the National Surety Company, Kansas City, Mo.; and R. R. Caulkins, treasurer of the Missouri State Bankers Association, St. Louis.

"Arrangements for this conference have been under way for some time," remarked Mr. Harrison of Oklahoma, in discussing the meeting. "The movement had its inception in the heavy losses experienced by burglary insurance companies on banks in Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas during the early fall months. The losses were greater in Kansas than elsewhere and the secretary of the Kansas State Bankers Association took the initiative in calling the conference. The Kansas banks have been robbed of approximately $100,000 within a few months."

Several Banks are Looted

Three banks were looted in the Southwest last week. The Linwood State Bank, twenty-five miles west of Kansas City, was robbed early Monday morning by yeggmen who blew the safe and secured $1,800. The bank is owned by Willis J. Foeles, of Lawrence, Kan. The citizens of Linwood were awakened by the noise of the robbers at work but were kept within their houses by the warnings of confederates who patrolled the streets. The robbers escaped.

Five robbers blew open the safe of the State Bank of Elk Falls, Elk Falls, Kan., and obtained $2,700. They escaped in an automobile heading for the Osage hills in northern Oklahoma. A posse is in pursuit.

At Duncanville, Texas, a band of robbers worked for more than two hours on the safe of the Farmers' Bank while a number of venturesome residents were forced to stand in line and watch the operations. The vault was destroyed and about $2,000 in money was taken. The robbers escaped on a handcar.

Banking Notes

Tom Riggs, recently arrested by Sheriff Johnson of Hemphill, Tex., has been identified by Henry Goode, cashier of the Cheyenne Bank, Cheyenne, Okla., as the man who held up that bank and robbed it several weeks ago. Riggs was arrested at Canadian, Tex.

Merchants of Kansas have united to work for a bill now before the legislature of that state to prohibit the issuance of checks by those who have not sufficient funds in the bank to meet them.

The following officers and directors of the Citizens' Bank of Springfield, Mo., have been elected: President, Jerome O'Hara; vice-president, Ed V. Williams; cashier, Thomas Watkins; assistant cashier, Ross Whitlock. The latter was elected a director to fill the vacancy caused by the death of J. C. Rule. With this exception all the old directors were elected as follows: Jerome O'Hara, Ed. V. Williams, H. B. McDaniel, Thomas Watkins, W. J. McDaniel and J. T. Evans.

John F. Downing, president of the New England National Bank of Kansas City, has been in the East getting in touch with the financial conditions there.

George W. Barnes, millionaire oil operator and president of the Commercial National Bank of Muskogee, Okla., died last week at Monte Carlo where he was visiting. He had been ill for many months and had gone abroad to benefit his health.

The Missouri legislature is considering, among many other bills affecting banking, a measure making it a misdemeanor to circulate false reports damaging to the credit of banking institutions. It has been favorably reported to the house.

Among the visiting bankers in Kansas City last week were: W. E. Dunnegan, cashier of the Polk County (Mo.) bank; W. M. Kennison, president and A. H. Warner, cashier, of the Garden City National Bank of Garden City, Kan.; W. O. Horr, president of the Cotton Exchange Bank of Elk City, Okla.; W. L. Poynter, cashier of the Clinton National Bank of Clinton, Mo.; J. F. Blair, cashier of the bank of Belton, Mo.; M. D. Sampson, cashier of the Solomon National Bank, Solomon, Kan.; J. C. Snyder, cashier of the Jefferson County National Bank, Oskaloosa, Kan.; F. P. Metzger, president of the German-American State Bank, Topeka; J. E. Corley, president of the Wichita State Savings Bank.

Retires after 44 Years' Service

After a service of forty-years with Fourth National Bank, Cincinnati, during which he was advanced from a clerk to the vice-presidency and a director, H. P. Cooke on February 1st retired from active participation in the affairs of the bank. Mr. Cooke will, however, retain his official titles.

The retirement of Mr. Cooke will remove from the banking district one of its most familiar figures. Immediately after the close of the Civil War he came to Cincinnati, and went into Fourth National Bank in a minor position. He advanced rapidly into the confidence of Morris White and was made cashier of the bank, in which capacity he was the principal aid of Mr. White in the conduct of the institution.

The reason for Mr. Cooke's retirement is the condition of his health, which necessitates a long rest from business.

Plan to Entertain

Kansas City bankers are making preparations for the entertainment of the Kansas and Missouri bankers who will attend the joint meeting of the two state associations in Kansas City May 24th and 25th. While the actual business sessions of the conventions will be separate the convention is in effect a joint affair and from a social standpoint will be one. J. F. Downing, representing the Kansas City clearing house association, has appointed committees to look after the entertainment of the visitors. The general committee is composed of the chairmen of the clearing house association and the chairman of each of the various committees of the clearing house. The entertainment committee is composed of the following: G. S. Hovey, chairman; C. G. Hutcheson, Jerome Thralls, J. M. Moore, C. L. Brokaw, J. R. Dominick, Thornton Cooke and W. T. Atkinson. The reception committee will be: E. F. Swinney, J. W. Perry, P. W. Goebel, J. Z. Miller, Jr., F. P. Neal, C. S. Jobes, W. H. Holmes, W. T. Kemper, J. T. M. Johnston, H. C. Lambert. The ladies' committee will be: W. S. Webb, Henry Koehler, G. B. Gray, A. D. Rider, J. B. Pollard, K. L. Browne, G. M. Smith and others to be named. The speakers' committee will also be named later.

Patten a Bear on Wheat

James A. Patten holds extremely bearish views of the entire grain list. "I expect to see wheat sell down to 10 cents and possibly 20 cents per bushel if we get rains in the Southwest any time in the next six weeks," said he yesterday. The market is due for a big decline in any event, as we must find a place for our surplus. There is corn everywhere, and export demands, even if they break the record, can only make a faint impression on our supplies. Oats will certainly have to find an outlet abroad, as there is no end of that grain in this country, and the only wonder is that it has held up as long as it has."

Gary Plant Resumes in Full

More than 1,000 employees of the Gary plant of the Illinois Steel Company have been told to report for duty on February 15th, as the entire plant will resume operations at that time.

J. L. Crawford is the newly-elected president of Terre Haute National.

Indiana Banker in Town

Cashier Leslie M. Springer of Kokomo National Bank was a caller at Central Trust the fore part of the week. Mr. Springer reported business in a prosperous condition in his locality.

War on Robbers

The extensive and successful operations of bank robbers throughout the Middle West during the past few months have aroused bankers in the states affected and some radical action looking toward a lessening of this activity is likely to result. Recent robberies have been more daring and bold than anything since the time when the James boys went the rounds in Missouri.

The recent meeting at Kansas City, which was attended by prominent bankers from five states, was the first step. At that meeting a plan was affected for organizing a detective force to aid country officers in capturing bank robbers. The conference was composed of presidents and secretaries of State Bankers Associations, and the managers of bank-burglary departments of insurance companies.

According to the plan the headquarters of the detective force will be in Kansas City. It will have to do only with bank robberies, and will cover Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska.

Steel Earnings

The income account of the United States Steel Corporation for 1910 shows that the actual surplus for dividends after all deductions, not including appropriations for new construction, amounted to $87,563,500, a sum equal to 24.4 per cent on the preferred stock. Deducting the preferred dividend there remained a surplus equal to 12.3 per cent on the common, comparing with 10.6 per cent in the preceding year, 4 per cent in 1908 and 15.6 per cent in 1907. The average balance available for common dividends from 1902 to 1910, inclusive, was 9.1 per cent a year. It is well known, however, that the larger percentage of surplus available for common dividends went into new construction. The balance for dividends, which in 1910 amounted to 24.4 per cent on the preferred, compared with 21.9 per cent in 1909, 12.9 per cent in 1908, and 29.2 per cent in 1907. For the last nine years the average annual balance for dividends was equal to 20.3 per cent on the preferred.

From the foregoing figures it will be seen that the preferred stock can be classed with good investment securities, an evidence of which is found in the fact that the surplus available for dividends averaged almost three times the annual 7 per cent a year requirement.

The earnings of the United States Steel Corporation in 1902 amounted to $133,308,000, comparing with $141,144,000 in 1910.

Enlargement of Argo Plant

The finance committee of the Corn Products Refining Company has appropriated sufficient funds for the construction of the second unit of the Argo plant, which will increase the capacity to between 40,000 and 50,000 bushels of corn a day. Cost of the addition will be between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. One officer says it will be paid for either by the sale of the old Chicago property or by sale of the first mortgage bonds, of which the company has $3,000,000 available for capital expenditure. Work will be begun as soon as the weather permits in the spring. Manufacturing now being done at the Indianapolis plant will be transferred to Argo when the new unit is completed, and the Indianapolis factory will be held as a reserve plant. The Corn Products Refining Company is at present receiving all the business it can handle, although this is generally the dull season of the year.

required to deposit them in a private bank. There would seem to be no more reason for that than there would be for turning the funds over to a private individual. It is true, provision is made that such banker or bankers shall give bond; but we do not think this alters the case."

THUS it has been settled in Illinois and Michigan, by competent authority, that custodians of public funds cannot lawfully deposit them in a private bank.

RALPH N. BALLOU, cashier of the National Produce, Chicago, was instrumental in establishing the First National of Downers Grove, last year and takes great pride in its development. On opening day there were deposits of $23,346.07 which nearly doubled by the first call of the comptroller. At the January 7th call, this year, the showing was three-to-one—$68,940.74. J. Warren Rogers is president, Mr. Ballou is vice-president and Samuel Curtis is cashier.

ELLA L. RORER, cashier of the First National of Gilman, Ill., is pretty proud of the $261,644.71 in deposits shown at last call.

JUDGE S. B. MONTGOMERY'S friends down the state are putting him forward for the chairmanship of the Illinois council at the Springfield meeting of the association. Montgomery is president of a private bank at Rush Valley, but it is expected that he would stand as an incorporated banker, being an officer in E. J. Parker's State Loan and Savings Bank at Quincy.

RUMOR has it that his Rush Valley bank may qualify him doubly by incorporating. You know it will be incorporated banker year, owing to the silly system of alternation prevailing in Illinois.

JUDGE MONTGOMERY is good enough man for any job regardless of trivial questions. Probably there will be other questions, and there is talk of a strong Chicago candidate.

THE "boy banker," Illinois' most youthful private banker, did not appear in court at Peoria as agreed with his bondsmen, last week. He wasn't long in business but he had three "banks" going long enough to be known in history. The "banking" was done at St. David, Ellisville and Glasford.

YOUNG Mr. Butler unconsciously did a great deal for bank supervision in Illinois. The story is that he hurt the public's confidence so in private banking that eight or ten privates only are waiting until the excitement blows over when they will incorporate. "Thus we profit even in adversity."

JOSEPH CHAPMAN, JR., of Minneapolis, was in Chicago on Wednesday en route to the Panama and South America. He dined with the Chicago Association of Commerce at the La Salle, through the good offices of "Farmer" Edens. Mr. Chapman will be gone about one month.

MASSACHUSETTS has a bill before her legislature intended to establish savings banks in her public schools. All moneys so collected would be immediately deposited in the regularly incorporated savings banks.

CHICAGO public schools had a system but who knows about it? We have had inquiries.

BACHE & CO., in their weekly circular, continue to pour in hot shot on the big broad back of President Taft. Our opinion is that most of it is justified by the facts from a Wall Street viewpoint.

LOOSE leaf and card index systems in banks are likely to come to an end in Wisconsin. The new banking bill, now up for passage will not permit their use in banks, if passed. Banks, so the bill says, "must keep their accounts in permanently bound books."

REAL estate loans, so far as the Wisconsin banks are concerned, are likely to be confined to Wisconsin lands.

JAMES K. ILSLEY, the big Milwaukee banker, is outspoken against the bank guaranty program now under way at Madison. Mr. Ilsley says that "it is hardly conceivable that the present legislature will ignore the recommendations made by the special committee of Wisconsin bankers, or that they will inflict upon Wisconsin such a doubtful experiment as is now being tried out in Oklahoma."

"LET the legislature, by all means, give greater power to the state banking department" says Mr. Ilsley "and provide for more frequent and more thorough examinations and by these means prevent, if possible such failures the First National of Mineral Point. But in the attempt to provide for such sporadic and infrequent breakdowns, do not let them provide a remedy that would sooner or later weaken the entire banking system and inevitably lead to results that would be many times more disastrous than the failure of any single institution."

OTHER strong men in Wisconsin will take a decided stand in opposition to the guaranty bills becoming laws of the state. From reports direct from Madison it would seem that not only prompt but very earnest work will be required if the bills are to be headed off.

IOWA bankers are a chesty lot when it comes to speaking of "choice Iowa farm mortgages" as an investment for surplus funds. You can't blame them.

FRANK VAN ERDEWYK, cashier of the Breda Savings Bank, says they have a quarter of a million of the very best of them. In four years the Breda Savings has gone up from $90,394.44 to $379,797.02, which shows that the depositors like the Van Erdevyk idea of securing their money against loss.

THE Breda bank has a circular out which other bankers would do well to see. Our belief is that all banks should take their customers into their confidence to the fullest extent. The Breda circular will show you a simple plan of doing it.

WILLIAM R. COMPTON CO., Chicago and St. Louis, have out a mighty attractive circular showing good 6 per cent real estate bonds.

THE spirit of progress animates the banking world, and the perfecting of machinery for the more expeditious handling of business between banks in our own and foreign countries, is continually going on.—Northwestern National, Minneapolis.

THE bond market may have its periods of dullness and weakness, but we are firmly of the belief that the general tendency is upward, and that the good grade of bonds of railroad, public service and industrial corporations can be bought without hesitation.—Spencer Trask & Co.

AN advertisement reads: "Pinkerton's Bank and Bankers Protection is not in any way a Banking Association similar to the American Bankers Association."

And this isn't printed in the Fijis either?

THAT Richmond row, which we thought had been settled, still is on. John L. Williams & Company, bankers, refuse to move from their present quarters in the Chamber of Commerce Building to let a syndicate financed by the First National tear down the building for the purpose of erecting a twenty-story skyscraper for use of the First National Bank, which is to have the street floor of the building.

NATIONAL CITY, Chicago, continues to be optimistic on the bond market situation. In its February circular letter it says: "We believe that the vast amount of money which is now flowing into all the large reserve cities will almost surely help the bond market and that there will be very much better buying of bonds by the banks and large lending institutions which are ordinarily able to lend their money out at better rates than those prevailing in the money market to-day. The large banks of Europe are obtaining better rates for their loanable funds than are the banks of the United States, which is a rather unusual situation. The general outlook is all right, and we believe that conditions will gradually get better and that there will be a decidedly better sentiment created from now on. The railroads will probably be allowed to increase a portion of their rates, although the situation at the moment indicates that the advances will not be general and that they will not be on any such scale as was asked for by the roads in their original applications. While there has been a great deal of discussion as to the possibility of a revision of the tariff, we believe that that is still a long ways off and that if any reductions are made they will be undertaken in a way which will cause the least possible unsettlement of trade conditions."

YOU bet! We're for Graham for mayor and this from as intimate a knowledge of the facts, of the requirements and of the men as comes to the average mortal. Yes, and further, it's a good guess he'll get the nomination.

BELLVILLE SAVINGS BANK, of which Richard Wangelin is cashier, is one of the best in Illinois. Deposits are almost two millions.

PRIVATE advices from Montgomery, Ala., state that the banking bill drawn up by the Alabama Bankers Association, and endorsed at the regular annual meeting on January 18th, has passed the house with only five dissenting voices. Already a favorable vote in the senate is assured.

R. J. STONEY, JR., editor of "The Banker," Pittsburgh, died suddenly at his home on last Sunday night. He had attended church in the morning, and his unexpected death is ascribed to heart failure. He was a vice-president of the Anchor National and active in state association work.

BANK DEPOSITORS GUARANTY CO., an Arizona corporation, has been enjoined from doing business in Ohio. The kick came from a stockholder who charged that shares had been sold as low as $10 each.

SOME of our Eastern contemporaries do not go very deeply into things. One of them continually refers to groups of the state organizations as "Group One of the American Bankers Association," for instance, when it should be of New York Association. Same paper keeps billing our big friend Ripley of the Santa Fe as president of the Chicago Title and Trust Company.

Tells of Improvement

President Charles G. Sanford of First National, Bridgeport, Conn., brought encouraging news to Western bankers a few days ago. He was a visitor at Fort Dearborn National and in answer to inquiries stated that there were indications of improvement in manufacturing and business generally all over the East.

"We have had a dull winter," said he, "but the worst is over and I look for a healthy activity in all lines this spring."

Deposits Gaining

Nearly all Chicago banks, in common with those in other large centers, report a continued gain in deposits. Money is not to be described as inactive in this market and yet the business situation has not improved sufficiently to cause an advance in discount rates. The market stands on a 5 per cent level, with a few transactions fractionally under this figure and occasionally one at $5\frac{1}{4}$ to $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

Bankers find encouragement in the condition of the bond market. The willingness of those needing capital to pay 5 to 6 per cent is shown by the bond sales. Nearly all local transactions are in securities returning at least 5 per cent. The volume of this business is large enough to impart a healthy tone to the money market and tide it over until the commercial activity incident to spring ensues.

The supply of money is likely to exceed the demand for some weeks yet collections in the main are good and the growth of deposits is a natural result of this, taken in connection with a fair mercantile trade and a quite general employment of labor. It is undoubtedly true that discounts have gained in volume within the last ten days and still they do not keep pace with the supply of money. Bankers anticipate a broader employment of capital through the West in the next few weeks, with a tendency toward higher quotations. These will be the usual mercantile and manufacturing needs, somewhat extensive railroad requirements and at least a moderate demand from the interior. City real estate development already is giving a little zest to the money market. Real estate loans in the main are at 5 per cent.

South Prospers

"The South is in the most prosperous condition it has known since the war. It is not merely prosperity in a single line of industry, but in every line. Not many years ago everything depended on the cotton crop, but that is not the case any more. Our great prosperity is due to a diversity of interests, and we have made progress just in proportion as we have got out of the rut and sought the advantages of diversified farming and diversified business."

The above statement would have served as the subject for a Horace Greeley editorial forty years ago. Many editors can write a column and say less in it than the speaker put in those few lines.

The remarks are from M. G. Buckingham, of Memphis, who was interviewed by a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER Tuesday. Mr. Buckingham, who is vice-president of United States Trust and Savings Bank and cashier of State National in the Tennessee metropolis, was a visitor at Fort Dearborn National, where he gave much interesting information about improved conditions in the South.

"A pretty good evidence of our prosperity is the advance in land," said he. "Lands all through that section are to-day renting for as much as they were selling for ten years ago. There is about the same rate of progress in Arkansas as in Tennessee. The rice industry is developing finely. The large returns from the last cotton crop are giving that country a great boost, but in reality it is mixed farming that is sending the people forward. Nearly every farmer has such a variety of products that he must prosper anyway. We have splendid markets there for all kinds of live stock as well as products of the soil."

Fewer Crimes

Bank robberies have become fewer in the Central West owing to the unusual activity of the police authorities. The famous Wymore gang, of Wymore, Neb., seems to have been broken up with the arrest of four men alleged to be members. These prisoners are now in jail at Marysville, Kan., waiting trial. The one robbery of interest during the past week was at Hollister, Okla., where the bank was blown by four men who escaped in a motor car. It has not been announced how much of the bank's money was taken. The bank authorities claim that the robbers were driven off before they had taken anything of value.

Geo. M. Reynolds in the East

Geo. M. Reynolds left for the East Thursday night, intending to be absent for a week.

Two Western Leaders in Association Work

E. W. PURDY
Bellingham, Wash.

Mr. Purdy is president of the First National at Bellingham and president of the Washington Bankers' Association. He was early in the harness and helped materially to bring the state association up to its present high standard of efficiency.

H. VAN DEUSEN
Rock Springs, Wyo.

Mr. Van Deusen is cashier of the Rock Springs National and secretary of the Wyoming Bankers' Association, which is coming rapidly to the front. Mr. Van Deusen belongs to the younger crowd, which recognizes the value of organization.

Bonds Active

Western Trust and Savings Bank and Geo. H. Burr & Co., are offering at 99, 99½ and interest the remaining $500,000 of the Karpen Building 5 per cent bonds.

Following repeated offers for city 4 per cent stock from large banking houses, the board of finance commissioners has decided to dispose of $1,000,000 city stock at public sale after March 1st.

The Farwell Trust Company and the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank are offering the balance of the $2,000,000 of new Diamond Match debenture 6s not taken by the stockholders. The notes are selling around 102½ in the local market.

Wisconsin Railroad Commission has authorized the Madison Gas Company to issue $627,000 thirty year 6 per cent bonds, to be part of a proposed issue totaling $3,000,000, dated October 1, 1911, collectible any interest date at 110.

The Harris Trust and Savings Bank was awarded $850,000 of Seattle school district 4½ per cent bonds, due serially 1912 to 1931. The bank already has placed over $600,000 of these bonds. The proceeds of the issue are as follows: $600,000 for school site, building and furnishing; $150,000 for school funding and $100,000 for school grounds.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

A DOWN state banker who is in the swim tells us that Lampert of the Ft. Dearborn is being talked of for member of the big executive council of the A. B. A., to be elected at the Springfield convention. He cites Lampert's good qualities in a way which would cause that good natured gentleman to blush were it to be repeated here.

THE same informant says he never felt right after Greene was "bounced" for George at the barbecue on George's farm—not until Greene was "vindicated" at the Moline talk-fest.

NOW that that has been squared he is for Crabtree for the big council to start the old order of things all over again, by giving the retiring president of the state association a term as the state representative in things national. Many states do this as any one can see by looking over the list. This puts good, trained men where they may get clear to the top of official preferment, as president of the A. B. A.

L. A. GODDARD will retire this year from the big council and Nelson H. Greene of Moline will succeed.

NEXT year William George of Aurora and J. O. Wilson of Bloomington will retire and Lampert and Crabtree or some other equally good men will be elected. You see that Greene, a "countryman" will have taken the place of Goddard of Chicago, and the correct geographical balance can be restored by electing, next year, one man from down state and one from Chicago.

OF course this is "early," but you know the old saw on that subject.

THERE are a mighty lot of improvements in the proceedings book of the American Bankers Association convention at Los Angeles. All the sections are included in one fine volume and the indexing of the members of council, alone, shows one almost invaluable refinement. All the standard features are present and the press-work—done on merit and not by favor—is fine. The portraits are exceptionally good, and all-in-all we can toss our bouquet at the feet of the general-secretary with our blessing. Good printing at a right price has taken the place of job-work at a maximum. Give Col. Farnsworth and a loyal council full credit for the improvement.

SOME of you do not know the chaos from which 11 Pine Street emerged right after the Atlantic City convention. In an effort to stir up the ex-members of the big council with the prospects of organizing the down-and-outers into the council club, a list of ex-members was requested at the general office. There was none. No list of deceased either—in fact there were no "records" to be found. Now you don't have to wait for information to be dug up; it's ready. Quite a change in the weather since 1907.

PROBABLY the location of the next convention will be settled at the Nashville meeting of the council. Out west it looks like

San Antonio. Down east they talk Atlantic City. The bankers met seven times at Saratoga Springs and some want to adopt Atlantic City as a regular thing. The convention is getting to be quite a burden to "entertain" in any city. Costs the local banks a pile of money. Many bankers hope to see the day when all meetings will be held where hotels abound and where they may entertain themselves.

TALK of a convention on water, like a trip to Panama, is heard and if the proper manager should come forward it may be done.

COMMODORE LIVINGSTONE, a real water dog, will be president next year and perhaps he will find the way to make it a lake event. That would be fine.

RUMOR has it that Frank P. Judson has tired of the commercial paper business and will retire from Rickards & Co., about April 1st and take a running jump back to the soil. Mr. Judson has a nice farm, not far out, but the California siren has been singing a sweet song and perhaps he will locate there.

MR. JUDSON is said to have landed on something very fine, in the way of an undeveloped land tract, where water can be had,—well this part of it is a secret. Those who know Mr. Judson will not require assurance that the deal is more of a certainty than a gamble.

THOMAS C. CLARK, recently elected judge of the superior court, has been appointed to sit in the branch appellate court in place of Judge Julian Mack who resigned to take up his duties in the federal Court of Commerce. This is quite a tribute to Judge Clark, who was elected on the democratic ticket at the last election. He is a resident of Evanston and is a fine lawyer and student of literature.

"THE signs multiply that in his proposal of reciprocity with Canada, in his special message to congress on the subject, and in his speech at the Ohio dinner in Washington, President Taft has made the hit of his administration." This is the way Harper's Weekly scores a single bagger for our portly president.

OFFICIALS of the trust company section are being congratulated upon the decision made by the governing board of the postal savings banks, pointing out that trust companies doing banking business under state supervision may become depositaries of postal savings bank funds. When this law was up for passage in congress, no attempt was made by the officials of the section to have trust companies specifically named. The reason for this is quite evident. Many of them do not do a banking business and in some states they are not subject to supervision by the banking department.

UNDER the decision of the board of trustees, private banks are not permitted to receive or hold postal savings bank funds, being regarded simply as individual enterprises. In any state where no bank is willing to take the postal funds at the rate of interest prescribed, they may be deposited with the United States treasurer.

SECRETARY BABCOCK of the trust company section has a hobby for collecting samples of newspaper advertising matter, booklets, pamphlets, folders, etc., relating to the business of trust company banking. These have been indexed and arranged at his office at 11 Pine Street, New York, for the benefit of those interested in the subject. A great many trust company officials have expressed their satisfaction at this arrangement.

MEMBERSHIP in the savings bank section now numbers over eighteen hundred. The section loses about fifty members each year owing to the present day fashion of amalgamating savings banks with other banks.

UNDER the constitution savings departments operated by national banks are entitled to membership in the section. They are not required, however, to pay any additional dues. State banks and trust companies are entitled to the same courtesy.

NOW that at least a half dozen state legislatures are trying to pass guaranty laws, it is interesting to note that at the Los Angeles convention, the American Bankers Association went upon record as being "unalterably opposed" to guaranty of deposits in any form.

COPIES of the resolution passed covering the guaranty question can be had from Secretary Farnsworth at 11 Pine Street, New York. It states in most decided language the conviction of the association that guaranty leads to reckless banking and places a dangerous tool in the hands of the unscrupulous and inexperienced.

PITTSBURGH CLEARING HOUSE has had a committee at work for some time investigating the subject of clearing house bank examinations. The committee has visited both Chicago and St. Louis where the system has been in operation successfully. The report made by this committee is exhaustive and very interesting even to those who are familiar with the subject.

COPIES of practically all the documents in use by the examiners and by the clearing houses have been included in the report. Explanations of how these blanks are used are very fully made.

THE committee asked for and obtained the opinions of leading bankers in both of the cities. For Chicago, James B. Forgan, David R. Forgan, and W. T. Fenton furnished the strongest kind of endorsement for the plan. Mr. Forgan forgot to say in his letter that Mr. Fenton is entitled to the credit of suggesting the employment of a clearing house examiner by the Chicago clearing house.

CHICAGO is the pioneer city in this new function of clearing house work and perhaps nothing more important of like character can be pointed out as having occurred within the last ten years. Mr. Fenton in his letter was

Bankers Endorse Aldrich Plan

Favorable result of conference held by leading financiers regarding National Reserve Association

Leading financiers representing all sections of the United States have held a conference and indorsed the principles of Senator Aldrich's plan for a central reserve association.

This meeting was held at Atlantic City Friday, Saturday and Monday, and was attended by twenty-two bankers. Senator Aldrich had asked a large number of representative business men to meet for an exchange of views. The senator was not present, as his health is bad and he is spending the winter in the South. Congressman Vreeland, chairman of the monetary commission, presided.

The debate was without restriction, and while certain changes in details were agreed on the general scheme for reforming the nation's currency laws was approved. Nearly every banker there went with his own notions as to what would be proper amendments, but when the numerous suggestions were made and voted upon they were nearly all voted down.

George M. Reynolds, who, with J. B. Forgan, represented Chicago at the meeting, said:

"The bankers in attendance at the conference represented every section of the country, and were regarded as representative of the banking interests of the community from which they came. Senator Aldrich's recommendations were taken up paragraph by paragraph, and sometimes by clauses and deliberated upon. I must say that when it was all over we had to confess that the draft of the bill as prepared by Senator Aldrich came near covering in some form or another about every idea that the different bankers could present. We did, however, vote to recommend some changes.

"One of these was to change the maximum amount of dividend which the reserve association should pay its stockholders, from 5 per cent to 6 per cent. It was argued that some of the smaller banks in newer parts of the country were entitled to receive more than 5 per cent on their investment in the reserve association, since their loaning rates to customers are much above that figure. We voted, therefore, to raise the maximum dividend to 6 per cent. At

Carbon Stock is Reinstated

At a meeting of the governing committee of the Chicago Stock Exchange Wednesday the $4,500,000 of preferred stock and the $5,500,000 of common stock of the National Carbon Company were admitted to the regular trading list of the exchange. This admission of these stocks to the regular list follows their expulsion last December from the unlisted department of the exchange.

The expulsion was due to the confusion that resulted from the failure of the company to notify the exchange of the declaration of an extra cash dividend of $15 a share on the common stock, the exchange receiving its first information when local stockholders of the company received their dividend checks. Numerous traders bought the stock above $140 a share expecting to get an extra dividend, only to find that the books had been closed and the dividend paid without public notice.

J. H. Montay Dies Suddenly

J. H. Montay, a capitalist and recently president of the State Bank of Enid, Okla., died suddenly of heart failure last week. At the time of his death he was a director of the Guarantee Bond and Trust Company of Enid, and had interests in several other banks and trust companies of Oklahoma.

Aurora, Elgin & Chicago shows a gain of $17,000 in passenger earnings for January.

the same time we recommended a further change in the distribution of profits.

"The present recommendation of Senator Aldrich provides that after the reserve association shall have accumulated a surplus of 20 per cent and the stockholders shall have been paid 5 per cent, then all the profits shall go to the government. We thought that if it was good for an individual association to have a strong reserve the same would be true of the great central association, and we recommended that after the 6 per cent dividend to stockholders, one-third of the profits should go to surplus and the remaining two-thirds to the government.

"The question of commercial paper was thoroughly discussed and the bankers agreed that in addition to the ordinary kinds of commercial paper the notes of one bank to its reserve correspondent should be considered available paper to deposit with the reserve association. The same was true of rediscounts.

"The conference recommended that there be no tax on the circulation taken over by the reserve association when it purchases the government bonds securing such circulation. We thought the reserve association should pay a premium of 2½ per cent for the 2 per cent bonds against which most of the national bank circulation is now issued. The national banks of the country are carrying as an asset about $11,000,000 premiums on these bonds."

Another leading banker who attended made this statement:

"The conference has approved the Aldrich plan as it was submitted by him to the monetary commission, and while some may refer to it as a central control of issue, yet it is different in many essentials, and solves the problem of providing that elasticity in currency which the political laws do not provide. The representatives of the banking world of the nation can be said, after the decision here, to have given their indorsement and moral and active support to the Aldrich plan."

New Organization

Report of the organizing of a separate body of Wisconsin state banks, which will not include those institutions operating under the sole supervision of the national government, is discredited by Secretary G. D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association.

"Our organization includes both state and national banks, and any such association of state banks as described in the report would imply a secession on the part of the latter from the regular body," said Mr. Bartlett.

"I believe the report emanated from some talk of an informal gathering of state bank officials in this vicinity to discuss the guaranty and other bills relating to banks which had hearings last week in Madison.

"The national and state banks hold different views of the guaranty bill and it was thought that the state bankers could accomplish more by concerted action. However, to my knowledge there has been no talk of a formal organization of the state banks."

Monster Banquet

Philadelphia, February 17.—A banquet with 600 guests was given to-night at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel under the auspices of Philadelphia bankers. Nearly all the guests are bankers, and they came from every section.

Every financial institution in this city was represented, and these alone stand for resources of more than $952,000,000. The principal speakers were the newly elected United States senator from Washington, Miles Poin-dexter, George Wharton Pepper, of this city, and J. Frederick Bangs, author and playwright, Charles J. Rhoads, third vice-president of Girard Trust Company, was toastmaster.

Prominent in the list of guests are Judge William H. Moore, president of the Rock Island Railroad; William G. McDowell, president of the Norfolk and Western Railway; James M. Beck, G. H. B. McKnight, vice-president of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburgh, and Col. F. E. Farnsworth, secretary of the American Bankers Association.

Banker Graham Outlines His Mayoralty Platform

Andrew J. Graham tells why he thinks he should be nominated chief executive of the city of Chicago

What is the most vital subject to be considered in connection with the pending mayoralty election? Chicago, in a purely business sense, is on a par with some vast commercial enterprise. The taxes collected are the revenues of the municipality. The mayor as chief executive of this great corporation is responsible for the honest and efficient expenditure of approximately $60,000,000.

It is, therefore, expedient that the voters who are the stockholders in this vast enterprise should weigh well the question: Who shall direct the affairs of this commonwealth in order that every dollar spent may procure 100 per cent value received?

To the voters, therefore, this issue is paramount: Who of the many candidates proposed is the best fitted by training to serve the people for four years as mayor? Here is a great corporation with an annual budget of $50,000,000 that requires as its chief executive a man who must conscientiously appreciate the purchasing power of every dollar in this big total, who must install methods of economy that will get for the city the same value received in services rendered and articles purchased as do private firms and corporations.

At the very outset such a leader must impart to his administration the inspiration that no act of dishonesty, neglect, or inefficiency will ever be tolerated. A uniform rule of reward for those who excel and speedy dismissal for the grafter or the laggard must prevail. A progressive economy must be the guiding spirit.

The secret of successful government, whether national or municipal, is honesty—not just passive honesty, but honesty of that active form which spells efficiency. If every task undertaken, no matter how great or how small, were placed in the scales and weighed against honesty and efficiency, our municipal government would be a credit instead of a continued target for attack.

Comparison between inefficient municipal administration and efficient business administration would not be drawn to the disadvantage of the former if such a principle were once adopted and rigidly adhered to. The reason for so many municipal administration failures is that political machinery has been allowed to run wild and that few men occupying the position of chief executive of our city have had the courage or the ability to do for the municipality what they would do for themselves or their business associates if they were placed in positions of equal trust at the head of some commercial enterprise.

For thirty-five years I have worked ceaselessly to build up a business along progressively efficient lines. How well I have succeeded I leave to the judgment of those who know me in a business way. The past is the only human gauge of prophesy for the future. In the event of my becoming mayor, is there any just ground for the suspicion that I will cast aside those basic principles that I have followed all my life?

Is it not reasonable to believe that within me is the laudable ambition and unbending resolution to make four years of municipal service the keystone to my record of business accomplishment?

I became a candidate for mayor at the urgent request of 40,000 business men. It was only after reviewing their petition and becoming impressed with the genuineness of their plea that I consented to enter the race. Briefly stated, here are the cardinal points of my platform:

The end of graft and corruption.

Home rule that will guarantee Chicago a government by Chicagoans.

Universal transfers, through routes—one city one fare—with interchange of transfer accommodations between elevated and surface lines and vice versa.

A subway system that will end loop delays and make Chicago grow uniformly.

A thorough lighting system that will utilize every atom of electrical energy developed by the drainage water power.

A nonpolitical police force that will be confined exclusively to police duty.

Better fire protection for all Chicago.

More small parks and playgrounds.

An adequate water supply for upper story dwellers.

Lower rates for public utilities in accordance with the most thorough investigation possible.

Lower taxes with the introduction of efficiency in the public service.

A more equitable enforcement of the special assessment laws.

Personal liberty that will preserve the national customs of our cosmopolitan population.

More grammar schools in order that every child may have a seat and a full day's attendance.

I have familiarized myself with the functions of practically every department in our city government so that the duties of mayor of Chicago are in no sense new to me.

I have established a good name in the community where I was born and where I have lived all my life. I feel in a sense under obligations to the city that has given me the full measure of opportunity, and I desire to show my gratitude by an administration of our public affairs that will set things right at the outset, and then establish an era of progressive efficiency that will be a credit to the world's future metropolis.

An attempt has been made to cloud the public mind by a clamorous demand that the price of one public utility be established in advance of the verdict of experts. My position on this subject is clearly defined in my platform: "Public utilities are but public servants. It is the duty of the city council and the mayor to determine the price that shall be charged for public service commodities and these rates should be as reasonably low as a thorough council investigation shall determine. For a mayor or a candidate for mayor to say before investigation what these rates should be is on a par with the judge deciding a case before the evidence has been submitted."

I thoroughly realize the tremendous responsibilities involved. If I am elected I shall be the mayor of all Chicago, under obligations solely to the people—the great body of stockholders in the corporation of the city of Chicago—to give them a progressively efficient and economical administration.

Almost a Million in Sales

Last fall the Burroughs Adding Machine Co. set its salesmen the task of selling one million dollars worth of machines during December. Under high pressure and an inter-agency bulletin service and stimulant 3,056 machines were sold for $982,862.50. Tremendous for a specialty, but which almost is a necessity in business. Eighty field men and agents with all expenses paid were summoned to Detroit for a week's convention. This year's quota was increased 20 per cent which means that Burroughs agents are expected to sell 21,600 machines in 1911.

The Burroughs expects to broaden its work in every department during 1911 not only that it may sell a greater number of adding machines, but that it may derive the extra profit which naturally follows an increase in efficiency.

Wheat and Corn Exports

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending February 9th, as reported by telegraph to Bradstreet's, aggregate 2,274,291 bushels, against 2,328,470 bushels last week and 2,408,003 bushels this week last year. For the thirty-two weeks ending February 9th exports are 75,444,277 bushels, against 103,617,044 bushels in the corresponding period last year. Corn exports for the week are 2,541,977 bushels, against 3,368,010 bushels last week and 1,135,908 bushels in 1910. For the thirty-two weeks ending February 9th corn exports are 25,126,130 bushels against 16,406,731 bushels last year.

National Banks To Be Favored Defective Laws

The general opinion in banking circles seems to be that Congressman Payne's bill, authorizing the receipt of certified checks for duties on imports, which passed the house on Tuesday with an amendment making the provision applicable to state banks and trust companies as well as to national institutions, will not be passed in its present form, and that the bill before its final passage by the senate will be changed so as to make only certified checks of national banks acceptable in payment of duties. The bill (H. R. 30,570), as originally introduced on January 6th, contained this limitation as to the character of the banks whose checks may be received by collectors of customs in place of the customs transfers now used in making payments on imports.

As far as the proposed law concerns the payment of internal revenue taxes it may be stated that in New York and other cities internal revenue collectors have for a great many years past accepted certified checks in lieu of cash or customs transfers.

It was pointed out yesterday by an officer of one of the large downtown national banks that strenuous objections would be made to the enactment of the law in its present form, and that the senate would probably eliminate the amendment passed by the house as far as it relates to state banks and trust companies. He stated that because of the supervision which the federal government exercises over national institutions it was desirable to have checks accepted by customs officers limited to those drawn on national banks. Should this limitation be set, the federal authorities could be kept posted by the comptroller of the currency as to the financial condition and general management of the national banks upon which checks are drawn. On the other hand, were the law so framed as to include state banks and trust companies—institutions organized under various state laws—it would be difficult, if at all possible, for the authorities to be in touch with the affairs of these banks. Furthermore, it was pointed out, that not having any jurisdiction over state institutions the federal government could not exercise over them any of its powers of regulation and control.

Representatives of state banks and trust companies who were interviewed yesterday stated that it would not be fair for the government to discriminate against them. They called attention to the fact that the financial condition of some trust companies and state banks in this city was more sound than that of some national institutions.

The banking community in general is favorably disposed towards the proposition of permitting importers and customs brokers to use certified checks in place of customs transfers. The change will make lighter the clerical work done by the banks and will facilitate transactions at the custom house.

Congressman Payne's bill provides that: "It shall be lawful for collectors of customs and of internal revenue to receive for duties on imports and internal taxes certified checks drawn on national banks during such time and under such regulations as the secretary of the treasury may prescribe. No person, however, who may be indebted to the United States on account of duties on imports or internal taxes who shall have tendered a certified check or checks as provisional payment for such duties or taxes, in accordance with the terms of this act, shall be released from the obligation to make ultimate payment thereof until such certified check so received has been duly paid; and if any such check so received is not duly paid by the bank on which it is drawn and so certifying, the United States shall, in addition to its right to exact payment from the party originally indebted therefor, have a lien for the amount of such check upon all the assets of such bank; and such amount shall be paid out of its assets in preference to any or all other claims whatsoever against said bank, except the necessary costs and expenses of administration and the reimbursement of the United States for the amount expended in the redemption of the circulating notes of such banks."

Loans to Poor

Rev. J. E. Johnson, formerly a banker and now pastor of the St. Paul Methodist church at Waterloo, Iowa, has adopted a unique plan—that of organizing a building and loan company within the church, "to do business for God." The association is capitalized for $50,000. The object of the association is stated to be: First, to buy, sell, lease and do a general real estate business and the profits are to be used for building a new church; second, to provide a fund from which to loan to the poor and needy and the "down and outers," at a moderate rate of interest and in opposition to the class familiarly known as "loan sharks."

Odd Inscriptions on Money

Assistant Cashier L. G. Bein of the Iowa National at Davenport recently discovered a $2 silver certificate among the bank's finances. Across the back of it has been written in heavy black ink: "In payment for services rendered. Lucille." This aroused a reminiscent strain in the mind of Mr. Bein, who recalled a tragic inscription once written upon a similar note, as follows: "The last of an ill-spent fortune. Wine, women and song did it all."

Joseph T. Talbert, vice-president of the National City Bank of New York, discussing the loan and discount system of the banks of this country at a dinner in New York, pointed out again how disadvantageously American banks are situated through restrictive legislation in the matter of discounting real commercial paper. As he showed, there is no system of acceptance in this country such as exists everywhere else in the world for drafts upon American importers by Europe. Such drafts invariably go abroad again for acceptance, the banks here being forbidden by law to accept any kind of drafts except those on actual balances.

Active Real Estate Market

Loans to the amount of $537,000 and three apartment deals representing a total investment of $330,000 were the chief features of the realty market in Chicago on one day recently. Chas. C. Heisen of Chicago gave a mortgage to the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York for five years at 5 per cent on the Temple Court building, Quincy Street, northeast corner of Dearborn Street. Myrtle C. and Malcolm G. Bruce of Richmond, Va., were associated with Mr. Heisen as owners of the building.

Says Mail Rates Are Low

Charges that the railroads are receiving excessive rates of pay for handling the mails are vigorously denied in a statement by Julius Kruttschnitt, director of maintenance and operation of the Harriman system and chairman of the American Railway Association's committee on railway mail pay. Mr. Kruttschnitt argues for an advance rather than a reduction, holding that the roads are now rendering $3,000,000 worth of service every year for which they receive no pay.

Increased Railway Earnings

For the fourth week of January the gross earnings of twenty-nine railroads aggregated $14,310,260, an increase of 268,807, or 1.91 per cent. For the month of January the gross earnings of thirty railroads aggregated $49,274,541, an increase of $2,004,987, or 4.24 per cent.

Rapid Increase of Trade with Non-contiguous Territories

Trade of the United States with its non-contiguous territories aggregated two hundred million dollars in the calendar year 1910, against one hundred million in the calendar year 1903, the first year for which complete statistics of this trade are available. The figures of the Bureau of Statistics, Department of Commerce and Labor, just completed, show the total value of this trade in the year ending December 31, 1910, to be $202,494,343, and in the year ending December 31, 1903, $100,107,234, an increase of 100 per cent, while the trade with other parts of the world was increasing about 40 per cent. The territories in question are Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico, the Philippines, Guam, Tutuila and the Midway Islands.

The value of the merchandise shipped from the territories in question to the United States in 1910 was $111,731,031, against $61,876,756 in 1903. The value of the merchandise shipped from the United States to the non-contiguous territories was $90,763,312, against $38,230,478 in 1903. The increase in the period from 1903 to 1910 was thus 82 per cent in the value of merchandise shipped from the territories in question to the United States; and 139 per cent in the value of merchandise shipped from the United States to those territories.

The above figures do not include movements of gold and silver. The value of domestic gold shipped from Alaska to the United States in 1910 was in round terms 15 million dollars, and of foreign gold (presumably from British territory adjacent to Alaska) approximately 3½ million dollars; while the value of domestic gold shipped from Hawaii to the United States in 1910 was about one-half million dollars.

The principal articles forming this trade of more than 200 million dollars between the United States and its non-contiguous territories are in general terms tropical products sent from those islands to the United States, and fish, copper, and furs from Alaska, while of shipments from the United States to these territories manufacturers and foodstuffs are the principal articles. Sugar and hemp are the principal articles coming from the Philippines, and as already indicated, fish, copper, and furs are the principal articles coming from Alaska. The quantity of sugar sent from Hawaii to the United States in the calendar year 1910 was a little over 1 billion pounds, valued at 39½ million dollars; from Porto Rico 626 million pounds, valued at 26 million dollars; and from the Philippines 218 million pounds, valued at 6½ million dollars. Tobacco is also an article of some importance in the shipments of merchandise from the tropical islands to the United States, amounting to 1½ million dollars of unmanufactured tobacco and a little less than 5 million dollars in value of cigars from Porto Rico; a little less than 2 million dollars worth of cigars, cigarettes and cheroots from the Philippines, and about 9 thousand dollars worth of tobacco from the Hawaiian Islands. Manila hemp from the Philippines in 1910 amounted to about 8 2-3 million dollars in value. Fruits and nuts (chiefly fruits) from Hawaii amounted to 2½ million dollars in value; from Porto Rico a little less than 2 million; and from the Philippines the shipment under this general head (chiefly cocoanut meat, broken, or "copra") amounted to a little over one-half million dollars.

From Alaska the principal articles shipped to the United States were fish, chiefly salmon, to the value of 11½ million dollars; furs, about one half million; copper ore about one-fourth million.

The principal articles shipped to the terriories in question are, as already indicated, manufactures and foodstuffs. To Hawaii the group "cars, carriages, etc." amounts to about 1 million dollars, of which about three-fourths is automobiles; cotton manufactures, nearly 2 million dollars; iron and steel manufactures, 3¾ million; leather and manufactures thereof, more than one-half million; mineral oils, 1½ million; paper, and manufactures thereof one-half million; tobacco manufactures, one-half million; manufactures of wood (chiefly lumber) 1½ million; breadstuffs, 1¾ million, and meats three-fourths of a million.

To Porto Rico the principal articles were cars and carriages, one million dollars in value, of which automobiles formed a little more than one-third; cotton manufactures, 4 1-3 million; iron and steel manufactures, 4½ million; leather and manufactures thereof, over 1 million; mineral oils, one-half million; paper and manufactures thereof, over one-half million; soaps, nearly one-half million; manufactures of silk, one-third of a million; manufactures of wood, 1¾ million; breadstuffs, practically 6 millions dollars, and meats, 3¼ million.

To the Philippines the principle articles shipped were cars and carriages over one-half million dollars in value, of which more than two-thirds was automobiles; cotton manufactures, 4 1-3 million; against 1 2-3 million in 1909; manufactures of iron and steel, 4 million; leather and manufactures thereof, nearly 1 million; paper and manufactures thereof, more than one-half million; manufactures of wood (chiefly lumber) over one-half million; mineral oils over a million; breadstuffs, 1¼ million, and meats one-half million.

To Alaska the principal articles shipped were iron and steel manufactures, 4¼ million dollars in value; wood and manufactures thereof, three-fourths of a million; mineral oils three-fourths of a million; tobacco, one-half million; vegetables ½ million; woolen manufacturers over ½ million; cotton manufactures, over ½ million; explosives, nearly ½ million, eggs nearly ½ million; breadstuffs ¾ million, and meat and dairy products, over 2 million dollars in value.

Banking Opinion

Business improvement first felt in the west, D. R. Forgan says. New York's idle capital disappointing to bankers. Views on legislation and other topics by various financiers Improvement in business is more apparent in the West than in the East, according to President David R. Forgan of National City Bank. This accounts for the distinctly better tone of the Chicago money market.

"We have more activity in all lines of business than they are experiencing in New York," said Mr. Forgan to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER the fore part of the week. New York bankers are unable to loan their funds, and that explains why their vaults are full of idle money. It is a passing condition, however, for the large companies which will employ capital in construction work or in other avenues of industrial development will soon be ready to start on their season's program. There will be a large and general employment of money as soon as spring opens, and New York must furnish the bulk of it."

Mr. Forgan does not agree with the theory that Eastern banks are purposely building up their reserves in anticipation of possible hard times. He declares they can't help the accumulation of money and would be glad to loan out their extra millions if they could find customers to pay 4 per cent interest.

New York bankers are not expecting trouble. On the contrary, they believe that within sixty days business will be moving at such a pace and in such volume that discount rates will advance at least to a 5 per cent basis. Chicago has been on this level for two weeks or more, and local bankers are coming to believe that the money market may become as active and healthy as it was last fall.

Opposes Reciprocity Treaty

F. Furst, a banker at Adair, Iowa, was in Des Moines last week to use his influence in favor of a resolution before the Iowa legislature asking congress to defeat the Canadian reciprocity treaty. Mr. Furst owns land in Canada, but he says his loyalty to the farmers of the Middle West is first, and that he cannot see any good for the producers of Iowa in the proposed treaty.

St. Louis Banker Optimistic

A. O. Wilson, vice-president of State National Bank, St. Louis, and an excellent student of monetary conditions, especially in the Southwest, believes that the low level of rates for the present has been reached, and the next change will be an upturn. Speaking of the outlook Mr. Wilson said:

"There has been a gradual betterment in the inquiry for funds during the last few days, and deposits, it seems to me, have reached the high mark for the present movement. Doubtless general conditions are intrinsically strong and healthy. I believe commerce is right on the verge of big activities, and when started we will have some months rivalling the most prosperous days in the past.

"The railroad situation adjusted satisfactorily and reciprocity and tariff disposed of, the path would be open for a splendid business revival. However even further delays with those two factors can not very much longer hold back the wave. There seems to be restlessness commercially, which must result in expansion.

"Some bankers are disposed to be less optimistic than they should be, but that is because they view the situation through low money rates, which are not good for their specific profits. But this cheap money comes from the great volume now in bank reserves and deposits, but in reality loans are heavy, though this latter fact is not stiffening rates any. With us business has been good, relatively, and I am decidedly inclined to an optimistic view of the general situation."

Aims at Banking Efficiency

Recommendations for legislation intended to add strength and prestige to banking in the state of Washington are made by J. L. Mohundro, state bank examiner, in his report to Governor Hay. He desires legislation which will enlarge the power and efficiency of the state banking department. The features are that $25,000, fully paid in cash, shall be the minimum capitalization of a bank; that building and loan associations and savings and loan societies be placed under the supervision of the banking department, that only citizens of the United States should be permitted to incorporate a bank, and the majority of the board of directors should be citizens of the state; prohibiting a bank from investing its capital or money of its depositors in shares of corporations, and providing when such shares are taken in the collection of debts a time for the disposal of the same; providing that the state examiner settle the affairs of failed banks, and providing for a special deputy to be paid out of the bank's assets while in charge of the failed institution, and that loans to officers and directors, or to institutions in which they are interested, without first having authority by resolution of the board of directors at a meeting for that purpose, be held personally against the officer or officers making the loan.

Grain Men's Bank

In case the reciprocity treaty with Canada is ratified a trust company will be formed and located in Superior for the purpose of providing the funds to handle the grain business there. The new trust company will be backed by a number of Dakota, Minnesota and Superior capitalists. Among the Dakota and Minnesota men interested are several who have extensive agricultural interests and are greatly interested in the grain trade.

The object in forming the trust company is to make it easier for persons engaged in the grain trade to secure the financial accommodations they desire. It is claimed by grain men interested in this move that the banks here are too conservative in regard to making loans to grain men and that better accommodations can be secured in other cities. Reciprocity with Canada will insure the movement of vast quantities of grain through Superior, making such an institution as proposed even more desirable than at present, it is figured.

Looks Like Wm. J. Bryan

President E. C. Walsh of Citizens Trust and Savings Bank, Davenport, looks so much like William J. Bryan that the fact frequently is commented on. Mr. Walsh was calling on Chicago friends Tuesday and while at Western Trust and Savings Bank various persons gazed at him in the belief that he was the Nebraska leader. It can be said for Mr. Walsh that he dresses with better taste than Bryan. He also gives evidence of a more contented frame of mind than the Nebraskan seems to possess. The Davenport banker is a successful business man whose views are in great demand when he comes to Chicago.

Stoughton Fletcher

Report has it that Stoughton Fletcher, head of the big Fletcher American National, of Indianapolis, has organized a syndicate to take over the Remy Electrical Company, of Anderson, Ind. The consideration is said to have been about $1,000,000, and Carl G. Fisher and James A. Allison, of the Prest-O-Lite Company, are said to be interested, although this has not been confirmed. It is the intention to continue the operation of the plant at Anderson, possibly on a larger scale than ever.

For several years the company has been conducted by B. P. and Frank Remy, brothers, with much success. The company manufactures magnetos and recently brought out a device whereby electric current for lighting automobile lamps is manufactured from the magneto. Last year it is said to have paid 1,150 per cent dividends on its common stock, and the Remys have become millionaires, although they started on a small scale. It is understood a new company will be organized and incorporated soon.

Peoples Gas

The income account of Peoples Gas Company, Chicago, showing a gain of $969,000 in gross earnings is published. President Knapp in his report to stockholders says:

"During 1910, approximately eighty-four miles of mains were laid in extension of the company's system. The increase in the number of gas meters set was 25,921. Gas stoves installed were 26,199, and arc lamps, 2,926.

"A committee of the city council has been engaged for a considerable period of time on investigating the cost to this company to manufacture and distribute gas, the value of the company's property, etc., as preliminary to fixing the rates to be charged for the ensuing five years. The present net rate of 85 cents per 1,000 cubic feet has been in force since February 1, 1906.

"During 1910, $3,000,000 of the refunding 5 per cent gold bonds of the company were sold in order to place the company in funds for necessary expenditures made and to be made during 1910 and 1911."

Bankers to See $5,000,000 Plant

A feature of the Minnesota bankers convention next summer at Bemidji will be a trip to the big paper mills at International Falls. A pulp mill is to be built as part of the $1,500,000 improvement by the Minneapolis company which operates the business. When the work is finished about $5,000,000 will have been expended on the American and Canadian sides.

Private Banking

Portland, Ore., February 14.—Lydell Baker in his paper, "The Pacific Banker," has a red-hot editorial on why Washington, Montana and Illinois still tolerate unregulated, unspected private banking. The editorial says:

A paragraph in our Seattle letter this week refers to the fact that the private bankers of the state of Washington are again at Olympia in an effort "not to be regulated." Why the private banks of Washington and Montana should be kept without the operation of the state banking law while the private banks of Oregon and Idaho are brought within its operation, is something we can never understand, except that the former seem to have the votes when the legislature meets. It is wonderful what can be done in politics when concentration is made upon some particular feature. The business in the legislature, as it is in congress, is largely a matter of trading and when a man is elected to the legislature prepared to do anything and everything to keep private bankers from being "regulated," it is wonderful how near just a few such men can come to doing it. In Illinois the matter has approached the dimensions of a great scandal. Charges of corruption are bandied about. Possibly a fund has been raised to ward off legislation and perhaps it has not been used for any illegitimate purposes. But it is a matter of great comment in that state that notwithstanding the most determined efforts on the part of the state bankers association and others interested in the cause of sound banking the private bankers still manage to paralyze the legislative arm. And after looking at the credentials of the gentleman who, as chairman of this committee is apparently holding up this legislation, we give as our opinion, that nothing could be more conducive to an unsound banking situation than a chain of private banks not subject to state inspection.

Following is an extract from the Seattle letter referred to above, and throws a strong sidelight on a very selfish situation.

"News from Olympia is that a determined resistance is being made to the enactment of legislation which places private bankers under the supervision of the state banking department. E. C. Davis of Ephrata, is a member of the senate and is chairman of the committee on banks and banking, having charge of the measure which provides for the supervision. Mr. Davis is associated with the firm of Davis & Bassett, private bankers at Ephrata, and is very pronounced in his opposition to the bill. The legislation is sought by the Washington Bankers Association.

The Commercial Savings of Iowa City is the name of a new bank just granted a charter by the state insurance department which will make the sixth bank for Iowa City. The bank will start business March 1st with a capital of $50,000. Attorney Henry Negus is president.

Gotham Finances

New York banks continued to increase their deposits during the last week, but in somewhat smaller amount than has been shown in recent statements. The average figures of the clearing house institutions showed a deposit gain of $10,335,000 for the week, against which was an expansion of $6,724,000 in the loan account. These changes raised the total deposits to the average statement to $1,351,000,000, or about $36,000,000 more than the total loans.

The total cash reserve was swelled $3,315,000 during the week, but the reserve requirement was enlarged $2,587,000, owing to the increase in deposits. The addition to the surplus reserve was $728,600, raising the amount held by the banks in excess of legal reserve requirement to $36,773,900, which compares with a surplus of $24,599,125 a year ago and $10,300,325 two years ago. The total reserve shown in the average statement yesterday was equivalent to 27.72 per cent of the net deposits.

The following explanation of the financial situation in New York is given by a banking authority.

"Every dollar that can be lent on call at 2½ per cent has been and is being put out. Every unimpeachable mercantile bill offered is accepted on a 4 per cent basis. The amount of discounts carried is to-day about the largest on record. No money is being loaned on call below 2½ per cent, and no paper is accepted under 4 per cent, since these quotations are held to be strictly reasonable. To break them, it is claimed, would serve no useful purpose. The strongest institutions have sufficient faith in the outlook to believe firmly that money is worth the rates adhered to by them and that the near future will probably bring sufficient prosperity to cause an advance in interest and discount rates."

The foregoing will be regarded by those in closest touch with affairs as more than ordinarily interesting. It had been feared that the piling up of cash by certain very influential interests could be construed only as meaning that they were preparing for an upheaval. This deduction, it can be here stated without equivocation, is altogether unjustified. The cash reserve of $63,500,000 now held by the National City Bank, for example, has been brought about by the conditions already outlined. This institution never lends on call above 6 per cent no matter how high the quotation may go on the Stock Exchange. On memorable occasions lending at the 6 per cent maximum by the City Bank has done a great deal to stem apprehensions. Having fixed this rate as the maximum, it is not so very extraordinary that a minimum should also be named. A 4 per cent charge for negotiating mercantile paper is certainly by no means abnormal. Indeed, to do business on a lower basis either in the call money or commercial paper market might easily foster unhealthy speculation and injudicious business ventures, to say nothing of the effect absurdly low rates would have upon bankers' profits.

Murmurs of complaint have been heard that high grade commercial bills cannot be placed with the largest institutions below 4 per cent. It has been freely hinted that there appeared to be some sort of understanding among the principal buyers not to compete for bills under this figure. An international banker not directly interested in the controversy put the situation lucidly. "Merchants and other drawers of bills," he said, "may have some justification for contending that the biggest banks and trust companies will not do any discounting under 4 per cent. But to my mind this minimum charge is very reasonable—very reasonable indeed. A mercantile establishment usually counts upon having to pay 6 per cent for its facilities. Therefore, it is no hardship to get money at 4 per cent. With six months' collateral loans on a basis of 3¾ per cent surely ¼ of 1 per cent more is very low for even the best of bills."

Guaranty Beaten

Pierre, S. D., February 15.—Bank guaranty under the Kansas plan went down to defeat in the house after a lengthy discussion in which one of the old time Kansans who is a member said that its being copied from a Kansas act did not appeal to him, as that state always went to extremes in one direction or the other, and its acts might or might not be good.

Costly Public Buildings Coming

Trustees of Field Museum of Natural History plan a $5,000,000 structure in Jackson Park, the supreme court deciding against location of any building on Lake front in Grant Park. A new block in the business district is likely to accommodate John Crerar library for the same reason.

Crop Expert's Idea

John Inglis, crop expert, takes an optimistic view of the proposed reciprocity measure. In part he says: "If farmers will take a broad view of the proposal, especially that which relates to free wheat, they would be the gainers. For a generation to come there is no prospect of our becoming importers, but we will continue to export. It is only pessimism that would lead one to believe that we are about to arrive at a condition where domestic consumption will dictate prices. So long as we have a wheat surplus, Canada, with a crop of 150,000,000 bushels, will be a potent factor in making values. It is the exporting countries that finally set the world's prices. This is most clearly proved by the course of the markets at the present time. Russia, Argentina, Australia and Canada, all exporting countries, are making the world's market for the present. None can doubt but that we have also an exportable surplus, but those other countries are willing to dispose of their supplies while there is a demand. We, presuming to dictate the price, are left behind, and unless the next crop falls far short of an average the farmers will realize the absurdity of trying to force the world's markets. Depression in prices, should we have an average crop this year, will awaken them to a knowledge of the futility of holding reserves while other countries are marketing. The Canadian surplus is forced upon the market at an early date. Should we allow it to come in free we have the capital to finance it and ample storage room; our vessels and railroads would handle it, the millers would blend it with our softer varieties and enhance their prices; we would secure an export flour trade which we have lost, and farmers would learn, in time, that we, with an average crop of 650,000,000 bushels, would not have the price lowered by Canadian production. Prices would be equalized and, with Canada and the United States joined by reciprocity, there would be a mutual power in having a stronger position in the foreign markets. By stimulating our flouring industry by securing more of the northern wheats, we could command the attention of the world's market. If we fail to recognize this, Canada will continue, as she increases her production, not only to lower the general price of our wheat, but will take away from us the last remnant of our export trade in flour."

Railway Problem

Henry A. Blair, financial head of the Chicago Railways Company, returned to the city Monday from New York, where he had been for the last two weeks endeavoring to bring about a merger of the elevated railroads. While nothing of definite nature has been accomplished, Mr. Blair said the situation looked more hopeful than it has been up to this time.

"We have made some progress," he said, "and that is about all I can say at this time. I expect to return to New York about the end of this week to continue the negotiations.

"It is a big project, and I do not expect that it can be brought about in a week or a month, probably not in a year.

"Every one concerned is agreed that a merger of all the transportation lines is desirable, but when some one attempts to bring it about there are always some 'knockers' who get busy. I do not feel discouraged, however, and I still believe that the plans worked out last July will go through. Outside capital seeking investment in Chicago certainly does not meet with much encouragement, and the eastern men are about tired of us."

Judge Grosscup has demanded a settlement of Chicago & Milwaukee Electric affairs before March 15th under penalty of an additional receiver to force settlement. Judge Grosscup says:

"The whole future of the road as a useful and profitable public utility depends on immediate reorganization. Speed entrance into Chicago may require preliminary negotiations now which would be impossible under divided receivership; therefore I shall appoint a single operating receiver, although present receivers would remain as advisers."

The road's financing will require $1,250,000 to lift the receivers' certificates with which the road was completed, together with outstanding car trust certificates and judgment liens; about $1,750,000 will be needed to rebuild temporary bridges, rehabilitate lines, settle debts and meet various municipal ordinance obligations.

The Mystery of Golf, by Haultain

Perhaps no sport ever appealed to bankers so generally as golf. No class has been benefited so much by the outings which this enticing game affords. Now comes "The Mystery of Golf," the very book the busy money changers have been looking for. It is by Arnold Haultain, published by the Macmillan Company, New York. This is the second enlarged and revised edition of Mr. Haultain's apologia for the game.

Whether considered as a clever tour de force or as a sincere attempt at scientific analysis, the book amply justifies itself. In no other game, contends Mr. Haultain, are the physiological, the psychological and the moral elements so intimately combined or so constantly brought into play. His attempt to unravel these elements is an impressive and really illuminating one. To the hesitating reader, uncertain whether the book is meant for him, the attractive page with its large, clear type is especially inviting. There are some illuminating diagrams to help clear up "the mystery." $1.75 net.

Guides to the Country Home

At this season of the year there is much searching of seed, flower and tree catalogues for those who would improve their country homes or their city door-yards. The Outing Publishing Co., has issued made to order a practical little volume which tells the prospective purchaser or owner of a country place in plain terms just what he ought to know about the house, the grounds, and all their details. It is designed especially to show how profit as well as pleasure may be derived from the country home. The book is "A Guide to the Country Home" by Edward K. Parkinson, and is fully illustrated with actual photographs and with building plans. It tells in a practical way just what tools, stock and supplies one will need for the country place and how to make crops and care for them. It is a safe, sane and simple guide to the simple life, a back-to-the-soil missionary.

The Outing Co. also issues "Wilderness Homes" which will appeal strongly to all who are contemplating a home in the woods. It is both inspirational, breathing the peace of the forest, and practical. It tells how the amateur can build his own summer home at a minimum of expense, and the best way to go about it. No detail is omitted. Many plans and specifications are given. Illustrated with half-tones from photographs of log cabins and with numerous sketches by the author it is a practical guide and hand-book to modern woodcraft. Log cabin architecture is made interesting. The author is Oliver Kemp, an authority. The beautiful little volumes are but one dollar and one dollar and a quarter respectively.

Slump in Wheat

Wheat has made a new record on the down turn this week, May going to 91 and July to 90 on Wednesday.

It was noticeable that professional speculators were buying on the break and the market recovered about 1 cent before the close of the session.

For several days the bears had almost complete control of the market. The depression was sufficient to cause a cut of 20 cents a barrel in flour.

Reciprocity, with a common level for Canadian and United States wheat, was accepted by the grain trade as a strong probability. It precipitated liquidation in this market such as was experienced previously in the markets of the Northwest. The liquidation, started by the reciprocity talk, was carried along by a number of other influences that were more or less depressing.

The French minister of agriculture's declaration in favor of a retention of the import duty on wheat was in line with the trade advices indicating that French speculators had overbought. This, and the daily reports of good crop outlook in Europe and free sales by Australia, Russia and India, did not give any hope of ultimate export demand for the American surplus.

Corn has felt some of the sympathetic effects of a weakening of the wheat market, but has also developed a few troubles of its own. The effects of the flurry following the crop losses in Argentina have lately worn off, the reaction from the over estimating of its influence on the markets of Europe has set in and the trade is confronting the prospect of a very large supply of all kinds of grain to be met by a very indifferent demand.

Europe overbought during its first scare over the Argentine losses and now takes corn only in small lots at bargain counter prices. Cut prices are made because of the lack of storage room at many points and perhaps because of the widespread belief West that corn will grade high at the seaboard. The time is near when the gulf ports will begin to refuse to handle corn for export, thus leaving the trade in the hands of the Atlantic seaboard dealers. Many of these are already well loaded with corn and are in no position to support values strenuously despite their desire to do so.

Corn has sold down to 48 cents for the May option in this market.

The Peoples Bank of McKeesport, of which Enoch W. Pitts is president, has taken over the Merchants Bank of McKeesport and the latter institution will be liquidated, the result of a lack of sufficient business.

J. D. Ayres, vice-president of the Bank of Pittsburgh, National Association, has returned from Chicago. He reports money conditions easy in that city.

President Harrison Nesbit, of the Bank of Pittsburgh, and H. M. Breckenridge, a director, returned recently from a hunting trip in Alabama.

The annual meeting and dinner of Group Eight, Pennsylvania Bankers Association, will be held on the evening of February 21st at the Ft. Pitt hotel, instead of on Washington's birthday, as heretofore. The business meeting will be held first, a feature of which will be a paper by Cashier A. D. Swift, of the Elk County National Bank of Ridgway on "Burglary and Time Lock Insurance."

At the dinner Henry A. Williams, national bank examiner for the Pittsburgh district will be toastmaster and the speakers will include, Thomas E. Powell, Columbus, O.; Polk Miller, Richmond, Va.; and Strickland W. Gilliland, of Chicago.

The majority of the open-hearth steel plants in the general Pittsburgh district have suddenly come into the market for steel scrap, with the result that the market has become highly excited and dealers are predicting a large advance, on the ground that the floating supply of scrap is entirely inadequate to meet the prospective requirements, while the yard scrap cannot come out except upon a material advance in the market.

A large steel interest in western Pennsylvania just east of Pittsburgh, which has not hitherto bought much outside material, has taken upwards of 10,000 tons of heavy melting steel and bundled sheet scrap, from two Pittsburgh dealers. At least two steel mills are mentioned as ready to take individual lots up to tens of thousands of tons, while other steel mills are ready to take smaller lots.

Heavy melting steel was quotable at $13.50 to $14, delivered Pittsburgh, at the beginning of last week, but this week has sold at $14.25 and dealers would not sell large lots at less than $14.75 or $15, while predictions are freely made that the demand will force the price up to about $16, when large tonnages stored in dealers' yards will begin coming out.

E. E. Lindemuth, president of the Clearfield Trust Company, and one of the best known bankers of the state, and especially of the central portion, has resigned to become a vice-president of the Western National Bank of Philadelphia, an active executive position.

The Textile National Bank of Philadelphia recently raised its dividend from 5 to 6 per cent per annum, by the declaration of a 3 per cent semiannual disbursement, compared with 2½ per cent previously. An addition of $10,000 was made to surplus, making that account $90,000.

That Philadelphia business enterprises have had a prosperous year is shown by the fact that the banks of the city handled a larger volume of clearings than ever before. For the year ended December 3, 1910, the total clearings were $7,689,664,085, compared with $7,021,756,889 in 1909. The previous high record was in 1906, when the clearings reached a total of $7,686,966,980.

The third annual entertainment of the Philadelphia Chapter, American Institute of Banking, was held in the Drexel Institute Auditorium January 25th. All the members on the program were furnished by the combined Glee, Banjo and Mandolin clubs of the University of Pennsylvania. This organization has an enviable reputation.

At commencement of business January 19th the Philadelphia National Bank reported loans of $30,496,000; cash and reserve, $9,840,000; exchanges for clearing house, $1,956,000; due from banks $8,336,000; deposits, $45,718,000.

Bank Clerk is Sentenced

Watertown, N. Y., February 15.—Carl H. Rohr, the 26-year-old bank clerk who defaulted with about $30,000 of the funds of the National Union Bank of this city, pleaded guilty in the county court and was sent to Elmira reformatory. Rohr fled from here to Washington, and thence to Seattle, Wash., where he was captured.

Congressman Littleton to Chicago Bankers Club

"Give the corporations the same 'square deal' given the farm."

The profits from both in the whole United States are about the same—$3,000,000,000—said Martin W. Littleton of New York at the monthly banquet of the Chicago Bankers club on Monday night at the new Hotel Sherman. He said the country needs the adoption of permanent laws in order that business may become settled and prosper more.

Mr. Littleton, who is a congressman-elect, also urged that the tariff on foods and apparel be removed at once, "even if it must be done blindly." All party affiliation, he said, should be thrown aside in giving the necessities of life entry into this country at less exorbitant duties.

Favors Tariff Commission

On the other hand, he said, he favored President Taft's idea of tariff commission, and he said he thought the tariff on all commodities, besides food and clothes, should be given a most careful consideration and changes made only with great caution.

"When I enter the halls of congress," he said, "I will oppose with all my strength tariff on those articles which the people need for food consumption and to wear. Honest men of all parties who correctly interpret conditions as they exist must do the same thing. If necessary the removal of tariff from these commodities must be secured by a blind and unreasoning championship of that idea.

Believes in Protection

"But once that is done, I take a different position with regard to the tariff question. Concerning the tariff on all other commodities I believe with President Taft that we should go ahead cautiously and slowly. I believe in the formation of a tariff commission to study the conditions and to provide us with data which go into the last analysis of things before we make any change. I believe in the protection of the great industries which have made this country one of the greatest industrial centers in the world.

"The great corporations, and the industrial activity, which have become so great within ten years, must be taken care of in a proper way. They have been invited to cluster around the tariff laws as we have them. They should not be shattered by one fell swoop, they should not be ruined by one big blow, which would be the case if you attempted to remove the tariff on everything all at once.

Assails Anti-Trust Act

"The Sherman anti-trust law is wrong. It was enacted at a time when no one dreamed there would be as many as 262,000 corporations in this country with an annual net profit of $3,000,000,000. Some time ago there came a time when the people of the world were attracted to the spectacle of the great corporations organizing and controlling everything industrially in this country. Then came the idea that soon there would be a test as to whether this nation or the great business institutions were to rule.

"Then this antiquated Sherman anti-trust law was dug up and it was put in force. It is being put in force now. But it is radically wrong. I tell you, gentlemen, there must be a calm and a careful consideration of tariff conditions before we make any changes. The business men of this country are willing and glad to play the game by the rules, but they want to know what the rules are and that they will not be changed in the middle of the game.

Has Confidence in Business Men

"I believe that to-day the capacity to understand and the courage to express ideas formed after mature deliberation make the great men of the nation. The majority of the big business men of the nation I believe to have the interests of the country largely at heart. But they do wish to know what the rules of the game are.

"They cannot be censured for opposing a sudden slashing of the tariff. For years they have been encouraged and coaxed to build up their business interests around this tariff.

"No man believes in oppression and monopoly. No man believes in extortion by means of combination. The great corporation is the most remarkably resourceful thing on earth. I do not think any agency exists which serves better to spread values over the face of the country.

Shows Conditions on Farms

"To-day we have in this country two conditions. We have the farms giving a gross income of $8,000,000,000. If the expenses of production are taken away, you will find the profit from the farms and from the corporations is about the same.

"Here we have individualism over against collectivism. I believe in centralized industry. Any law that destroys it is wrong. You see the genius of men represented in labor-saving machinery. You see the genius of the greatest minds of the country in these great organizations.

"The government must attack those who do wrong. It as loyally should support those who strive to do right.

"Dishonesty must be taken from within and oppression from without the great corporation. Then the great industrial activity of the nation shall stride forward, bringing to the nation a distribution of values not possible without combination."

Congressman-elect Littleton also attended a luncheon at the LaSalle Hotel in the afternoon. Leroy A. Goddard, president of the State Bank of Chicago, presided at the bankers banquet.

Tenancy Evils

Bloomington, Ill., February 15.—Miss Mabel Carney, head of the rural school department of the State Normal School in an address here before a state meeting for the organization of an Illinois federation to work for farming and country life improvement, declared that tenancy is killing the social and co-operative spirit of farming communities. She declared three-fifths of the farms in the state are in the hands of tenants, that the school is no longer the force it once was and that the church is poorly attended and still more poorly supported.

Her remedy for this condition is a large consolidation school in each township, with extra rooms or separate buildings in which books, bulletins, crop reports and agricultural data may be kept available for the use of farmers and their wives. With these quarters as a foundation she would organize farmers' institutes and farmers' clubs for social, educational and economic purposes with a secretary to direct the work.

Steel Orders Are Increasing

Unfilled orders on the books of the United States Steel Corporation increased 436,162 tons in January. The tonnage report issued yesterday showed that the orders on the books January 31st called for 3,110,919 tons of material. This compares with orders for 2,674,757 tons on the books at the end of December. The gain is in line with the recent statements of Judge Gary concerning the increasing activity in the steel trade.

Postal Savings

Pekin, Ill., February 15.—The Pekin postal savings bank continues to do a good business and instructions printed in the Greek, German, Hungarian and Italian languages, which are expected next week, undoubtedly will increase the deposits.

An order received here to-day formally appointed the three national banks of this city depositories for funds of the postal bank. As security each bank is required to deposit $5,000 in government bonds with the treasurer of the United States.

Philadelphia, February 15.—In a report made to Group Two of the Pennsylvania State Bankers Association in session here to-day, B. N. Marlin, a bank official of Du Bois, Pa., declared that the majority of deposits received by the government postal savings banks thus far have come "from people who have not patronized any bank and children."

Mr. Marlin, in his report, also said that a few of the depositors were "that class of persons who are entirely governed by a senseless fear of any and all of our regular banks."

A branch of the postal savings bank is located in Du Bois, and Mr. Marlin, referring to that city, said:

"So far as the three banks here are concerned I can safely say that no effect whatever has been discernible in the volume of business. Very few foreigners have thus far availed themselves of the privilege offered by the postal bank in this section, and in my opinion the restrictions thrown around the postal operation will prevent any considerable number from patronizing the government institution."

Capital Stock must be Kept Up

According to the decision of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky in the case of Corbin Banking Company vs. Mitchell et al., every stockholder in a bank in that state takes his stock with the understanding that the capital stock must not be permitted to become impaired, and that if that should happen the secretary of state may require the directors to make an assessment upon the stockholders in such sum as is in his judgment necessary to restore it. In the case before the court it appeared that the secretary of state directed the appellant bank to assess its stockholders to make good an impairment of its capital stock, and the bank brought suit against one of the appellees who owned a certificate of stock and another who held it as collateral, but who had paid no attention to the notice of the bank for the par value of the stock.

Canada Answers England

Canada's minister of finance, W. S. Fielding, sprung a sensation when he gave out the text of a cablegram which he sent to Lord Strathcona, Canadian high commissioner in London. It is intended to give notice to the British opponents of the reciprocity agreement with the United States that they are arguing from false premises. The text of the cablegram follows:

"It is evident that some British journalists and public men have received entirely erroneous impressions concerning the reciprocity agreement. Reciprocity trade relations with the United States have been the policy of all parties in Canada for generations. Many efforts have been made to secure a treaty but without success. Sir John Macdonald's national policy tariff 1879, contains a standing offer of reciprocity with the states covering a large portion of the products included in the present agreement."

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

Special Education for Bankers

The necessity for broad specialization in financial matters has had increasing recognition in the financial district of recent years as is evidenced by the success of the recently established Finance Forum of the Young Men's Christian Association in New York and before that by the general advantage taken of the educational facilities offered by the American Institute of Bank Clerks. More recently still the big bond houses of the East have been at pains to see that their salesmen are fully equipped not only with statistical knowledge of the properties whose securities it is their business to market, but with the broad general knowledge which enlists interest and develops conviction. It has been the practice among many of the leading banking houses which specialize in the distribution of bonds to hold classes or office lectures at frequent intervals, and in some houses an hour every day is set aside for instructive discussion.

A new development of the educational idea was started last week, however, by three houses which are the managers of a syndicate which has underwritten a $9,000,000 bond issue of the Consolidation Coal Company. The properties of the company are so large and cover so much scattered territory that it was deemed impracticable to take the salesmen who are to handle the issue on a tour of inspection such as is commonly made when an underwriting syndicate is formed. As a more practical substitute the three houses combined force and engaged experts in coal and mining as well as men in practical touch with the property to lecture to their men.

The course of lectures was started on Monday by Dr. John J. Stevenson of New York University on the "Geology of Coal." On the same day Joseph Daniels, Assistant Professor of Mining Engineering of Lehigh University, spoke on the "Methods of Mining Coal," and completed his address on Tuesday, after which Frank Haas, Consulting Engineer of the Consolidation Coal Company, explained the plants and properties of the company he is with. The lecturers were assisted by a series of stereopticon views, covering the subjects thoroughly. These lectures, which were given in the building owned by Redmond & Co., 33 Pine Street, were very instructive to the bond salesmen and will help them greatly in disposing of this issue of bonds.

While it is, of course, impossible for a bond salesman to become familiar with the multiplicity of issues which are in demand by the investing customers of his house, it is of prime importance that he should be thoroughly posted on the properties in whose securities his firm specializes. In the case of public service and industrial bonds it is often the case that small issues are taken in their entirety by one house which then becomes the specialist in this security and is the chief source of information about the concern's affairs. Before undertaking the financing of a street railway, gas or electric company or an industrial enterprise, the banker of the syndicate makes usually as thorough an investigation of the property as would a real estate investor. Engineers make full reports on plant and property, lawyers look into titles and franchises and in the case of industrials, careful measure is taken of the possibilities of the market for the concern's product. In such cases the bankers often become more thoroughly posted about the affairs of a concern they are supplying funds to than its own executive officers and it is this knowledge that a property has been carefully investigated coupled, of course, with the individual reputation of the bankers floating the securities, which constitutes the chief safeguard of the investing public.

Tacoma Chapter's Good Work

Tacoma chapter's educational work seems to be on a firm footing from the general showing made so far this winter. The course in economics is drawing out about twenty per cent of the chapter membership three nights a month, and each meeting shows more of a tendency towards lively discussing of the subject treated upon during the evening. The lectures are in charge of Attorney Gordan, one of the younger leading lawyers in the city. Mr. Gordan is a University of Illinois man who graduated with the class of 1901, afterwards taking a post-graduate course in economics.

The second of the regular monthly meetings which have been held under the auspices of one of the banks was successfully carried out on the evening of the seventh, and was known as Fidelity Trust Company night. After the regular business of the evening had been disposed of P. C. Kauffman, vice-president of the Fidelity and secretary of the Washington Bankers Association, addressed the meeting under the caption "The Daybreak of Sound Currency." Mr. Kauffman traced the currency problem of our nation from the time of the Civil War down to the present time, stating that some light now seemed to be breaking on the subject.

Attorney Herbert S. Griggs followed this able speaker with a jocular talk on "The Side of the Borrower."

Bank Clerks and Sport

Some hundreds of young men, each of whom knows a bank, assembled recently at the I. O. O. F. Hall, Elizabeth Street, Sydney, Australia, when a smoking concert, arranged by the promoters of what may be regarded as the latest combine in Sydney, was held. The Sydney banks in combination had held their first sports meeting in the afternoon at the Sydney Cricket ground, and the prizes gained there were presented at this concert, at which Russell French presided. A fine musical program of vocal and instrumental numbers was carried out, and the chairman, before handing the prizes to the successful contestants, delivered a congratulatory address.

Mr. French said he had received a communication from the general committee, conveying their thanks to the banks and individual officers who had donated towards the movement, and expressing their appreciation of the services rendered at the initial meetings by O. C. Williams, of the Bank of Australasia, and Mr. Southerden, of the Bank of New South Wales. The committee at its last meeting carried a proposal that a shilling subscription be started throughout the banks, in order to present a silver shield or shields for the championship tennis events, such shields to have the winners' names inscribed thereon, and to be held by the winning bank for that year only, and thereafter to be competed for year by year. For a long time past sports meetings had been held by individual banks, but this was the first occasion on which all banks had combined in one sports meeting and he thought they would agree with him that it was a very happy thing that such a combination should have been effected. Australians were a sporting people, and he thought that bank officers had shown that they were able to take their part, ably and well, in the sports of the country. They must recognize that cricket was the leading sport of Australia, and from no other profession had so many leading cricketers been drawn as from the profession of banking. They should all welcome such meetings as the one they had held that day, because they exercised a beneficial influence on our banks. The occupation of the young officer of a bank was inside the office, but outside the office he could exercise his muscles in a way that would be beneficial to him when he grew up. When he was a young man they had to get their exercise as best they could—but they got it. He had only to add a word as to the importance of maintaining an esprit de corps and true comradeship among the officers. This was essential, and nothing was more calculated to promote this than the holding of combined sports meetings, such as the one they had held so successfully that day.

North Dakota Bank Pays Well

The Golden Valley State Bank of Beach, N. D., had net earning in 1910 of 184 per cent, and a dividend of 100 per cent has just been declared by the directors, who also increased the capitalization from $10,000 to $25,000. The increase of capital and dividend was declared from the undivided profits. After charging off $5,100 for banking house, furniture and fixtures, $1,000 was placed in the surplus fund, still leaving $2,000 in the undivided profits account.

Editorial Comment

Clearing Houses Win Important Victory

The clearing houses of the country have won a quiet victory over the U. S. district-attorney at New Orleans, who had brought suit charging that the fixing of uniform rates for collection of out-of-town items was done in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. There was a menace in the proceeding to an important and valued function of every clearing organization in the country. So important was the matter deemed that the American Bankers Association had its general counsel, Thomas B. Paton, enter his appearance in the case. So able was the plea which he filed that the case was dropped on the showing made. Mr. Paton contended that clearing house rules fixing the minimum charges for the collection of out-of-town items do not violate the anti-trust act, and quoted the provision of Section 1 of the anti-trust act that "every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal. Every person who shall make any such contract or engage in any such combination or conspiracy, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor," etc. And after reviewing the facts in connection with the situation at New Orleans and urging that in any event the question should not be tested in the first instance by criminal prosecution, he refers to the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the live stock cases (Hopkins vs. U. S.) After arguing the Hopkins case at length and quoting many other cases, Mr. Paton concludes that the Hopkins case, it is seen, has been recognized as establishing the principle that contracts which have only an indirect relation to interstate commerce are not within the Sherman act and that an agreement between the commission merchants of a city fixing minimum charges for services in selling cattle shipped to them from other states and sold for shipment to other states has only an indirect bearing on such commerce and is not a violation of the anti-trust act. With much stronger reason, therefore, is an agreement between the banks of a city fixing a minimum charge for services in collecting out-of-town paper not within the act. The subject of the agreement here is still more remote from interstate commerce. It is not a charge for services in selling an article of commerce—which charge itself has only an indirect relation to commerce—but a charge for collecting payment of negotiable instruments which, by decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, equally with contracts of insurance are not subjects of commerce nor transactions of commerce, but at most mere instrumentalities or incidents thereof.

We learn that after reading Mr. Paton's brief the U. S. attorney-general advised the U. S. district-attorney at New Orleans to drop further proceedings.

Progress of Postal Banks

Postmaster-General Hitchcock officially pronounces the new postal bank system a success. "If the necessary appropriation were had I would establish postal savings banks to-morrow in 500 additional cities and towns," he recently declared. Under the law of 1910 only forty-eight postal banks were created. The purpose was to begin on a small scale, and gradually feel the way forward if the system proved successful.

In the few weeks in which it has been in operation the system has pleased the heads of the post office department. The total deposits in the forty-eight banks in January amounted to $60,000. As small towns were selected in every case for the experiment this exhibit is encouraging, as a beginning. February is expected to make a better showing.

It was noticed that a large majority of the depositors in January were aliens. They were persons who saw this system in operation at home, and they were prompt to utilize it here. They were and are a little distrustful of the ordinary banks, but they have profound faith in the honesty and the solvency of the national government. As the greater part of the $60,000 deposited in January is money which otherwise might have been sent abroad for deposit, these banks may help to increase the amount of available capital for the United States.

Justice to National Banks

That feature of the Aldrich monetary plan which aims to correct an injustice under which national banks have labored is meeting with almost universal commendation. The national banking system has suffered in recent years because of the rigidity of the federal banking laws as compared with the banking and trust company laws of the several states. The Aldrich plan, without reducing the requirements for capital and reserve, contemplates the restoration of the balance and the rehabilitation of the national banking system by allowing certain classes of national banks to open saving departments and to lend upon real estate, other classes to conduct business in foreign countries and still others to exercise the functions of trust companies under proper restrictions.

Europeans have bought $25,000,000 of American railway securities in one week.

Financiers in Public Life

Paul D. Cravath recently made a somewhat unique address before the Finance Forum on the relationship of financiers to public life. Mr. Cravath pointed out that reckless criticism, unjust conclusions and the prejudice aroused by political demagogues have kept many able men out of public affairs.

The fact is strikingly evident that incompetent men frequently are elected to office and called on to deal with questions of great importance, while those who have special fitness are excluded from public service through prejudice and political passion. This prejudice is most commonly manifested against men of great wealth. Mr. Cravath makes the telling point that the nation is thus wrongfully deprived of services which would be of the highest value.

To some extent THE CHICAGO BANKER indorses the argument of the address. The American people owe it to themselves to decide dispassionately and fairly between candidates. A man should not be excluded from office simply because he is wealthy or connected with a large corporation. No more should anyone be caught up in a wild hurrah and elected to an important place merely on account of his capacity for criticism.

The demagogue is the most dangerous man in our public affairs and few wealthy men are demagogues. Under this head are classed the many sham reformers who nauseate intelligent people with their ebullitions. On the other hand there are many corporation men whose methods of making money deserve condemnation. It is easy, however, to pick out any number of high-minded business men who have shown splendid attainments in their private affairs and who would be helpful in public life were the American people fair in such matters.

The conditions complained of did not obtain in this country fifty years ago, nor do they prevail now in leading European nations. Take England, for example, where, notwithstanding the present tendencies in the direction of socialism, the government, whatever party may be in power, is sure to be in close touch with, and to a large extent guided by, those men who through their inherited or acquired wealth, represent the industrial and financial strength of the nation. In matters of governmental finance the great financiers are openly consulted, as they should be.

Mr. Teter Heads Important Society

Lucius Teter, who has been elected president of the Infant Welfare Society of Chicago, is one of the most successful young bankers of the city. He was born in Indiana in 1873 and came to Chicago in 1892. He first became connected with the Continental National and the American Trust and Savings banks, later going to the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company. In 1908 he became president of the last named concern.

Rises to Bank Presidency

The steady advancement of A. L. Darrow through the various banking grades to the position of president of Fort Sutter National of Sacramento, Cal., is gratifying evidence of his ability and character. Mr. Darrow was born January 23, 1865, at Marietta, Ohio. He left the Marietta High School to work for a living at the age of fifteen; was employed by Star Oil Company in Buffalo, N. Y., 1881; Standard Oil Co., Milwaukee, 1882; Roundy-Peckam & Co., Wholesale Grocers, Milwaukee, 1883 to 1885; Goodyear Rubber Co., and Standard Oil Co., St. Paul, 1885 to 1892; Standard Oil Co., Mankato, 1893; Manager Standard Oil Co., San Diego, Cal., 1895 to 1900; Manager Exchange Department, Western National Bank, San Francisco, and from there went to Sacramento November 10, 1904 to organize the Fort Sutter National Bank of Sacramento and become its cashier and manager. Later he was elected vice-president and at the last annual meeting president of same bank.

During the past few years he has organized the Roseville Banking & Trust Co., Roseville, Cal., Sacramento Valley Trust Co., Sacramento, and is also president of the Bank of Anderson, Anderson, Cal.

The growth of Fort Sutter National is one of the most phenomenal in the state of California. It commenced July 1, 1905, with $108,000 deposits; passed the million mark in 1907 and the two million mark in 1910. At the present time it has over 5,700 depositors.

Cut Out Politics

Representative Karl Johnson of Mitchell county, Iowa, a well-known banker at Osage believes that the business of a county should be conducted in a manner as businesslike as that of any banking institution. He believes there is no reason why the same care and economy should not prevail in county affairs as in the financial dealings of a bank. He points out that deputies in the county offices are selected because of political preference rather than ability. His idea would be to have one man at the head and permit him to select the men to assist him or leave that to the supervisors. Civil service rules might govern, but at any rate the selection should be in a businesslike manner.

Bank Robbers Escape

Frank Loftus and William Forbes, two of four burglars under long sentences for blowing banks at White and Bushnell, South Dakota, escaped from the Brookings county jail Wednesday night.

Men on the outside sawed the lock off the steel bar door over a window and opened the cell door.

Loftus, who was released from the South Dakota penitentiary on October 3d, was to have been taken back to serve eight years and nine months. Forbes was sentenced to five years and one month.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

Mrs. Dicy Dunlap, grandmother of M. F. Dunlap, the well-known banker and Democratic leader of Jacksonville, recently celebrated her one hundredth birthday. She has lived for sixty-five years in the home which she now occupies. Her life has been spent in the administration of all of the presidents of the United States except those of Washington, John Adams, and Jefferson. Mrs. Dunlap was born February 10, 1811, in Ohio.

Jefferson County Bankers Organize

Fifteen bankers representing the banks of Jefferson county met in Mt. Vernon and organized the Jefferson County Bankers Association. The officers are: President, Albert Watson, president of the Ham National of Mt. Vernon; vice-president, A. Hall of Mt. Vernon, J. H. Crosne of Bonnic; secretary, Frank E. Patton, assistant cashier of the Third National of Mt. Vernon; treasurer, J. O. Purcell, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Dix.

A Smooth One Handled Roughly

Peoria officers have a satisfaction in having heard of the arrest of one James Walker at Springfield, Mo. Walker is credited by the Peoria papers with having done "a particularly smooth piece of crooked work," but as his smoothness was not partially distributed among states it seems that the Peoria authorities will have to wait until the Missouri people are through with Walker, for he is wanted there too. Walker enrolled at the Peoria business school, and so gained the confidence of the principal that the latter introduced him at the Interstate Bank. There Walker opened an account, depositing a draft for $500, and checking out $230 of it before it was found that the check had been raised from $5 to $500.

Call for Sheriffs to Organize

A leading down-state paper is authority for the statement that the sheriffs of Illinois are considering a plan of organizing to prevent wholesale burglaries of banks, postoffices and stores. Nothing better could be done than to prevent more of these pieces of work, and such a movement as this would meet with the hearty approvals of bankers in the smaller towns especially. Preventative work is desired, as there is grave danger that many young fellows will decide that bank robbery is "easy money," and the prevention of crime is needed as much as its cure.

The Banker and the Public Sales

January and February are the months when the most public sales of live stock and farm implements are held. In many communities the public sale is an important part of the economic life of the neighborhood and considerable money changes hands when these sales occur. In many cases the total receipts of farm sales reach a figure of several thousand dollars, as the prices of horses, mules, cattle, hogs and sheep have been high for the past few years.

The banker in the local community is very often the "clerk" of the sale, as he knows the credit of the neighborhood. In some cases the assistant cashier or possibly the cashier will "clerk" many sales, and instances are known where one of the officers of the local bank will spend many days in January and February tramping around after the auctioneer. The transactions of the sales are usually in the form of notes, as only items of about $10 or $15 are "cash in hand." When a sale reaches a total of five thousand dollars the handling of the notes is an important task. The notes are usually collected through the bank which sends a clerk to the sale, and advertising is also secured, as the bank officer at the sale is in a position to extend his acquaintance with the resident farmers and to make friends with those just moving into the community.

Illinois Notes

Peoria clearings for the week ending February 9th totaled $3,332,000. Springfield shows her growing power as a banking center by passing the million dollar mark in clearings, her total being $1,023,000.

Banker a Pauper

The cashier of the first bank in Decatur is now an inmate of the Macon county poor-house. He is a man of educated bearing and of such a type as is not usually found in almshouses. In the fifties he was cashier of the first bank in Decatur at a time when Abraham Lincoln was a frequent visitor to county seat towns in central Illinois. John McGinness, for such is his name, knew Lincoln well.

McGinness was a student of shorthand at a time when stenographers were rare in this part of the West and he took the first shorthand report in Decatur at a trial when Lincoln was one of the attorneys. At the age of eighty years McGinness lives quietly upon the bounty of the people of Macon county. The Decatur Review in a recent Sunday edition publishes an extended account of this once successful banker and business man of the old type in Illinois who is now reduced to straitened circumstances.

C. Hoagland, C. H. Fisher and E. F. Parr to incorporate the Old Colony Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago with a capital of $200,000.

While repairing a chimney of a house at Effingham the carpenters found a complete counterfeiters' outfit consisting of molds and metals. As the house has been vacant for some time it is believed to have been the headquarters of a gang of bogus money makers.

The weekly report of the school savings at Kankakee shows $129.26 to have been deposited, 238 cards taken home and 1,103 children banking.

William H. Marquam, for twenty-five years associated with the Third National of Bloomington, is dead at his home in that city at the age of 68 years. He established the first business school in Bloomington. This venture was the genesis of the present Brown's Business School in that city.

Banks in the larger centers of the state observed Monday as Lincoln's birthday and taking a holiday. Banks in villages and in smaller cities did not close on that day. The larger towns will also observe Washington's birthday. The smaller the town the less desire there seems to be to take holidays. But it must be remembered that the banks in smaller places serve many of the features of city clubs and Elks' lodges.

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, February 16.—Deposits with leading St. Louis banking institutions have reached a stationary period. This has come after a steady increase for the last thirty days or so, during which time the growth of deposits and reserves was phenomenal, even for this season of the year. The stage of equilibrium has been in effect for several days. As a usual thing March is the month in which the apex is reached, and bankers are anticipating a further growth until that time, but the increase from now on will not be as great as has been the case since the middle of January, it is believed. The deposits of the National Bank of Commerce on Monday were more than $67,000,000. This was a slight recession from the high point this month, which was $68,500,000, ten days or two weeks ago. The latter figure was the largest in the bank's history with one exception, a time for a few days when it had a special deposit of the Commonwealth Trust Company on hand, which ran the figure up to $72,000,000. The Mechanics American National broke its record by going up to $36,400,000, a few days ago. Since then there has been a slight falling off, and the total deposits Monday were $35,800,000, which, however, was a gain of $3,200,000 over the January 7th statement. The Third National has ascended steadily until Monday, when it showed a total in deposits of $39,200,000, a gain of $5,600,000 since January 7th.

Preacher Gets Another Bank

Advices from Jefferson City Mo., state that the Reverend J. T. M. Johnson, formerly pastor of the Delmar Avenue Baptist Church of St. Louis and widely known as the "Banker Preacher," with Lester Parker of Jefferson City, a large contractor of prison labor, has purchased a controlling interest in the Mechanics' Bank of Jefferson City. Professor Howard A. Gass, formerly State Superintendent of Public Schools, who is now contesting the title of this office with Professor W. P. Evans of St. Louis, has been elected cashier of the bank. Both the Reverend Johnson and Mr. Parker are interested in a number of banks and trust companies in St. Louis, Kansas City, Jefferson City and the Southwest.

St. Louis Delegates Named

Governor Hadley of Missouri has appointed the following prominent St. Louis financiers and business men as delegates to the Southern Commercial Congress, to be held at Atlanta, Ga., March 8th to 10th: C. P. Walbridge, James E. Smith, Charles H. Flach, Charles B. Adams, Henry W. Peters, Joseph H. Plumb, John A. Reheis, Edward Devoy, Charles P. Senter, Walker Hill, Joseph R. Barrell, Edward L.

Preetorius, Forrest Ferguson, Nelson W. McLeod, A. L. Shapleigh, Robert H. Stockton, Oscar L. Whitelaw and John H. Curran.

Local Risks Placed in France

Within the last two weeks between $500,000 and $700,000 St. Louis real estate mortgages, issued under the sponsorship of the American Trust Company of this city, have been placed in France, Belgium and Holland. This is an entirely new field for this class of loans, so far as St. Louis is concerned, but officials of the American Trust Company say the demand for such high grade real estate mortgages abroad is good, and the institution expects to work up a substantial business in that line. J. C. Van Riper of the American Trust Company, in company with W. W. Newberry, recently covered a good part of western Europe for this purpose, and their mission has been bearing good fruit. A hitherto unknown market for St. Louis mortgages, secured by guaranteed titles and bearing 5 per cent net to the investor, has been opened. However it may be remarked that just now that there is no need of going quite so far to get money at 5 per cent.

James Campbell Returns

The curious financially in local circles are wondering what special thing is going to happen for James Campbell, president of the North American Company, and incidentally the "J. P. M. of the Mississippi Valley" has come to town. Mr. Campbell says that his visit is simply to attend to routine matters relating to street railways and electric companies, but when Jim starts to attend to things, there is usually news to print, and often sad faces. Mr. Campbell will remain here about a week or ten days. He divides his time between his St. Louis home and his residence in Greenwich, Conn.

Oklahoma Guaranty Law Again

The House Committee on Banks and Banking of the Oklahoma legislature has split right through the middle over the senate bill adopting the bank-guaranty law. When the committee reported to the house on Monday, seven members stood by the ideas of Governor Gruce, and three submitted a minority report. The majority report, which is understood to be in full harmony with the governor's ideas, makes three important changes in the senate bill. Trust companies are divorced from the benefits of the guaranty law after September 1, 1911; the depositors of failed banks are given the option of taking cash from the guaranty funds or 6 per cent interest-bearing scrip from the state banking board, not to run longer than four months, and the state banking board is given power to issue negotiable warrants, bearing 6 per cent interest, from which to get cash to complete the liquidation of failed banks, in case the guaranty fund should become exhausted without all depositors being paid. The same report proposed to increase pay of bank examiners from $1,800 to $2,000. The minority report emphatically disapproves the idea of negotiable warrants and advocates the present banking board of five, state officers acting ex officio, except that the state treasurer is replaced thereon by the state auditor.

Want State Deposits in Texas

There was keen bidding and competition among Texas banking institutions to secure the state funds under the new state depository law. The law provides that one bank in each congressional district shall be selected. The bidding was livelier than ever before, sixty-nine institutions entering the lists. Some institutions bid as high as 5½ per cent, and the average is 4.34 per cent. To start with each successful bank will receive $50,000, but this amount will be gradually reduced as the year progresses. The following banks were successful: American National Bank, Paris, 3.52 per cent; State Bank of Marshall, 3.80; American National of Terrell, 4.51; Greenville National Exchange Bank, 5.18; Citizens National Bank, Hillsboro, 4½ per cent.

RESOURCES OVER FIVE MILLION DOLLARS.

For Reciprocity

The Chicago Association of Commerce at its Wednesday evening banquet gave quite a boost to reciprocity. The speakers were of world wide reputation—James J. Hill and Philander C. Knox, secretary of state under President Taft. Both supported the Canadian-American trade compact in unanswerable arguments. Secretary Knox portrayed the rise of conditions which, he said, made such a pact inevitable, and pointed out advantages to be derived by both countries through a lowering of the tariff barrier.

Enactment of a trade treaty with Canada had a second champion in James J. Hill, chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern railway, who asserted the entire Northwest must support the treaty and that there should not be a voice in the country or a vote in congress to oppose.

Mr. Hill said that every interest which saw a possible loss of a dollar, earned or unearned, had allied itself with the opposition. He said a trade treaty with Canada was worth more than armies and navies, and that the world never would see such progress as would follow when both countries were "free to follow natural inclination and wholesome commercial instinct."

Both guests of the organization who spoke at the banquet expressed a belief that the proposed treaty would be enacted by congress.

At the banquet were representatives from commercial organizations in St. Louis, Omaha, Louisville, St. Paul, Duluth, Detroit, Grand Rapids, South Bend, Peoria, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Kansas City and Quincy.

A summary of the strong points made by the two speakers is as follows:

Mr. Knox said:

Reciprocity between Canada and the United States is but natural expression of interdependence.

The proposition is economic, not political. There is no chance for this moral union to involve annexation or absorption.

The agreement seeks to give millions of wage-earning consumers benefit of drawing upon surplus food supplies near at hand.

It prevents manipulations and speculative price fluctuations which are of the greatest harm both to the producer and the consumer.

We have no cause to fear a demoralizing influx under the conditions which will result from this reciprocity agreement.

That it will benefit all sections of the country will be apparent the more its terms are examined. Nor will any class be injuriously affected.

In the event of a great world movement involving this continent the United States and Canada would act in perfect concert in defense of common rights.

Mr. Hill said:

No American business man can pretend to be indifferent to the almost unequalled opportunities afforded.

It is impossible to imagine a crisis that should range Canada and the United States on opposite sides.

A tariff on wheat never had and never can have the slightest effect on the farm value of wheat in the United States.

There should not be one vote in congress or one voice in the country against an arrangement that is worth more than armies and navies.

The world never has seen such progress as would follow were both countries free to follow natural inclination and wholesome commercial instincts.

If there ever is to be other than commercial alliance between Canada and the United States it belongs to years yet unnumbered and generations yet unborn.

Opposition to a project so natural comes from monopolistic combinations, lumber interests and the print paper combine. These and similar objectors are entitled to no consideration.

Chairman Bradt in Chicago

S. E. Bradt, vice-president of First National Bank, Dekalb, Ill., visited Chicago Wednesday. Mr. Bradt is chairman of Group Three of the Illinois Bankers Association and their meeting this year will be held in Dekalb. Mr. Bradt says members are greatly interested in group work and they hope to present a good program at this year's meeting.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

A senator from Henderson has introduced in the Minnesota legislature a bill for state bank guaranty. It provides a tax of $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent on the average daily deposits to be paid into the state treasury, the minimum for any bank being \$100. This is to constitute the guaranty fund to be increased by later assessment when necessary. The fund is to be under supervision of the state bank examiner.

The Minnesota Bankers Association is lending its aid to the passage of the bill of Senator B. E. Sundberg for rural school consolidation and that of Ole Sageng, in the senate, for a state commission of three to study educational conditions, also the savings bank bill introduced by the banking committees of the two houses. Secretary C. R. Frost says that the association favors the clause of the Sageng bill providing that one member of the commission, appointment of which is provided for, shall be representative of industry, one of agriculture, and one education.

Pleads Guilty of Contempt

A. D. Clarke, director in the Minnesota National Bank, and former president, has pleaded guilty to contempt of the district court in Hennepin county. A restraining order against disposition of his property was obtained by his wife pending discussion of validity of a Reno divorce. He is charged with disposing of $10,000 Algona State Bank, Iowa, stock, and $100,000 worth of land.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER
By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

At the joint hearing held in the assembly chamber at Madison during the past week, the guaranty of bank deposits bill, introduced by Senator Owen, received some hard knocks and the concerted action of Wisconsin bankers which is being brought to bear against this bill, would make it appear now that Senator Owen's optimistic prophecies concerning its ultimate adoption, may meet with defeat. Every Wisconsin banker is to be given an opportunity to express his views in regard to this law and to this end, the bill will be allowed to rest for a week or more, while the views of the different bankers throughout the state, are being obtained, through the medium of the Wisconsin Bankers Association.

In order that the proposed action might be thoroughly understood by the banking fraternity, Senator Owen agreed to furnish the association with a sufficient number of copies of the bill to send one to each member, but a number of days have elapsed since this pledge and as yet the copies have not been forthcoming.

Wisconsin newspapers, even those published in Madison, have appeared to attach but little importance to this bill, or have considered their space too valuable, to give much of it to a matter which is of vital necessity, not only to all bankers in this state, but to the manufacturing interests and the public at large. In not one single newspaper, which has come to the writer's notice, has there appeared a report on this bill beyond a few inches devoted to an alleged synopsis, which was so written that it could not be definitely understood, even were it not misleading. When these copies of the bill are sent to members of the association, a blank form will be enclosed on which the bankers will be asked to express their stand in regard to the pending measure.

Doubt as to Outcome

George D. Bartlett, Secretary of the Wisconsin Bankers Association says:

"Thus far we have been working in the dark. We have had no way of ascertaining how the bankers as a whole, look at this guaranty law. Many of the bankers themselves do not know how they will stand on it because they have not seen the full text of the measure. It will take some quick work, but if we receive the copies from Madison promptly we hope to get them sent out to the 650 banks in the state and receive replies from a majority of the banks before any further action is taken by the legislature.

"It may be that the banks are about evenly divided as to the desirability of such a law for Wisconsin. If that proves to be the case, the officers of the association will take no further action. Each party will be told to plead its own case.

"On the other hand, if practically all of the banks are opposed to Mr. Owen's plan for the guaranty of deposits we will do our best to point out the objections to the members of the legislature. If the majority of the bankers favor the plan we will be bound to respect their wishes.

"When the plan for the guaranty of bank deposits was brought up two years ago, 90 per cent of the bankers of Wisconsin were opposed to it. Whether developments in Oklahoma since then have caused a change in sentiment, or not, is questionable. During that time the law has been declared constitutional. Some claim that it has proven a success in Oklahoma. Others point to the fact that total deposits in 220 national banks are given as $58,000,000, and the deposits in the 680 state bank total only $47,000,000. This is an average of $263,636 in deposits for each national bank and $69,117 in deposits in each state bank.

"Appeal to popular sentiment," is one of the methods which is being adopted by the father of this bill to insure its passage. At the joint hearing, Senator Owen appealed to the gallery by stating—"that bankers have no divine right to run the banking business, regardless of the interest of depositor and the public generally," and while apparently willing to give the bankers ample opportunity to participate in the discussion of the bill, it has been at the same time apparent that Senator Owen wished to rush this bill through to final adoption in the shortest possible time.

Another Objectionable Bill

Another bill which is meeting with determined opposition on the part of the bankers of this state, lies in the so-called "Segregation Bill," providing for the segregation of savings deposits from all other accounts. This bill is full of flaws and according to good authority, the provision of this bill which guarantees security to saving depositors and segregation of savings from commercial deposits can be evaded by unscrupulous bankers. According to this same authority, "The banker who does not have a conscience could evade every provision of the proposed bill, if it became a law."

Opposes Income Tax Bill

President Otto H. Falk of the Merchants & Manufacturers Association has issued a letter to the members of the association calling their attention to the action of their legislation committee in asking the defeat of the proposed state income tax law.

"After study," says the letter, "the committee is convinced that the state income tax measure should be defeated. While the committee believes in the principle of income tax, it holds that any such system must first be accepted by the national government, and that there must be a reasonable uniformity of action on the part of all the states before an income tax law can be safely administered.

"The time has not arrived when Wisconsin can safely impose a graduated income tax and expose her industrial welfare to dangers of an experiment upon which even the ablest tax experts disagree."

New State Bank at Kewaunee

Work of starting the new Farmers' and Merchants' State Bank in this city is progressing very satisfactorily at the present time, and it is expected that everything will be in readiness within a short time. The officers and directors of the new bank are as follows: O. H. Bruemmer, president; M. J. Rudebeck, vice-president; J. E. Hutchinson, cashier, and Joseph J. Schultz, assistant cashier. The directors are as follows: O. H. Bruemmer, J. F. Kuehl, Paul Renke, and George Erickson, Joseph G. Walseska, M. J. Rudebeck and Henry A. Dvorak.

The building which is to be occupied by the bank is now undergoing changes and this work will be completed within a short time as there is a large crew at work and operations are being pushed as rapidly as possible.

Two More Banks Make Application

The First National Bank, Fennimore, and the Stephenson National Bank, Marinette, have made application as depositories of postal bank funds.

Install Vaults at New London

The new doors and steel linings for the First National Bank of New London have arrived and are being put in place this week. They are of the latest approved design and are just as near burglar proof as mechanical ingenuity can make them.

Sixty-first Birthday is Remembered

Fred Vogel, Jr., President of the First National Bank of Milwaukee, celebrated his sixty-first birthday February 8th. Mr. Vogel is one of Milwaukee's best known business men, both in financial and manufacturing circles, being a member of the Pfister & Vogel Leather Company. Mr. Vogel has been president of the First National Bank for five years.

New Milwaukee Bond Issues

The finance committee of the Milwaukee common council has decided to recommend submitting the question of a $320,000 bond issue, for several purposes to the voters this spring. The following bond ordinances will also be recommended for passage: Isolation Hospital $100,000; Oneida Street bridge $120,000; Bath $10,000; Sewers $150,000. The ordinance providing for mortgage certificates amounting to $1,000,000 for a terminal station, will be recommended.

Another Bank in Milwaukee

Articles of incorporation for the new North Avenue State Bank of Milwaukee have been approved of by the state bank examiner and construction work on the bank's new building at North Avenue and 30th Street will be commenced. The bank will have a capital stock of $50,000. The incorporators are William Coerper, Wm. C. Garens, Geo. E. Garens, Geo. Klippel and O. A. Hensel.

Milwaukee Clerks Win Debate

An asset currency would increase the elasticity of bank note issues in time of stringency and panic, without impairing the credit of the country, was the contention of the Milwaukee bank clerks, in their winning debate against the team representing the Detroit chapter of the American Institute of Banking on this question:

"Resolved, That National Banks be Allowed to Issue Notes Against Their General Assets."

The vote was two to one in favor of the Milwaukee team, which upheld the affirmative side of the question.

"It is doubtful if the present banking law can be expanded with sufficient rapidity and ease in times of stringency as to make it of practical use," was the contention of the negative, who denied the practicability of the proposed asset currency as a means of relief on the ground that it would tend to destroy credit. "The national bank note system is slow in its methods. Circulating notes that are paid out in the place of money are much more convenient, but as soon as there is the slightest difference in value between them and their security, they become mere negotiable notes."

Milwaukee was represented by Gerhard G. Fischer and Daniel T. Leisk, Milwaukee National Bank, and Frank R. E. Bachhuber, Marshall & Ilsley Bank; while Detroit was represented by John C. Shaw, Security Trust Company; Frederick F. Blodgett, Dime Savings Bank and Irving H. Baker, First National Bank.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK.

National Bank and Northwestern Loan & Trust Company of that city, died last week as the result of an operation for a perforation of the stomach.

Charles F. Hunter, for six years cashier of the MacFarland State Bank in East Troy, has resigned to accept a similar position with the Citizens Bank at Mukwonago.

The Bank of Clear Lake closed its doors January 20th, and will liquidate its accounts. The reason assigned is the falling off of deposits and the large increase in the demands for loans. Condition is said to have been brought about by the shortage of money among firms, due to the poor crops of last year. Depositors are assured that they will receive dollar for dollar, as the resources are claimed to exceed the liabilities.

The First National Bank of West Allis is being remodeled, a private room for patrons is being built and the floor will be paved with colored tiling.

Charles A. Shaver is to be cashier of the new bank at Shell Lake, Wis., under the name of the Bank of Shell Lake, which will open for business about March 1st.

Lucien S. Hanks, the Madison banker who is sojourning at Miami, Florida, for the winter, writes to Gov. McGovern that he cannot accept a reappointment as a member of the State Board of University Regents.

Jas. K. Hsley, President of the Marshall & Hsley Bank of Milwaukee, left February 3d, for a four weeks' outing in California.

Oliver C. Fuller, president of the Wisconsin National Bank, has left for Palm Beach, Fla., where he will spend the next month with his family.

January Bond Sales a Record

Original sales of municipal bonds in the United States in January, according to the compilation of the Financial Chronicle, amounted to $79,829,948. This is the largest monthly output of municipals ever reported. The next highest total $69,093,390, was reached in March last year. In addition to the long term bonds sold, there were negotiated temporary loans amounting to $27,489,060. Canadian municipalities sold $840,375 of debentures during the month.

The sale of $60,000,000 of 4¼ per cent corporate stock by the city of New York was principally responsible for the large total reached in January. The previous record last March was also due largely to the offerings of $50,000,000 of 4¼ per cent stock by New York.

Bigelow Parole

Leavenworth, Kan., February 15.—Frank G. Bigelow, the Milwaukee banker, serving a ten year sentence in the federal penitentiary here for the violation of the national banking laws, was before the parole board Monday. He was given a five minute personal hearing.

As his time expires in a little more than a year, it is expected that Bigelow will receive a recommendation for parole. In case he does, it probably will be at least three weeks before it can be approved by Attorney-General Wickersham and his release effected.

Bigelow is in good health and is said to feel reasonably confident that he will be paroled. He is one of six other prominent bankers of the United States who were examined at this session of the parole board. His chances for parole are said to be slightly better than the others, however, as he has less of his sentence to serve.

Land of Cotton

San Antonio, Texas, February 15.—The production by Texas of almost 3,000,000 bales of cotton in 1910 gives some notion of what this state might do were all the arable land under cultivation. In round numbers there are 34,000,000 acres of tillable land in the state. Of this sum 3,797,967 acres or about eleven per cent is cultivated. In addition to the cotton growth the corn crop of 1910 was a close second in the matter of wealth to the farmer. If instead of 3,000,000 acres in round numbers 30,000,000 were under cultivation, and the same percentage devoted to cotton the output of this staple alone from Texas would approximate 30,000,000 bales or more than three times the entire product of the cotton belt of the country of 1910.

From these figures two interesting calculations can be made, as follows: First, the vast population the state will maintain, and secondly, the enormous value which may be taken from the soil in the form of one staple alone.

Few people have any conception of the size of this state. It is almost 1,000 miles from Orange, near the eastern line, to El Paso on the western extremity, and more than 600 miles from Denison to Brownsville. In extent the state is larger than the German Empire. And when it is recalled that Germany contains forty-seven cities of more than 100,000 population, seven of these having more than 500,000 population, some notion of the possibilities of Texas both as an agricultural area and population center can be gathered. It is estimated that this state can support a population of 20,000,000 people and not be as thickly settled as some of the eastern states and many of the European countries.

Money, Banking and Finance from Chicago Viewpoint

It is early for presidential politics and yet there is a great deal of it in the atmosphere. Bankers and other business men have had a new and peculiar line of thought thrust upon them this week. The unexpected piling up of money within a month of the usual spring activity has been hard to explain, and of course political reasons are given.

It has been stated all along that business will continue somewhat below normal until the Interstate Commerce Commission makes a decision in the freight rate cases. To this view is added the belief that political uncertainties are largely responsible for the seeming curtailment of trade in various channels. Already manufacturers and importers are calling attention to the fact that the presidential election comes next year, and that the possibility of governmental changes warrants a gradual slowing down of industrial efforts.

It nearly always happens that a presidential year is a poor business year, but with all the truth and logic there may be in that fact the casual observer will declare that the beginning of 1911 is rather too early to look for any serious political effect. In going over this subject a Chicago banker said:

"We have the ground work to support a nice improvement in general business, even though the nominations in what promises to be a trying presidential election struggle are less than a year and a half away, provided only the natural causes affecting business were to be considered.

Important Decisions Coming

"But there are the pending decisions of the Standard Oil and American Tobacco cases before the supreme court of the country. Therefore I cannot help a conviction that the present time of all times is one at which it behooves business people to proceed cautiously. There is no need to speculate as to what will be the outcome of these cases before the court.

"The idea some romancers have that the large interests can get advance suggestions as to the import of the decisions to be handed down is simply rot. The big men are as much at sea in this matter as the littlest merchant in the country, and they will continue in such a state of ignorance until Monday, when the court will render its finding. This will be the first interpretation by the highest court of the

Sherman anti-trust law as it applies to the modern corporation, and there is little or nothing in previous decisions on which to base an opinion as to what the court will decide to do.

Caution is Necessary

"Now I think I can observe a tendency on the part of the business public to show a callousness as to what will be the outcome of the cases. I am sure I am unable to feel that way about them. I feel that it is just possible our corporations may receive a whack and a jolt more severe than they are at the moment anticipating, and I know some very important men who are trimming their sails so they will weather the effects of decisions in case they are such as to compel the most radical changes in the methods of carrying on business as a corporation.

"Therefore, I say, I do not think it is a time for overconfidence or rapid spreading out in business. I favor waiting a little longer until we know just what will be the treatment of the corporations by the supreme court. If it is such that it will be easy for the corporations to adjust themselves and their methods to the conditions laid down, and if the crop prospects continue as good as they now look, then I shall expect to see a good business movement in the country between now and the near approach of the 1912 presidential campaign."

Financial Legislation

There are several measures now before congress of importance to the financial markets as a whole, and of direct interest to the banking community. They comprise the authorization which the secretary of the treasury is seeking, and will probably obtain, to issue 3 per cent Panama bonds without the circulation privilege, and to make certified checks good for customs dues. The second measure can have only happy results, since it will abolish the foolish and at many times costly restrictions placed upon the dealings between the banks and subtreasuries. As for the Panama bonds, their fate cannot be foretold. There has been left with them the privilege of securing government deposits, and it is a fair assumption that at a price this would make them attractive to banks now holding such deposits by means of the 2 per cent bonds. The effect of the new issue upon the old 4s involves this same problem and many others, but a more interesting question is that of the attitude of the investing public toward the new 3 per cent issue. The rate is hardly sufficient to bring the bond into competition with the savings banks, but it has the attraction of government security and sentimental advantages, so that, all in all, it will not be surprising if the offering attracts outside subscriptions for a considerable number of millions at prices higher than the banks may be willing to bid. After all the stripping of the bond of its circulation privilege is the most important feature, since in this modest way the first step is taken toward a rational and really useful currency.

Encouragement in Steel

The gain of 435,000 tons shown by the January report of the Steel Corporation's unfilled tonnage over the December figures is double what market authorities had predicted. December had shown a loss from November's total of unfilled tonnage of 86,000 tons; and it was expected the burst of buying during the latter half of January would probably bring the total up to 100,000 tons over the November figures, or 180,000 to 200,000 tons over the report of December 31st.

This with the new railroad construction program will tend to allay the fears of those who have political worries. Railroad earnings for January were another pleasant surprise tending to stimulate the nation's optimism.

Hold Stock Yards Securities

New England, it is estimated, holds 75 per cent of the stock of the Chicago Junction Railways and Union Stock Yards Company and has six out of the ten directors. Most of the shareholders have been with the company since its organization in 1889, when Mr. Prince, now elected president, working in conjunction with Mr. Thayer, who retires from the presidency, succeeded in reorganizing into a new corporation the entire stockyards and railroad properties.

TWO GOOD BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Have for sale, at about sixty per cent of its actual value, the finest china, glass and queensware business in Illinois, outside Chicago. Was very flatteringly noticed in recent issue of Pottery and Glass. Satisfactory reasons. Also, will give liberal bonus of stock in large and prosperous corporation, and six per cent interest for a short loan of $25,000, to meet maturing obligation. Abundant security. Must act before March 1st. Both propositions will bear closest investigation. Apply, Wade of Iowa City, formerly congressman from the Second Iowa district, John Cownie of Des Moines, formerly member of the state board of control and Rev. P. M. Simms of Vinton. The convention will be held in the high school auditorium. The banquet will be served in the opera house. The group is composed of bankers from the counties of Black Hawk, Bremer, Buchanan, Grundy, Tama, Benton, Linn, Johnson and Iowa.

It is anticipated that the attendance will be large. Group Eleven usually meets on February 22d but its program has not yet been received in Des Moines.

Legislation is Unimportant

Few measures has been passed by the Iowa legislature of particular interest to bankers. There are many measures still pending, however, among them the tax ferret repeal which was taken up as a special order for Tuesday. Representative Brady in the house put in a bill for taxation of moneys, credits, bonds and contracts at a flat rate of four mills. It is the opinion of many that a flat rate tax will be a good solution of moneys and credits problem in Iowa. Representative Hicklenlooper put in a bill providing that moneys, credits, notes, bills, bonds and shares of corporate stock shall be listed where the owner lives.

Sioux City a Reserve Center

The bankers at Sioux City have been saving their money, ready to be made a reserve center on March 1st. While the law requires 25 per cent altogether of the banks' deposits to be kept in reserve, the Sioux City nationals are expecting to maintain from 35 to 40 per cent of their deposits where they will be immediately available. While this will require a closer margin of profit, the bankers are expecting to do a bigger business and will be fully equipped to meet every requisite.

Bank Buys Refunding Bonds

The Iowa National of Des Moines purchased the $183,000 of refunding bonds issued by Polk county. The bank will pay $4.552 as premium for the bonds. The bond will bear 4½ per cent. $83,000 will run until November 1, 1924 and $100,000 will run until November 1, 1930. Among the bidders were George M. Bechtel Co. of Davenport; National City Bank of Chicago; Woodin, McNear & Moore, Chicago; Wells & Dickey Co., Minneapolis; Harris Trust Co., Chicago; N. W. Halsey Co., Kansas City; Compton Trust Co., St. Louis; Des Moines Trust Co., Des Moines.

Gets Peculiar Verdict

A. J. Zwart of the Des Moines National, won a peculiar verdict in the Des Moines courts when he was awarded $129.37½ for damages received in an accident some time ago. He sued for $150. What is puzzling Mr. Zwart is how to collect that extra half cent which the jury graciously bestowed upon him.

Would Publish Statements

Senator Hunter of Woodbury, has introduced a bill in the Iowa senate providing that the state auditor must annually publish statements of the conditions of the various banks of Iowa. The statement must be prepared before March 1st and shall show the conditions of each bank at the close of the preceding year.

General News Notes

Bank clearings in Des Moines showed a good gain for the week ending February 11th, as compared with the corresponding week last year. The total was $4,010,262.68 and the increase over the clearings last year is $822,796.26.

The Winneshiek County Savings Bank of Decorah and the Citizens Savings of Decorah, have been designated as depositories for the funds deposited in the postal savings banks at that city.

William Gregg and Shelton Alton were arrested in Des Moines at the instigation of Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association on charges of passing forged checks on a number of merchants in Dallas county. The young men had walked several miles after passing the checks and were apprehended by the Des Moines detective force.

Claus Heldt, Jr., has resigned as assistant cashier of the City State at Ogden, but retains his interest in the institution. He expects to become an Ogden real estate man.

The Farmers State at Ulmer has filed articles of incorporation. The capital stock is $10,000. President is M. M. Heptonstall; vice-president, Charles O. Hill; cashier, C. H. Townsend.

The Merchants National at Burlington announces that it will remodel its structure and provide additional vault room for safety deposit boxes.

The Altoona Savings at Altoona has filed articles of incorporation. The capital stock is $10,000. O. H. Pearson is president; H. F. Nahnen is vice-president and J. E. Reid is cashier.

J. H. Bowman, formerly in the banking business at Waverly, but later retired, dropped dead in the hotel at that place.

J. E. Lamb has been advanced from assistant cashier of the Montrose Savings to cashier of that institution, succeeding William Cook.

School pupils in the little town of Alford, Iowa, have taken kindly to a savings department opened especially for them by the Alford bank. At the end of the first ten months, there are 106 depositors of juvenile degrees with an average balance of $14.29 each or a total of $1,500.45.

Simon Casady and Fred Risser of the Central State, Des Moines, are in the East getting ideas for the new structure which the institution will erect on Fifth Street within the coming months.

Among out of the city bankers in Des Moines recently were Cashier Chas. Richards of the Ochevedan Savings; Walter Johnson of Nampa, Idaho, formerly with the Leavitt & Johnson Trust Co. at Waterloo; President H. E. Fardel, State of Stanhope; President John McHugh, First National, Sioux City; J. H. Ingwersen, Clinton; Cashier Sears McHenry, First National of Denison; Cashier F. A. CENTRAL WEST LETTER

Kansas City banks will be well represented at the group meetings of the Oklahoma Bankers Association the latter part of the present month. The Kansas City party will travel in a private car and will leave the night of February 18th and reach Guthrie the next day, where the first group meeting will be held. The second group meets in El Reno, February 21st. Then follows in order Chickasha, February 22d; Ardmore, February 23d and Claremore, February 24th. Those who will constitute the Kansas City party are: R. C. Menefee, treasurer of the Commerce Trust Company; E. P. Davis, assistant cashier of the Southwest National Bank; C. L. Brokaw, cashier Commercial National Bank; G. P. Reichel, assistant cashier First National Bank; G. G. Moore, assistant cashier New England National Bank; J. C. English, cashier Traders' National Bank; W. C. Henrici, cashier Inter-State National Bank; H. L. Jarboe, president Drover's National Bank; J. P. Lombard, cashier Corn Belt National Bank; G. B. Gray, vice-president National Bank of the Republic; G. W. Allison, treasurer American Union Trust Company; Charles H. Moore, vice-president National Bank of Commerce; Jerome Thralls, manager Kansas City Clearing House Association and newspaper representatives. W. B. Harrison, secretary of the Oklahoma Bankers Association, will come to Kansas City and make the trip with the Kansas City bankers.

Important Bank Change

One of the most important bank changes in Oklahoma within recent months was announced last week. R. M. Estes, one of the prominent bankers in that state, has purchased a large block of stock of the Planters' and Mechanics' Bank of Oklahoma City. Mr. Estes has taken the active presidency of the bank. A. M. Gustin, former president, who has been connected with the bank ever since its organization, will become vice-president. Charles A. Bryan, of Cyrill, Okla., also becomes an officer. Mr. Estes owns a number of small banks in the western part of Oklahoma and was one of the organizers of the Central State Bank of Oklahoma City, which was later changed to the Central Reserve National Bank.

Persistent rumors that the Central Reserve National Bank of Oklahoma City was to be merged with the Oklahoma City National Bank have been set at rest by a statement from A. M. Young, president of the Central Reserve. He admitted that overtures had been made for the merger but said that the officers, directors, and stockholders of the Central Reserve were unequivocally opposed to such an arrangement.

Burglary Bill Passes

The so-called bank burglary bill has passed the Kansas senate. It provides that anyone who shall break into a building and attempt to open a safe or vault by the use of explosives shall be, upon conviction, sent to the state penitentiary for not less than ten nor more than thirty years. This is the most drastic law of its kind ever considered favorably by a western state and was the result of the many bank robberies in Kansas last fall.

In addition to the law providing severe punishment for bank robbers in Kansas, a special bill has been introduced in the Kansas legislature to permit the state bank commissioner to offer a reward of $1,000 for the capture and conviction of bank robbers.

A warrant charging conspiracy to swindle has been sworn out against Charles H. Meeker, believed to be in New York. Banking men in Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico are mentioned in the charge against Meeker. It is alleged that he sold bogus London exchange and with the proceeds purchased equipment to start banks in the Southwest.

Three men accused of being members of the gang of bank robbers which operated in Kansas last fall are now in jail at Marysville, Kan., and will be tried in the February term of court. Two of the men, Henry Hoerr and Alexander Menard, are charged with having taken part in the robbery of the State Bank of Beattie, November 8th and the other, Neil Mulcahy, is accused of being one of several men who robbed two banks at Waterville, Kan., December 30th. Sheriff Sullivan of Marysville has recently arrested another man, Frank Wheeler, at Wymore, Neb., who is charged with complicity in the Beattie robbery. Wheeler was formerly a conductor on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad.

Three New Texas Banks

At a meeting of the Texas State Banking Board authority to do business in Texas was granted to three new state banks. They are the Coupland State Bank, of Coupland, Williamson county, capital stock $10,000. Weston zer and manager which well fits him for his present responsible position. He is a native of Texas and lived on a farm until 21 and had finished high school. After taking a business course he entered the banking business as cashier of First National at Dustin. He gained considerable with other banks before joining the staff of Farmers State Bank at Holdenville. The latter institution is growing fast and is recognized as a sound and progressive bank.

Guaranty State Bank, Weston, Collin county, capital $10,000 and the Kyle State Bank of Kyle, Hays county. The two latter banks assumed the guaranty fund plan, while the Coupland Bank has taken the bond plan to protect depositors.

Changes in Guaranty Bill

The new bank guaranty bill which passed the Oklahoma house of representatives had rough sledding in the senate, and, although it has passed that body, it has been so amended that it is practically a different bill. New sections have been added, divorcing trust companies from the benefits of the law; providing that the depositor having funds in a failed bank may take cash from the guaranty fund or 6 per cent interest bearing certificates from the banking board, and that the banking board may issue negotiable warrants bearing 6 per cent interest from which to realize cash to settle with depositors when the guaranty fund and emergency assessments shall have become exhausted. The salary of the state bank commissioner is also raised to $4,000 a year, and the banking board shall consist of the governor and two appointees instead of five of the state officers.

Charges Malicious Prosecution

E. McPherson, cashier of the Merchants State Bank of Rush Springs, Oklahoma, has brought suit against A. F. Koch and J. D. Shook, directors of that institution, for damages to the amount of $10,200 on the charge of malicious prosecution. McPherson was arrested on the charge of misappropriating bank funds but was cleared when arraigned.

General News Notes

The Missouri state bank commissioner has issued a certificate of incorporation to the Citizens' Bank of Guilford, Nodaway county, Mo. The capital stock of the new bank is $15,000 and the board of directors for the first year is composed of John McKee, A. H. Wilson, F. L. Clayton, J. V. Pugh and J. S. Hocker, all of Guilford.

The First National Bank of Monette, Mo., Citizens' National Bank of Billings, Okla., and the Beaver County Bank of Guymon, Okla., have made application as depositories for postal bank funds.

Jasper C. Laughlin, an old and prominent citizen of Rockville, Mo., and president of the Rockville Bank, died last week.

The Central National Bank of St. Louis, has been approved as reserve agent of the First National Bank of Okmulgee, Okla., the American National Bank of Oklahoma City, Okla., and of the National Bank of Poteau, Poteau, Okla.

Eugene P. Davis, assistant cashier of the Southwest National Bank of Kansas City, attended the Kansas Day banquet at Topeka last week.

The Fort Dearborn National Bank of Chicago has been approved as reserve agent for the First National Bank of Cameron, Mo., the State National Bank of Oklahoma City, Okla., and the First National Bank of Milburn, Okla.

Although Tulsa, Okla., already has eight banks and trust companies it is to have another. This will be a night and day bank, and will have a capital stock of $50,000. There are two other night and day banks in Oklahoma—at Muskogee and Oklahoma City.

Kansas Robbery

Lawrence, Kan., February 14.—"Three men have blown open your bank at Linwood and are robbing it. What shall we do?"

That was the message that greeted Willis K. Folks as he climbed out of bed to answer a madly ringing telephone at 3 o'clock this morning. It was rather startling news, particularly as Mr. Folks had only bought the bank about three weeks ago, but the ex-secretary of the university here was calm.

"Tell the citizens not to risk their lives to save my bank," he told the excited resident of Linwood who had called up to tell him of the robbery. None of the townspeople of Linwood had been risking their lives to save Mr. Folks' bank, and they followed out his wishes not to do so.

The bank, which was the State Bank of Linwood, Kan., fourteen miles east of here, was wrecked by three men about 3 o'clock this morning. The three took tools from the Union Pacific tool shed nearby, broke in the front door and wrecked the safe with dynamite. Then they took $1,000 in silver and $800 in currency and left. As they stepped outside they were met by a section hand named Peterson. They fired a salute at the early rising railroad man, who at once gave up his researches around the bank. He was not injured.

Several other residents of the town awoke, but following Mr. Folks' commands, which came about this time, did not risk their lives, and the robbers escaped. They are believed to be headed for Kansas City. They overlooked $350 in gold which was in the safe.

The belief of three deputy marshals that he was one of the bank robbers resulted in an unpleasant time for C. E. Brown, a guard at the Kansas Municipal Farm at Leeds, early this morning. Brown, who was on his way home to Kansas City from his home at Eudora, was taken from an Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe train at De Soto. It was three hours before he proved his identity.

D. W. Hogan, director and cashier of the American National Bank of Oklahoma City, Okla., has resigned. James Cheneweth, formerly vice-president of the Farmers National Bank, was elected vice-president and director of the American National. Harry B. Carson will be acting cashier.

Increase of Capital Stock

Stockholders of Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company in special meeting voted to increase the capital of the institution from $500,000 to $1,000,000. The new stock is to be offered at $120 a share to stockholders of record March 16th, and will be payable on or before April 5th. Twenty dollars a share of the purchase price will go to surplus account, raising it to $200,000.

"Back to the Soil"

William McCormick, cashier of the Farmers Bank of Emden, near Lincoln, can be said to live an almost ideal country life. He owns an exceptionally well-improved farm of 550 acres two and a half miles from Emden. His home is a modern one with hot and cold water throughout. When the roads are good Mr. McCormick goes from his home to the bank in an automobile and when the roads are muddy he uses a horse and buggy. Formerly he fed and shipped many cattle annually but now is keeping up the fertility of his soil by crop rotation.

Cashier McCormick is an ardent exponent of the "back to the soil movement" for he lives it every day. The Farmers Bank of Emden, operated by McCormick and Company, has deposits of $180,000. Fort Dearborn National is its Chicago correspondent.

Germany in Fear

Count Von Kanitz, conservative, in the Reichstag, interpellated the government regarding what measures it proposed to take to prevent flooding the German market with foreign securities. When the count recently gave notice that he would make this inquiry he was supposed to have in mind the current report that the Berlin Handelsgesellschaft contemplated making an attempt to list the stock of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway on the Berlin boerse.

Speaking on the question Count Von Kanitz quoted figures showing the great increase in the listing of foreign securities in the past years. He continued:

"The movement of capital out of the country necessarily raises the interest rate in Germany. The big banks prefer bringing out foreign issues to exploiting German loans, owing to the bigger profits thus secured. It is astonishing with what carelessness second rate foreign paper is admitted to the German market.

"The securities of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway belong ostensibly to the best class of investments and pay 7 per cent, but it is asserted without contradiction that this railway recently showed reduced earnings and that its dividends are kept up to 7 per cent only in order not to discredit the large sums placed in Germany. This and other American securities show fluctuations unknown in Germany.

"Why do not Americans keep these securities for themselves? They have more money than we have. They do not find any railway material in Germany. Their high tariff renders this impossible and the Payne tariff law permits the raising of the rate against us to a maximum of 100 per cent.

"The investment of German capital in American railway securities only places this capital at the disposal of the American iron industry, and the German stock market is rendered more dependent than ever upon the New York stock exchange.

"After increasing their schedules they have issued all kinds of vexing tariffs regulations. Accordingly we have no occasion to dispense with a careful investigation of American railway securities or to admit them open handedly out of pure friendship."

Chas. A. Billing, of Bronx National, New York, is declared sane by a lunacy commission.

State Bank Gains in Oklahoma

Bank Commissioner E. B. Cockrell, of Oklahoma, has sent out a summary of state banking conditions which shows the Oklahoma guaranty law went into effect February 14, 1908, since which time 190 state banks have been chartered and 84 national banks have converted to state institutions. This in reply to contrary assertions by many daily and banking newspapers. Deposits have gained nearly five millions and loans have decreased close to half a million. Net increase in number of state banks for 1910 was 27. Reserve increase was an average of 8.3 per cent.

too modest to claim any credit for himself, but did point out the fact that the Pittsburgh Clearing House, referring to an address made by Mr. Forgan at the Los Angeles convention, would get a very clear and authentic description of how the thing works.

FOR St. Louis the committee secured letters from C. H. Huttig, B. F. Edwards, and Festus J. Wade. Mr. Huttig was very emphatic in his endorsement and over his signature as president of the St. Louis Clearing House he invited the committee to visit that city, which was done.

BOTH Mr. Edwards and Mr. Wade spoke in unqualified praise of the system and placed the benefits to be derived from clearing house examinations above and beyond those being made by any other authority.

JAMES G. CANNON of New York is the author of a splendid book on clearing houses and always has held that bank examinations come legitimately within the field of the clearing house.

MINNEAPOLIS, St. Paul, Milwaukee, St. Joseph and many other western cities have adopted the plan. There seems to be every promise that the custom will become essentially universal.

IT is said that more than eighty-five per cent of the Alabama legislature favors the passage of the new banking bill prepared by a special committee of the Alabama Bankers Association. This special committee met once each month for a year before presenting a completed bill.

LETTERS were sent to upwards of two thousand persons, including bankers, financiers, educators, editors, and public officials, asking their opinions upon each section as it was adopted. Probably no other banking act ever was such a complete reflex of educated public opinion as this one.

TIME has been when special committees of bankers associations thought it the proper thing to hold star-chamber sessions. Fortunately this day has passed in the annals of bankers' organizations. Perhaps the national association would make greater headway in opposing bank guaranty, should it take a slightly different route from the one which it unsuccessfully followed in its opposition to the postal savings bank.

THE powerful American Bankers Association would seldom ever meet with defeat if it would adopt a policy of controlling such sentiment rather than one of opposition. There are those who rush in at every convention and get upon record as denouncing as "wild and extravagant" some notion which the public has about the public's business. This is the wrong route and the record proves it.

EDWARD F. LARSON, formerly an Iowa banker, but now cashier of the Citizens State, at Nampa, Idaho, has very vigorous views on bank guaranty. The following quoted paragraphs tell his belief.

"FOR the past two or three years, there has been a rapidly growing tendency and desire among bank depositors, as well as on the part of the bankers themselves, to provide some means, whereby the deposits in banks might be insured, and so guaranteed, that in case of failure of the bank, there would be no possibility of loss to the depositor, nor any delay or doubt in getting his or her money."

"IN the absence of any state law in Idaho, covering bank deposits, we have, after very careful consideration, decided to have our deposits guaranteed by the American Bankers Assurance Company of St. Louis, organized exclusively for the purpose of guaranteeing bank deposits. This simply means, that there need be no more worry or doubt on the part of any depositor of this bank, as to the safety of his or her money. This guaranty operates in the same manner as a bond; if the bank fails to pay, the assurance company pays it without loss of time or money to the depositor."

"ALL public funds, such as city, county and state, are invariably secured by bonds to protect against any possible loss. The private depositor is entitled to just as much consideration as a municipality, and this is the principal reason for the growing demand for protection of the individual depositor. Why should he or she not be as fully protected as a treasurer holding public funds? Furthermore, if bank depositors know their money is absolutely safe, no matter what may happen, such occurrences as panics and bank runs would be unheard of. Business of every kind will move along smoothly without fear of financial disturbances, and there would be no loss of confidence. Confidence is the backbone of all business, and the lack of it, causes no end of trouble."

ALL of the above is Mr. Larson's own idea of the situation and how to meet it. Most bankers will disagree with him but he has a public demand to meet with which other bankers are not concerned. Concerning the efficiency and reliability of the guaranty companies, each banker will make his own investigations, of course.

IOWA has a special committee on legislation (not a secret junta) which meets at frequent intervals while the legislature is in session. President John McHugh, himself, takes an active part. Very soon the committee will issue a statement in which the good and bad proposed bills will be separated.

SOME new bills emanating from the committee also will be printed. Hundreds of letters are being received, from active bankers all over the state, which are carefully considered by the committee and many of the suggestions contained have been adopted and appreciated. It has not been possible to reply to each individual letter.

THE committee gives it as its opinion that the attitude of the senate and the house is most favorable for practical financial legislation.

J. H. INGWERSEN, president of the Peoples Trust, at Clinton, Ia., is having a busy time with people sending in checks signed by "M. H. Howard" who by making a small deposit secured a checkbook. The checks are of no value, the deposit having been withdrawn by Howard soon after it was made.

SOME one also is issuing a few checks daily on the Cedar Rapids Savings Bank, and giving Colonel Dinwiddie the time of his life. A favorite way of disposing of these checks is by paying a deposit on land purchases, the checks being of such size that change is coming to the pretending purchaser.

L. E. STEVENS, president of the Century Savings, Des Moines, boldly advertises "Under state control and supervision." Quite the fashion now, and very effective.

ILLINOIS bankers are being given an opportunity to secure copies of Dr. Hopkins' famous pamphlet on soil preservation for distribution to their farmer customers. Also to purchase safes at a discount, all through the activity of Secretary Crampton. Special committees of three bankers in each county are being selected to co-operate with the peace officers in the capture of bank robbers and crooks.

OLIVER F. SMITH has figures to show how good are the opportunities for outlying banks in Chicago. Mr. Smith is president of the Citizens Trust & Savings at Garfield Boulevard (55th Street) and State Street and this is what he has to say of his gilt edge little bank.

"THIS bank recently increased its surplus account by $2,500, making that item now $7,500; charged off $2,994 from fixtures account, eliminating the item entirely and has an undivided profit of $2,400. It carries its banking house, which costs $65,000, at $33,000 and has total resources of $435,000. We now pay ten per cent on a capital of $50,000, $165.00 per share has been bid for the stock and none is for sale."

CONGRESSMAN LITTLETON of New York has been labeled a "Taft Ambassador," but at the Chicago Bankers club banquet he kept to his subject, in an admirable address which is presented, in part, in another column in this issue.

THEY tell us that the fashionable board-walk set at Atlantic City was greatly disappointed that Vanderlip did not spring his yellow flannel dress suit on the Aldrich monetary conferees. The Marlborough-Blenheim was crowded in anticipation of a glimpse of the topaz-tinted, long-distance banker.

D. A. MOULTON was separated from his new auto for a few hours on Monday night. Fortunately it had gasoline enough only in the tank to run about 20 miles, when the thieves had to abandon it. This is a good tip! When you wish to leave your car outside of clubs at night see that there only is enough juice to go about ten miles.

BANKER GRAHAM has a new mayoral policy—that of giving the taxpayer value received for his money.

WE like to brag Iowa banking. Now there is the First National of Sheldon, a town of 3,000. The First is a million dollar bank for sure. It has resources of $60,000 over the million mark.

THEN there's McNider's big bank over at Mason City. LeMars and Cherokee each has a bank close to the million line of distinction. One or two more big crops and over they go. The LeMars bank has been "up" at one or two calls. CASHIER.

Banks Buying Mortgages

Savings and trust funds are accumulating in Pittsburgh banks and trust companies so rapidly and steadily that some of the institutions are on the hunt for good mortgages. Of late a number of leading real estate houses have been asked by bank representatives if they know of any good mortgages that can be bought, and one mortgage broker states that few first-class mortgages are being placed through offices now, as banks and trust companies are eager to get them. This is making the procurement of choice mortgages by individual investors more difficult than usual, and is counted on to bring about more buying of improved property giving fair rent returns on its cost.

Bank Puts in Telautograph

The Minnesota Loan and Trust Company has installed the telautograph between the paying-teller and the bookkeeper, something like a quarter of a block away. The purpose is to expedite business and to insure correctness of information passing between the two. S. S. Cook of the company is satisfied with the results.

M. S. Atwood, pioneer banker, is dead at Beloit, Kan.

Banking Opinion

"In general trade there is a feeling of hopefulness and even confidence," said Vice-President August Blum of First National to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER, Thursday. Possibly there is a little disappointment at the backwardness of business but that pertains to the banks rather than to mercantile institutions.

"The banks find the money market dull. There is more money on hand than the commercial houses require and consequently rates are low. Nevertheless we know there is a steady gain in the iron and steel market and a reasonably good trade in the jobbing lines. Conditions are all right and there is no discouragement among business people."

"The banks will find improvement in the loan department as spring trade comes on and the season's real estate program develops. Bonds will continue to absorb a great deal of capital and that is a condition which will help banks and all other houses."

Sees Progress in Northwest

There is no better informed banker in the Northwest than C. L. Timmerman, cashier of First National of Mandan, N. D. Mr. Timmerman, like all western bankers, takes a keen interest in agricultural affairs. He is president of the North Dakota Dry Farming Association and is an enthusiast on the scientific cultivation of the soil. The Dakotas will not curtail their wheat production on account of last season's short crop but if the spring is favorable they will add considerably to the acreage. The acreage of corn will be materially increased, as both states are engaging quite extensively in live stock.

"People in the Northwest are as courageous and hopeful as ever," said Mr. Timmerman. They have had a large measure of prosperity and the touch of drouth last summer will not check their enterprise in the least degree."

Praises Aldrich Plan

John T. Scott, vice-president of Houston First National, has returned from Atlantic City and other points in the East. He is loud in praise of the Aldrich plan.

"The bill as modified," said Mr. Scott, "is one that will prove a great blessing to the country should it be passed, as I earnestly hope it will. It does away entirely with the central bank idea, which seems to have met with considerable opposition, and instead of that provides a great central clearing association in which banks in the country will all be directly interested. Its enactment into a law would instantly improve the financial situation and would result in putting an end to panics

Money Inactive

Chicago bankers report a dull money market, with rates off a fraction or two within the week. It is possible a majority of loans, large and small, are made at 5 per cent and yet the larger transactions are at 4½ per cent.

With a light business in mercantile loans local banks have accepted considerable commercial paper at 4 per cent. A little business has developed in call loans at the same figure. Nearly all real estate loans are at 5 per cent.

The bond market has maintained the appearance of activity, and all reliable issues returning 5 per cent or better are being absorbed with considerable rapidity. Of course there is the usual demand for gilt-edge securities paying 4 to 4½ per cent.

W. P. Manley

President W. P. Manley of Security National Bank, Sioux City, was a visitor at Merchants Loan and Trust Tuesday. Sioux City is a veritable trade barometer. No place of its size could be more so. It has the usual retail trade of a provincial city and an unusual diversity of manufacturing and jobbing. The live stock and grain markets of the city bring the banks into close relationship with the farming community as well as with city business men. Mr. Manley says the turn has come in general trade and he looks for a prosperous season from this on.

The Merchants' & Manufacturers' State Bank of Minneapolis has created two assistant cashiers. Those elected are H. E. Leighton and A. L. Witte.

Tells of Progress

President R. E. Trabue of Guaranty State Bank, Carthage, Texas, has been a visitor at LaSalle Street National in Chicago this week. Mr. Trabue represents an old and conservative community in the eastern section of Texas and his story of the commercial awakening there is worth listening to. It is the story of the rejuvenated and progressive South. Although Carthage is an old and substantial town and Panola naturally one of the richest counties in the state it is only within ten years that farm land has advanced from an average of $10 an acre. To-day the average is upwards of $50, and any of the modernized places, conveniently located, can be sold at about $100 an acre. Mr. Trabue, like M. G. Buckingham, of Memphis, whose views were given in THE CHICAGO BANKER last week, attributes this prosperity to a diversification of farming and business interests. In the Carthage region farmers can raise fruit, vegetables, grain, tobacco and cotton, as well as live stock, and many of them are doing so. There is so little frost there that double cropping is a common thing. A farmer can take off a crop of vegetables or oats and then plant cotton or corn, with a reasonable certainty of success. With this great progress in the country business generally is improving.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

PAGE one of Friday's (last week) Tribune gave even the old-timers hopes that they were going to tell "Who is Putting Up" for the year-long, country-wide fight to give some one else Lorimer's seat in the U. S. senate. But they didn't tell, nor name their family candidate. It was but a little further attempt to cudgel the mayoral candidates up to the box office.

THAT Elephant which "nearly ran his tusk through Elbert Hubbard," when it came to trial pleaded justification. They had attempted to make him listen to one of the Fra's lectures.

A. J. BARKLEY has retired from the presidency, as well as from partnership, in the Boone County Bank, at Boone, Iowa. Mr. Barkley says the bank is in good condition. He was with the bank for twenty-seven years and during all that time kept an account with the Corn Exchange National, Chicago. Mr. Barkley was severely wounded in the Civil War and was a prisoner of war, all of which are beginning to tell on his strength.

T. L. ASHFORD is the new president, and J. H. Rickenberg, vice-president. Archie Patterson will remain as cashier. The officers are "partners" in the bank.

GEORGE B. IRICK is the new cashier of the Boone National. Mr. Irick has been a migratory but prosperous banker for some time, but now has "settled down," so his friends think.

WHEN we began to hear of him he was president of the Des Moines chapter and working in Homer Miller's bank. From there he went to a cashiership at Stuart; then to the same title in the First National, at Dundee, Ill., where he remained until February 1st of this year. He has the reputation of being a "comer" and has enjoyed the friendship and assistance of Mr. Miller at all times.

MESSRS. MILLER and Irick worked together for and helped to build up the C. & N. W. Ry. to its present high state of efficiency and income before going in for the uplift in banking. They're a pretty good pair to draw to (or from) as the case may be.

"SOUTH AMERICAN IMPRESSIONS" is a handsome little booklet containing the collected letters of George and Frederick Woodruff, "writ to the home paper," while those two young globe trotters were "doing" South America. Good stuff! Every thing is original and nothing of the guide book flavor to it. We are waiting for their book on China and on George Woodruff's "revised and rejuvenated" views on the "ancient" constitution of the I. B. A.

ON March 1st the Bartlette Syndicate, operating in Chicago real estate, at about mortgage values, expects to increase its capital from $500,000 to one million dollars. It is understood that the business for some years has been paying around 12 per cent, sometimes more. The stock or share distribution is in care of E. D. Stevens, vice-president of the Drexel State Bank.

A SOUTHERN banker culls this from somewhere, but says it's every word true:

Weep and you're called a baby
Laugh and you're called a fool,
Yield and you're called a coward,
Stand and you're called a mule,
Smile and they'll call you silly,
Frown and they'll call you gruff,
Put on a front like a millionaire—
And some guy calls your bluff!

"THE State We Live In" was the subject of J. H. Ingwersen's address before Group Eleven, Iowa, which met at Burlington on the 22d. C. A. Carpenter spoke on "Problems of a Country Banker." We are told that Mr. Ingwersen's address, outside of the state, might have sounded like a blast from a booster, but that in Iowa "it went good."

IT was the fourteenth annual meeting of this important group and closed with a fine banquet at the Hotel Burlington, a new hostelry of which that city is very proud. The invitation sent out by Secretary E. R. Lacey stated that "Your officers, directors and the boys who do the work, are all cordially invited, and earnestly requested to attend."

WASHINGTON has a fine, efficient, new banking law, and is very proud of it. The Tacoma clearing house in passing a resolution touching upon the character and standing of the late Robert L. McCormick, so long president of the Pacific National referred to him as "one who was in favor of the enactment and enforcement of sane and sound banking laws. In his life he exemplified in the highest degree the type of a patriotic, public-spirited citizen."

HOW much better to have left such a record than to be remembered as one who opposed every reform, every safeguard, and all for the fear that certain forms of banking should not longer escape state inspection and supervision? All honor to the memory of Mr. McCormick.

OVER in Detroit there died the other day a paroled banker from Ohio. In his day he was cashier of a prosperous national bank at Oberlin. He was a proud leader in business and religious work at home and was respected far and wide. Then the temptress came. Carrie Chadwick, pretending to be a near relative of Andrew Carnegie and willing to discount her notes at 70 came along.

ALMOST in no time she had busted the bank and Spear was on his way to the pen. Here we pause (take note of the pause) to remark that about ninety per cent of the bogus paper put over on the banks would never get over at regular rates. The bankers are not so dumb as all that. The big discount, direct or indirect, is the main cause of the ruin.

CHICAGO special, an all compartment car train de luxe, for the Nashville meeting of the big council on May 1st, 2d, and 3d, will leave Chicago over the C. & E. I. Ry, Saturday, April 29th at 6 p. m., with dinner (also de luxe) on board. This is the direct route to Nashville and the arrival time will be Sunday morning. Those who have reserved compartments to date are as follows: Car A. L. A. Goodard, G. M. Reynolds, Lucius Teter, J. Fletcher Farrell and Ralph Van Vechten, all of Chicago, John L. Hamilton, of Illinois and Arthur Reynolds of Iowa.

CAR B will have: V. B. Caldwell, Omaha; A. J. Frame, Waukesha; E. D. Durham, Illinois; Joseph Chapman and George F. Orde, Minneapolis; C. H. McNider, Iowa; Clay H. Hollister, Michigan; C. E. Batcheller, North Dakota; E. R. Gurney, Nebraska and A. H. Marble, Wyoming.

CAR C will be: John J. Sherman, Wisconsin; B. F. O'Neill, Idaho; O. H. Havill, Minnesota; E. L. Johnson, Iowa; L. G. Kaufman, New York and Michigan; E. J. Parker, Illinois; Geo. C. Power, St. Paul; W. J. Bailey, Kansas; J. H. Johnson, Detroit and Gordon Jones, Denver.

THOSE reserved in Car D are: C. M. Sawyer, California; Harry Yeager, Montana; B. C. Downey, Indianapolis; A. B. MacCaughey, Chicago; William Livingstone, Detroit; William George, Illinois; R. C. Stephenson, Indiana, and Emory W. Clark, Detroit. Oliver C. Fuller, Milwaukee has a drawing room and perhaps a half dozen are not sure they can attend. If you know of any one who isn't on the list who ought to be, just jog him up. Most of the members will be accompanied by their wives.

J. C. BASSETT of South Dakota hasn't reserved but "is going to make the trip with the other bankers on that date." Perhaps the "green goods" notion of the Chicago Special will fade away when he reads the above list.

EDITOR SCHAEFFER of the Chicago Evening Post received the following valentine aimed at his glistening dome, and just to show he didn't care printed it in his funny column:

Weep, for the years have scattered into flight
The hair that once thy head bedecked aright,
And bare as any egg thy poll now shines,
Unless with hat or wig 'tis hid from sight.

YES, we read the Hazen broadside, intended to blow something he doesn't like clear to Hades, but we expect to learn that Col. Paton will continue to editorialize in the Journal as much as before. Some persons are so hard to please.

WHAT the Journal was meant to be when conceived hasn't anything to do with what it is to-day. Like the "bank clerks' organization" it has developed. The former clerks' organization which many of our ablest bankers believed to be a "labor organization" and which some able editors denounced, now

American and Canadian Banking Reforms

Prepared for European publication by W. R.
Lawson, of London

PART I

The Americans are still pursuing with unabated and apparently unquenchable enthusiasm their favorite will-o'-the-wisp panic proof banking. In quite a different way and a different spirit the Canadians are engaged on the decennial revision of their banking law. Two operations so utterly unlike each other as these can hardly be imagined proceeding together side by side. A contrast almost comical in its violence is presented by the schemes of banking reform now being discussed at Ottawa and Washington.

Senator Aldrich's latest project, which was suddenly sprung on congress after the Christmas holidays, is more than usually dramatic even for him. It signalizes quite a new departure of the arch-reformer. He throws over his original idea of a central bank to rival the Bank of England and substitutes for it a nondescript body called a reserve association. But judging from the telegraphic description given of it the change is rather in the name than the thing.

According to the New York correspondent of the Standard what is proposed is the establishment of a "Reserve Association of America," representing what may be called a federation of local associations of national banks. It would be chartered for fifty years with a capital of approximately £60,000,000, and a head office in Washington. It would be the principal fiscal agent of the government and would fix the rates of exchange and discount. Its notes would eventually replace those of the national banks and they would be based on prime commercial paper as well as on government bonds.

A lot more to the same effect occurs in the Standard cable, but such strong medicine must be taken in small doses. The above sample is enough to start with. It opens up a new field of great extent and variety. Whether we consider the vast scope of its proposals or their extreme novelty or the multitudinous opposition they are certain to provoke, it will be seen that it is not likely to be realized in a hurry. With thinly disguised sarcasm a correspondent remarks that "there is no present prospect of its enactment." It is in reality only a contribution to the international museum of banking and currency schemes which the monetary commission have spent half a dozen years in collecting from all the ends of the earth.

The one clever feature in Senator Aldrich's "Reserve Association" is that it is made to appear a proper evolutionary development of the national banking system. If it were found workable it would be a natural and consistent crown to the existing organization of reserve banks and clearing circles. Already there is a gradation of reserve cities and central reserve cities with a sphere of its own. The small rural bank is allowed to keep a certain proportion of its statutory reserve in the larger banks of a neighboring town. The latter in turn to pass on a proportion of their statutory reserve to one or other of the great cities—New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, or San Francisco. The process stops there, however, and it certainly seems to break off prematurely.

What Senator Aldrich now proposes is to powers which Senator Aldrich proposes to heap concentrate the reserves of the great cities in a specially constituted reserve bank. With becoming modesty he would also absorb into it the treasury. Thus, on the very threshold of his enterprise he runs his head into trouble. Neither the senate nor the house of representatives will be so ready, as Senator Aldrich assumes, to sacrifice the treasury to a banking monopoly yet unborn. The national banks will be equally little attracted by the proposal to transfer their note circulation to the central bank. The exchange bankers in New York who are both numerous and powerful, will smile at the idea of the reserve association fixing the rates of exchange and discount for them.

That is a good deal more than even the Bank of England attempts to do. It fixes a minimum rate of discount for its own customers—who are chiefly banks, discount houses, and financiers. As a rule it has the means to make that official minimum effective, but not always. There are times when it cannot control the outside money market, and then it has simply to stand aside until its power returns. Such an artificial arrangement would not work everywhere. It may be questioned if any other institution than the Bank of England could ever have maintained it in England. Senator Aldrich, himself, appears to have at last discovered that it cannot be acclimatized in the United States.

The substitute he offers—his reserve association—would attempt not only all that the Bank of England does, but some other things which it has always fought shy of. It is long since Threadneedle Street imagined that it could move the foreign exchanges to suit itself and its customers, and not many men in New York have the moral courage to risk life and fortune in such a venture. The crucial difficulty in the working out of such a stupendous scheme is to find reliable directors and managers. It is not skill or capacity or judgment that would be lacking. These, though not universal even among the Americans, are in ample supply for the occasion.

The fatal difficulty would be to prevent the reserve association, in other words the central bank, from being utilized for private ends. With that view Wall Street has been warned off, but mere warning will be no bar to Wall Street. Certain banking interests would also be tabooed—much to their own amusement. There might be many ways of getting into the inner circle of the reserve association besides entering by the front door. The men who were most vehemently tabooed might be the first to get in, and they might penetrate the farthest. The on his inner ring of reserve banks are too large for even exceptionally honest and capable men to exercise without rigid control.

The reader will feel it a great relief to turn from the barren and interminable controversies in which American bankers seem to be always involved to the comparative calm which pervades banking circles in Canada. Accidents happen, of course, in Canada as elsewhere, bad banking comes to light now and then, and occasionally it is so bad as to bring the offender to grief. But above and beyond all these passing troubles there is, among Canadians, a strong feeling of confidence in their banking system. They have faith in the system itself, in the principles on which it is based, and in the men who direct it.

So far their faith has been amply justified by results and by actual experience. These have been so remarkable as to attract attention and even to excite envy in other countries. While Canada was still a poor country its banking system was universally recognized as a valuable asset. Skeptical critics suggested that its limited resources and the small volume of its business might be the real causes of its success. "Wait," they said, "until it can be tested on a large scale and see what happens then." In the past ten years it has undergone that larger test and come through it so far satisfactorily. When the call came for capital and credit to finance the westward rush of settlers it was provided promptly and liberally. The only danger was that it might become too generous. And as the eastward movement of produce expanded it, too, was financed with seldom a hitch.

The boom of 1905 to 1909 in the Northwest would soon have found out the weak joints in an unsound banking system. If Saskatchewan and Alberta had been suddenly covered with American national banks as they were with branches of old-established Canadian banks, it is awful to think what the end might have been. But the Canadian banks were equal to the occasion. They exhibited a reserve power and capacity of expansion which added not a little to their previous reputation. At the outset they excited admiration by the energy and rapidity with which they responded to the new demands suddenly sprung on them. At the finish they were no less admirable for the self-restraint they showed and the firmness with which they checked a great wave of speculation that might soon have passed out of control.

Of all the Canadian ideals lately developed, none has come so near realizing itself as the banking system. None is therefore better worth studying at the present moment. The future of the Dominion depends more on it than on almost any other Canadian institution. Parliaments may do a great deal of harm, but they can do comparatively little good. Tariffs may come and go, they may swing from one extreme of free trade to the opposite extreme of protection. But the banks must steer a straight course and sail as near as possible on an even keel. A blind outcry for banking reform, such as they are always having in the United States, is presumptive proof, not only that banking reform is needed, but that the whole banking system must be on wrong lines. In Canada there is never any such blind outcry. Most of the reforms demanded are only in matters of detail.

Canada has indeed been fortunate in its banking legislation. This has been eminently reasonable, and always adapted to the special circumstances of the country. Theorists and faddists have had very little to do with it. Except, perhaps, in the old provincial days, there have never been rival banking schools in Canada. All parties have had a common desire to get what seemed best for the immediate purpose. Canadian bankers have had a greater voice in making banking laws than those of any other country. They have been frankly consulted as to every change, and their practical suggestions have always been welcomed, both by the government and the legislature. They, on their side, have kept a sharp lookout for operating defects, and generally have them remedied before they could do much harm.

A good understanding between the legislature and the banks has invariably prevailed. It has, as a rule, been reasonable in its demands, and they have always done their best to comply with them. Trade interests, too, have been at all times honestly considered. Banking facilities have been provided for every possible branch of trade, new or old, and for all classes of service, private and commercial. Per contra there are few redundancies and no out-of-date machinery in the system. Few banking laws are so frequently and carefully revised as those of the Dominion, and the revision is invariably done with a single eye to efficiency.

Scotland, which gets credit for nearly all the good features in modern banking, is supposed to have supplied the model for the Canadian banks, but there is little warrant for that legend. It would be more correct to say that Scotland had supplied Canada with the best of its pioneer bankers. These gentlemen took out with them, no doubt, large amounts of Scottish experience and practical wisdom which were usefully applied to Canadian conditions. But very little was copied from either the Scottish or any other banking system. In the earliest experiments a good deal of attention was paid to English theories and methods, but when it was found that they did not suit Canadian circumstances they were gradually dropped. The banking system as it exists to-day is to a large extent home-grown—very few banking systems more so. Through nearly a century of development it has been shaped and moulded and modified to suit the needs of its creators. That circumstance renders its history peculiarly interesting and instructive both to bankers and to currency experts.

Banking legislation in Canada is divided into decennial periods. The latest of these began in 1900, and is now drawing to a close. A new period will begin on July 1, 1911, and a bill to effect what are deemed necessary amendments and extensions of the existing law is now before the Dominion Parliament. The whole of the existing bank charters will have to be renewed in order to bring every bank in Canada under its provisions.

From the Bank Act of 1890 the cardinal features of the Canadian bank law can be ascertained. At that time there were thirty-four banks incorporated under its provisions. Clause 3 limits their charters to July 1, 1911, consequently they will soon have to be renewed. These charters have hitherto been granted only for ten years, but this time an effort will probably be made by the banks to have the period made twenty years. The idea of terminable charters was probably suggested by the early history of the Bank of England, but it has had much more practical effect in Canada than in London. While renewal in the case of the Bank of England charter was never more than a matter of quid pro quo, it has been made in Canada an occasion for thorough scrutiny of the law and resolute attempts to improve it. From every decennial revision it has emerged a better law than it was before. Points hitherto overlooked have been settled, and adjustments have been made to new conditions. New kinds of business have been specially provided for as they arose. The law has been in a constant state of evolution and adaptation.

The Act of Incorporation has to set forth the name of the bank, the capital stock, the place where the head office is to be, and the names of the provisional directors, who must not be less than five. The minimum amount of capital is half a million dollars, and it must be divided into hundred-dollar shares. Not less than a quarter million dollars must be paid up and deposited with the minister of finance before a meeting of subscribers can be held to definitely organize the bank. Then a certificate has to be obtained from the treasury before it can commence business or issue notes. No step apparently can be taken without the sanction of the treasury board.

The provisions to regulate subscription of capital, calling it up, increasing or reducing it, transferring shares and transmission by marriage or death are much the same as those of ordinary joint-stock companies. It is when we come to the forms of account prescribed, the limitations imposed on dividends, and the prohibitions applied to unsound business, that the speciality of this Canadian law becomes evident. The section dealing with note circulation is of vital interest, having had much to do with the success of the Canadian banks. It opens with clause 61 which says, that any properly organized bank may issue and reissue notes payable to bearer on demand. They are subject, however, to a number of restrictions which, so far, have proved efficient safeguards.

First, no bank note is to be for a smaller amount than five dollars—the government itself providing the one, two, three and four dollar notes.

Second, the total amount in circulation at any time is not to exceed the unimpaired paid-up capital of the bank.

Third, any bank which suspends payment of its liabilities must cease to issue notes, and cannot resume issuing without the express authority of the treasury board.

Fourth, it is forbidden to banks to pledge, assign, or hypothecate their notes.

In addition to these negative and indirect safeguards there is a positive one of still greater value, namely, the circulation redemption fund.

Bank Pensions

New York, February 23.—The First National bank announced to-day that a scheme for pensions for all its employees went into effect on February 14th. The foundation fund was a subscription of $100,000 given by the bank. There will be contributions from each of the subscribing employees to the extent of 3 per cent of the yearly salary to keep up the fund. Installments are payable into the fund monthly, the amount being deducted from the employees' salary by the bank's management. Only the president, vice-presidents, and the cashier of the bank are excluded.

According to the bank's schedule of benefits, any employee who has arrived at the age of 65 years, after fifteen or more years in the bank's service, may retire on a pension. If he has worked in the bank for twenty-five years the pension will be for the rest of his life. If he has worked less than twenty-five years he receives a pension for as many years as he has been with the bank up to the limit of fifteen years.

The amount of the annual pension to the subscribing employees will be 2 per cent of their average salary for five years previous to the date when any pension becomes payable, multiplied by the number of years of service in the bank up to that time. However, no pension shall exceed 70 per cent of the average annual salary and no pension shall be more than $5,000 a year.

The widow or family of a dead employee will receive half of the pension to which that employee was entitled at the time of his death.

STEEL BUSINESS IMPROVES

The United States Steel Corporation is now operating about 61 per cent of its blast furnace capacity, an increase of 5 per cent so far this month. Finished steel production shows a much greater improvement. The independent steel manufacturers are operating between 70 per cent and 75 per cent of their blast furnace capacity, and between 85 per cent and 90 per cent of finished steel capacity.

This was made up of contributions equal to 5 per cent of the average circulation of the bank during the preceding year. Adjustments take place annually, each bank making up any deficiency or drawing out any surplus there may be over its proper quota. When a bank is being wound up the liquidators shall, before the final distribution of the assets, pay over to the treasury a sum equal to the amount of the outstanding notes, less the 5 per cent already held in the circulation redemption fund. This relieves the bank from all further liability, the actual process of redemption having to be carried out by the treasury. This is in accordance with American practice in like circumstances.

A large number of the most distinctive provisions of the act are devoted to definitions of its powers and the kinds of business it may carry on. It may (1) open branches, agencies and offices, (2) deal in gold and silver coin and bullion, (3) "deal in, discount and lend money and make advances upon the security of, and take as collateral security for any loan made by it, bills of exchange, promissory notes and other negotiable securities or the stock, bonds and obligations of municipal and other corporations, whether secured by mortgage or otherwise, or Dominion, provincial, British, foreign and other public securities." Under this clause a Canadian bank can lend on practically anything except real property. Even that it may take over as additional security for debts contracted in the usual course of its business but it must not be held for more than seven years.

By C. C. Burford

The citizens of Peoria are proud of their many strong banks but no institution in the city stands in higher favor than the Home Savings and State Bank. Housed in one of the best equipped and handsome banking rooms in the state, it is a monument to the progressive spirit of Peoria. Valentine Ulrich, the president of the bank and its organizer in 1892 is a German-American citizen of Peoria who has the confidence of the people. Organized during the hard times the stock was oversubscribed and was finally limited to $120,000 and many would-be purchasers did not secure stock. The bank earned 21 per cent profits in 1909 and 25 per cent in 1910. Charles E. Ulrich is vice-president and Henry Ulrich is the cashier. The bank is located in the new Jefferson building.

Run On Middletown Bank

The failure of the Middletown Coal Company caused a run on the Farmers Bank of that village. A number of depositors knowing that the bank held considerable paper of the coal company became alarmed over the situation and withdrew their funds. The bank readily paid all depositors who demanded their money and within a few hours confidence was restored and many of the frightened customers returned their funds. However, the greater part of the customers of the bank made no move to demand their money. Middletown is in the vicinity of Lincoln.

"Made-In-Rockford" Show

The Chamber of Commerce of Rockford has just closed a "Made-In-Rockford" Show which has demonstrated that there is a wide variety of manufactures in that city. The exhibition has been such a success that there will be an effort to have it made an annual affair. Arthur G. Brown, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce was one of the spirits who moved around a little to make the show a success. The show established better than ever the fact that Rockford is one of the best minor cities in the Central West.

Sheriff Routs Mud and Darkness

Deputy Sheriff Morrison of Bloomington made a successful pursuit through the roads of black rich McLean county after one Roy Houghham who had pulled off the check raising stunt. The officer was forced to walk his prisoner a mile and a half over country roads which were said to have been "something fierce" and at last came safely through the night with his charge to Bloomington. Houghham raised a check on the McLean County Bank of Bloomington from $8 to $80.

Old Times Recalled

The Ridgely National of Springfield is in its elegant new quarters. The venerable president, William Ridgely, was the center of personal interest on opening day, February 14th, as he has spent over fifty years in the banking business in Springfield. He is the dean of the bankers of that city while John W. Bunn of the Marine Bank and Henry C. Latham of the Sangamon Loan and Trust Company are both veterans in the service.

One of the most interesting callers on opening day was Josiah Beard, a carpenter of Springfield. He is an old depositor of the bank and in 1852 he built and fitted bank fixtures for Nicholas Ridgely, the father of William Ridgely. "I put in many a good day," says Mr. Beard "preparing the quarters of the Ridgely Bank for Nicholas Ridgely. He was about the entire bank, for in those days a bank did not need so many assistants and officers. The fixtures I built were nothing like the present arrangements. The money was passed over a counter like a store counter. That constituted most of the bank furniture."

Bondholders Bring Suit

Charles Peabody of New York, acting for himself and other bondholders, has filed a suit in the federal court in Danville for foreclosure proceedings against the Indianapolis Southern railroad, now a part of the Illinois Central, in which $10,000,000 is involved.

The road, which runs from Indianapolis, Ind., to Effingham, Ill., was organized in 1906 and a bond issue of $10,000,000 was authorized. It is stated in the petition that during the five years of its existence no interest has been paid.

Illinois Notes

R. T. Ricks, cashier of the First National of Pittsfield, and other business men of Pike county are interested in the establishment of a new bank at Rockport.

Len Small, president of the First National of Kankakee, has been elected president of the Illinois Association of County Fairs.

A permit has been issued by the state auditor for the establishment of a new state bank at Walnut Hill, near Mt. Vernon. The capital will be $10,000. L. L. Emmerson of Mt. Vernon will be the president and J. W. Kell of Walnut Hill will be the cashier.

Would-be burglars were frightened away before they gained entrance to the Stillman Valley Bank, in a village of the same name near Rockford. Shots were fired by citizens after the escaping robbers and one was wounded. The charge placed under the vault failed to wreck the door.

Professor David Kinley, director of the business courses at the University of Illinois, was recently invited by the Peoria Association of Commerce to deliver an address. His subject was announced to be "Trade Relations with South America."

There will be no new bank established at Saybrook, McLean county. It is true that there were efforts by a Fairbury party to enter the Saybrook field but the proposition was not pushed through to a successful end. Saybrook has two banks but both owned by the same men and it is interesting to notice if they will be left unmolested by new banks.

Fred Davis, an expert in check-raising, is in jail in Rockford waiting for trial in April. He has operated in Bloomington and also in the state of Michigan. He has used a number of names in his work.

GAIN FOR OREGON BANKS

The State Bank Examiner reports an increase of savings deposits in the banks of Oregon for the year of 1910 of $2,553,043. There were in all classes of banks in the state savings deposits of $13,298,432 on January 7, 1911. Of the 234 institutions, 77 were national banks.

A remarkable feature of the statement of the examiner for that state is the increase in savings deposits of national banks. On January 31, 1910, 72 banks had $406,783, and a year later 77 of them had $1,682,449, making an increase in that year of $1,277,666, or more than three times the amount of deposits of the year before.

MORE STOCK GOING TO EUROPE

Directors of the Southern Pacific Company at a special meeting Tuesday authorized a $50,000,000 issue of collateral trust 4 per cent franc bonds of the Central Pacific Railway Company. Negotiations are under way for sale of these bonds with Paris bankers. The above authorization was technically an authorization by stockholders, as the Southern Pacific Company owns all of the $84,275,500 outstanding Central Pacific Railway stock.

THE INVESTORS'

PRIMER

JOHN MOODY

There has long been a demand for a concise handbook which would give, in simple, understandable language, definitions of all the important terms and phrases employed in the investment and banking business. This little book represents an effort to in some measure supply this demand.

The book is really in two parts, the first part covering the general definitions of finance; the second giving specific information regarding the various issues of preferred and guaranteed stocks which are generally classed among the investment issues. Many other small books furnish information regarding bonds, quotations, etc., etc., but this specific and useful information has not, as far as the writer knows, been heretofore presented for popular uses, in this particular way.

The Art of Wall Street Investing

By JOHN MOODY

This is a practical Handbook for investors, treating the subject of Wall Street Investing in a sensible and original manner. It is the first modern attempt to cover the subject in an attractive and popular form, and in such a way as to be of interest to the individual investor as well as the more expert banker and broker.

"The book deals in a clear, popular and entertaining way in the methods, terms and phases of Wall Street Investing, giving rules for analyzing railroad securities and statements, and explaining syndicates and reorganizations."—The Wall Street Journal.

"It is lucid, original and sound. I should think it ought to find use as a text-book in University and College Departments of Economics."—Prof. E. Benjamin Andrews.

"It is a book of great interest to business men and investors in general. Mr. Moody devotes a chapter to 'get-rich-quick schemes,' which will be an eye-opener to those guileless ones who are ready victims of the great army of sharpers that infest the land."—Buffalo Courier.

St. Louis Bankers' Club of the Aldrich plan. Festus J. Wade and Breckenridge Jones

This new organization starts out with a most vigorous discussion of the provisions on opposing sides as usual

St. Louis, Mo., February 22.—The St. Louis Bankers Club has started out, more as a forum for the adjustment of mooted questions than as a social, banqueting organization. At the meeting last evening those two famous orators who have met in opposition upon almost every banking question ever proposed at home, or in the trust company section of the American Bankers Association, Colonels Festus J. Wade and Breckenridge Jones, met once more.

There was a full house and Col. Wade opened the ball by coming out promptly, eloquently and emphatically, for the Aldrich plan of organizing reserve associations. He said in part:

"The suggested plan for monetary legislation, submitted to the United States Monetary Commission by Senator N. W. Aldrich, is a most remarkable piece of constructive legislation. Each postulate is stamped with a clearness of thought and a depth of constructive power only great statesmen possess.

"It eliminates absolutely the heresy of bank guaranty on one hand and unsound money on the other, and creates an elasticity of currency that will meet the needs of commerce. It provides three classes of banks: the national or commercial institution; the national trust company, a composite of both; and the national savings bank.

"The proposed capital of the reserve association will be approximately $300,000,000 the head office to be at Washington, D. C. There will be fifteen branch offices or districts, embracing every part of the United States. All will be operated on the same broad plan for the benefit of the entire people, irrespective of locality or party affiliation.

"The capital stock of the association will be owned exclusively by national banks and national trust companies each of which will be allowed to subscribe to no more and no less than twenty per cent of their respective capitalization. Thus the $25,000 bank or trust company will own the same proportion of stock as held by the $5,000,000 bank or trust company. If the bank or trust company increases or decreases its capitalization, it may also increase or decrease its holdings in the reserve association; to be charged the increase or allowed the decrease in stock at the book value of the national association. No individual and no corporation other than a national bank can ever own a share.

"Fifty per cent of the face value of the stock is to be paid in by each subscribing bank; the remainder, fifty per cent, subject to call, and is a first lien on the subscribing bank. Out of the net profits, stockholders are to receive four per cent. Earnings greater than four per cent and up to five per cent are to be divided: one-half to go to the reserve association until its surplus shall amount to twenty per cent of the paid in capital; one-fourth to go to the government of the United States; and one-fourth to the stockholders. But when stockholders' dividends shall reach five per cent, they shall receive no additional distribution.

Thereafter, two-thirds of the net earnings over five per cent shall go to the government, and one-third to the credit of the surplus of the reserve association.

"All subscribing banks will be divided into local associations, each association to be composed of not less than ten banks, and each local association must have at least $5,000,000 in the aggregate of its capital.

"These local associations will be grouped into fifteen districts, equitably divided throughout the United States.

"Every subscribing bank must become a member of the local association of the district in which it is located.

Then Came the Opposition

From his old antagonist, Breckenridge Jones, came an unexpected attack upon the Aldrich plan which is some of its fiery passages seemed to astonish the bankers present. Colonel Jones' remarks followed those of Charles H. Huttig, president of the Third National Bank, and Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Company and the Mercantile National Bank, who are members of the American National Bankers Association Currency Commission and who participated in the work of the National Monetary Commission.

of the individual states, Mr. Jones insisted that the public would not tolerate the amassing of strength and the exercise of domination by the territory lying east of the Allegheny Mountains.

Mr. Wade responded and refuted the contentions of Mr. Jones.

B. F. Edwards, president of the National Bank of Commerce and president of the club, presided. David R. Francis and others spoke. About fifty officers of St. Louis banks attended.

Independence Threatened

Mr. Jones predicted the alignment of wealth and power with the government, and this would forecast an end, in the popular mind, of independence.

In part, Mr. Jones said:

"Establishing a bank is not among the enumerated powers of the federal government. But a national currency was required. The government found need for an acceptable fiscal agency. The consumable products of the country had to be moved from state to state and to foreign countries, and a recognized, legalized standard currency was required to facilitate such exchange, and there was demand for an institution whose credit was broader than state lines.

"It is true that great latitude has been given to the 'general welfare' clause of the constitution, and it is also true that there are many in sympathy with the declaration that was made by President Roosevelt in his speech at the Jai Alai Building here in St. Louis, that the 'constitution is a living organism,' thereby implying, as I think he meant, that by construction, as an implied power, the constitution could be made to adjust itself to what might be found to be the necessities of the case, and there may be other ways at times or arriving at desired action by the federal government.

"For example, the last Republican National Convention declared, 'We favor the establishing of a postal savings bank system for the convenience of the people and the encouragement of thrift,' and President Taft explained that, in order for the bill to be constitutional, the postal savings bank must be made 'an instrument of national government in borrowing money.' There was no pretense that the encouragement of thrift was within the scope of the constitution, but, as a postal savings bank was desired, a way was found to get one.

"Another illustration is the law requiring corporations to make full returns of their business to the federal government and making such returns 'public records.' The official messages, etc., show that the moving purpose in the legislation was publicity as regards the affairs of the corporations, and to put them under federal control.

"It was recognized that these purposes were outside the constitution, and so, to make the legislation within the constitution, the subterfuge of providing revenues by taxation of the corporations on their earnings was resorted to when the amount of money that would be raised thereby was not claimed by anyone to be so considerable as to be a matter that would lead to specific legislation.

Denies Federal Power

"One provision of the Aldrich plan provides for a class of national banks, which shall be in effect national trust companies, to exercise all the functions and have all the privileges which are given to trust companies by the laws of the various states. Under the laws of Missouri, for instance, no nonresident can act as executor; and, except under a special statute, no Missouri corporation can act as trustee or executor.

"I submit that, so far as any court has yet decided, the federal government has no power to charter a federal corporation with such powers. They are not incidents of banking, and I do not believe congress has the power to give a national bank such powers.

"Under what clause of the constitution have the states granted the federal government the power to establish or protect a financial system, meaning by that system that includes state banks and trust companies?

"The secretary's argument seemed to be that, because trust companies are large and some have become national in character; that is, do business among the states, therefore, the government should grant charters to and have supervision over large trust companies in large cities. Why trust companies any more than any other corporation making or dealing in articles of general necessity or utility? The line of reasoning is applicable alike to railroads, insurance companies, manufacturing and mercantile corporations—in fact, to all large corporations doing an interstate business.

"The vastness of the present number of government employees is thought by some to be an element of danger to the country. Many of them have been found perniciously active about election time, and those having supervision over corporations, it is believed, have at times undue influence with them. If the precedent is set, it will likely be followed.

"Under the present system, admitting its many deficiencies, there is protection for the people against the evils of no local responsibility for large corporations, and for the corporations as representing general business interests against the disastrous results of a general engagement under inflamed sudden national popular sentiment.

"The enactment of a federal law authorizing the incorporation of the various large corporations would, I believe, in the eyes of the people, be taken as the beginning of the end of the independence and sovereignty of the states. The states would soon be, on all matters of great importance, but states in name, and the form of our government would change.

"May it not be better to remedy some of the evils of the present system? This could be done largely by a tendency to make uniform the laws of the various states as to corporations, for example, the progress that has been made as to the laws relating to negotiable instruments.

"Viewed from the standpoint of trust companies, there is great desire for any kind of supervision that will lead to better management, and give the companies a higher degree of public confidence. There are many advantages that would come to the trust companies if the recommendations were carried into effect; but would not there also be great disadvantages?

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

The bank clearings for the past week in Milwaukee show a revival of business pointing to a return of the activity which prevailed several weeks ago. Local merchants report a renewed trade due probably to the spring trade while manufacturers and the larger jobbing interests report a heavy increase in orders in nearly all lines. In the iron and steel trades particularly, business is reported as showing a considerable increase. Orders for steel are far in excess of order which were on the books at the same period one year ago, while there is every prospect of being able to run full time during the summer months.

Collections throughout the state and locally are generally fair. Among the bond houses an unusually good trade was experienced throughout the month of January and extending well into the present month, although there has been some falling off in sales during the past week or ten days. Country bankers are apparently well supplied with ready cash but bond salesmen who are returning from visits out in the state report only about normal sales with a healthy inquiry as to the future.

Guaranty Bill Still Pending

Although the Wisconsin Bankers Association has been delayed in sending out copies of the proposed bill guaranteeing bank deposits, and due to the fact that even a digest of this bill has not been published in many of the newspapers throughout the state, and in consequence, a large percentage of the bankers are unfamiliar with the text of the bill, a great many have already written to headquarters announcing themselves as opposed to the passage of such a bill at this time. Secretary Bartlett of the state association some time ago sent out a letter of inquiry to all bankers in the state, simply asking them to reply and state whether they were opposed or in favor of the bill.

Some of the replies to these inquiries have shown that country bankers are not always alert to their own interests. In a few instances, the banker has written to headquarters stating that he did not see wherein the bill interested him; others have replied saying that they were unalterably opposed to the bill in its present form, while still others are non-committal, and the majority state that they are opposed to the passage of a guaranty bill at the present time and would prefer postponement for another two years or until states which are at present trying out a similar law have had time to thoroughly test the merits of same; but the opposition to the bank guaranty act is not confined to the bankers alone. Many letters have been received from prominent business men and manufacturers throughout the state, who protest against further action on the bill at this session of the legislature.

Senator Owen, father of the bill, in an article appearing in a Madison newspaper, has taken occasion to rap the bankers of the state severely upon what he calls their "activity." He says "The bankers are well organized, in fact there is no special interest in the state of Wisconsin that can act any more concertedly or with greater force and effectiveness than the bankers of this state. In their opposition to this bill, they are not governed by a high consideration of the public welfare but they are consulting rather their own special interests. * * * This is really a test between bankers and depositors. The bankers are organized and will make their influence felt in the legislature. Let the depositors see to it that the legislature shall be apprised of their feeling upon the question."

In the article mentioned above, Senator Owen shows that while he has not lost his optimism so clearly shown a week or ten days ago, he has at least made up his mind that the bill in its present form cannot be passed, and not only in his remarks made before the joint hearing in Madison a week ago but also in the tenure of all interviews that have been had with him upon this subject, does he show that the only hope of the framers of this bill as to its legitimate passage lies in their playing upon popular sentiment.

Bank Clerk Helps Capture Forger

In the arrest of Joseph R. Kuhn, said by the police to be a professional check forger, it is believed that the person has been discovered who has been flooding Milwaukee and neighboring cities with much worthless paper during the past month. Kuhn, who says his home is in Harrisburg, Pa., was arrested by detectives after a bank clerk had tracked him for over three miles.

Three weeks ago Kuhn appeared at the Marine National Bank, of Milwaukee, with a request that they transfer $780 for him which he alleged he had in a Chattanooga, Tennessee, bank. Upon writing to the southern states bank officials, learned that he had no account there. A week later Kuhn appeared at the desk of Wm. M. Post, cashier of the National Exchange Bank. He reported his source of funds in the southern bank; said he had sold an automobile in Chicago, and had a number of notes outstanding. Being temporarily embarrassed, he presented a check for $165 which was cashed. It was drawn on the First National Bank of Chicago. A few days later, he entered the Badger State Bank and presented another check for $165.00. Payment on this was refused, and one of the bank clerks followed Kuhn when he left the building, and trailed him in and about Milwaukee for nearly three miles until his arrest was finally effected. When searched at headquarters, pass books from a dozen or more prominent banks throughout the country were found upon his person, showing that at various times he had opened accounts in these different institutions for amounts of $1,000 and upward.

Does Not Believe in the Old Song

"Never Put a Mortgage on the Farm." This slogan contained in an old New England song sung at all the Yankee gatherings has deterred the development of the United States at least ten years, according to George D. Bartlett, in his address recently before the Country Life Conference at the University of Wisconsin. Mr. Bartlett pointed out the benefits that accrue to the farmer from bettering his condition with borrowed money when conditions demand, and from the bankers' standpoint, at least, showed how the farmer, taking advantage of the accommodations offered by his local bank, may secure the money necessary for improvements and the purchase of machinery necessary for the rapid development of his farm lands, and thus, in a few years accomplish what ordinarily would require a long period of time.

F. X. Bodden Appointed Assistant Cashier

In a recent meeting of the directors of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank of Milwaukee, F. X. Bodden was elected assistant cashier to succeed Mr. Fred A. Kirchhoff, resigned.

Mr. Bodden has been in charge of the bond department of this institution for some time and has a wide acquaintance among the business men, not only of Milwaukee but throughout the entire state.

Banking News of Interest

The Bank of Burlington, Burlington, Wis., has just purchased property near the center of the town, and it is said in the near future will erect a new building.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the Badger State Bank of Milwaukee, the following officers and directors were re-elected: President, Gustave Reinke; cashier, F. E. Wallber; assistant cashier, A. J. Nostrand. It was decided to declare no dividends, the earnings being turned into the surplus fund.

Articles of incorporation of the Plaine State Bank, of Plaine, Sauk county, have been approved by the state banking commissioners. The capital stock is $10,000 and the incorporators are John Beck, Wm. Reuschleir, John B. Ness and John B. Liegel.

H. S. Swanberg and A. L. Sorter, with other associates, have organized the American Trust Company of Superior, Wis. with a capital of $50,000. The company will open a branch office at 340 Security Bank Building, Minneapolis. Mr. Swanberg will be president. The bank,

We have bought and paid for water right, good for 20,000 horse power, engineering work, etc. Have a U. S. Government franchise, reports, maps, etc. Have a fine and rapidly growing market for power for commercial and irrigation purposes.

It is a deal that will make from $500,000 to $1,000,000 profit, and is already past the stage where there is any risk. $25,000 will carry it to a point where it will be "bankable." I want some capitalist to take the place of my client and carry it out, or, will sell the whole project as it stands.

Bonds and Stocks

It is stated one of the large interests in International Harvester held out for an increase in the common dividend to 6 per cent, but the McCormicks, who control about 52 per cent of the stock, and also control the board, would not consent to more than 5 per cent for the time being. Of $80,000,000 outstanding common stock, McCormick interests control over $41,000,000, Deering interests about $15,000,000 and Morgan interests $15,000,000.

A contract has been let to the L. C. Smith Construction Company to build 128 miles of the proposed St. Louis and Kansas City Electric Railway. It is said that bonds to the amount of $12,000,000 have been underwritten in France.

Chicago Pneumatic Tool is again a leader. On the purchase of nearly 1,700 shares its price was advanced another point to 53. The buying was largely by houses that have been active in the shares for several days.

The Booth Fisheries stocks all recovered from their recent slump and the common touched a new high price at 50. The preferred was up three points to 78.

Diamond Match debenture 6s touched a new high price at 103½, and were well taken at that figure. Chicago Railways collateral 6s were taken in considerable amount at 100¼.

it is said, will operate in close business relations with the American Suburbs Company.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, Mo., February 23.—St. Louis bankers and the local business element at large are highly elated at the timely arrival of the recent blizzard, with its accompanying blanket of snow. The cold weather has put new life into things, and practically assures big crops. The money market has already felt the effect in an improvement in the demand for credits, and a more optimistic feeling. It is admitted, however, that the change came just in time, as fruit crops in the Southwest were in serious danger, and moisture and snow protection was a necessity for winter wheat.

Bankers here are predicting a heavy demand for funds next month, both for commercial purposes and agricultural needs. The early crops from Texas and Louisiana will begin to move in March, and each year the needs on that account have steadily grown. These crops are of garden truck, mainly, but are of enormous proportions. The spring planting is expected to draw heavier on this center than was the case last season, but all the leading institutions which handle that business, are in better shape for meeting it than ever before. However reserves will be sufficiently reduced to make appreciable difference in rates, and local bankers are considerably less eager to get long time loans now than was the case two or three weeks ago.

Another feature in the situation is the several big deals which have been put through in St. Louis during the last month.

Gerhard William Garrels

In the death of Gerhard W. Garrels, president of the Franklin Bank, the St. Louis banking fraternity loses one of its oldest and most prominent members. Mr. Garrels was the type of banker which has given much strength and solidity to many of the German-American financial institutions throughout the country. For forty-six years he was connected with the Franklin Bank, during which time, it is said, he was never absent from business a single day, until his last illness. He loved work for the sake of work, and deemed banking the best kind of work any man could engage in. And incidentally his labors were for the stockholders of his concern, as in all the years of his employment he led the simple life, and still left an estate less than $300,000. Mr. Garrels was born in Germany, and started as a drygoods clerk in Oldenburg and Hanover. Later he was an insurance agent in The Hague and Antwerp. He came to St. Louis in 1864 and the following year entered the Franklin Bank, and remained with that institution continuously until his death. He was one of the organizers of the St. Louis Clearing House Association, and served several terms as its president.

New Title Company Formed

Organization of the new Security Title Company was completed this week, and actual business operations will begin within the next few days. The concern has the support of about 100 of the leading real estate dealers of St. Louis. Its capital stock is $12,500, which will later be raised to $25,000. The company will have a board of directors consisting of thirteen real estate men. Eugene D. O'Reilly is its president, and Arthur F. C. Blase, a title man formerly connected with the Title Guaranty Trust will be manager.

Bank Bill is Attacked

Strong opposition has developed to the bill, prepared by the Bank Commissioner of Missouri, which provides for increased fees for bank examinations in this state. Debate of the measure developed that last year the banking department lacked some $16,000 of being self supporting. The new bill makes an increase in the authorized charges for examination of banks and trust companies ranging from 20 to 400 per cent, and would add about $27,000 to the receipts of the department. There are 553 banks in the state having capital stocks between $10,000 and 25,000. The present rate of examining this class of banks is $15. The bill sought to increase this to $22.50. It was decided to lay the measure over with the view of getting schedules better adjusted to the views of the senators.

James E. Smith in New Line

James E. Smith, vice-president of the Simmons Hardware Company, has resigned that position to become president of the recently organized Equitable Surety Company. The new company will do a bonding and indemnity business and will have a gross capitalization of $1,250,000, which amount has been way over subscribed. The brokerage firm of G. H. Walker and Company was the organizer. Mr. Smith, who is a director of the Third National is one of the leading spirits of the Middle West. He has been in business in St. Louis for about forty years, during which time he has been identified with most of the movements for advancing the interests of the city. He was vice-president of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, and for several terms, president of the Business Men's League.

Arkansas Bankers Meet

In response to a call of George R. Wood of Van Buren, Ark., the members of the Executive Council of the Arkansas Bankers Association met at Little Rock on Monday to discuss time and place for the next annual convention. Among those who attended the meeting were: A. D. Foster, Pine Bluff; E. R. Wait, Little Rock; J. K. Browning, Piggott; Charles G. Henry, Newport; J. D. Covey, Bentonville; Charles N. Rix, Hot Springs, and Thomas C. McRae, president, ex-president and ex officio member of the council.

Mississippi Valley Trust Company

A sharp advance in the market price of Mississippi Valley Trust Company took place this week. On Monday the price jumped to $315, as compared with sales at $300 on the preceding Friday. The advance gave rise to rumors of various kinds, one of which was that the company contemplated raising its dividend rate. This was unofficially denied by officers of the company, who stated that there was but little stock on the market, and that brokers took advantage of this fact to suddenly boost the price. The company has "cleaned up" well on several large deals recently, and compared with other local financial institutions, the price was considered too low.

Mortgage Trust Company Opens

The Mortgage Trust Company opened for business this week. This company is associated with the Mortgage Guaranty Company of St. Louis, which was organized about two years ago, for the purpose of making, selling and guaranteeing the payment of real estate loans. The purpose of the Mortgage Company is for the purpose of handling loans smaller than are dealt in by the parent company. The companies have a combined capital of $1,000,000.

Kansas City, February 23.—With their vaults full of money, the banks of the Central West are finding it hard to make loans. This situation was described by Walton H. Holmes, president of Pioneer Trust Company of Kansas City to the representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER.

"Last year we were getting good rates at this time," said Mr. Holmes. "At that time good loans brought $5\frac{1}{2}$ to 6 per cent with a fairly good demand. Now we cannot place money at 4 to 5 per cent. Eastern banks have flooded the West with money, and this has caused an accumulation of funds here and at other western points. Country bankers have taken some money. These smaller banks have been loading up on farm mortgages until they are obliged to borrow money for current business. Of course they can get all the money they need for farm mortgage security is gilt edge. In fact in this part of the country nothing is better. I look for rates to come up a little later on and general banking conditions to become normal again.

"No one can estimate the value of the general rain that extended over the Central West this week. It will restore business confidence. It must be remembered that there has been no general rain or snow fall in this territory since early last fall. Conditions in the wheat country were worse than was generally known. The seed has not even sprouted in many fields, and simply lay in the dust. But this rain was splendid, and it will revive this section as nothing else could have done. It will instill confidence all along the line and spring business ought to be quite up to the usual standard."

Rain has Saved the Day

James T. Bradley, cashier of National Bank of Commerce, was enthusiastic over the outlook. "The rain has saved the day," he said. In fact without it things might have been pretty bad. But there is no use talking about that now. The main thing is that the West has been soaked good, and that business will now go forward at a normal rate. Banking interests are well satisfied with the prospect for spring and summer. I see nothing to cause the slightest worry. Deposits are growing, and while the interest rate is not as high as it should be I am sure that this is only a temporary condition."

Attend Group Meetings

Bankers from all over the Central West attended the various group meetings in Oklahoma during the week of February 20th. In the special car which left Kansas City for Guthrie in addition to those named in THE CHICAGO BANKER last week were George S. Hovey of the Interstate National Bank, Kansas City; E. J. Hilkey, American Union Trust Company; J. F. Meade, National Bank of Commerce, Kansas City; J. L. Johnston, National Reserve Bank of Kansas City; C. A. Chapman, Walters-Machette Bond and Investment Company; T. F. Brady of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City; J. D. Wright, People's National Bank and A. C. Jobs, broker.

The group meetings in five Oklahoma cities attracted large attendance not only from various parts of the state but from reserve cities as far away as Kansas City, St. Louis and Chicago. The first meeting was held at Guthrie on Monday, February 20th; the next on Tuesday at El Reno; on Wednesday at Chickasha; Thursday at Ardmore and Friday at Claremore. In all of the cities special preparations had been made to entertain the guests and delegates and the series of meetings were pronounced the most successful in the history of the state.

General News Notes

Suit has been brought on the $8,000 bond of John Flack, the absconding cashier of the Abilene State Bank, of Abilene, Kan. The bank has also brought several suits to recover from customers who owed the bank at the time it closed its doors. The full tragedy of Flack's disappearance was not realized by the people of Abilene until it was announced the other day that, owing to the fact that the local base ball association has lost its entire working capital through Flack's speculations, there would be no base ball team in that town the coming season.

W. L. Norton, formerly president of the Columbia Bank and Trust Company of Oklahoma City, Okla., has been indicted on seven charges, with forty-two counts, alleging misapplication of funds of national banks in which he was interested and false entries in his books when making reports to the comptroller. His bond was fixed at $10,000. A warrant has been issued for his arrest by the United States commissioner at Tulsa. Eugene Blaise, formerly president of the Farmers' National Bank of Tulsa, has been placed under bond on charges similar to those on which Norton was indicted. There are also indictments against two other persons connected with the same banks but whose identity is still secret.

The State Bank of Welda, Kan., has brought suit on a guaranty of a safe salesman that a certain safe bought by the bank was burglar proof. In April, 1909, burglars dynamited the safe and took $3,018 of the bank's money.

One of the best backed little banks in the country was recently organized at Radium, Kan., and is called the Radium State Bank. It is in Stafford county, Kansas, one of the richest farming communities in the West, and its officers and directors are nearly all men of great wealth. John Bauer is president; James H. Howard, vice-president; George Shoemaker, cashier. The other directors are: Henry McMillan and Clayton Moses.

G. B. Van Arsdale, a banker of Dodge City, Kan., who has been organizing state banks in various towns and cities of Kansas, is preparing to open such an institution at Wichita.

Will S. Johnson, formerly receiving teller of the German-American National Bank of St. Joseph, Mo., is now cashier of the Rio Grande State Bank of Del Norte, Colo. He is at present visiting his parents in St. Joseph.

SEATTLE CHAPTER BANQUET

By George R. Martin

The annual banquet of the Seattle chapter of the American Institute of Banking was held Wednesday evening February 14th, at the Hotel Washington. Two hundred and eighty-five bankers and bankmen were in attendance, the largest gathering of its kind in the history of Seattle. At the speaker's table, sat the heads of all the financial institutions in the city, the officers of the chapter and men prominently identified with the big interests of the Puget Sound City.

J. W. Spangler, manager credit department, Dexter Horton National, acted as toastmaster and was introduced by President William R. Crawford of the chapter. Music was furnished by the Symphony Orchestra and the University of Washington male quartette. The program of toasts included: William S. Percy, assistant cashier Seattle National, "Discretion"; Thomas B. Minihan, vice-president Scan-American Bank, "Just a Story; Benefit A. I. B."; Rev. Adna Wright Leonard, D. D., Pastor First M. E. Church, "The Influence of the Banker"; John H. Powell, of Peters & Powell, attorneys, "The Money Touch"; Carl Reiter, manager Orpheum Theatre, "Selected."

The speaker of the evening was William J. Burns, of the Burns National Detective Agency, who is now in Seattle in connection with the graft inquiry. Mr. Burns discussed the great value of the American Institute of Banking to the bankmen of the country and the responsibilities which rest upon bank tellers. He spoke of the work of detectives in running down check forgers and urges that bank tellers educate themselves in a way that they will be able to trap a forger the moment he presents himself at the window with a forged check. Mr. Burns also pleaded for a greater interest in public affairs by the bankmen of this country.

Dr. Leonard in his address, declared that bankers exert one of the most powerful influences in a community and that as a rule, that influence is for good. He said the time had come when bankers everywhere must take an active hand in civic and moral reforms.

The committee which had the banquet in charge, consisted of J. C. Norman, chairman; Dexter Horton National; E. G. Norris, Scan-American; A. T. Drew, American Savings Bank and Trust Co.; J. C. Glass, Bank of California; Roy H. B. Nelson, National Bank of Commerce, and E. K. Reiley and George R. Martin of the Seattle National.

The chapter will give a minstrel show at the Grand opera house April 11th and 12th. It will be a musical production, with a chorus of seventy voices and is under the direction of G. M. Grant of New York City. The costumes, scenery and stage settings will be on an elaborate scale. No expense is to be spared to make the show a great success. It gives promise of being one of the heaviest amateur productions ever staged on the Pacific Coast.

J. C. Norman is chairman of the executive committee, which is to have charge of the show. The other chairmen of committees are Roy H. B. Nelson, Amusement; E. G. Norris, tickets; E. K. Reiley, program; and George R. Martin, publicity.

F. S. Westfall, former president of the Creek Bank and Trust Company of Sapulpa, Okla., has been arrested charged with misappropriating funds of the bank during his presidency. He was released on bond.

PRIZES FOR CHAPTER MEN

At the 1910 convention of the Washington Bankers Association the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

RESOLVED, That the executive officers of this association are hereby authorized to offer a first and second prize in the sum of $15 and $10 respectively, for the best essay, by a member of one of the Washington chapters of the American Institute of Banking, or any bank clerk in the state of Washington taking a course recommended by the institute, upon some financial subject, to be selected by said executive officers, who shall be authorized to fix the terms and regulations to govern said contest.

The executive council of the Washington Bankers Association has adopted the following subject for the prize essay:

"A Central Bank as a Factor in a Financial Crisis." The rules and regulations governing the prize essay contest are as follows:

Subject of the essay to be "A Central Bank as a Factor in a Financial Crisis." The essay to be not less than 1,500 words in length, and to be typewritten, on one side of the paper. The copy is to be forwarded to P. C. Kauffman, secretary of the Washington Bankers Association, care Fidelity Trust Co., Tacoma, Washington; not later than May 1, 1911, signed by a fictitious name. Accompanying the essay is to be a sealed envelope, addressed to the Washington Bankers Association, containing a card giving both the fictitious name and the correct name and address of the competitor. A committee will be appointed by the officers of the Washington Bankers Association who will pass upon the merits of the essays. After this decision has been made two of the officers of the association will open the sealed envelope and ascertain the correct name and address of the successful competitor. The successful essay will be retained by the Washington Bankers Association and printed in the report of the 1911 convention.

A prize of $15.00 will be awarded to the best essay, and a prize of $10.00 to the second best. Immediately upon the determination of the award the secretary will notify the treasurer, who will issue a voucher check to the successful competitors for the amounts due.

R. G. Townsend, Aberdeen, S. D., has bought a controlling interest in the First State of Stratford, and has removed there.

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

SAVANNAH CHAPTER

GEO. H. DIETE

The regular meeting of the Savannah Chapter of the American Institute of Banking was held on February 9th. Owing to the inclement weather, there was only a small attendance.

After the business of the meeting had been transacted, Hon. Joseph F. Gray, a member of the Railroad Commission of Georgia and secretary of the Savannah Chamber of Commerce was introduced.

Mr. Gray stated that he had not come to make a speech but had come prepared with some figures to show what Savannah and the rest of the South were doing. He then read a statement showing the wonderful increase in population, manufactures, imports and exports, as well as the increase in property values of every kind in the South during the last ten years, giving particular attention to those of Savannah and the rest of the state of Georgia. In Mr. Gray's opinion this growth is but the forerunner of what may be expected during the next decade. Mr. Gray said that these figures are the surest proof that the South is awakening and has great confidence in its enterprises.

Mr. Gray then spoke of the Panama Canal and its influence on local trade. He said that tonnage must be developed by local manufacture in order to compete with other points and emphasized the necessity of development of South Atlantic manufactures.

Mr. Gray said that this is a new country and its development in the last seventy-five years equals that of European countries in hundreds of years. He called attention to the fact that our factories have been so busy supplying home demands that we have had no time to find out and supply, as we should, the wants and needs of Mexico, Central and South America but with the awakening of the entire nation, we will be strong competitors of Europe for the trade of the whole American continent.

Mr. Gray also spoke of the development of the accountant or "bookkeeper," as he was called; explaining that this development has been brought about by the change in business methods, as instead of doing a small business at a large profit, large business is now done at a very small profit hence the necessity of the business man knowing exactly how he stands each day.

At the conclusion of Mr. Gray's interesting discourse, all adjourned to another room where a tempting lunch was served.

HOW THE "YEGG" ESCAPED

Through carelessness, E. D. Chapman under arrest at Sioux City and wanted in three states for bank robbery was permitted to escape at Sioux City. The police station engineer mistook the accused yeggman for one of those unfortunates who had been granted permission to spend the night in the station house. The "yegg" was ordered to clean out the furnaces. This Chapman was only too glad to do. He not only cleaned out the furnaces but he cleaned out an officer's overcoat as well and escaped with a $5 bill. Chapman was suspected of complicity in some of the bank robberies that had occurred in South Dakota in recent weeks. Officers have a good description of him and the next time he will be more carefully watched.

FIRST TRUST MAKES A RECORD

First Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago has just celebrated its seventh birthday. The institution has made a remarkable record. In the brief period of seven years it has opened 126,800 savings accounts. At the close of business December 31, 1910, it was caring for $30,604,389 of the people's savings; while the total deposits then on hand were over the fifty million mark.

BANK REPORTS SHOW GAIN

Reports submitted by the savings banks of Des Moines in response to the call issued by State Auditor Bleakly for condition on February 8th bear out first indications that these institutions are in a much better condition than when the last call was issued in November. There is a general expansion of loans and an increase in deposits. These indicate that the trend is toward normal conditions.

DIAMOND MATCH EARNINGS

Diamond Match earnings for the fiscal year ended December 31, 1910, were issued Wednesday. The showing of net was $1,700,482, being equal to 11.56 per cent on the capital stock of $16,000,000. Owing to the reduction in the dividend rate to 6 per cent the dividend requirements were reduced by $320,000, compared with the previous year.

ALLIANCE WITH THE SHERIFFS

Plans are maturing for the selection of a local bankers' protective committee in each county of the state by the Illinois Bankers Association. This movement began officially in Group Ten meeting at Metropolis last year. The subject was ably and effectively introduced by Colonel John S. Aisthorpe of Cairo in a talk on the bankers' bugaboo—the yeggman. He offered statistics to show the extent of their recent depredations, and suggested a formal and pecuniary alliance with the sheriffs and deputy sheriffs in the state for the better protection of banks and other property interests from burglarious attack.

The fidelity and security companies and the safe agencies both are taking an active interest in the matter. If all work harmoniously there should be more adequate insurance carried; better safes installed; more burglars captured and put at hard labor on the stone pile. The plan as outlined by Colonel Aisthorpe was:

I suggest that our protective committee take up for consideration a plan of "Alliance with the sheriffs of Illinois." Perhaps this can be done through the state organization of sheriffs. I would suggest that we pay to sheriffs, when actively engaged in work of this kind for banks who are members of the state association, the expense properly incurred, also offer a specific standing reward for the arrest and conviction of bank safe breakers and burglars. We have 102 sheriffs in Illinois, each sheriff as a rule appoints a deputy in each precinct in his county for the proper conduct of serving papers and making arrests. Thus we have seven hundred or more men scattered over the state of Illinois, composed of sheriffs and deputies. We have 1,848 banks in the state and all should be members of our association. I am pleased to say that 1,595 of these banks are enrolled as members. I would suggest that one banker in every town or city where a bank is located shall be designated as a member of this special protective committee. This can, in my opinion, be properly conducted by having a roster of banks in each group and where located, and also of the sheriffs and his deputies, and this roster placed in the hands of bankers, sheriffs and his deputies throughout the state. We then have a system inaugurated, that by telephone and telegraph we can start a movement by every protective man in the immediate district in which a crime has been committed. Every railroad line or other avenue of escape, can be under the surveillance of a large number of men.

The executive council took up the matter and at the last meeting authorized the protective committee to appoint local protective committees in each county. A sort of ballot by mail was adopted in selecting the right persons. Probably the Aisthorpe plan may be carried out in an amended form, but the general result ought to be good. Non-member banks should be ignored, for Iowa tried this costly treatment of treating all alike to a fare-you-well. In the banking business, as in every other, there are those little souls who pay for nothing they can get by cheek and assurance.

ANGLO-RUSSIAN BANK

The Anglo-Russian Bank was recently formed in London with an authorized capital of one and a half million pounds sterling. It is a combination of English and Russian capitalists, and was formed with the primary object of acquiring an important interest in the Russian Commercial and Industrial Bank of St. Petersburg, which has ninety-nine branches, sub-offices and agencies throughout Russia. The company's prospectus points out that the Empire of Russia offers a splendid field for the investment of capital, in the construction of new railroads, harbors and docks, the development of waterways, irrigation works, the introduction of improved systems of water supply and drainage, electric lighting and other public works now under contemplation.

Last year, thanks to the co-operation of our bankers, new securities to a total of fully $1,500,000,000 were sold, bringing the grand total for the four years 1907, 1908, 1909 and 1910 up to the colossal figure of $6,000,000,000. Since the new year opened the stream of new issues has risen in volume, January having contributed at the abnormal rate of $3,000,000,000 per annum. Can investors continue to absorb offerings in such quantity?

New York Stock Exchange memberships have sold as high as $73,000.

STATUS OF FOREIGN TRADE

Details of the export trade of January, 1911, and the seven months ending with January, compared with those of the corresponding periods of last year, were completed by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor Monday. Of the principal articles named in the statement those showing an increase in the seven months ending with January, 1911, over the corresponding months of last year, are agricultural implements, lumber, cotton cloths, builders' hardware, sheets and plates of steel, boots and shoes, scientific instruments, pipes and fittings, automobiles, naphthas, metal working machinery, typewriters, sewing machines, electrical machinery, sole leather, structural iron and steel, furniture, naval stores, cotton wearing apparel, copper, raw cotton, corn and coal. The principle articles showing a decline in the value of exports are illuminating oil, wheat and wheat flour, leaf tobacco, bacon, cattle, and fresh beef.

COLLECTION CHARGES

The legality of the out-of-town collection charges on checks and negotiable paper, as fixed by the rules of regulations of the New York Clearing House Association, having been called into question under the Sherman law, James M. Beck, council for the Association, has sent to Attorney-General Wickersham a brief upholding the practice. Mr. Beck submits two propositions:

1. That the transaction is not one of interstate commerce.
2. That if it is it not such a direct, material, substantial and intentional restraint of such commerce as to be within the fair interpretation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

In his opinion banks cannot be put under the law in the same category with railroads, steamship lines and telegraph companies. There is no justification, he argues, for the Federal government's attempt to prohibit "a local regulation or a local facility."

THE INNOCENT HOLDER

In the case of Butler, Stevens & Co. vs. Barnes the Court of Appeals of Georgia holds that "where the maker of a negotiable promissory note pays it to the original payee, without requiring the production and surrender of the note, he is liable to pay it again to an innocent holder, who acquired title to it in good faith and for value before maturity, unless the payee was the holder's general agent for the collection of the note and had special authority to collect it, or the money collected thereon in fact reached the hands of the holder of the note. Especially is this true where, at the time the maker of the note pays it to the original payee, he has knowledge that it has been transferred by the payee to another for value and before maturity."

Commercial Paper as a Bank Security

Extracts from address by Joseph T. Talbert, vice-president of the National City Bank, New York, on "Loans and Discounts"

A question propounded by the commission in its communication to me is as to "the advisability of limiting the issuance of capital stock at par for money or property of the actual value of the par of the stock issued." I am strongly in favor of the issue of stock without par value, whether issued for money or property. The shares of every corporation should be of a specified number. Certificates should be issued for the shares, specifying, of course, the number which the holder owns, but not the value thereof. The value of each share would then depend upon the value of the property owned by the corporation, such as a city lot or a house, or any other piece of property. The certificate and the share would then represent the truth whereas the present method of attributing a value in dollars to a share of stock is deceptive, misleading and very often an unmitigated fraud. There are in circulation certificates representing stock of a par value of one hundred dollars that is not worth one hundred cents, and there are in circulation other certificates representing stock as worth one hundred dollars per share which is worth several hundred or several thousand per share. In thinking about this subject from time to time I have endeavored to develop in my own mind some reason of necessity or convenience for giving to corporate shares a par value, but without success. I have been able to think of none. On the other hand, and in addition to the reasons already stated, the issuance of shares as shares without attributing to them a value, which of necessity varies and is more or less misleading, rationally solves all the problems about "watered" stock and dispenses absolutely with the necessity for any legislation upon that subject. It is left precisely as if, to illustrate, we here present should buy a manufacturing plant and should divide the ownership of it into a specified number of shares, each present taking as many shares as he felt able or desired to take, and putting up his money accordingly. In such case there can be no question about the issuance of fictitious securities, or of overvalued property, and the public could not possibly be concerned with the question as to whether we issued one hundred shares or a thousand shares, so long as no par value or other value was attributed to the shares. The value of the property owned by the corporation, less its debts, would be the measure of the value of the shares. Take, for example, the much discussed Chicago & Alton case. Suppose, that, instead of issuing $20,000,000 par value of preferred and $20,000,000 par value of common stock, the stock of the company had been divided into 400,000 shares without par value, of which 200,000 shares should be preferred, entitled to non-cumulative dividends at a rate not exceeding $4 per share, and the remaining 200,000 shares common. This would have involved no statement or representation as to the value of any such shares any more than a house, or a lot, or a farm, or a horse has such value. The value of the 400,000 shares thus issued, collectively and separately, would depend upon the value of the property owned by the corporation, less its debts, like the value of a house or a lot, or a farm, or a horse. If this had been done the Chicago & Alton case never would have arisen to inflame and mislead an excitable section of the public mind; there would have been no cry of "watered" stock and no charge of issuing "fictitious" securities; and yet the public still would have received the benefit of the new money in the improved condition of the property without having its transportation rates increased one cent simply because, as I have already endeavored to show, transportation rates are uninfluenced by capitalization. Those responsible for the Chicago & Alton financial readjustment, however, could not have so issued the stock had they desired, because, according to my information, the Illinois law required it to have a par value.

Sales of Bonds at Discount

The next question suggested by the commission in its communication is with reference to the "sale of bonds at a discount." Bonds, unlike stock, representing an obligation to pay a specified sum at a certain date, with interest at a certain rate, necessarily must specify in dollars and cents the amount to be paid, and therefore have a par or face value. The income being limited to a fixed rate of interest, and being without the possibility of a larger income, as an increase in dividends on stock, the bond is without much speculative value, if the security is good. Where the security is good and the interest rate is the same, there is naturally very little room for difference in the value of different bonds. The difference must be due primarily to difference of opinion respecting the value of the security, aside, of course, from the question as to whether the bond falls within the class of savings bank and trust investments, as prescribed by laws of some of the states. An exact answer to the commission's question as to whether bonds shall be sold at a discount is rather difficult. It depends upon the credit of the corporation, the security and the rate of interest. If the credit of the corporation is good, the security is good and the interest is 6 per cent, or at times even 5 per cent, I should say that, under normal conditions, the bond ought not to be sold at a discount, but should bring a premium. If, however, the interest is 4 per cent, it would in these times have to be sold at discount, and if 3 or 3½ per cent, it would undoubtedly have to be sold at a very substantial discount. The security being good, the price of the bond, with reference to its par or face value, is of course, controlled by the question of income to a very large extent. The question for the investor is, What income will a certain amount of money bring? Whether he buys a bond bearing 6 per cent interest or 3 per cent interest, if the security is the same and the date of the maturity of the bond is the same, will probably not make very much difference to him; for in the case of the 6 per cent bond he would pay considerably above par and for the 3 per cent bond he would pay much below par, the net result in each case being the same or substantially the same both to buyer and seller. These considerations are, of course, familiar to the members of this commission and are encountered and acted upon every day in the bond market.

Issue of Additional Stock at Par

With reference to the question propounded by the commission as to the "sale of new stock at par to stockholders when old stock is selling above par in the market," I should say that I see no objection to that from the standpoint of the public or government, and none from the standpoint of the stockholders where there are no complications by reason of there being stock of different classes and different rights outstanding. The market value of stock is very rarely the same as its par value. A glance at the daily quotations upon the New York stock exchange will readily show this. I have before me a list of the stocks dealt in on the New York stock exchange yesterday, as published in this morning's papers. I observe that the stock of 122 different corporations was dealt in, not one of which sold precisely at par. Eighty-eight sold below and 4 above par. The history of yesterday is the history of practically every other day in this respect. The reasons why stock sells above or below par differ, of course, in different cases. Primarily it depends upon the value of the property represented by the stock, and this in turn depends upon the number of shares instead of the par value of the shares outstanding. The current earnings of the property, the rate of dividends paid, the accumulated surplus or deficits in previous years and a great variety of circumstances control. The character of the management respecting integrity as well as ability, the possibility of hostile or unjust legislation, political conditions, speculation and, for lack of a better term, what is called "sentiment," each and all are important factors in establishing the market value. It does not necessarily follow that because the shares of a railroad company are selling in the market for $150 that the company has a surplus of 50 per cent. If forced to liquidate it might not be able to pay even par. It is very difficult, therefore, if not impossible, for the directors of a railroad company, or any one, to affirm with legal certainty the precise value of a company's stock, or that when it is selling for $150 it is not really worth more or less than $150. When, therefore, the corporation requires additional capital it seems to me to be a perfectly fair way for it to call upon its shareholders to contribute additional capital in proportion to their holdings. Whether they do so at par or at a premium, or even at a discount, does not, in my view, actually affect the public or the government one way or the other. Of course, I realize that under legislation requiring stock to have a par value there may be legal objection to issuing new stock for less than par. If there is such objection it is because of antiquated and economically unnecessary legislation. Under the same legislation, however, as I understand it, shareholders have the statutory right to take pro rata any additional stock at par, regardless of the market value. As already stated, I perceive no objection to that method if deemed best by those responsible for the financial management of the company. If the stock is paying dividends at the rate of 6 per cent and is issued at par, the company is theoretically, if not actually, paying 6 per cent for its money, when by a sale of bonds it might be able to get it at 4 or 4½ per cent. But the issue of additional stock calls for a larger sum in the aggregate for dividends if the same rate is to be maintained. Consequently an increase of the amount may result in a reduction in the rate of dividends. At all events I cannot see that the public or government is interested in the matter, since the return upon the capital in the railroad property is not governed by the amount of stock or bonds outstanding, but by the value of the property, which may bear but little relation to the amount of its stock and bonds.

THE FIGHT FOR THE FAIR

By Wm. B. Compton, Crocker National of San Francisco

As far back as 1904, when it became apparent that the Panama Canal would be completed in the year 1915. Mr. R. B. Hale, now acting president of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, conceived the idea of a great exposition to commemorate the event, and what was more just than that it should be held at the key to the Orient and natural railway terminal of the West, San Francisco.

He fostered and exploited the idea until the fruition of his efforts in its public approval in 1907, when it became a topic of general discourse. The great honor seemed by divine right to belong to San Francisco, who in her wonderful recoup from the epoch making disaster of 1906, which caused the world to chant pæans in her praise, proved her ability to manage so stupendous an affair. There were others, however, who coveted this honor.

In March, 1910, San Diego, with true California vim, made a spirited campaign, but gracefully acquiesced to the wishes of the whole Pacific Coast. Then New Orleans, in April, 1910, claimed to be the "Logical Point," and became a real and formidable rival for the exposition.

It became evident that if we wanted the fair we must fight for it, and public spirited men like Wm. H. Crocker, R. B. Hale, C. C. Moore, Frank L. Brown, W. C. Ralston, M. H. de Young, Wm. R. Hearst, Rudolph Spreckels and others, shouldered the responsibility.

The Panama-Pacific International Exposition was incorporated March, 1910, and in April, 1910, held the most spectacular meeting the world has ever known, when, at the Merchants Exchange, $4,000,000.00 was subscribed in two hours. This was afterward advanced to $7,500,000.00 and at the present writing Oakland has added another million of dollars.

September 6, 1910, Gov. Gillett called a special session of the legislature and passed constitutional amendments that placed before the people the power to vote to both the state of California and the city of San Francisco the privilege to issue bonds for the amount of $5,000,000.00, each, thus increasing the available funds to $17,500,000.00. With this vast sum it was decided not to ask for financial aid from the federal government.

New Orleans proved a resourceful opponent, however, and so it was that Wm. H. Crocker, Henry T. Scott, Benj. Ide Wheeler, Father McQuade, J. N. Gillett, Hiram Johnson, P. H. McCarthy, Leon Sloss, J. D. Grant, Theodore Bell and others, thirty-six in all, left their homes and business affairs to go to Washington, in the interest of San Francisco, during the present session of the "Law Makers."

New Orleans was jubilant January 20th, 1911, when the house committee voted on its favor 9 to 6. San Francisco expected as much, knowing that the members of that committee were southern statesmen, but looked for the real battle in the "house" and rushed to the front with the moral support and advice, which added to the great ability and experience of Congressman Kahn, enabled him so skillfully to introduce his resolution, with the result that on January 31, 1911, the vote in the house was 259 to 43 in favor of San Francisco.

New Orleans with southern grace and courtesy, removed all further obstacles from the way, and February 8, 1911, the vote of the senate committee, and the senate itself February 12th, was unanimously for San Francisco. This was to be expected when men whose forbears had banded the East and the West with ribbons of steel, men whose mental force make wheels go round and ease financial situations, made the fight. What could be the result when such men, the men of California, of San Francisco, bend their energies and will to a cause?

Success! The glorious success that was foretold in the skies by detonating rockets and the smiling of the sun.

Real Estate Security Is The Best

IMPROVED farms in favorable locations are the best real estate securities. Investors in bonds cannot find a better opportunity to obtain satisfactory returns, coupled with ample security, than our 7% twenty year bonds - while our stock is none the less safe and pays better dividends. The Company is a going concern and will pay 25% on stock this fiscal year. Demand for our products always greater than supply and will continue to remain so. This means high prices, with ready market. An investigation will demonstrate and verify above statements. For further particulars, address

WALL STREET BANK SAFETY

The safety of a Wall Street bank is the additional privilege it enjoys of calling for additional collateral every day, at any time, if the prices of securities held as collateral decline; and in default of additional collateral being deposited it may, with either a call loan or a loan payable at a specified time, demand the payment of the loan at once, and if the loan is not paid may sell the stocks or bonds held as collateral to provide for payment of the amount of the loan. The banks, of course, are a brake on reckless speculation; and if it is evident that any individual, or pool of various individuals, attempts to over-buy, the banks immediately curtail the credit of such people. This phase of the situation is little known outside of Wall Street proper, as it seems to be the fashion to condemn bankers who evade the laws of safety and to give no credit to those who insist upon compelling conservatism by doing business in conformity with safe and sane regulations--Henry Clews, in Moody's Magazine.

PHILADELPHIA UP-TO-DATE

"Our Correspondent in Philadelphia," said Henry S. Henschen, cashier of the State Bank of Chicago, "is a fine old bank which has been in business more than one hundred years. About ten years ago, when I visited it for the first time, I noticed a framed announcement hanging near the paying teller's window, stating that the 'board of bank presidents' of Philadelphia had passed a resolution that no checks would be paid over the counter unless the payee were personally known to the teller or to an officer of the bank."

"The typography of the announcement was that of Civil War days and on closer inspection I found the date: 'October, 1860.'"

"I was in the bank last week and found the same announcement in the same place. The president of the bank admitted that the sign has served longer than he. It has hung there undisturbed more than fifty years. Can you beat it?"

ALASKA FOR POSTAL BANK

Going to Europe

Space on any steamship, for the spring or summer sailing, is at a premium in most steamship offices. Manager Frank A. Gross of the Gross Tours, 302 Ellicott Square, Buffalo, N. Y., has a plan whereby he is enabled to hold reservations for prospective travelers. His oriental tour of 73 days costs only $490 plus the steamship fare, starts April 8th. About monthly after that he will have tours where everything is provided at a low price—service first class.

We are enabled to present herewith two half

GROUP OF NATIVES IN DAMASCUS

tones, one showing a group of natives in Damascus, and the other a scene from Beirut. Damascus still remains as one of the most typically Oriental towns within reach of the modern tourist, but it is fast becoming Europeanised, as the "Apollinaris" ad on the door in the picture indicates. The history of Damascus begins with the time of Abraham, and it seems always to have been a place of importance. Ancient remains are not extensive, although the "Street called Straight" still remains as at the time of the Apostle Paul.

The picture is a snapshot taken by a member of Mr. Gross' party to the Orient last year. On April 8th Mr. Gross will conduct a party of twenty to the Orient and a fine time is in store for the traveler who is fortunate enough to secure a berth. The schedule has been arranged so that they will be in the Orient after the crowds of sightseers and pilgrims have returned home, which assures them of perfect accommodations at hotels. Another important advantage is that the trains and places of interest will not be crowded. It is not generally known, but it is a fact that May is the best time of the year in the Holy Land, and surrounding country.

On this tour the party will visit Azores, Madeira, Gibraltar, Algiers, Turkey, Greece, Palestine, Egypt and Southern Italy. On account of the demand for space it will be necessary to make application for a berth at an early date.

The Automobile Tour of Europe conducted by Mr. Gross is proving very attractive, as the number of applications received testifies. On this trip 28 people will travel from Naples to Paris by auto, and will also spend a few weeks in the British Isles. A booklet has been gotten out describing the tours and the places visited, and is filled with valuable information and will be mailed to any one who is interested. The cost, which includes every item of expense, is extremely low,—between $11 and 11.50 per day.

The snap shot of the boot black was taken by a Westfield lady who was with Frank A. Gross' party to the Orient last year.

Beirut is the principal town of Syria, built in European fashion, with a large Christian population. Many educational and charitable institutions are established here in connection with European communities. While Beirut has no claim to great antiquity, it was a place of importance during the Roman times.

Baalbec, the City of the Sun, will also be visited by Mr. Gross' party in May. The party which Mr. Gross will manage will consist of only 20 people, so that each member is assured of every attention.

They will be in the Orient at the best season of the year, after the crowds have left, leaving the hotels, trains, and places of interest in a less congested state. Half of the party is now booked, and many more are interested. Interested parties should reserve space now.

The automobile tour of Europe has proven very popular, as the bookings show. 28 people will be the limit on this tour, so that the disadvantage of handling a large crowd will not be a factor. The cars and the chauffeurs are in charge of an expert, who is responsible to the automobile company and to Mr. Gross for the perfect running of the machines.

An illustrated booklet has been gotten out, describing the tours, free for the asking, to those interested.

FIVE HUNDRED GUARANTY PROPOSED FOR WISCONSIN

By John Schuette of Manitowoc

The Wisconsin Bankers Association mailed to each of its members a circular advising them of two bills now pending before the legislature on which it invites expression and suggestion.

The first is the segregation of savings deposits from commercial deposits. This would create a preferred class, would give notice to the commercial depositor that his deposit was not as safe as the savings deposit, and would be to an injury to all banks having savings deposits.

The other is Senator Owen's guaranty bill which the circular wrongly says "imposes taxes of 1 per cent on average deposits the first year and 1-10 per cent thereafter." This is misleading, as this 1 per cent merely is to be credited on the books of each bank in favor of the insurance fund, and most likely will never be drawn against, like a premium note.

There is no question that the insuring of deposits is the only bank panic prevention, and if done under national laws, the successful outcome is beyond doubt, because the large number of banks, distributed over the whole country, will give us an ideal general average, the main safety in any line of insurance.

The only way we can also get the required general average in a state is to limit the insurance of deposits to any one depositor, so that in case a large bank, with large deposits, should fail, the insurance will be only on a limited amount.

As the postal bank limits its guaranty to any one person to $500 and as the segregation of deposits aims to protect the small depositors, now, to meet all these conditions, and as a compromise, I would suggest:

A bill to insure any one depositor up to and including $500 on his deposits.

The synopsis is about as follows:

1st. To create an insurance department over which the commissioner of banking shall have control, who also shall have power to refuse a charter to a new bank for cause, as now exercised by the national bank comptroller.

2d. Every bank shall deposit with the commissioner of banking its certificate of deposit in the amount of 1 per cent of all deposits not exceeding $500 to any one depositor, payable to him in part or whole on demand. This shall constitute the reserve fund and which a bank may carry on its books as an asset.

3d. Every bank shall pay annually to the commissioner of banking 1 mill on all deposits not exceeding $500 to any depositor. This is to constitute the premium fund, out of which all losses should be paid. The 1 mill may be reduced by the commissioner of banking.

4th. If a bank shall discontinue, having paid all its deposits, all that portion due it in the insurance funds shall be returned to it.

5th. The deposits of a bank shall not exceed 10 times its capital. (Six times would be better.)

6th. After the commissioner of banking finds a bank insolvent he should wind it up, collect, and pay in the usual way. If the resources of the bank will not pay the depositors in full, he shall draw on the premium fund, and if not sufficient, then on the reserve fund, any amount required to pay every depositor not exceeding $500 on his deposits on the following percentage.

All drawing not over 2 per cent interest to be paid in full (100 per cent).

Those drawing more than 2 per cent and not over 3 per cent to be paid 95 per cent.

Those drawing more than 3 per cent and not over 4 per cent to be paid 90 per cent.

All drawing more than 4 per cent shall be excluded from the protection of the insurance.

7th. All fiduciary institutions receiving deposits may avail themselves of the insurance plan under the same terms and subject to such regulations as the commissioner of banking may require.

Such a law would fulfill the main purpose of safeguarding the money of the poorer class.

2d. It would meet the postal bank's $500 guaranty.

3d. It would make the segregation of deposits unnecessary.

4th. It would eliminate the small depositors from bank runs.

5th. It would still leave to the large bankers, or bankers who believe that they enjoy a greater confidence than their competitors, practically the same advantage.

6th. The $500 insurance limit would greatly reduce the risk, the premium cost, and greatly increase the safety.

7th. As soon as the postal bank extends its $500 limit, which one may be sure will be done, we can amend to meet it.

The bankers will be surprised after all the forty thousand postal banks are opened up for business, how much these will absorb of our deposits. Little Germany has 3,500 million dollars in savings deposits guaranteed by municipalities. A few weeks ago the failure of a million dollar bank at Fairbanks, Alaska, brought a petition twenty-four feet long before congress asking the speedy establishment of a postal bank there. Our postmaster here in Manitowoc is repeatedly asked if he could not receive more than $500, from 1 to 3,000 dollar deposits. There is no question that the postal bank's $500 limit will be expanded, if not entirely removed, and the interest rate raised, and if we loiter, insurance companies insuring deposits may force the banks to insure in them, which would treble the cost, and not inspire the requisite confidence. As deposit insurance is bound to come, therefore, let us select the plan most economical, the safest, and the easiest obtainable. After the proposed act is in operation, I believe those who are now opposing it, will say as a president of one of our largest railroads, how we all fought the adoption of the railroad rate bill, and after a few years of operation, it proved the best thing ever happened to our roads.

STARTS ACCOUNTS FOR PUPILS

Middlesboro, Ky., February 23.—Saturday was a gala day in Middlesboro. The hearts of 1,425 children, both black and white, were made glad by J. H. Bartlett, who gave a small account in the new postal savings bank here to each child in the public schools.

The 219 negro pupils seemed as happy as the white children who received gifts from the aged philanthropist.

The accounts ranged from 25 to 50 cents each, but Mr. Bartlett said that what he wished to accomplish was to teach the children to save while they are young and acquire a nucleus for college education.

There was rejoicing among the older folks as well as the children. At the postal savings bank 1,425 books were filled out and the new depositors proudly exhibited their fortunes to each other.

It was by far the busiest day which the bank has had since the inauguration of the system here. An extra number of clerks were on duty all day and as there was no school all the pupils were in line when it was announced the books would be given out.

AMONG THE NEWEST BOOKS

Among the newest and timeliest books is "The Fine Art of Fishing" by Samuel Camp. It belongs to the new "How-To" list of helpful books published by the Outing Publishing Co. The series covers camp cookery, wing shooting, boat sailing, fishing, golf, woodcraft, birds, bird dogs and the building of country or forest homes. These books offer complete and reliable courses of instruction in outdoor life. They summarize the experience of experts, and they are especially helpful in the selection and purchase of equipment and supplies.

Wherever possible they have been made pocket size for easy transportation. Every copy is printed on high grade bookpaper, artistically illustrated and bound attractively. They serve equally well in the open, in the library and as gifts.

The one on fishing is quite as complete as the rest. From casting to kits and equipment no topic is overlooked and the illustrations are many. What you want and how to use it after you get it is a fair description. Price is but one dollar.

"The Young Forester" by Zane Grey comes from Harper Bros. and is a boy's book.

The so-called "Wild West Story" has an everlasting fascination for boys, and there seems no reason why this kind of tale should not be made as sound and wholesome as any other variety of juvenile fiction.

This is what Mr. Grey has done in "The Young Forester." His knowledge of the country he writes about cannot be questioned. He inspires the same confidence in the genuineness of his descriptions as Hamlin Garland in "The Long Trail," or Frederic Remington in "Pony Tracks." He has camped and hunted through the wilderness in which his scene is laid. He has chased wild horses and helped Buffalo Jones, the old hunter and plainsman, to lasso mountain lions. The story of his own experiences in the West and elsewhere would make an exciting narrative if told in autobiographical detail.

The story is full of fishing, hunting, fights with grizzlies, forest fires and is better fiction by far than usually goes with the boys' books. Price $1.25.

"My Mark Twain," also is from the Harper Bros. press and was written by William Dean Howells, Twain's friend and companion in literary pursuits for so many years. Who is there besides so qualified in every way to do the late premier humorist justice? The friendship between the two extended through forty-five years, and in picturing Mark Twain in the various stages of his career and under trying variations of fortune. Mr. Howells narrates many delightful incidents of their association. It is touching to note the tender way in which Mr. Howells admits Mr. Twain's faults without yielding a shade of his devotion to his departed friend. The closing paragraph of the tribute reflects Mr. Howell's feelings and reveals his measure of Mark Twain: "Next I saw him dead, lying in his coffin amid those flowers with which we garland our despair in that pitiless hour. After the voice of his old friend Twichell had been lifted in the prayer which it waivered through in broken-hearted supplication, I looked a moment at the face I knew so well; it was patient with the patience I had so often seen in it; something of a puzzle, a great silent dignity, an assent to what must be from the depths of a nature whose tragical seriousness broke in the laughter which the unwise took for the whole of him. Emerson, Longfellow, Lowell, Holmes—I knew them all and all the rest of our sages, poets, seers, critics, humorists; they were like one another and like other literary men; but Clements was sole, incomparable, the Lincoln of our literature." Mr. Howell's book closes with reviews of Mark Twain's books. Price $1.40 net.

RESOURCES OVER FIVE MILLION DOLLARS.

Los Angeles

Stoddard Jess, vice-president of First National of Los Angeles, will take a long vacation in the hope of recovering from the ravages of a severe attack of the grip. As a member of the harbor commission he has asked for a leave of absence of six months, but he does not expect to be absent from the bank as long as that. He expects to pass much of his time on the coast, especially on his ranch property in the San Joaquin valley.

At the annual meeting of Broadway Bank & Trust Company, of Los Angeles, seven members of the Citizens' National were elected to places on the directorate, an even half of the board, the other seven remaining from the original number that controlled the destiny of the state bank. Although the Citizens' representation of the board is an even half, it is known to own the control. R. J. Waters, president of the Citizens', is also head of the Broadway. Warren Gillelan, who was president of the state concern, will remain as vice-president, and R. W. Kenny, vice-president, retains his title. A. W. Redman remains as cashier, and H. A. Keeler, one of the tellers of the Citizens', is made assistant cashier.

Southern California bankers were deeply interested in the developments at Sacramento, resulting in the ousting of Alden Anderson as state superintendent of banks and the appointment of State Treasurer W. R. Williams to the vacancy thus created. Under the law that went into effect July 1, 1909, the superintendent of banks should be a banker of active experience, something that Mr. Williams is not. But the legislature made it easy for the governor to remove the man who had contested the gubernatorial nomination with him. The promotion of Mr. Williams left a vacancy which the governor filled by appointing as state treasurer E. D. Roberts, who is president of two banks at San Bernardino and is interested in two more. There was a popular feeling that if Mr. Anderson had to go his place should have been given to a man with active banking experience—Mr. Roberts, for instance.

Since the return of Willis H. Booth, vice-president of the Equitable Savings Bank of Los Angeles, from his trip to the Orient, with the delegation of the Associated Chamber of Commerce, he has been in popular demand as a lecturer. Mr. Booth made a deep study of the prospects of extending the Pacific Coast trade in the Far East.

Architect Thornton Fitzhugh has completed plans and is taking bids for the erection of a store and office building at Monrovia for the American Monrovia Investment Co. It will be two stories, 93x126 feet, with a full basement. The first story will contain two banking rooms, drygoods store and postoffice. The second floor will be divided into offices.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

To guarantee deposits of state banks would only deprive the depositors of interest on their savings, say St. Paul bankers, many of whom are reputed to oppose the senate guaranty bill.

Louis Betz, treasurer of the State Savings Bank, said: "Any fund that might be created to guarantee the depositors would eventually come out of the pocket of the depositors. The banks of the state could not afford to pay the interest now paid, if compelled to contribute to the state one-half of one per cent on the average daily deposits to form a guaranty fund. Our bank alone would have to pay $20,000 annually and of course we would have to lower the rate of interest paid depositors in order to set aside this amount."

"In time there will be postal savings banks established in St. Paul and throughout Minnesota generally. Let the people who are looking for a government guaranty deposit their savings in these banks. I think the establishment of these banks will do away with any apparent need for a state guaranty fund."

Chapter Men Make Records

C. G. Sutherland of the Capital National Bank of St. Paul broke a record for 250 checks on the machine in 3:37 1-5. His previous record was 3:54. The crack was made Saturday night at the inter-city chapter contest in the First National Bank, Minneapolis. Others were: J. P. Zimmerman, Security National, 3:42 4-5; S. R. Hawley, Second National, St. Paul, 3:44. A former record was made with 200 checks in 1907 by A. E. Turnquist at 3:07.

In the mental addition contest R. M. Chapman of the First National, St. Paul, added twenty-five checks called out in 2:02. Second was A. E. Turnquist, 2:09 1-2; third, William Wagner, First National, Minneapolis, 2:10.

Security bank clerks won out in the money counting contest: J. A. Robb handled and stacked $955.09 in 3:23; I. E. Shattuck in 3:42; E. J. Wagenhals in 3:46; Carl Diethers of the Capital National in 3:24. The latter was $5 off.

H. E. Cobb, president of the local chapter and Harry Libby, Thomas M. Rees and J. W. Groves, the other officers, with E. C. Phinney, were on hand to receive the St. Paul men who came over seventy-five strong, headed by President H. R. Fairchild, Secretary T. L. Lee and Treasurer Walter Honebrink. Officers of local banks came down and in the receiving line were George A. Lyon and P. G. Leeman, assistant cashiers of the First National, Stanley Bezoier and W. A. Meacham, assistant cashiers of the Security National, and W. F. Olson of the Union State Bank, with A. A. Crane, vice-president of the First National on the end of the line. Harry Lester and Fred L. Will, bank clerks, did buck and wing dances, with William Crossland, as piano accompanist.

The prize for the adding machine contest were as follows: First prize, gold watch; second prize, stick pin; third prize, cuff buttons. In the money counting contest the prizes were a safety razor, $5 pair of shoes and a pipe. The prizes for the mental addition contest were a $7 merchandise certificate, a stick pin and a pocket knife.

The executive committee of the Minneapolis chapter has arranged to take the Lyric theater and the show at the time for Monday and Tuesday, February 20th and 21st, to raise money for the association which has recently furnished new club rooms.

Interest in Legislation

Bankers back the Sundberg bill in the legislature for rural school consolidation, and the Sageng bill for a commission of three on educational conditions and the banking committee's saving bank bill.

Secretary C. R. Frost of the state association says the organization favors the clause of the Sageng bill providing that one member shall be representative of industry, one agriculture and one education; also that the findings of the commission shall be made in 1911 as a basis for further action in 1912. He says that banking legislation thus far proposed is in line with the association ideas for the development of the state.

The senate committee on banks has introduced three bills bearing on bank protection against fraud. One makes it misdemeanor for depositors to draw checks when they know they have not sufficient funds on deposit to cover the amount of the check; another bill makes it a like offense to circulate false rumors effecting the financial or other standing of banks which refuse to cash forged or fraudulent checks.

The punishment for a gross misdemeanor is imprisonment in a county jail for not more than one year.

Senator A. A. Poehler introduced a bank deposit guaranty bill, similar to the bill which failed two years ago. His measure authorizes the state bank examiner to assess a tax of one-half of 1 per cent on their average deposits for the last year of all banks under state control. This money shall be paid into the state treasury and held subject to the order of the state bank examiner, under regulations, for reimbursing the depositors in failed banks. Banks which fail to pay their tax after due notice has been given, shall be subject to a penalty of 50 per cent additional. State banks, under the provisions of the bill, have no option; national banks, under federal control, may avail themselves of the provisions of the proposed law at their own option.

Northwestern Miscellany

F. A. Chamberlain, president of the Security National, has left for three months. He will go South and then to California.

E. W. Decker, vice-president of the Northwestern National, and C. T. Jaffray, vice-president of the First National, have been re-elected directors in the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company. Assets are reported at $6,085,437. The earned surplus is $294,719, an increase of $41,45.

On February 1st the Sac county, Iowa, State Bank occupied its new building. Banks of larger proportions are said to have nothing over the Sac bank in equipment and finish, other things being equal.

The Security Bank of Hibbing has been granted a license by the Minnesota bank superintendent. Capital is $25,000. Officers are: President, A. C. Hansen; vice-president, H. P. Reid; cashier, W. R. Spenseley.

D. D. Devine, formerly of the bank examiner's department in Minnesota, when he goes to Hillyard, Wash., to become cashier of the First National will take his son, J. E. Devine to be teller.

School children's savings accounts at Big Stone, S. D., aggregate $1,200. Five or six years ago Gold & Company, bankers gave the children 500 iron savings banks.

DEATH OF A DAVENPORT BANKER

The First National at Davenport, Iowa, has sent out notices of the death of one of its vice-presidents, John P. Van Patten. Mr. Van Patten was a director since 1887, and in recognition of his worth and efficient services was elected to the position of second vice-president in 1897. He has been failing rapidly since the death of his wife in April, 1910, but retained his mental vigor up to his last hours. Mr. Van Patten was the first wholesale grocer in the state of Iowa, and was identified in this line during his entire life.

OKLAHOMA LAW STANDS

Washington, February 24.—A rehearing in the case involving the constitutionality of the Oklahoma Bank Guaranty Law of 1907 was denied by the Supreme Court of the United States. The court recently held that the law was constitutional.

NEW BANKING FIRM

Announcement is made of the organization of a new Chicago banking house to be known as Ames, Emerich & Co., which will begin business on March 1st. The organizers are James C. Ames and Melvin L. Emerich, both of whom have been associated with the bond department of the Harris Trust & Savings Bank and N. W. Harris & Co., for seven years. It will be the policy of the new concern to bring out high class issues of bonds of municipalities and public service corporations and also gilt-edged preferred stocks.

PEORIA BANKER IN CITY

E. A. Strause, president of Interstate Bank and Trust Company, Peoria, was a caller at Western Trust and Savings the fore part of the week. Mr. Strause represents a growing bank in one of the best cities of Illinois. He reports collections good in the country and a gradual improvement in mercantile business.

E. E. Bleckley, for many years identified with the Missouri Pacific Railway at Wichita, has resigned to become assistant cashier of the Fourth National Bank of that city.

Pittsburgh

In the Pittsburgh district 36 blast furnaces were active February 1st as against 30 January 1st.

The Pittsburgh High Voltage Insulator Co. has increased its capital from $100,000 to $400,000.

The East Park Premium Building & Loan Association, of the Northside, has increased its capital stock from $200,000 to $2,000,000.

T. P. Chandler, who has had charge of the credit department of the Colonial Trust Company has tendered his resignation to the officials of that institution, his retirement being necessitated by the serious condition of his eyes.

The sale of upward of 2,000 tons of open hearth sheet bars by a nearby mill for early shipment at $25, Pittsburgh, an advance of $1 a ton as compared with prices quoted during the past two months, and the withdrawal of the $24, Pittsburgh, quotation by some mills. On account of the increased demand for crude steel, steel plant operations have been materially increased during the past week.

The West Penn Traction Company, better known in the coke region as the West Penn Railways Company, has planned largely for future years in the way of new construction. In addition to the line from Leisenring to Uniontown, now under way, eight other extensions are proposed. Steps looking toward financing the work were taken some months ago when the newly chartered traction company authorized $25,000,000 worth of bonds. Of this amount $350,000 are now offered for sale, principally for the building of the Leisenring-Uniontown line.

The annual meeting and dinner of Group Eight, Pennsylvania Bankers Association was held Thursday evening at the Ft. Pitt hotel. A. D. Swift, cashier of the Elk County National Bank of Ridgway spoke on the topic "Burglary and Time Lock Insurance."

The dinner was served in the English room at 7:30. Henry A. Williams, national bank examiner for this district was toastmaster and was introduced by D. C. Wills, cashier of the Diamond National Bank and chairman of Group Eight.

The other speakers and their toasts were as follows:

"The Twins—Banker and Lawyer," Thomas E. Powell, Columbus, O.

"George Washington-Koons," Polk Miller, Richmond, Va.

"A Note in Protest," Strickland W. Gilliland, Chicago.

Among the guests of the Group were F. E. Farnsworth, of New York, general secretary American Bankers Association; William A. Law, vice-president First National Bank, Philadelphia and president Pennsylvania Bankers Association; Charles H. James, assistant cashier First National Bank, Philadelphia, secretary of Group One; E. E. Lindemuth, vice-president Western National Bank, Philadelphia and chairman Trust Company section, Pennsylvania Bankers Association; A. D. Swift, cashier Elk County National Bank, Ridgway; D. S. Kloss, cashier First National Bank, Tyrone, secretary Pennsylvania Bankers Association and a few others.

The scrap market is particularly sensitive, responding at all times promptly to good or bad influences. The present advancing tendency is ascribed to slightly heavier steel mill operations, coming at a time when there has been meager production of scrap for months.

The Crucible Steel Company of America has bought out the Halcomb Steel Company, Syracuse, N. Y., containing five 24-pot crucible furnaces, a 20-ton basic open-hearth furnace and a 4-ton electric steel refining furnace, the first electric furnace to be put in commercial operation in America. The Crucible Company is also taking over the entire holdings of the Midland Steel Company, on the Ohio river, below Beaver.

The statement of the six national banks of Connellsville shows the resources on January 7 totaled $5,275,726.89, against $4,612,766.38 two years previous. The total deposits were $3,699,847.10, against $3,060,540.63 at the call in 1909, an increase of $639,306.47. At the January call in 1909 the surplus and undivided profits amounted to $618,865.39, or $21,925.52 above the figures of two years ago.

A. H. Anderson, president of the First National Bank of Finleyville, First National Bank of Castle Shannon, and the Castle Shannon Savings & Trust Company, and a stockholder in a number of prominent banks, has been appointed aide-de-camp, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, on the staff of Governor John K. Tenor.

NOT HURT BY POSTAL BANK

The establishment of the first postal savings bank in Pennsylvania, located at Dubois, has not affected the business of the national and private banks of that town, so B. M. Marlin, secretary and treasurer of a Dubois bank, wrote to the 200 bankers forming Group Two of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association, at their sixteenth annual meeting.

The postal savings bank bill was bitterly fought by bankers of Pennsylvania, who believed that their deposits would be lessened by the government's step into the financial field.

"At the opening of the window," declared the Dubois banker in referring to the first day of the bank at the postoffice there, January 3d last, "only two depositors were on hand to avail themselves of the privilege. The first day's total receipts amounted to $204.20, and the total for the first week a little over $400. Since that time the postmaster has been instructed by the department to give out no more information regarding the number of depositors and the amount deposited.

"No effect whatever has been discernible in the volume of business of the three banks in Dubois, and no withdrawals have been made from any of the banks for transfer to the postal bank."

Philadelphia

Philadelphia Trust, Safe Deposit and Insurance Company earned 38 per cent last year.

At the annual banquet of Philadelphia bankers, Charles J. Rhoads of Girard Trust Company made an appeal for greater union of banking forces of Philadelphia. He said:

"I hope the time is not far distant when the Philadelphia Clearing House, which technically represents only the national banks, will broaden its field to include all the banking institutions of the city, so that we may be a united body not only in times of panic, but in times of prosperity."

The forty-fifth annual meeting of the stockholders of the Fidelity Trust Company was held Tuesday, at which the following named gentlemen were selected directors: Clement A. Griscom, George Philler, Rudolph Ellis, Thomas Dolan, Henry W. Biddle, William P. Gest, Edward Walter Clark, John S. Jenks, Jr., Charlemagne Tower, Edward T. Stotesbury and Morris R. Bockius.

The report of the president showed a profitable year in all branches of the business, one million dollars being added to the surplus fund.

After the usual distribution to the employees of $21,155 as Christmas gratuity, the earnings for the year show 68.32 per cent on its capital.

County bankers who have no use for funds at home are piling their money into the city, and are asking their correspondents to make call loans for them as low as 3½ per cent.

Directors of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway have decided to increase the capital stock of the company by $25,000,000. None of the stock will go to the public.

Unique in its conception is the plan of the Third National Bank to erect a new bank building in place of its present structure without vacating the premises or stopping business. Workmen are busy building an interior shell about the banking room 5 feet inside of the walls of the building, and when the framework is roofed the outer building will be torn down and a new modern bank building erected.

HIT UNLISTED STOCKS

The board of directors of the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange surprised the membership when it announced that after April 1st sales and quotations of unlisted securities would not be posted on the exchange, practically abolishing the unlisted department. The object is to bring the companies whose shares are traded on the unlisted side into the regular division, where trading is under the direct supervision of the exchange authorities. Listed companies make regular reports to the exchange, while the concerns occupying the outside market are under no such obligation. Many important corporations are represented on the unlisted side, and if all of these, or even a majority, were to come into the listed fold, the exchange would have good cause for self-congratulation.

Brooke, formerly president of the Fidelity National Bank of Spokane, has become chairman of the board of directors of the institution, which was acquired recently by Thomas H. Brewer, formerly vice-president of the Exchange National Bank, and his associates. The latter was elected to the presidency at the annual meeting, the vice-president being Orris Dorman. A. W. Lindsay was re-elected cashier with D. D. Brooke and E. R. Anderson as assistant cashiers. The directors are Messrs. Brooke, Brewer and Dorman, D. H. Dwight, M. A. Phelps, William Kroll and William H. Stanley.

Looks for Prosperous Year

R. Lewis Rutter, secretary and general manager of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company, who has just returned from an extended visit in New York, Chicago and the Middle West, said in an interview that money is easier than it has been in years, and that heavy investors and the public generally are confident that the present year will be one of much activity. He added:

"There are many factors throughout the country given cognizance in the East which indicate that we are on the eve of a prosperous era. The fact that the Harriman system will spend $75,000,000 in construction and improvements affirms it. Another significant indication is the double-tracking of the lines from the Missouri river to the Pacific coast."

New Bank Examiner

Dr. F. H. Luce, of Seattle who is now the sole national bank examiner for Washington and Montana, expects to have a colleague nominated shortly, Cashier McLean of the First National Bank of Davenport having been recommended for the office by both United States Senators Jones and Piles. In reference to Eugene T. Wilson's resignation as examiner Dr. Luce said while in Spokane that the office of the vice-presidency of the National Bank of Commerce of Tacoma had come to him entirely without solicitation, and was so advantageous that he could not afford to refuse it.

Railroad Building

Robert E. Strahorn of Spokane, vice-president of the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company, announces that contracts for 103 miles of roadbed between Spokane and Ayer, Wash., will be awarded soon. The work involves the expenditure of many millions of dollars, some of it being figured at the rate of $175,000 a mile. Another feature is the construction of the highest railroad bridge in the United States, the bridge, to be erected near Ayer on the Snake river, will be more than a half mile in length. It is given out that construction work will begin at once, thus giving employment to several thousand men.

Bond Issue is Sold Out

M. B. Connelly, vice-president of the Washington Trust Company of Spokane, announces that the $50,000 bond issue of Mitchem Brothers for their new packing plant here has been sold, the majority going to local investors. The bonds run for five years at 7 per cent. The Washington Trust Company was the trustee for the issue. The Mitchem plant, which will be ready for operation in 30 days, represents an investment of $250,000.

Building Great Station

Two million dollars will be expended by the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railway company in building its line into Spokane and $1,000,000 is to be expended jointly with the North Coast, now part of the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company, in the construction of a union station in this city. A. G. Holt, terminal engineer of the Milwaukee, who made the foregoing announcement, said that everything is in readiness to award contracts and go ahead with the work as soon as the grade question is settled.

Herme F. Hahnen, chief clerk at the Iowa National, Des Moines, is critically ill at a Des Moines hospital following an operation for appendicitis. At this writing it is doubtful whether he survives.

Money, Banking and Finance from Chicago Viewpoint

Bankers say there is no chance just yet for advancing discount rates. The money market is rather unsatisfactory although the business of the country is healthy.

There is too much idle money to make banking profitable for the time being. "There is no profit in commercial banking at 4 per cent," declares President David R. Forgan, of National City Bank, and all agree with this statement.

While everybody is optimistic, trade has not reached that stage where it requires a great deal of borrowed capital. That's all that ails the money market. The lower rates in London affect American banks to some extent. They cannot lend anything there and with Europe eager to take our 4 per cent bonds and to loan money to our railroads it looks as if it would take several weeks to bring about any material change in the financial situation here.

European cities have a plethora of capital, just as American cities have. This cheap money all over the universe is likely to help the bond market. While the present low rates continue in the old countries a good 4 per cent American bond has an attractive appearance and undoubtedly there will be heavy marketing of our securities in Europe from this time on until a lot of idle money is out of the way.

Gold Supply Breaks Market

John J. Arnold, manager of First National's foreign exchange department, states that the Bank of England's reserves have been built up enormously this winter, that institution taking practically all the gold going to the English metropolis. Private discount rates were lowered to 3 and 3 1-8 per cent as a result of the Bank of England's rapid accumulation of funds. When private rates were cut the bank had to follow. Its last quotation is 3 1/2 per cent.

While this movement has been rapid there is nothing abnormal in present quotations. The private discount rate in London at this writing is 3 and 3 1/8. A year ago it was down to 2 3-16; in 1909, 2 3-8; in 1908, 3 5-8; in 1907, 4 7-8. Money has remained easy in Chicago and New York partly as a result of the European slump. It is true that the general commercial demand is disappointing and must improve before financial affairs begin to approach last year's status. All bankers agree that Mr. Hill and other railroad men who are seeking capital have their golden opportunity to-day.

Collections Help Merchants

The fact that merchants are borrowing less extensively than at this time last year does not prove that their business is bad. Their collections were slow in the fall and early part of the winter. Bills in the interior were paid late. The general inflow of cash from the country is a month later than usual. Therefore the immediate necessities of jobbers and manufacturers are taken care of largely through collections. In Chicago, as elsewhere, owners of bonds find that they are greatly favored by financial conditions. Money is in good supply at most centers, rates are easy, and some banks report that deposits are of record proportions. Railway traffic is irregular, though many of the roads are doing well. However, idle cars are numerous and greatly in excess of last year. The movement of coal is comparatively light, for which warm weather is responsible, and the paucity of business in that line deprives the railways of much bulk tonnage. There is no complaint about the movement of dry goods and shoes. The iron and steel business has shown steady improvement week after week since the first of the year.

Ground for Optimism

Taken all in all there are good grounds for optimism. Our exports exceeded our imports in January by above $66,000,000, as against an excess of $10,000,000 a year ago. The total exports were the third largest in any January, and imports revealed a gratifying continuation of the declining movement. It is difficult now to believe that at the end of August last there had accrued on our foreign trade for the eight months of the calendar year an actual excess of nearly $1,000,000 in importations. Since August we have so far reversed this unfavorable tendency as to have built up an excess of exports of above $368,000,000, a figure only once approximated in this period, and then under the stimulation of the 1907 panic. Cotton has admittedly played an exaggerated part in this showing, but we may take comfort in the fact that our imports reflect more careful buying on the part of the American people and that our exports of manufactured goods are increasing in a most satisfactory manner.

Hill's Plans are Secret

Mr. Hill's plans are still a mystery. It may be that he is stubbornly awaiting the Interstate Commerce decisions. Although his lines have not yet come into the market with negotiations looking to the raising of new capital, it is evident that they cannot continue much longer with their policy of extending and improving unless some kind of financing is arranged.

At the close of the last fiscal year Northern Pacific carried on its balance sheet actual current assets of $16,472,444 or with the addition of accrued interest and dividends not yet due on June 30th, of $17,871,783. Against this there were net current liabilities of $11,079,631 and accrued interest, taxes, etc., of $6,619,897 more, making total current liabilities of $17,699,528. This left practically no excess of working capital.

The Great Northern had current assets amounting to $14,877,663 and liabilities of $10,162,373, with another $1,610,893 of accrued charges not due. This left the Great Northern with a working balance of $3,104,398.

Large Sums Tied Up

Both lines raised money by the issuance of new capital stock in 1907. The Northern Pacific raised $93,000,000 in this way, the last instalment of which was not paid in until January 1, 1909. The Great Northern received the last of $60,000,000 in April, 1908. Most of this money has been expended, partly on improvements to the lines issuing the stock, but mostly in the form of advances to subsidiary companies. As shown by the balance sheet, little of the $153,000,000 remains unappropriated.

The most important line built with the advances by Great Northern and Northern Pacific was the Spokane, Portland & Seattle. This is 420 miles long and was practically completed in the summer of 1909. Up to June 30, 1909, the Northern Pacific had advanced $38,000,000, for the building of the new subsidiary. The Great Northern seems to have advanced less, its total claim from subsidiaries at that time being under $27,000,000, but it is understood to have paid half the cost of the North Bank.

At the end of fiscal year 1910, nearly eight months ago, there was due the Northern Pacific from advances to new companies $52,128,000, and to the Great Northern, $31,374,000, a total of about $83,500,000. This money is tied up for the present.

Des Moines, February 23.—Iowa's tax ferret law is doomed. The senate, after making slight amendments to the bill repealing the statute as it had passed the house adopted the measure by a vote of 34 to 11. The house had already passed the bill by an overwhelming vote, and there seems little choice that Governor Carroll will veto it. No legislation of the present session will be as pleasing to bankers generally, in all probability, as this. It is to the consistent fight for the repeal of the law made by bankers that much credit is due. While the house passed the repeal with very little difficulty, the senate debated the proposition for almost three entire sessions. Various amendments were proposed and adopted. But when the bill was put up for final passage, the senate retraced its steps and knocked out most of the amendments that had been saddled onto the bill the preceding day. As is passed the senate and house, the bill provides that tax ferrets shall not do business in Iowa. County supervisors, city councils, cities under the commission form of government—all are prohibited from employing tax ferrets under severe penalties. The bankers had an especial grudge at the tax ferret bill because by the terms of a recent court decision these fellows were empowered to go into a bank and inspect the books for the purpose of finding how much money was placed in the institution to the credit of the bank patrons.

Iowa Group Meetings

Several Iowa groups have selected dates for their annual meetings. February 22d saw three of them. Group Seven met at Williamsburg. Group Ten at Ottumwa and Group Eleven at Burlington. Other dates which have been announced are as follows: Group Five at Council Bluffs, April 26th; Group Nine at Osceola, May 2d; Group Four at Elkader, May 10th; Group Three at Charles City, May 6th. Several Des Moines bankers are planning to attend most of these meetings but the holding of three of them on Washington's birthday proved a difficult proposition for representatives of the local institutions.

Jacobs' Bill to Pass

The bill of Representative Jacobs which provides for the assessment of shares of bank stock against the shareholders, thus placing state, savings and national banks on the same footing, stands a good chance of passage by the Iowa legislature. The bill has been recommended for passage by the house committee. The measure was printed in full in THE CHICAGO BANKER of January 28th. The stock is to be assessed in the county in which the bank is located. Other new bills now pending which are of especial interest to bankers include Senator Jewell's bill providing for a tax on mortgages; Bakkeman's bill amending the law relative to personal incomes and providing that debtors shall be exempt to the extent of 90 per cent; Moore's bill providing for the deposit of the state funds in various banks through Iowa.

Uncle George is Popular

Newspaper paragraphers have been having some fun with Representative George W. Koontz of Iowa City, a well known banker. Mr. Koontz wears the real old fashioned boots. This is one of his hobbies. The other hobby is the fish and game question. He is a member of the fish and game committee, and is the author of much of the legislation pertaining to this subject on the Iowa statute books. For years "Uncle George" has represented Johnson county, and there seems no prospect but that he will continue to fight the battles for the university as long as he chooses.

Editor Becomes a Banker

R. M. Estes, formerly editor of the Sidney Herald at Sidney, Iowa, and half owner of the plant has gone into the banking business in Oklahoma, and has been made president of the Planters & Merchants Bank at Oklahoma City. According to reports that reach Iowa, Mr. Estes has made a phenomenal success at banking since he went to Oklahoma six years ago, and he is now actively interested in a number of small banks in that state.

Gives Banquet Address

E. A. Slininger, cashier of the People's Savings read the paper at the monthly meeting of the Des Moines Bankers club at the Savery hotel last week. "Analysis of Bank Accounts" was the subject of Mr. Slininger's paper which was well received and much enjoyed. The banquet was well attended.

Old Time Coins

Evidences that old time coins are still in circulation came to the front at the court house where County Treasurer George L. Dobson recently received a quantity of gold pieces, some of which were dated back in 1849. The coins did not come from collectors, but were received in the course of receipts on taxes.

General Iowa News

The Davenport Clearing House Association has elected the following officers: J. H. Hass, president; Edward Kauffman, vice-president; William Heuer, manager.

One of the few woman cashiers in Iowa is reported from Garden Grove where the First National has chosen Laura Aten to handle its money for the coming year.

Col. T. L. Ashford who was cashier of the Boone National for some time and resigned recently has purchased A. J. Barkley's stock in the Boone County Bank. He has taken possession of the stock and has been made president of the institution.

The Maloy Savings is a new institution at Maloy. J. Shay is president, N. Rich is vice-president, and J. W. Scholes is cashier.

The German Bank at Luverne is taking pride in the business done by that institution during the past year, which amounted to more than $2,500,000.

H. P. Mundt has been made president of the German Savings at Manning. He succeeds Gustav Jans who retired some weeks ago.

John Blair, vice-president of the Des Moines National has been in Northern Iowa inspecting a farm which he owns there. He has been having the land tiled and drained, and has expended some $10,000 in improvements of this character.

Among out of the city bankers in Des Moines recently were Cashier C. P. McDonald of the City Savings and Cashier O. M. Thatcher of the Luther Savings, both of Luther; Cashier L. H. Busselle of the Chariton Bank; Cashier A. J. Fawcett of the People's State, Maxwell; Nathan Schee, interested in a bank at Cannon City, Texas.

Poindexter Warns Bankers

the special interests must fail.

Duty of the banker pointed out before six hundred banqueters

The insurgent senator elect from Washington points out to Philadelphia bankers where he thinks all the laws passed for Philadelphia, February 20.—The meeting of Group One, Pennsylvania, at the Bellevue-Stratford brought out an attendance of 600 at the banquet. There were three speakers of note, and a lusty pointer was furnished to state secretaries and group officials in other states. Bankers, capitalists, and nested interests generally throughout the entire United States heard a message pregnant with sound reason, deep in its political logic and withal a warning flash of the danger signal, when Senator-elect Miles Poindexter, of Washington, "insurgent out of the West," addressed the annual banquet of the Bankers of Philadelphia.

Senator-elect Poindexter has not yet taken his seat in the upper house of congress, but he has spent years as a representative, and from the straight-from-the-shoulder talk he gave he promises to make a valuable addition to the senate.

The speeches were not confined entirely to business, however, for, in addition to the western senator, the list of speakers included George Wharton Pepper, of this city, and John Kendrick Bangs, a noted author and humorist.

It was Senator Poindexter who opened the speechmaking, with his serious and able analysis of the subjects embodied in his toast, "The Banker and the Law," and to Mr. Bangs was left the task of bringing the laughing, almost hilarious, close to an evening that ranks among the most important of all Philadelphia's many banquetting occasions.

It is doubtful if a better selection could have been hit upon for middle man in the list of speakers, following directly after Senator Poindexter, than Attorney George Wharton Pepper, of this city, keen student and noted author on legal subjects, corporation lawyer of more than local repute and the man who made the notorious Bay State Gas Company disgorge its unearned gains.

"You, as representing the financial interests of a large section of this country, and in your fraternity the entire country, are more interested than any other class in the proper application of 'special privilege to none and equal rights to all,'" declared the Washington senator-elect, speaking upon the dangers of a lack of vigilance at this most critical time in the nation's history.

"If corrupt political machines are to be permitted to govern this country; if votes that are not cast are counted, or votes not counted that have been cast, or if the decent citizenship of our large cities is not to be permitted to vote at all; if hundreds of votes are to be cast from vacant houses, then there is danger—I say there is grave danger—that the law upon which we depend for the protection of property will be destroyed.

"Even in this state the recent election showed a remarkable evidence of an uprising of the people. The laws are not to be defied, and the public will not complacently view any efforts to set aside their constitution and inherent American rights."

Senator Poindexter's speech follows:

"As the especial representatives of these vested interests, bankers are concerned in preserving and continuing this system of peace, order and disciplined liberty. It was not always thus. This generation has enjoyed the fruits of the bitter struggles of those who have gone before. There have been frequent intervals of rapine and violence, when property was but a ribald jest, and the most sacred personal rights were but a chronic song.

"Whether we shall continue to enjoy and transmit to our children the peaceable enjoyment of property, and the blessings of liberty under the law depend entirely upon the manner in which we deal with the problems of society in our generation.

"Law is but the servant and teacher of the people, as they in turn are but the creatures of that higher law—the harmony of the universe, which balances the planets in space and prevents the wreck of matter and the crash of worlds. The laws of property and of person

JURIST SUCCEEDS IN BANK

J. D. Madding, cashier of First National Bank of Bridgeport, Ill., has been a merchant and a jurist. He has been successful in three vocations which demand ability and character. He was Master in Chancery of Lawrence county for six years, and later county and probate judge for eight years. Through his efforts the First National Bank was organized. No man in the county has a wider acquaintance. His business and legal experience has been of great value to the bank and its depositors.

When the Bridgeport oil fields were being opened in the summer of 1906, a demand for better banking facilities for that vicinity was foreseen. Through the efforts of Mr. Madding, stock was subscribed, and on September 3, 1906, the First National Bank of Bridgeport was organized, with a capital stock of $25,000. F. J. Seed was made president and J. D. Madding cashier of the institution. Since the organization the stock has been increased to $50,000.

J. D. MADDING
Cashier First National Bank, Bridgeport, Ill.

One of the bank's customers recently deposited a check for $193,000. We mention this to let the public know that no one need hesitate to take their business to the Bridgeport First National.

are made by man, and whether they shall continue to prevail depends entirely upon the confidence and respect which the people have in the justice, equality and the uniformity with which they are administered.

"If you the principal beneficiaries of the law, are indifferent to preserving its integrity you should not be surprised if an outraged public sentiment should threaten violence and disorder. We have an order-loving and law-abiding population, but they are at the same time a proud and spirited people; and do not suppose they would long tolerate injustice or oppression, however much it might be under the forms of law.

"If it should so come about that through your or my indifference the legislatures which make the laws should be chosen corruptly, instead of by a fair and honest expression of public opinion; if a corrupt political machine should sell the statutes under which we are to live; if the votes, which we cast, are not counted; if votes which never were cast are counted; if ignorant and drunken ruffians are allowed to repeat their votes, while decent citizens are not allowed to vote at all; if hundreds of votes are registered from vacant buildings and graveyards, with what reason can we complain if some day the people should grow restive under laws made by councils or legislatures chosen in this way.

"If the people's money is squandered in public building frauds, and public privileges and franchises are given away to private persons; if the public highways are operative so as to give special advantages or rebates to some shippers over others; if Wall Street is truly described as the greatest watering place in America; if taxes by way of customs duties are levied on the people, not for the public benefit, but for private aggrandizement, there is danger that the confidence and respect of the people for that law upon which we depend for the protection of property will be destroyed, and the experience of mankind demonstrates that there is no limit to the evil passions which may be engendered in this way.

"The bankers of the country are truly the 'men who raise the wind.' Instead of priding yourselves in your lack of interest and participation in the country's politics, you should be doing your share to handle the burden which is every citizen's. I hope to see the day come when the bankers of every state will take a more active part in the making and administration of our laws."

Mr. Pepper's address was a consideration of the problem of representative government, which has been regarded by many publicists as a failure in this country. "It is declared by many that our representatives in national and state government have proved unworthy of the people's confidence and unequal to their task," said he.

Notwithstanding a train of evils, which he cited, Mr. Pepper would not weaken representative government by putting the responsibility on the people through the initiative and referendum. Using the corporations as illustrations, he said that the tendency in commercial life is toward more power and responsibility for the directorates, the representative government in the corporations. He continued:

"The condition under which a representative will be at his best is the condition in which a great deal of power is delegated to him, and he is held strictly accountable for the use of his power. My belief is that our state legislature and our state executives have not had too much power intrusted to them, but too little.

"I am opposed to any measure which diminishes their power. I do not believe in popular initiative. I think our representatives should understand that we look to them for the initiation of wise policies and needed reforms. I am in favor of giving to the executive the right to initiate legislation, but I should hold his administration responsible for the success or failure of it, as is done under the English system.

"In so far as the referendum shifts responsibility from the representatives to the people, I am opposed to it. I believe in the referendum only in so far as it affords an opportunity to call representatives to account.

"I believe in the principles of the recall, provided, however, you make the executive or other officer who is subject to recall secure in his tenure for a sufficient length of time to give his policies a fair chance to commend themselves to the people.

"I should regret to see our legislators relieved of the responsibility of electing United States senators. I think the presence of that responsibility is going to be one of the most powerful agencies in improving the character of our state legislative assemblies. In the case of the business corporation, I deplore the voting trust except as a temporary device for the rehabilitation of a corporation that has got into difficulty.

"I think that any arrangement will in the long run be found vicious which destroys the effectiveness of the stockholders' meeting as a check on the action of the directors. I think that to organize successive holding companies, which make it possible for the same body of people to take radical action in one capacity and to give final approval to their own action in another capacity is to encourage lawlessness and graft."

The idea of trusteeship, he said, underlies the representative relation. This idea the community must conserve at all hazards. This principle is particularly important to officers of banks and trust companies. "You should make common cause," he said, "with the legislator, the executive, the judge, the director, the trustee, the guardian, and you should insist, in season and out of season, that his conduct shall not be such as to bring the representative principle into reproach."

John Kendrick Bangs was characteristic, which is perhaps the highest compliment that could be paid him. In happy vein he urged the bankers with all his eloquence to establish immediately a clearing house, where all poor authors might deposit rejected works and draw out real money against such questionable deposits.

"I would suggest that between literature and the banking interests at least there should be something in the nature of reciprocity. You give me all that you have, and I will give you all that I have, freely and without reserve. I have suggested a similar idea to a gentleman who is reputed to have some money left. He is afraid of dying poor. It was Mr. Carnegie."

DEERINGS BUY LAND

The Deerings, who recently signalized their entrance into the real estate investment field by the purchase of the Home Insurance Co. building at La Salle and Adams streets, are said to have closed two big purchases of California and Louisiana lands.

The California tract, which is said to comprise 24,000 acres, was acquired from D. W. Ross, formerly in charge of the Minidoka project of the United States reclamation service, and now is in charge of a big irrigation project in the Sacramento valley, and Thomas H.

Means, who was soil expert for the Department of Agriculture, and later in charge of the Truckee-Carson project of the United States reclamation service. W. W. Gurley is said to have attended to the legal details of the transaction, and the consideration is said to have approximated $1,000,000.

The Louisiana land deal is said to cover 150,000 acres of alluvial land near Lake Charles. The land is rich swamp muck, which it is proposed to reclaim after which it will command, it is said, in the neighborhood of $100 an acre.

CASHIER IS MURDERED

Charles City, Ia., February 23.—The body of J. G. Cutler, cashier of the State Bank of Nora Springs, was found in the waiting room of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul station here.

Although there was no sign of a struggle in the room, there was a bruise on the head, sufficient, it is said, to cause death. It is believed he was murdered. All his money and valuables had been taken.

Mr. Cutler was called here on official business which was completed and he went to the depot intending to take the 6:15 passenger for Nora Springs. He was interested in both the First State and First National banks of Nora Springs.

POPULAR ILLINOIS BANK

First National Bank of Christopher, Ill., has come to the front rapidly and enjoys the reputation of being a sound, well-managed institution. It was opened as First National Bank August 27, 1906, successor to Bank of Christopher and in same building. Nelson Browning has been president continuously since the organization. H. M. Rea is vice-president, and Geo. W. Ward cashier. Directors for 1911: Nelson Browning, H. M. Rea, F. O. Harrison, Thos. Horn, W. T. Silkwood, S. A. Harrison, D. M. Parkhill, R. D. Smith and W. H. Thomas, Sr.

The town of Christopher is in the heart of the coal mining industry, where two mines are located with 2,000 tons daily capacity each, employing about five hundred men each, and another mine of 3,000 tons capacity is being sunk near the city. In that active community the First National is both useful and popular.

At the last call of the comptroller, January 7, 1911, its deposits were $102,398. Report of earnings and dividends December 31, 1910, showed net profits since organization to be $15,309, of which $6,000 has been placed to surplus, $7,646.25 has been paid in dividends and $1,663 remains to undivided profit account.

Wheat Weak

Sentiment in the grain trade has been mostly on the selling side, for several days. Wheat has been weak around 90 and 91 cents for May and 88 to 88½ for July.

The markets have been governed by weather conditions. The rain of last week was followed by snow and moderate weather over the wheat belt. Experts declare that nothing could have been more timely or more beneficial to the southwestern portion of the winter crop than the conditions appearing on the map from the middle of last week until trading was resumed Monday.

Houses with southwestern connections had large volume of selling orders in July and September wheat. These months had a break to new low figures regardless of the steadiness in May contracts at the time.

Corn has been easy around 50 cents. Supplies are in excess of demand.

CHICAGO REALTY DEALS

William McCoy has paid $215,000 for the site of a projected $500,000 hotel at the corner of Van Buren Street and Fifth Avenue, or more than $34 a square foot, a record high price for Van Buren Street frontage.

The State Mutual Life Assurance Company has sold to President Stroebel of the Stroebel Street Construction Company, 23,000 square feet at the corner of Canal and Monroe streets for $235,000, as an investment.

Texans Hopeful

Recent rains over all parts of Southwest Texas have given a most hopeful inspiration to business in all lines. The soil has been put in splendid condition for farming and reservoirs used for irrigation purposes have been filled, insuring that those who draw upon these supplies will have ample moisture to make splendid crops.

In addition to the impetus given to farming operations the rains emphasized the necessity for better roads and commissioners in a number of counties have large appropriations for highway building under consideration. The indications at present are that Texas will build more miles of serviceable roads this year than in any like period of the past. The rapid growth of pasturage since the recent rainfall indicates that Texas herdsmen will get large returns for their cattle and sheep which will be ready for market in the early spring.

Fear expressed by some people, owing to the summer-like weather which has prevailed for the past six weeks, that vegetation will be so far advanced a late frost might destroy it is now allayed and the assurance of a great crop season has given a most hopeful turn to conditions in the southwestern part of the state. It is believed the cotton area will be almost double that of last year.

The Greater Des Moines committee, after considering the Williamsport plan of trust company for the purpose of inducing factories to locate in Des Moines, named a committee to investigate and report later. This committee consists of B. F. Kauffman, F. C. Hubbell and F. T. Parritt.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

is a section of the A. B. A. and if Paton is to be cajoled we suggest making him and his valuable paper a section.

BOONE COUNTY BANK, mentioned elsewhere, has added to its list of partners B. P. Holst, F. H. and Mary E. Johnson and H. W. Borg. It is said to be the intention to convert into a state bank within the next thirty days, with full paid capital. There is said to be quite a movement on in Iowa toward incorporation of partnership banks.

"TOURIST, Hotel and Travel News," has a full page cover view of "Scene in La Salle Street, Chicago," showing Trinity church in the distance, the A. B. A. headquarters balcony at the right and J. P. Morgan & Co., in the foreground. If taken from any point in LaSalle Street it must have been a very long focus lens.

PEOPLE'S SAVINGS BANK, Cedar Rapids, reports deposits of $812,124, or nearly double what they were four years ago. In their folder Cashier Burianek has this announcement:

"SPECIAL: We believe in reaching for business, and are reaching for yours; can't we induce you to make the start by giving us at least part of it?"

BOSTON CLEARING HOUSE reports for 1910 show a loss in exchanges over 1909 of $140,000,000; a loss in balances of $50,000,000, and a growth in collections of $14,000,000 for the same period. In fact the clearings were less for 1910 than they were in 1906, and so were the balances and collections. Too much dignity, reserve and exclusiveness, perhaps, to suit the times. The Boston banker isn't either an advertiser nor a mixer to any noticeable extent.

THE OKLAHOMA BANKER has been taken over from the printing company which formerly issued it, by the state association. An attempt will be made to make it self supporting by soliciting advertising. As a house organ it probably will give useful service. W. B. Harrison, secretary, will be the editor.

BANK officers of Richmond, Va., say that the new schedule by which all banks which are members of the Clearing House Association close at 2 P. M., daily except Saturday, has proved far more satisfactory than has been anticipated, especially in view of the fact that not a single complaint has been heard from the public. Business people have found the earlier closing plan beneficial because all of the officers and clerks of every bank are on duty continuously until 2 o'clock. Heretofore, they would go out for lunch at irregular hours, and it was often difficult for the visitor to find the department head with whom he desired to transact business. Now, a man does not have to telephone to a bank to see if one officer or another is in his office.

THE Richmond idea is likely to prove contagious and there seems to be good reasons in abundance in Richmond at least, for its adoption. What do you think about it? Golf?

ABOUT those Kansas City conventions. Already they have it that the "wets" will stop in K. C., Missouri, and the "drys" in K. C., Kansas. And the "joint" meeting will be in wet territory. Really the two big conventions meeting on the same date will give the gathering national importance.

NOW what do you think of that graceless scamp who "put out" Oliver C. Fuller at Palm Beach? The treasurer of the big golf association is entitled to more consideration (handicap) and something must be done to fix this up.

MINNESOTA BANKERS ASSOCIATION has put Bemidji on the map. Previous to the decision of the executive council to hold this year's convention at that resort, almost any of the big city bankers would have given it as his best guess that Bemidji was a foreign city or a foreign country. Lake Bemidji is one of the chain of small lakes of which Lake Itasca is one, the latter being famous as the true source of the Mississippi river. Be it known that Bemidjians now claim that honor for their own lake.

WHEN the executive council met at St. Paul it was planned to run one or two special trains from Minneapolis and St. Paul, picking up south Minnesota bankers and those who might gather at the centers and take them to Bemidji. The itinerary as partially planned includes a side trip to International Falls, Canada, where wonderful developments are going on. At least a half a day will be spent at this point.

A. G. WEDGE, JR., vice-president of the First National at Bemidji, and W. L. Brooks, cashier of the Northern National at the same place, are both members of the Minnesota executive council and were instrumental in having their "magic city" chosen as the place of the coming convention.

M. R. WEDGE is sending out a very attractive little booklet, fully illustrated, showing how the present town site of Bemidji was chosen in the fall of 1896. At that time there was not a human habitation in sight. Now they have granite bank buildings, public school buildings of the very first grade, and fine churches representing nearly all the leading denominations.

BEMIDJI is situated on the west shore of the beautiful lake of the same name. It is two hundred and seventy miles north from St. Paul, one hundred eighty miles west from Duluth. It is due east ninety miles from Crookston, and its boomers declare that it is to be the metropolis of the great northern country. Practically it is their endeavor to make it the central point, commercially and financially, of tributary territory—something in excess of forty thousand square miles.

DELEGATES to the coming convention are invited to bring along their fishing tackle since Lake Bemidji is one of the best fishing points known to the Northwest. It is surrounded by farming and timber lands which are rapidly being developed.

THERE will be no difficulty about transportation, for four great railroads intersect at this point. They are the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific, the Minnesota, Red Lake & Manitoba, and the Minnesota & International. It is the boast of the bankers there that they have twelve passenger trains daily stopping at that point. The population in less than fifteen years has grown to approximately six thousand persons. Mr. Brooks, mentioned in one of the above paragraphs, formerly was a resident of Englewood in this city and is doing all he can to induce leading Chicago bankers to attend the coming convention. Indications now are that he will be quite successful. CASHIER.

TWO VETERAN BANKERS

Washington Hadley, of Whittier, Cal., has been written up in various journals as the oldest bank president in the world. Mr. Hadley is 93 and has been president of a bank for 61 years.

Now comes John Gardiner, of Norwalk, O., and shows that he is 95 years old and has been president of a bank for 66 years. It is 78 years since he began clerking in a bank. He attends to business at his office six days in the week and takes a keen interest in public affairs. He is widely known and has a fine record.

Panama Bonds

Washington, February 20.—An issue of $30,000,000 to $50,000,000 of 3 per cent Panama bonds seems certain to be made as soon as congress passes the bill authorizing the secretary of the treasury to withhold the new securities from use as a basis for additional national bank notes.

In the event the present opposition to the legislation affecting the bonds should prevent its passage an issue of 3 per cent certificates of indebtedness having one year to run is probable. That is the treasury's tentative plan now.

In view of the sale of about $100,000,000 industrial improvement bonds during January and the prediction that about $500,000,000 more will find their way to market in the next few months, treasury officials agree that this is a propitious time for an issue of government securities.

Secretary MacVeagh wants to make the issue a popular one. Recent statistics gathered for him by Assistant Secretary Andrew show that more than four-fifths of the bonds of the United States are owned by the banks and that only 20,000 individuals of a population of 92,000,000 are registered as holders of government securities, while France with a population of 40,000,000, has more than 5,000,000 investors.

Treasury officials interpret the demand in some parts of the country for a system of bank deposit guaranty and the response to the establishment of the postal savings system as indicating a popular demand for government secured means of investment, such as would be presented by bonds available to the public.

INDIANA BANKING NEWS

The Rushville National Bank opened for business Thursday in its new building, at Main and Second streets, Rushville. The structure is built of Bedford stone, and cost, with the site, about $30,000. This bank, which was the first institution of the kind in Rush county, was organized in 1857 as a branch of the Indiana State Bank, with George Hibben as president and William G. McReynolds cashier. February 22, 1865, it was reorganized under its present name, with $100,000 capital. Its total resources now foot up a little more than $500,000. Its present officers are: President, Theodore Abercrombie; cashier, Albert L. Winship; assistant cashiers, Henry P. McGuire and Wilbur Stiers; bookkeeper, Miss Anna Bohannon.

With a capital stock of $25,000 and forty stockholders distributed throughout Jay county the Jay County Savings and Trust Company has been formed, and will in a short time open its doors for business in Portland. The directors are George H. Smith, Dr. James S. Culbert, Alpheus A. Adair, William Magill, John F. LaFollette, Charles E. Schwartz and Thomas W. Shimp.

An important change in Vincennes banking circles occurred last week when Henry J. Boeckman, who has served as vice-president of German National for a number of years, was elected a director as well as vice-president of the Second National Bank.

The new Farmers State Bank of Monticello has elected the following officers: B. B. Baker, president; Frank J. White, vice-president, and W. F. Brucker, cashier. The institution will open about April 1st with a capital of $25,000.

The most beautiful marble work ever seen at Wabash has been placed in the offices of Farmers and Merchants National.

J. D. Mather, of Middlebury, has bought a controlling interest in a bank at Weatherford, Okla.

The two banks at Hillsboro will consolidate, forming a state bank.

Banking Opinion

"General business has slackened up a little in the last few days," said Vice-President R. C. Keller of Colonial Trust and Savings Bank, the fore part of the week. "There is nothing surprising nor alarming about that, however. It is the result of the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision on the rate question. There is something of a problem to be solved in connection with railway earnings and all business people will have to take a conservative attitude until matters are adjusted.

"I am just as much of an optimist as ever. We are not going to have bad times. The country is in a sound condition, but the promise is that the volume of trade will fall below that of last year. Business has been dragging for a couple of months and will continue to do perhaps through March. Chicago is suffering less than some of the other centers, because our real estate activity exceeds that of any other city and keeps a lot of money in circulation.

"I hear of the cancellation of a few orders in the iron and steel lines. That is a direct result of the freight rate decision. It would be foolish to claim that the decision has not hurt the country for the time being, but I am confident the roads will soon adjust matters and go ahead with a reasonable construction program. Money is particularly cheap and the shrewd financiers at the head of the big lines are pretty sure to get what they can use advantageously while they have a good opportunity. Wholesale merchants and the smaller manufacturers are having a fairly satisfactory trade.

"We have some encouraging features to put against this temporary bad turn. For instance, collections have been quite good all winter, thus improving the position of merchants and others. Country banks are in far better shape than they were a year ago, and I venture to say that all financial houses will have a more comfortable time of it than they had in the last months of 1910, even allowing for a smaller volume of business and reduced profits.

"The real estate situation here is interesting and calls for the use of considerable capital. Money brings at least 5 per cent in that channel. The bond market also is helping to keep money moving. Bank deposits are the greatest ever known but I do not expect to see them remain at high-water mark beyond the month of March. People will see their way more clearly in a few weeks and we will have almost normal activity when the spring trade opens."

Wheat Declines

With a drop in the price of wheat to 88 cents for May and 86 for July the market appears to be approaching a condition which has not been seen for years. Demand both at home and abroad is disappointing to holders, or in other words supplies are above expectations and fully equal to the world's requirement.

Foreign countries are raising wheat on a larger scale than ever and it looks now as if Europe could squeeze through without a bushel of American grain if it were desirable to do so. Crop prospects are good in this country. The winter has been favorable and the 1911 crop may easily surpass that of 1910. Such facts as these are effective in depressing prices. Nothing is likely to boost the market now unless unexpected reports of damage should develop.

Corn is easy with moderate trading around 48 cents.

A. J. Williford

Cashier A. J. Williford of the Nokomis (Ill.) National was in Chicago on Wednesday to attend the meeting of the state automobile association in the interest of good roads. Mr. Williford is in the corn belt where the farmers are holding their corn for 40 cents, "but if they sold it now they couldn't deliver it on account of bad roads." He is very much in earnest in joining with the automobile forces for improved country roads.

Geo. M. Reynolds

President Reynolds of Continental-Commercial returned from New York Thursday. He had spent a week in Eastern business circles and was there when the freight rate decisions were issued.

"There is no serious alarm over the rate decisions," said Mr. Reynolds to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER. All business is going along smoothly.

"The first effect of the decisions is to check the aggressive demands of labor, which the roads were complaining of. In a sense that is an advantage to them. Then, again, when the commissioners showed that the roads have been doing well at present rates, notwithstanding increased expenses, they expressed a fact which is reassuring to investors. Therefore the decisions have not had a very harmful effect. There is a cheerful feeling in New York."

VISITOR FROM THE ORIENT

E. W. Frazar, M. E., representing the firm of Sale and Frazar, of Yokohama, was a visitor at First National Chicago, Thursday. Sale and Frazar are exporters of Japanese woods, particularly railway ties. They are represented in Chicago by Frank B. Stone.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

C. F. CHILDS & Co., the new bond and investment firm, is out with its initial investment bulletin. Mr. Childs is an expert in government bonds and, of course, they lead the list. Bankers in want of U. S. bonds, on loan or by purchase, will do well to consult Mr. Childs.

ON the bond outlook Mr. Child says: "The government bond secured circulation of national banks which is now outstanding, if secured by 2 % consols purchased at to-day's market of about 101 $\frac{3}{8}$, nets the institution 1 $\frac{1}{4}$ % profit over and above the revenue obtainable by loaning the net cost of the bonds at 5%. If this circulation is maintained until the bonds mature in 1930 when they are redeemable at par, this additional net profit will continue to accrue at the rate of about \$1,350 per annum on every \$100,000 of circulation loaned. Should this annual profit be applied against the cost of the bonds, they will stand on the bank's books at about 75 $\frac{1}{2}$ in 1930."

WM. H. KNIFFIN, JR., cashier of the Home Savings Bank of Brooklyn, New York, has been appointed secretary of the savings bank section of the American Bankers Association subject to the approval of the executive council at its May meeting in Nashville. The appointment is to take effect March first.

FRANCIS B. SEARS, of the National Shawmut Bank, Boston, was one of the speakers at the Vermont bankers convention at Brandon on Wednesday last.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the death of Henry W. Tunis, cashier of the National Newark Banking Co., Newark, N. J., on February 15th. Mr. Tunis was well known in the East and active in state association matters.

JOHN J. LARGE, vice-president of the First National, Sioux City, Iowa, is an ex-president of the Iowa Bankers Association. He continues to take an active interest in all bank organization matters.

MR. LARGE does not overlook anything in THE CHICAGO BANKER and when he likes a thing doesn't hesitate to say so. He writes: "I notice in this week's issue the comment you make on the banker and the banking association that fight all sorts of legislation proposed, but never offer anything in place of it. To my mind," continues Mr. Large, "that is the one great weakness in our dealing with legislation. We are supposed to be against any law which regulates our business in any manner, and when the legislature sees one of us coming they figure that we are simply in there to kick about some bill which has been proposed. Why not reverse the rule, as you suggest, and help construct things along the legislative line, and really use our ability and influence toward presenting laws which will be fair both to the people and to our institutions? We would be very much surprised, I think, to find that, as a rule, our efforts were appreciated and that our advice is considered worth something. I think we demonstrated very thoroughly in the fight against postal savings banks that a change in our methods might do some good."

CHEROKEE STATE BANK (no state, county or town mentioned on the folder) makes such a "plain statement," and such a fine showing that "More's the pity" they don't give the bank's location and name the officers. We believe that fully ninety per cent of the cost of such folders is wasted. Location and the names of the bank's sponsors should go on every piece of printing.

LOCKRIDGE SAVINGS BANK, Lockridge, Iowa, boldly announces that, "We are protected by burglar insurance against day or night robbery in the National Surety Company, New York, and our officers are heavily bonded."

PICTURES have not been run in this department but herewith is a view of William A. Tilden's newly purchased home at 48th and Woodlawn, the very heart of Chicago's best residence district. Just a little snap shot.

FROM Des Moines comes word that Iowa has been given another lesson upon the unreliability of private bankers in general in time of stress. They jump out of the state. The telegram reads:

E. J. PENFIELD, president of the Bank of Kelley, at Kelley, Iowa, has been arrested at Watertown, S. D. Penfield's bank closed Monday following a run which was occasioned by rumors that Penfield had left the state. Depositors alleged that the shortage is $52,000.

IOWA, Illinois and Ohio can end such matters by putting all forms of banking under state supervision and inspection. Why not?

IOWA should get wise to what has been done in Alabama in the line of a new banking law, and her secretary would not be compelled to send out so many notices like the following:

IT has been reported to this office that E. J. Penfield, President of the Bank of Kelley, Kelley, Iowa, a private institution, has absconded. He is wanted by the sheriff of Story county at Nevada, Iowa.

YOU see if this was an incorporated bank the man could not have taken the bank's assets with him. He even took with him the bills receivable and Secretary Hall says: "He has defrauded a number of members of the Iowa Bankers Association and the American Bankers Association. It is not known which way Penfield went, but probably will stop in some large city."

THE sound banker has nothing to fear from published reports of his condition and the state should tolerate no other form of banking but "sound," regulated, inspected and supervised banking.

"ARTIE" HOFFMAN, the famous Cub outfielder, has enjoyed the banking business, in Ohio, and may not re-enter baseball. He is emulating "Jake" Stahl, the popular cashier of the Washington Park National, Chicago, who "likes banking."

"Artie" is cautioned to go into incorporated banking, for in banking as in baseball, the leaguers have it all over the wild cats.

WE hear from Washington that the supreme court solved a most perplexing question with the wisdom of Solomon, but in such a way as to cause a smile to spread throughout the courtroom.

RECENTLY the court declared constitutional the bank deposit guaranty of Oklahoma. On Tuesday it took occasion to refer to that decision for the purpose of discussing means by which its operation would not be a burden upon bankers.

WITH all seriousness it declared that those bankers who found the tax imposed under the law a greivous burden had an avenue of relief open to them—they could go out of the banking business.

"RAILROADS AND THE PEOPLE," is the title of an able booklet by President E. P. Ripley of the Santa Fe. Originally the article appeared in Atlantic Monthly.

THE "United Realty Company," Chicago was closed up by the U. S. postoffice inspectors on Tuesday. They made their money by securing "deposits" to bind sales which were never made or authorized, using dummies for the purchaser. There are hundreds of such concerns. The postoffice should forbid the mails to newspapers which carry their ads.

N. P. GATLING, of Lynchburg, long time secretary of the Virginia association, has been made an assistant cashier of the Chatham and Phenix National, New York. This is the big merger bank under the presidency of Louis G. Kaufman.

EVERY one hoped to see Gatling go to the head of the secretaries' section next year. He now is vice-president of the section, but will follow the usual course, no doubt, of joining the list of associate members, including Chapman, Dinwiddie, Judson, Graettinger and other well known ex-secretaries.

American and Canadian Banking Reforms

Prepared for European publication by W. R.
Lawson, of London

PART II

A proof of how anxiously all the different requirements of the commercial community are provided for in Canada is afforded by the special authority given to lend on subjects which might otherwise be considered inadmissible. No English bank would be likely to lend on standing timber, but that is one of the special securities recognized in Canada. According to clause 84 "a bank may lend money upon the security of standing timber and the rights or licenses held by persons to cut or remove such timber." If there was the smallest percentage of truth in the charges and counter charges which political candidates hurled at each other during the recent elections, timber limit banking must have been very active in the preceding five or six years.

Other advances specially authorized are on ships in course of building, warehouse receipts, and bills of lading. Those are all carefully safeguarded, however, and large powers of self-protection are conferred on the bank. It has the same rights as an individual would have in similar circumstances as regards mortgage, hypothecation, privilege or lien. It may (clause 86) "acquire and hold any warehouse receipts or bill of lading as collateral security for the payment of any debt incurred in its favor, or as security for any liability incurred by it in favour of any person in course of its banking business." Moreover, any warehouse receipt or bill of lading so acquired shall vest in the bank from the date of acquisition.

That goes farther, I believe, than our own law on the point and gives the bank larger rights, thereby improving its security and giving facilities for an important class of banking business. It is under the warehouse receipts and bills of lading clause that the immense grain movement from the West is financed. Thanks to the strong legal position given them, they constitute one of the safest banking securities available. Nor is it agriculture alone, or lumber, that Canadian banks are expected to foster and promote. Every branch of trade and industry is commended to their care in the comprehensive law now under revision. And when we remember how completely all commercial interests are ignored in our own lawyer-made bank laws, such business-like provisions may well excite our envy.

The important clause (88) applies to wholesale shipping and mercantile advances. It says:—"The bank may lend money to any wholesale purchaser or shipper of, or dealer in, products of agriculture, the forest, quarry and mine, or the sea, lakes and rivers, or to any wholesale shipper of, or dealer in, live stock or dead stock and the products thereof, upon the security of such products or of such live stock or dead stock and the products thereof." The same clause adds that loans may be made "to any person engaged in business as a wholesale manufacturer of any goods, wares and merchandise, upon the security of such goods, wares and merchandise." One of the schedules of the act provides a special form of lien for such advances, and the act puts it on the same footing as a warehouse receipt.

In fact the warehouse receipt form of bond is extended to nearly all kinds of commercial subjects. It would be hard to say what a Canadian could not borrow upon from his banker. The lending powers enumerated in the bank act are exhaustive. It is in various ways a great advantage to the banks to have them so explicitly enumerated as they are in the act. In the first place it gives bankers a clear idea of their legal powers and rights. They need hardly ever be for a moment in doubt as to where the line should be drawn. In the second place, it has a splendid educative influence on the younger officials. It sets something definite before them to learn, and if they are not absolutely stupid or lazy, they can soon master it. But they are never done learning, for the act is always being amended and improved.

That was, in fact, the object of limiting bank charters to ten years. The founders of the Canadian banking system felt that the commercial and industrial conditions under which it had to be carried on were in such a state of evolution that frequent re-adaptations to their growing needs would be necessary. It was, therefore, wisely resolved to have them brought under reconsideration at reasonably short intervals, and ten years was fixed upon as a term convenient for all interests. It should be understood that these arrangements were made in friendly consultation between the government and the banks. The government on one side stated the safeguards and guarantees which it deemed essential to the public safety, while the banks on the other side objected to whatever they considered needless or unworkable restrictions. As the result of these amicable negotiations a compromise measure was framed and submitted to the Dominion Parliament, which generally passed it with very little alteration.

Three or four of these decennial revisions have taken place, each of them tending to strengthen the official supervision exercised over the banks. It might have been thought that after such a long course of improvement the Canadian banking law had almost reached perfection, but even yet weak points have been found in it, or at least what the government considers weak points. Every bank that fails or suspends is treated as an object lesson. Any peculiarity in the causes of failure, or in the methods of the insolvent bank, is carefully discussed, and, if possible, a remedy is provided for it.

Unfortunately there have been during the past decade some nasty casualties among the younger and less solid banks of the Dominion. When an official investigation took place it was found that there had been bad bookkeeping as well as bad banking. In one case the bulk of the bank's resources—capital as well as deposits—had been locked up in a silver mine in an unimproved part of the Cobalt district. This fatal mistake was only discovered by the shareholders of the bank after it had closed its doors. An important clause in the new bill aims at preventing a recurrence of that danger. It gives shareholders the right to call for a special audit of the books and securities by independent auditors beyond the control of the directors.

This is, perhaps, the most notable amendment on the list. If Canadian banking has any weak points, one of them undoubtedly is the lack of an independent audit. The national banks of the United States are all audited at irregular intervals by a treasury official. He is given a very free hand, and is armed with large powers of control. These go so far that he may suspend any bank which is not complying with the law. Moreover, they are frequently exercised. A great deal of bad banking escapes the notice of these official inspectors, but every now and then they make startling discoveries, as in the recent Carnegie Trust case.

Canada has no official corresponding to the national bank inspectors of the United States, and it does not want them. At the same time the need of independent inspection is admitted. It could hardly be denied in the face of incidents like that of the Farmers' Bank, which came to grief last December. This was a flagrant specimen of the mushroom banking against which the Canadians have to be on their guard. A liberal and elastic banking law like theirs cannot fail to be frequently abused, but they may justly claim that none of these abuses has been allowed to go far or to entail very heavy losses on their unfortunate victims.

The Farmers' Bank of Canada was little more than four years old when it closed its doors. It was organized in November, 1906, with a nominal capital of half-a-million dollars. The stock was peddled out to farmers and country cousins who were told that by becoming their own bankers they would free themselves from the yoke of the large banks, which were controlled by capitalists. The first issue of stock was given to them at $100, but for the second they had to pay $125, and they must have swallowed the bait pretty freely, for soon after it started the bank was able to raise its nominal capital to a million dollars.

Still more significant of the glamour which anything calling itself a people's bank can exercise on a certain class of the public was the fact that in less than four years this concern raked in fully a million and a half dollars of deposits, including $45,000 from the Provincial Government of Ontario. It spread its net far and wide for deposits, having during its short career opened thirty-one branches. Anyone who took the trouble to compare the amount of its deposits with the number of its branches must have seen that the deposits did not average $40,000 per branch, consequently most of the branches must have been losing money.

Nevertheless, this manifestly unsound concern lasted four years, and might have gone on much longer if the directors had not in a moment of madness prosecuted certain officials who had gone over to a rival bank. Damaging disclosures were made in course of the trial, in which the judge commented severely. The depositors took alarm and started a run, which very soon exhausted the slender balance in the till. The finale was short and decisive, proving that if the Canadian bank law cannot stop mushrooms springing up it makes short work of them as soon as they are found out. On December 19th the Farmers' Bank could not meet a small balance of $20,000 there was against it in the Toronto clearing house. The chairman of the clearing house notified the chairman of the Toronto district of the Canadian Bankers Association, who in turn notified the president of the association, by whom a curator was put in temporary charge of the failed bank. Thus the safety of the assets and the interests of the depositors were promptly protected when the smash came, but the public naturally ask if something could not have been done to pull up a notoriously suspected bank before it had done so much mischief. That is a practical question which will have to be dealt with in the new banking law.

The bill which Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in the absence of the finance minister, Mr. Fielding, introduced before the Christmas holidays contains provisions to enable shareholders to institute inquiries on their own account when they see fit. At a general meeting they can appoint auditors to make a special audit and report directly to themselves. At any time individual shareholders, representing not less than five per cent of the total capital of the bank, may claim a special audit. To these special auditors very large powers are given—almost too large it may be thought by disinterested observers. They are to have full access to the books of the bank, the right to inspect them and to compel the production of all necessary information. Their report, when made, has to be included in the next annual report of the directors, so that it cannot be burked or side tracked.

The special audit at request of the shareholders is evidently a compromise between the present system of internal inspection and the United States system of government inspection. The latter has not many advocates in Canada, and it would certainly be an extreme step to take all at once. In course of time some combination of internal and external inspection may suggest itself. Taken singly they have obvious defects, but it is difficult to see how they are to be combined without hampering the operations of the banks and weakening the responsibility of the directors. The latter point, however, is not being neglected. One of the most drastic clauses in the new bill relates to the publication of accounts. If passed, it will render every president, vice-president, director, general manager and principal official of a bank liable for the accuracy of all the published returns, reports or other documents to which his signature may be attached.

Subjoined is the full text of this formidable clause, which is certain to encounter no small amount of opposition in committee:

(a) Every president, vice-president, director, general manager or principal officer next in authority to the general manager in the management of the affairs of the bank, inspector, chief accountant or officer performing the duties of chief accountant, and every auditor of the bank who prepares, signs, approves or concurs in any account, statement, return, report or document respecting the affairs of the bank, without due inquiry, and unless he has first obtained information reasonably adequate and sufficient to establish and verily believes that the account, statement, return, report or document is in every respect true and correct, and that all the facts stated therein are truly stated; or who uses, with intent to deceive or mislead any person, any account, statement, return, report or document respecting the affairs of the bank; and

(b) Every manager or other officer of the bank who prepares, signs, approves or concurs in any account, statement, return, report or document respecting the affairs of the bank; or who uses, with intent to deceive or mislead any person, any such account, statement, return, report or document, shall, if the account, statement, return, report or document in fact contain any false or deceptive statement, be held to have wilfully made such false or deceptive statement, and shall be responsible for all damages sustained by any person in consequence thereof, even although the signature, approval or concurrence of such president, vice-president, director, general manager, principal officer, inspector, chief accountant or officer performing the duties of chief accountant, auditor, manager or other officer appears or is stated or intended to operate or express consent approval or concurrence merely according to the best of his knowledge and belief or other qualification to the like effect.

The above clause is admitted by its authors and supporters to be hard on directors, but it is justified on the ground of its being a mere adaptation of English law. In principle it may be, but the principle of the thing is not the difficulty. For that matter, directors and managers of joint-stock companies are answerable at common law for any injury they may cause by publishing false or misleading accounts. But the question what are false or misleading accounts must be left to the courts, which are generally indulgent in their interpretations. Here, however, a doubtful attempt is made to tie them down by strict definitions of what are to be considered false returns.

The director or official has, in the first place, to exercise due inquiry, which may mean anything or nothing. Next he has to obtain "information reasonably adequate and sufficient" to establish the accuracy of the document signed. What is reasonably adequate and sufficient will depend on the man himself. An expert accountant may find out in half an hour enough to warrant him in risking his signature, while a director of ordinary business experience might have to spend days on the job. Nevertheless, the plain business man might be a much more valuable director than the expert accountant. The truth is that no law can establish beforehand any general test of an honest signature to a banking document. In the long run, that has to be left to the courts, and each case has to be decided on its own special merits and circumstances.

It is the shareholders and customers of the banks who should be the real checks on bad management. They should not give their trust lightly, but having given it, they should not nibble it away by imposing such annual checks and safeguards. A man is either a good banker or he is not. If he is the right sort he is none the better for being shackled. If he is of the wrong sort he should be kept out of the banking business altogether. Let him go into politics or land booming.

VERMONT BANKERS CONVENTION

Brandon, February 27.—The third annual meeting of the Vermont State Bankers Association held here last Friday had an attendance of 100, the largest since the association was organized. The principal address was given by F. B. Sears, vice-president of the Shawmut National of Boston. His topic was furnished by the so-called Aldrich plan for revising the present national banking system and he explained in detail the several radical features proposed in this plan which has been submitted to the monetary commission.

A banquet was tendered the members present by the national banks of Brandon and all the features of this, including the menu and the music, were very attractive and did credit to the local hostelry.

The officers elected for 1911 are as follows: President, F. H. Farrington of Brandon; vice-president, A. G. Eaton of Montpelier; secretary, F. R. Dickerman of Bristol; treasurer, David L. Wells of Orwell. The members of the executive council holding over are C. P. Smith of Burlington, W. H. Roberts of Manchester, C. F. Lowe of Montpelier and the ex-presidents of the association, Messrs. Ward of Burlington and Chapman of Woodstock. To this number were added the following for a two-year term: H. F. Field of Rutland, W. A. Boynton of St. Johnsbury, C. S. Webster of Barton and M. W. Barney of Swanton.

The meeting was called to order at 2.30 o'clock at the Brandon Inn. Prayer was offered by the Rev. William V. Berg, pastor of the Congregational Church of this village. The address of welcome was given by ex-Gov. E. J. Ormsbee of Brandon, president of the Brandon National. Response was made by Charles P. Smith of Burlington, a member of the executive council. The president's annual address was delivered by Charles F. Chapman of Woodstock. Reports were made by Secretary Fred C. Spencer of Rutland and Treasurer David L. Wells of Orwell. A general discussion followed the address of Mr. Sears.

Among those present were Fuller C. Smith of St. Albans, national bank examiner and Frank C. Williams of Newport, state bank commissioner. W. F. Scott, cashier of the Brandon National acted as toastmaster at the banquet.

WILLIAM L. MOYER RESIGNS

William L. Moyer has resigned as vice-president of the La Salle Street National Bank of Chicago. He was elected to the post about six months ago. His intention is to form other banking connections.

The new trust company bill that has been hanging fire in the Oklahoma legislature has finally passed both houses. The chief change that the bill makes in existing laws is to allow the organization of trust companies in small towns and the capital stock scales according to the population of the town. The bill also divorces trust companies from the bank guaranty system.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS Gaining Business

By C. C. Burford

The passing of the first of March is an especially busy season for the country banker as well as for the banker in the larger cities of the state. Just as the first of May is the "moving-time" for the flat dwellers of Chicago, so is the first of March the season when farmers move and thereby cause more work for the banker in settling their affairs. Practically all farm leases expire on the first day of March and tenants who are changing farms and farm owners who "are moving to town" plan to make the change on that date. Many farmers who leave Illinois annually for other parts of the country such as the Northwest, the Southwest, Michigan, Ohio, or the Far West, move on or about March 1st. Mortgages are generally made to expire about this time of the year and new loans are arranged. Banks which serve as agents for insurance companies or those banks which loan money on real estate find the closing weeks of February and the opening days of March "a busy time."

The Trevett-Mattis Banking Company of Champaign who loan large sums of money on real estate annually, report the demand for money to be normal without much increase or decrease from last year. They report good business in the forty counties which they cover and state that perhaps fewer farmers are leaving the state this spring than in previous years owing to the drouth stories which have come to Illinois from various parts of the Northwest.

St. Louis Suburban Cities Grow

The growth of the "east side" cities across the river from St. Louis is well reflected in the statement of the East St. Louis and Suburban Railway for 1910. The gross earnings for the year were $1,770,588 and the net profits were $987,487. During 1909 the company suffered a loss from the previous year but during 1910 the loss of 1909 was recovered and a substantial gain besides was made. The company operates the East St. Louis and the Eads Bridge lines besides the street car lines in Alton, Granite City, Edwardsville and Belleville. An interurban line of interest is the projected line from Kankakee to Urbana. As there is already a trolley line in operation from Chicago to Kankakee the new line when completed will give through service from Chicago to St. Louis, connection being made at Urbana with the Illinois Traction System. There is a probability that the new road will be extended south from Urbana to Villa Grove and perhaps into the oil fields south of Charleston.

Wants Cash on Bill of 1779

Thomas A. Hudson of Danville has sent to the treasury department at Washington for redemption a bill which was authorized by the continental congress and which was printed in 1779. The bill calls for $60 of Spanish mintage.

A. B. Hoblit is Better

A. B. Hoblit, of the State National of Bloomington, who was stricken with paralysis a few weeks ago, is better and while able to sit up, has not ventured down town yet. Since January 1st Mr. Hoblit has served as vice-president of the State National owing to the resignation of C. C. Aldrich. The new cashier succeeding Mr. Hoblit is W. L. Moore.

Illinois Notes

William A. Heath, president of the Live Stock Exchange National of Chicago, will erect a modern dwelling on the site of the Heath homestead in Champaign. Mr. Heath formerly resided in the latter city where he was for many years connected with the Champaign National serving as cashier for some time.

Newman township in Douglas county has voted a bond issue of $20,000 for the purpose of erecting a new township high school.

The golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Max Kellman of Shelbyville has been observed. Mr. Kellman is the vice-president of the Shelby County State Bank and has been prominently identified with the business life of Shelbyville for many years.

Postal authorities believe that they have a clew to the man who stole thirty-two blank money-orders from the postoffice at Edwards, Indiana. It will be remembered that a self-appointed postal inspector went into the postoffice in the Indiana town to examine the condition of affairs. While the postmaster had his back turned the supposed inspector helped himself to money-orders. One of these orders has shown up in Granite City and the police in the east-side cities are looking for a stranger who gave it to a Granite City merchant. It may be that St. Louis and suburban towns have been selected for the disposition of the orders.

Harry Borger, who is wanted in Peoria on a charge of forgery, is under arrest at Carlinville and Peoria officers will bring him to their city for trial. Borger forged a check for $20 on the Illinois National Bank of Peoria.

There is a probability that a new state bank will be established at St. David, a village west of Peoria, where one of the Butler banks failed. While St. David is a small village yet the country around is good and a state bank conservatively managed would do a satisfactory business. It is desired that the bank be established by local people.

Alexander Dunbar, cashier of National Exchange Bank, Pittsburgh, delivered a thoughtful address at a recent group meeting on the subject of gaining business. He said:

"To my mind, there are three things that go to make up a first-class bank employee: Unimpeachable character, genial personality, and ability.

"Of these three things, the first two strike me as being most important, and I would rather select a clerk with a majority of his make-up in character and genial personality, than one of unusual ability, but lacking in these other two qualifications.

"The officers of the bank, of course, must always exercise discretion and good taste in going after business through personal effort, but it will be found most effective if properly handled. Nothing permanent or worth while these days can be gained except by personal sacrifice, or personal effort, and each day it is becoming more and more true in all lines of business, including banking. All ambitious bankers, should, therefore, enter active service as soon as possible, in order to get that much of a lead on their competitor.

"No prospective customer should be called upon until after you have looked him up carefully, and feel sure your board would be willing to extend him such credit as he will probably need from time to time. Strictly avoid competing for business by offering higher rates of interest thereon.

"A meeting of all employees of the bank with the active officers at least once a month is strongly recommended, at which time employees can be told the advantages of polite and considerate treatment to customers. Suggestions should also be solicited from employees at these meetings, looking toward the improvement of the service."

Edmund Burke has resigned as cashier of the First National Bank of Hillyard, a suburb of Spokane, to become assistant general salesman for the International Harvester Company with headquarters at Fargo, N. D. He will be succeeded by D. D. Devine of St. Paul, until recently deputy superintendent of banks for the state of Minnesota.

Chatham - Phenix Bank

Consolidation of two well known

New York institutions with Louis G. Kaufman at the head takes place successfully

New York, February 27.—Taking advantage of the holiday (22d) last week the merger between the Chatham and Phenix Nationals took place, giving New York another new bank of size and importance. The president of the new Chatham-Phenix is Louis G. Kaufman, who recently went to New York as the head of the Chatham National. Mr. Kaufman also is president of the First National at Marquette, Mich., and represents that state on the A. B. A. executive council. Mr. Kaufman on Thursday morning last, announced that the consolidation of the Chatham and Phenix national banks had been completed and that the combined institutions, bearing the name "Chatham and Phenix National Bank," will continue in the Chatham Bank Building, at Broadway and John streets, with resources exceeding $20,000,000. The resignation of Finis E. Marshall as president of the Phenix went into effect and Mr. Kaufman is president of the merger bank.

The merger had been long in prospect, and on Monday last President Kaufman, with Frank R. Lawrence as counsel and William A. Law, one of the Chatham directors, went to Washington and got the approval of the comptroller of the currency. On Tuesday both boards of directors ratified the merger. On Tuesday night a procession of bank messengers and porters carried money and securities of the

Phenix to the amount of about $8,000,000 through the deserted streets from 35 Nassau Street and lodged them in the vaults of the Chatham.

When business opened in the morning President Kaufman had practically all the former officials and clerks of the Phenix to help him welcome customers. Alexander M. Bull, vice-president of the Phenix and associated with that bank for forty-nine years, will be a vice-president of the Chatham and Phenix. Bert M. Haskins, cashier of the Phenix, will be cashier, and H. C. Hooley, assistant cashier of the Phenix, will be one of the assistant cashiers, and N. P. Gatling, former secretary of the Virginia Bankers Association and recently identified with Mr. Laws' bank in Philadelphia, was also elected an assistant cashier.

The Phenix will have a majority on the new board of directors, which will consist of almost all the former directors of the Chatham and such Phenix directors as August Belmont, Elbert H. Gary, Pierre S. Du Pont, Frederick D. Underwood and others of the Phenix directorate who are to be elected at a later meeting (since held).

About the Phenix centres some of the most interesting financial history of old New York. It was organized in 1812, when the city scarcely extended north of Wall Street. Upon its board sat the merchant princes of the old city, among them the Grinnells and Minturns. It had an uninterrupted career for ninety-nine

Money Stagnant

Bank rates have remained easy in this and other markets for the week. The demand for money shows little or no improvement. Merchants and manufacturers are entering the spring period with fair business prospects but so far are using little extra capital.

Banks are making commercial loans at 4½ to 5 per cent. Call loans are not above 4 per cent. Real estate financing calls for a considerable volume of money in Chicago and the customary rate is 5 per cent. Bonds and stocks have moved a little less actively this week than previously.

The usual spring trade revival is about due and greater financial activity is looked for.

years until the silent procession of Tuesday night passed the point of where stood a church once occupied, it is said, as a riding school for British soldiers of the Revolution, passed the house in Nassau Street where Aaron Burr once lived and had his office, turning the corner near the old Dutch church in John Street and so to Broadway. It withstood all the panics of a century. It is said that the first banking interest acquired in this country by the father of J. P. Morgan was in the Phenix Bank. When the institution was changed from a state to a national bank upon the passage of the national banking act of 1864 J. Pierpont Morgan was one of the incorporators.

In the diary of Philip Hone, Mayor of New York, he records that on May 26, 1848, he dined with the directors of the Phenix Bank at the mansion of Moses H. Grinnell in Fourteenth Street, with Washington Irving as another guest. They had all the delicacies of the season, the diary says, and "wine such as Hebe ne'er poured out for the gods made every man wish his neck was a mile long."

The Chatham National is 61 years old. It also passed unscathed through the panics of 1857 and 1873 and all that have taken place since. It was formed at a time when the people of New York still cared to perpetuate the memory of the great friend of the American colonies in the British Parliament during the Revolution. One of the directors pointed out as an evidence of its long prosperity that the bank's last dividend was numbered 161.

The capital of the Phoenix Bank was $1,000,000, surplus $725,000 and deposits $11,000,000. The capital of the Chatham Bank was $450,000, surplus $1,060,000 and deposits $10,000,000. The reasons given for the consolidation are the modern tendency toward combination and recognition of the fact that a large bank has a great advantage over a small one.

W. O. Johnson

W. O. Johnson, who has just been appointed receiver of the Chicago & Milwaukee Electric Railway Company, is a man of wide experience in railroad matters and his connection with various financial enterprises for many years has well qualified him for the management of this property.

Mr. Johnson is now and has for some time been general counsel of the Chicago & Erie Railroad Company and is the representative of that company in all its western matters, serving it as one of the directors of the Chicago & Western Indiana Railroad Company. He also is president of the Security Life Insurance Company of America and is actively directing its affairs at its offices in the Rookery Building. He has been prominently identified as one of the moving spirits in the organization of coal and gas properties and the universal success that has come to all enterprises under his direction gives great promise for the future of the Chicago & Milwaukee Electric Railway.

This is not Mr. Johnson's first experience as receiver of a large property. The brilliant record which he made in the same capacity in handling the affairs of The American Strawboard Company, the United Box Board Company and of other companies, and the successful reorganization of the same accomplished with his co-operation may reasonably inspire the confidence that in his new position he will place the affairs of the Milwaukee Electric, both from a traffic and financial standpoint, in a position long hoped for by its stockholders.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

A considerable increase in clearings and in deposits marked the closing days of the month. There is a better demand reported for loans than for some time and manufacturers are preparing for an active spring trade. One of the officers of a leading iron manufacturer is authority for the statement that steel orders are coming in rapidly and that before many weeks all of the mills that have been shut down or working only half force will be running full time to keep up with the demand for their product.

Out-in-state the country banker reports good deposits with every evidence of a prosperous season. Bond salesmen say that the small banker will be a good buyer of securities during the next sixty days. Local bond sales are well up to the standard, the bulk of the trade being centered in the higher grade securities.

Believed Bankers will Win Point

Devoting their efforts to securing a postponement of the proposed guaranty law in lieu of attempting to definitely defeat the bill, the bankers of Wisconsin believe that they will succeed in having the legislature postpone definite action until the next session of the state legislature, two years hence.

This is in accordance with the wishes of the great majority of bankers throughout the state. Owing to the experiments being tried out in other states along similar lines it is thought that the only sensible course is not to hastily jump into legislation that is not an urgent need and to await the outcome of these experiments. Out of nearly 600 inquiries sent out from the Wisconsin Bankers Association headquarters to the bankers of the state asking their opinion of the proposed law almost every reply received is emphatic either for absolute defeat of the measure or its postponement.

The March number of the Wisconsin Banker, the official organ for the state association, editorially says:

"Senator Owen, according to interviews credited to him in the press of the state has not entirely lost the optimism expressed earlier in the session as to the ultimate passage of the guaranty law, but in more than one interview he has been quoted as saying that 'I do not expect that the guaranty bill will be passed at this session, but I hope that the discussion aroused will prove profitable.'

"This is the sensible way to look at it. The time is not yet at hand when such a bill should be passed in this state although all things presage the guaranteeing of deposits in state banks in some form or other before many years have passed. Whether by insuring in some credited insurance company, whether by state laws and state control; whether by a state clearing house association similar to the plan proposed by Martin A. Graettinger; or by any other means which may be devised; there is no question but that this phase of the banking question must be met and that popular sentiment will force some such step."

First National Increases Directors

The number of directors of the First National Bank of Milwaukee was increased recently from fifteen to twenty-one and the capital stock was increased $500,000, making a total of $2,500,000.

The newly elected directors are: Charles Allis, Robert Camp, David C. Green, Howard Greene, Stuart H. Markham, George P. Mayer and Ludington Patton.

The directors who were re-elected are: Walter Alexander, John I. Beggs, William Bigelow, Nathan Glicksman, Fred T. Goll, A. K. Hamilton, H. August Luedke, George P. Miller, Robert Nunnemacher, William Woods Plankington, Charles F. Pfister, Albert O. Trostel, Edward A. Uhrig and Fred Vogel, Jr.

The increase in capital stock is to be paid in by May 10th. More than 17,000 out of 20,000 shares of stock were voted either in person or by proxy.

Passed Over Fifty Bad Checks

Between forty and fifty merchants and saloon keepers have been swindled during the last few days out of amounts varying from $40 to $56 each by means of forged checks. The discovery was made Monday afternoon of this week when checks similar to those issued as pay-checks by the J. I. Case Threshing Machine Company began coming into the banks. According to the story told by the victims to the police, the swindler would enter a store or saloon, make a few slight purchases and tender the forged check in payment, leaving with the change.

Most, if not all, the checks were passed Saturday night, which gave the swindler an opportunity to leave before discovery. The total amount secured is close to $600. The for-

HEINZE WORTH $3,470,000

Boston, February 28.—F. Augustus Heinze is worth $3,470,000 to-day above all liabilities, according to the statement in the Supreme Court by his attorney, Walter I. Badger. The assertion was made during Mr. Badger's final argument in the Heinze's suit against a score of Boston brokers and money leaders whom he charges with conspiracy to defraud him of securities valued at $300,000.

BANK CLEARINGS SMALLER

The total bank clearings for the United States for the week ending February 25, 1911 (one day estimated), were $2,657,332,310, which compares with $2,884,066,617 last week and $2,755,616,467 for the week ending February 26, 1910.

Compared with last year, the total bank clearings have decreased 3.6 per cent. New York City reports a decrease of 2.8 per cent, Boston of 8.4 per cent and Chicago of 11.2 per cent, while Baltimore shows an increase of 9.7 per cent and St. Louis of 3.36 per cent.

NEW BANK LAW IN OKLAHOMA

Oklahoma City.—Governor Cruce has signed the statement banking bill. The principal difference between the new law and the old is that the banking board shall be made up of the governor and two appointees of the governor instead of the governor and four state officers. MILWAUKEE IS CHEERFUL

Cashier Alfred G. Schultz of Germania National, Milwaukee, was a visitor at Fort Dearborn National, Wednesday. Mr. Schultz reports general trade almost up to normal in Milwaukee. Collections are good and merchants and manufacturers alike say that conditions are improving. Everybody is glad to have the rate decisions disposed of and nobody is hurt much, Mr. Schultz declares.

INDIANA BANKING NEWS

Under the plea that the United States government is in the banking business, managers of state banks and trust companies have agreed upon a bill in the legislature which provides for guaranteeing the deposits of all institutions whose capital stock is in excess of $15,000. It has been agreed among them that one-twentieth of one per cent shall be put aside as a guaranty fund. This on the basis of capital invested will exceed $100,000 a year.

Negotiations which will probably culminate in the consolidation of the two banks at Swayzee are now under way.

The Bank of Attica went out of existence Thursday, its notes and accounts being transferred to the Farmers and Merchants' State Bank. The bank was established ten years ago, and was owned and controlled by Jacob and Clem Osley.

Sentence was imposed with the understanding that Mr. Clarke will take immediate steps to annul a divorce recently obtained by him in Nevada.

We Have a Hydro-Electric project which is almost far enough advanced to make it a "bankable" proposition. Just before we got it into that shape, my client who was the financial backer of the enterprise was obliged by ill health to quit all business. He directs me to sell all or part of the deal.

We have bought and paid for water right, good for 20,000 horse power, engineering work, etc. Have a U. S. Government franchise, reports, maps, etc. Have a fine and rapidly growing market for power for commercial and irrigation purposes.

It is a deal that will make from $500,000 to $1,000,000 profit, and is already past the stage where there is any risk. $25,000 will carry it to a point where it will be "bankable." I want some capitalist to take the place of my client and carry it out, or, will sell the whole project as it stands.

Dakota Thrift

While the state and national banks in South Dakota show combined individual deposits of $74,750,547, at the call of January 7th, this is a reduction of practically $6,000,000 from the showing made by the banks of the November call. Most of this comes out of the deposits subject to check, the falling off in that account in the state banks being more than four million dollars, and nearly two million in the national banks. While the checking deposits show a falling off, the deposits on time certificates, and the savings deposits in both the state and national banks show a slight gain, which indicates a growing inclination on the part of the people to get their spare cash into interest-bearing deposits.

PRIZES FOR ESSAYS

The Washington Bankers Association is offering a first and second prize of respectively $15 and $10 for the best essays on the subject, "A Central Bank as a Factor in a Financial Crisis." The contest is open to all bank clerks in the state under the following rules:

The essay to be typewritten on regular essay paper using but one side and to be not less than 1,500 words in length.

To be forwarded to P. C. Kauffman, secretary of the Washington Bankers Association, not later than May 1, 1911, and to be signed by a fictitious name.

The correct name as well as the fictitious name to be placed in a sealed envelope addressed to the Washington Bankers Association.

The successful essay to be retained by the association and printed in the report of the 1911 convention.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, Mo., March 1.—Edwards Whitaker, president of the Boatmens Bank, thinks the season of increased activities and stiffer interest rates is about to break. Speaking of the monetary situation Mr. Whitaker said:

"January is always the time for paying up, while February is usually the month of marking time and looking around to size things up. Then in March, providing intrinsic conditions are favorable, business activities commence on a large scale. The present year, I believe, will typically carry out this ritual. We are already beginning to feel an increase in the commercial demand, and a slight tightening in rates. Intrinsic conditions are certainly good. This last snow, and the one preceding it, means millions to the farmers, in fact the season thus far seems to have been made to order for wheat. Confidence is gradually becoming stronger, and it is reasonable to look for a picking up in all lines. So far we have felt no demand for spring agricultural operations, but we have been notified by country correspondents that they will reduce balances, which just now are enormous. The meridian of deposits and low rates has been reached, and as the former fall off, the latter will advance. In the extremes the range for loans is from 4 to 5 per cent, though I notice the newspapers are not quoting them that high. The railroad decision was a disappointment, but at least it disposes of the matter, and sets a minimum which is not likely to be lowered. On this the roads can build, and adjust, with the ultimate result of satisfactorily working out their several problems. Things have not been so terribly bad with the railroads, even at their present tariffs. Economy may do what was expected in the increases asked. Yes, I am disposed to take an optimistic view of the situation at large."

Manchester Has New Building

The Manchester Bank of St. Louis opened for business in its new building, at Chouteau and Manchester avenues, on Monday. The occasion was observed by a sort of reception, which lasted all day, and the new banking rooms were a veritable bower of flowers, contributed by customers and other local banking institutions. This new home of the Manchester Bank is quite the most up-to-date thing owned by any small bank in the West. The building is constructed of Bedford stone, and is classic in its lines. Marble and bronze, artistically worked, are the predominating materials in the interior construction. In the basement is a modern safety deposit vault, with private rooms for patrons. There is a kitchen, for cooking meals for officers and employees. The building is two stories high, the upper floor being divided into offices, most of which have been let to physicians. The Manchester Bank is one of the most successful of the outlying banks of St. Louis. It was organized in 1902 with a capital stock of $100,000, which was recently increased to $250,000. Its resources amount to $1,600,000. The officers are Gustav Bischoff, president; A. M. Beckers, vice-president and August E. Brooker, cashier. The board of directors consists of I. C. Muckermann, manager of the Polar Wave Ice and Fuel Company; August Bischoff, president of the Independent Packing Company; Louis A. Haase, president Empire Brewing Company; Alfred J. Siegel, secretary and treasurer of the Huttig Sash and Door Company; Bernard H. Stoltman, real estate; Alexander M. Beckers, capitalist and A. E. Brooker, cashier.

Manufacturers are Optimistic

Optimism was the prevailing motif at the annual banquet of the St. Louis Manufacturers Association, held this week. From the opening address of the retiring president, H. W. Peters, to the last talk of the evening, there was hardly a single note of pessimism. From the various speeches it could be gathered that the outlook from the manufacturers' viewpoint for the coming year is most helpful. Practically all the plants represented, and there were some 200 manufacturers present, are running full capacity, and goodly orders are booked ahead. St. Louis ranks as the fourth manufacturing city of the United States, the value of her manufactured products in 1910 being $325,000,000. The number of employees was upward of 125,000. The election, which followed the banquet, resulted in the selection of Isaac H. Sawyer for president; P. M. Hanson, first vice-president; C. F. Wencker, second vice-president; H. F. Hafner, third vice-president; Charles S. Brown, fourth vice-president and Walter B. Woodward, fifth vice-president.

New Equitable Surety Company

The new Equitable Surety Company will be the largest concern of the kind west of Baltimore and New York, and will have headquarters in St. Louis. Directors will be chosen in Chicago, San Francisco, New Orleans, Denver, Kansas City, St. Paul and other cities in this part of the country. The St. Louis board is the most representative of the kind that any company has ever been able to assemble. It includes W. K. Bixby, who is interested in numerous gigantic enterprises; Adolphus Busch, president of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association; D. K. Catlin, capitalists; S. C. Davis, capitalist; B. F. Edwards, president of the National Bank of Commerce; H. C. Haarstick, vice-president of the St. Louis-Union Trust Company; C. H. Huttig, president of the Third National; Edward Mallinckrodt, president of the Mallinckrodt Chemical Company; N. A. McMillan, president of the St. Louis Trust Company; E. C. Simmons, chairman of the Board of Simmons Hardware Company; James E. Smith, president; Rolla Wells, capitalist; Thomas H. West, president of the Board of the St. Louis-Union Trust Company; and Allen T. West of G. H. Walker & Company. The individual fortunes of the directors represent about $200,000,000.

W. K. Bixby, director in the National Bank of Commerce, was elected president of the Laclede Gas Light Company at the annual election of that company on Monday. C. L. Old Time Banker Passes On

Mr. Newman was 75 years old, and practically his entire business career was spent in banking enterprises. He established the National Stock Yards Bank in East St. Louis in 1874; the Joplin Missouri National in 1887; the First Bank in Salt Lake, and the First National of Leavenworth, Kansas.

The entertainment committee of the general committee of Kansas City bankers, which has to do with placing the delegates to the joint meeting of the Missouri and Kansas bankers' convention to be held in Kansas City May 24th and 25th, has, up to date, arranged to accommodate 2,100 delegates and in all probability this number will be largely augmented. The delegates will be distributed at the various hotels. The managers of the hotels were asked to send the committee the number of rooms that could be placed at the disposal of the committee and did so. Fortunately the convention comes at a time when there is generally a slackening of hotel business.

Officials in Contempt.

The supreme court of the United States last week found the mayor and certain members of the council of Clay Center, Kansas, in contempt for destroying the subject matter of litigation before it. The penalty was merely the costs of the suit which the municipal officers will have to pay. The contempt suit against Mayor Hanna of Clay Center and the members of the council was brought by the Merrimac River Savings Bank of New Hampshire which held a mortgage upon the property of the Williamson Electric Light Company of Clay Center. The electric plant had a franchise and in a quarrel with the city Mayor Hanna and the others interested ordered certain city employees to destroy the poles and other property of the plant.

New Banking Homes.

The Ardmore National Bank of Ardmore, Okla., one of the oldest banks in the state and with which Governor Cruce was connected in the capacity of president and manager, is to have a new home. G. W. Stewart, president, and P. D. Maxwell, cashier, have let contracts that will make the new bank building one of the handsomest in the West. The improvements will be finished about the middle of the summer.

The Missouri Savings Bank of Kansas City which is building a splendid banking home at 920 Walnut Street, expects to move from its present quarters in the Scarritt building about the middle of April. The new bank is a cut granite and marble structure three stories in height and will be occupied exclusively by the Missouri Savings Bank.

Prosecuting Fakes

Kansas State Bank Commissioner J. N. Dolley, returned last week from Cleveland, where he appeared as a witness before the federal grand jury to testify as to his knowledge of the operations of fake stock promoters in Kansas and the Central West. Mr. Dolley has been conducting investigations for the protection of Kansas against this class of stock salesmen and he is regarded as something of an authority on the subject. He has maintained that western people are being robbed of millions of dollars a year through the purchase of bogus stock and he has established a bureau in his department to keep track of these operations. It was he who formulated and is helping to secure the passage of the new and stringent law in Kansas providing for registration of all stocks to be sold in Kansas and for statements of all details of stock business to be filed with the Kansas bank commissioner.

"The government has an army of detectives over the country," said Mr. Dolley, "that is looking into the fake stock speculation schemes, and some of the things these detectives have unearthed are surprising even to me. One detective chief told me he was satisfied that the people of the United States are being defrauded of two hundred million dollars a year in this manner. After my experience with the fakers in Kansas I am ready to believe him. On the stand I told what I knew of the work of these grafters in Kansas. I told of the workings of my investment bureau. Everybody connected with the hearing had heard of it through the newspapers and magazines and many questions were asked. I showed them a copy of the proposed Kansas law and it was generally approved by the attorneys who attended the hearing and who examined it. After the hearing and the talk before the jury I am satisfied that Kansas is on the right track; that we need such a law and that it will be only a matter of a short time until all other states will have it. Even the federal government is working out a plan along similar lines."

"Smiling Through Its Tears"

"The Central West is smiling through its tears," is the way President J. R. Dominick, of the Traders' National Bank of Kansas City, sums up the situation. "We must admit," he continued, "that the situation was far from encouraging until the recent general and generous rains. But these rains and the accompanying snow storms have put the agricultural districts in ideal shape and there need be no longer any anxiety about the crops. At the present time there is something of a lull in banking operations due to the general inactivity of business. But the good feeling which has been awakened by the rains breaking the long drought is manifested on all sides. It will be only a few weeks now until the farmers will begin moving cattle up from the South and then there will be a better demand for money."

Banking Outlook Good

Charles H. Moore, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, of Kansas City, is enthusiastic over the banking outlook in the Central West. "The banks still have plenty of money" he observed to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER, "and rates are easy. Our reports indicate that there has been a tremendous revival of business interest in this territory due to the good weather conditions, but I saw no special grounds for anxiety. I remember similar droughts that lasted longer and then wheat crops were produced. However, I join with everybody else in rejoicing that the strain has been relieved. Our deposits have been growing steadily and I consider banking conditions hereabouts as very good indeed."

Drop in Bank Clearings

Most of the cities of the Central West suffered a slump in bank clearings for the week ending February 24th. For the first time in many months the Kansas City clearings were below Pittsburgh which put the latter city in the coveted sixth place. The report gave Kansas City $39,256,000, a decrease of 9.4 per cent from the previous week. Kansas City bankers say that a slackening up of business with an absence of big deals caused the decrease. Omaha with $11,402,000 also came below normal, the decrease being 20.6 per cent. Oklahoma City and St. Joseph, Mo. also lost, the decrease being 12.2 per cent and 14.5 per cent respectively. Wichita and Topeka showed slight gains.

Safety of Investments

Several days ago Governor Cruce of Oklahoma was asked by a representative of an eastern financial institution to state his attitude toward the investment of foreign capital in the new state. For answer Governor Cruce referred the inquirer to this paragraph from his own inaugural address:

"As long as I am governor of Oklahoma your investments in this state, if they are honest investments, and made in observance of our laws, will be as sacredly observed and safeguarded here as anywhere on the face of the earth. Capital and labor should be friends. Both are sorely needed in the future development of the state, and neither shall unduly harass the other if I can prevent it. More railroads with better equipment, more factories with better appliances, greater development of vast mineral resources, with greater safety to employees; more employment of labor with better wages; an educational system meeting the needs of an advanced citizenship; continued development of the agricultural interests, giving greater comfort and happiness to the farmers of the state, will be the slogan for Oklahoma during the next four years."

Southwestern Notes

The announcement is made that within thirty days the Continental Trust Company of Oklahoma City, Okla., will be ready for business with a capital of $250,000. A. M. Young will be president and E. B. Cockrell, state bank commissioner, and I. B. Levy will be vice-presidents.

S. A. Frazier, for twenty years cashier of the First National Bank of Atchison, Kan., has resigned and will devote his time to interests in California. He will be succeeded by Charles Linley of the Exchange State Bank, who began his business career as office boy in the First National Bank twenty-six years ago.

Henry L. Newman, aged 75 years, who established the National Stock Yards Bank of East St. Louis in 1874, the Joplin, Mo., National Bank in 1887 and later the First National Bank of Salt Lake and the First National Bank of Leavenworth, Kan., died in El Paso, Texas, February 23d. During the years of his active banking career Mr. Newman was doubtless the best known banker in the Central West.

William Huttig, president of the National Bank of the Republic, has returned from a sojourn of several months in Cuba.

George B. Harrison, treasurer of the Glasgow, Mo., Savings Bank, spent part of last week as the guest of his son, George B. Harrison, Jr. vice-president of the New England National Bank of Kansas City.

One of the oddest uses to which a bank vault has been put to was when the town authorities of Weleetka, Okla., placed a quantity of whiskey in the strong box of the local bank to be used as evidence in the prosecution of bootleggers. So much of this sort of evidence had been stolen from the office of the justice of the peace that the officers decided to take no more chances.

The farmers in the vicinity of Heizer, a small town not far from Scott City, Kan., are decidedly prosperous. They met to organize a bank at Heizer with a capital stock of $10,000 but this stock was taken up so suddenly that it was decided to increase the stock to $15,000.

A new bank is to be started at Delaware, Okla. It is said that P. S. Powell, of the First National Bank of Nowata, is to be heavily interested in the new institution.

Charged with "depriving citizens of their elective franchise" in connection with the general election last fall, John A. Kidd, cashier of the Bank of Lenapah, Okla., was arrested on a federal indictment. He gave bond.

Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank of New York, was in Kansas City two days last week, a guest of local bankers. He was met at the train by E. F. Swinney, president of the First National Bank of Kansas City. Mr. Vanderlip said that he was merely on a tour of inspection and will visit several cities in Texas before returning to New York.

As a result of a bitter townsite war that has been raging for two years in Western Oklahoma, A. L. Perry, president of the Duke State Bank of Duke, Okla., was arrested last week charged with being an accessory to the burning of the buildings in a rival town.

George B. Harrison, Jr., vice-president of the New England National Bank of Kansas City has returned from Fort Worth, Tex., where he attended a group meeting of the Texas Bankers Association.

The "legal check" bill of the Oklahoma legislature makes it illegal for one to overdraw his bank account. The bill has been recommended by the house committee but it is so strongly opposed that there is little probability that it will become a law.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

FINGER PRINT IDENTITY

(Havana Correspondence.)

At the weekly meeting of Cuba Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, held at the National Bank of Cuba Building, on Wednesday the 15th of February, the order of business included a lecture in Spanish by one of the members, A. N. Ruz Sauvalle, on the subject of "Finger Prints" as a means of identifying those depositors who are incapable of writing their signatures.

Mr. Sauvalle, who is at the head of the Saving Department of the National Bank of Cuba, remarked that among the thousands of accounts under his supervision, he has found hundreds corresponding to persons who must be identified by some means other than the usual signature and scroll common to Latin countries. The dependence upon photographs as a method of identification, especially in disputed cases, has long since proved inadequate, owing to the deterioration of likenesses, changes in features of individuals, and the facility of imposition by persons bearing a resemblance to a given depositor.

A knowledge of the subject of finger impressions as adopted in the leading cities of the United States, Europe and elsewhere, became necessary, and Mr. Sauvalle begun a systematic study of these methods, as suited to the needs of a banking institution.

Among the countries where the finger print system has been most highly developed under government direction, British India was shown to stand conspicuous, owing to its large proportion of illiterate inhabitants and the disposition to false personation among them. It has been found expedient by the authorities of that country, to require parties to be identified by their finger marks in such matters as the registration of real property, the execution of contracts, and various other legal and government transactions too numerous to mention.

Finger prints as a means of formal identification, while a matter of comparatively recent introductions in modern communities, seem to be traceable to the year 1823, when Professor Purkenje read before the University of Breslau a Latin thesis on finger impressions, in which were given nine standard types, classified in a simple and practicable manner, but his labors failed to attract the attention they merited.

The subject was later taken up by Sir William Herschel, of the British India Civil Service, but his labors also were unfruitful, except in so far as they laid the foundations for the work of subsequent authorities. The author whose system Sr. Sauvalle finds adaptable for use in banks is Mr. E. R. Henry, Police Commissioner of London, whose method of indexing and classifying has been introduced in the National Bank of Cuba.

That the pattern of a human hand remains the same through life, no two specimens being alike, is an interesting fact with which we are more or less familiar, but the ready identification of a party by a system of indexing finger prints, is a matter of deserving practical attention by those of the banking fraternity who live in communities where the ordinary means of identification is not always obtainable.

At the close of the lecture, Sr. Sauvalle demonstrated the facility of identification, by having several of the class members register their prints, and summing up the characteristics from a duplicate set of the marks which were then given him, both of which were found to coincide, making the identification complete.

It affords us satisfaction to note that the influence of the Institute of Organization is extending to practical subjects like the above, and that to Cuba Chapter belongs the credit of having enabled depositors in Cuba who from any cause are unable to write, to keep their funds in the institution which has adopted the finger print system of identification.

CHICAGO CHAPTER

On February 16th the Chicago Chapter gave the last of a series of dances at the West End Woman's Club. About a hundred couples were present.

The class in commercial and banking law completed the first round of the course with an examination on contracts, agency and bailments. About sixty-six members of the class successfully competed in the test.

Lectures of property, insurance, bankruptcy and negotiable instruments will be given by James I. Ennis, LL. D. on Tuesdays and Fridays of each week to complete the course. The final examination will no doubt be given sometime in March.

The finance and banking class will hold its first meeting on the 14th of the month at 6 o'clock. Professor Howard of the Northwestern School of Commerce has been procured to conduct the class. On the same date, commencing at 8 o'clock, Prof. J. Paul Goode will deliver his lecture on "The Age of Steel." Messrs. Tesmer and Grier of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company will furnish the music for the evening.

At the last meeting of the Debating Club, the following were elected officers for the current quarter: J. H. Ashley, president; R. M. Coleman, vice-president and John Drummond, secretary.

The preliminary contest for a debate before the chapter at large was held and the following won places on the team: J. H. Ashley, Louis Rich and R. M. Coleman, affirmative; J. J. Schroeder, W. W. Todd and A. J. Kuhn, negative. The subject of the debate will be "Should Senators be Elected by Popular Vote."

DALLAS CHAPTER

Here comes Dallas Chapter, which in chapter talk is synonymous to saying Texas, as we are the Pathfinder in this state! Maybe we are a little bit behind the excitement of the race, but running strong for a one-cylinder hill-climber—to be more exact one year and a couple of months is our calibre. Pleased to meet you!!

Formalities all over, patient reader, let us push aside the demi tasse and rest our cigar awhile and get to business. We do not bring anything new to "spring" on the habitual reader of the Chapter Record, if such there be; and if we had, we should fear with a burned child's fear the fate of our Numerical System of Transit Work as explained in Chicago and promptly taken over. True it is that the humble, modest inventor never gets the blame, but the man who advertises. Therefore Dallas is going to get into the swim also. At last we have worked up to a full-fledged fact in this juggling of words, and ask the lady in the hobble skirt to open her note book—"Partner, Texas originated the Numerical System"—we challenge all comers.

Dallas was favored with a meeting of the Fifth District of the American Bankers Association on February 11th, and many of our interior bank friends were with us.

George E. Allen, Educational Director of the A. I. B., visited Dallas Chapter and addressed 140 bank men, including officers of all the local institutions, at a dinner at the Oriental Hotel. We sum up the address colloquially and laconically: "Hold what you got." We haven't fenced our claim yet, because we have not limited it, but we are going to start, with our fifteen lectures in the "Commercial Law Course" as working capital, on the Finance & Banking Course, and 75 men pulling together can move many things, as we intend to prove.

We are going to have some new neighbors: S. P. Berry, Cashier of the State National Bank, Ft. Worth, Texas, has scheduled March 3d as the "Get Away Day" for Ft. Worth Chapter, and Dallas Chapter is going to attend the event. Houston and San Antonio are expected to enter, and Mr. Allen visited those cities to do the good deed.

We have great possibilities and room for development and everything else in this big, grand state of ours, and as long as your time is at our disposal, we are going to let you hear about us through our mutual friend.

G. L. HERN.

FIRST NATIONAL 25 YEARS OLD.

The famous First National of Kansas City celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary on March 1st, by sending out its "best wishes" to the friends and patrons who helped Mr. Swinney make it the big institution that it is.

CRANE COMPANY EXPANDING

A Crane Company official says: "We have recently completed, at several millions cost, the largest malleable iron works in the world, and a brass foundry at Twelfth and Canal streets. We are building new steel and concrete branch stores in every section of the United States."

THERE IS A DIFFERENCE

All banking newspapers are not trade or class papers, some of them being distinctly educational. It has been the endeavor of this publication to keep up its academical features which made it so successful as a monthly magazine. Readers of discretion promptly discovered the difference between a publication which takes a position of its own upon the more important questions and one which simply republishes what it supposes to be the accepted traditions and truisms of the craft. We have hundreds of bankers in Chicago who scarcely allow a pause between cutting open the wrapper and tossing into the waste basket a class paper even though it call itself a banking publication, which merely is a re chauffé of the daily papers. There are financial and banking papers claiming very wide distribution and pluming themselves greatly upon their age, which serve up merely the dribble and gossip which they collect from the clipping and press bureaus of the country. It might well be a question whether or not an advertisement carried in such a publication is a good investment. Such a paper merely becomes a house organ of the trade and has but little more influence than a house organ which relates purely to the business of one bank or industry.

Opposed to this is the educational publication, which is an authoritative medium for the transmission of information that its banking and financial patrons look forward to as a reflex of conditions affecting their business. Such a paper contains original interviews with leading men and its news letters are prepared by actual correspondents regularly employed and occupying a position of prominence in their own locality. Class papers of the educational type are obliged to be more conservative than those which reprint the gossip of the dailies. The educational type of paper rarely deals with rumors of bank consolidations, liquidations, or prospective promotions of individuals. Nothing quite so tiresome comes into the life of a busy banker as a paper dealing in trifles and particularly when the trifles are based upon idle talk. It will require no great exercise of memory to recall hundreds of instances justifying the above conclusions. They are of weekly occurrence. It is better—very much better—to delay making a statement than to give publicity to a tale which may prove to be entirely false. At times these rumors have a mercenary motive. This is seldom. There is a pressing and constant demand in the banking room for accurate information. Bankers are interested and give willing support to the truly educational publication, partly because of the scarcity of that article. They have no time for the mediums which deal in “trade vapor” and their representatives are finding it increasingly more difficult to market their space at remunerative rates.

Papers of the educational type are not importuned for flattering notices in exchange for commercial favors. There is a class of paper which largely gets its support by rendering to some selfish individual an otherwise unearned service. The ear marks of this sort of a “dicker” are so plain that they can be distinguished at an arm’s length. No closer inspection is required. The educational medium has a policy and a work to perform and those entitled to recognition can point to things accomplished for the good of their patrons. An encouraging sign of the times is the fact that bankers are beginning to discriminate.

South St. Paul will make application to the board of investment to take bonds on a 4 per cent interest basis. The state fund for this purpose is large. The city has $82,000 bridge bonds coming due, and the money market does not allow for refunding them at a rate not less than 4½ per cent.

AFTER THE LOAN SHARKS

Not less than three bills are entering passage at Springfield to put an end to the shark abuses in Illinois. Attempts in this direction have been frequent but the daring vigilance of the sharks and the weakness of the laws as enacted made the efforts futile. The representatives of the Industrial Club, the Legal Aid Society, the Commercial Club, the City Club, and the Association of Commerce have studied the situation carefully and have worked out plans which they consider both legal and practical. They are embodied in the bills just introduced. The sharks loan on security which no bank can take and in Illinois the sharkiest kind of a shark can hold himself out to the public as a trust company, a savings bank, a banker or by any other alluring and deceptive title. The present bills should be so amended as to forbid the use of any banking or corporate title by such concerns.

Pawn-shops of the lowest type masquerade as “banks” and thus deceive the unwary. Under the new plan a substitute for the “shark” is to be provided. One of the new bills provides for the organization of chattel mortgage societies, regulates the nature of the security, and limits the charges. A few such societies, supplied with adequate capital would give instant relief and would save many from the clutches of the loan sharks. Two other bills fixing the fees for acknowledging and recording chattel mortgages complete the scheme for the alleviation of the evil. The general assembly should not be discouraged by the failure of earlier legislation on this subject. Able lawyers and capable business men have co-operated in the framing of bills which, if made laws, will help the wage earners of Illinois who have to borrow. A chief requisite is that the usurers be prevented from deceiving the public by the use of banking and corporate titles.

CURRENCY REFORM SENTIMENT

It is in every way creditable to the bankers of this country that they are giving much time and serious attention to the development of an improved currency system. Bankers are in a position to understand the defects of the present monetary scheme. It is their business to study financial conditions and in the nature of things they are better able than any other class to point out what the country needs in the way of currency legislation.

What the country needs is what the bankers need. The day has passed when financial men can be looked on as a monopolistic or selfish class whose interests are inimical to those of the public at large. The modern bank is closely allied to all legitimate commercial concerns. Its welfare rests on the progress and prosperity of the nation. None but demagogues have any other views.

Intimations are heard at Washington that some of the wise men in congress wish the bankers to keep their hands off the proposed currency legislation. It is said that the recent conference of financial men, at which the Aldrich plan was endorsed, is viewed with resentment in certain quarters.

Of course congress always contains a smattering of blatherskites who feel competent to legislate on every subject beneath the sun. These fellows shine particularly on the great economic problems which they think they can settle in an off-hand manner, and they profess to see all kinds of dangerous schemes and conspiracies if business men venture to offer advice. Other nations are glad to get the help of experienced financiers and successful business men in shaping legislation, but in the American congress there are always to be found men who oppose that kind of assistance. Not only the monetary commission but congress itself ought to welcome the views and help of successful bankers.

All men of sense are hoping to secure an elastic currency to meet the needs of trade expansion and to present stringency in crop-moving periods. Furthermore they desire a central reserve power which can maintain confidence in periods of agitation and prevent panics by a judicious output of money in accordance with the requirements of business. This matter is above partisan politics, for all parties agree that it is a vital necessity. It should have the best thought of the country, both in and out of congress, and none but dangerous demagogues will attempt monetary legislation in other spirit or on any other line.

OPPOSED TO RECIPROCITY

Farmers all over the North are opposing with great vigor the reciprocity agreement with Canada. The administration has advanced its best arguments and cited Blaine and McKinley in behalf of the proposal, but the farmers continue to pour in their protests against ratification. A Grange official writes to Secretary Wilson in this vein:

"Do you know that the steel trust sold last year in Canada more than 100,000,000 pounds of wire, and that we bought no wire from Canada? Do you not know that this barbed wire provision is an attempt to fool the farmers by a transparent trick? Do you not know that Canada produces practically no wire, and that with the duty on Canadian wire abolished we would not import one pound?"

"You refer to the advantages to our great milling interests of the free admission of Canadian wheat. How will this help the farmers? How will it help the consumers of our towns and cities? Wheat is on the free list but flour is to be taxed 50 cents a barrel. Cattle, hogs and sheep are to be free, but meat, both fresh and cured, is to be taxed 1¼ cents a pound. Is this an honest measure in the interest of the consumer? Is this your idea of a fair and just reciprocity measure?"

DIFFICULTY OVER RESERVES

D. R. Forgan of Chicago and F. A. Vanderlip, of New York, speaking before the Commercial club last week, asserted that the national banks of the United States cannot strictly conform to the present national banking law in the matter of legal requirements for their reserves.

The only place where national banks can deposit their secondary reserves with certainty of being able to withdraw them at any time, they stated is in Wall Street banks, where such reserves are used for carrying speculative securities to the detriment of local commercial business.

These criticisms of the present monetary system of the United States were made at a banquet of the club in the Blackstone hotel in advocating the principles of reform of the monetary system recently presented by Senator Aldrich.

"The national banks do not and cannot keep the letter of the law," declared Mr. Forgan. "The law provides that the banks must maintain a reserve of 15 per cent. But in times of stress this reserve may fall 1 or 2 per cent below the legal requirement. If the banks maintained the letter of the law they would have to cease business when their reserves became impaired.

"If a customer came in at such a time they would have to say, 'We cannot do business with you, because our reserve is a bit low.' and if they told this to half a dozen customers they would have to close their doors next day. But that our banks are sound is shown from the fact that in Illinois only ten national banks have failed in thirty-one years. Of these eight paid depositors in full, and the other two only made a loss of $13,000 for both."

Charles Nason, who for the past two years has acted as assistant cashier in the Montello State Bank, and later accepted a position as bookkeeper in the First National Bank at Stevens Point, has been promoted to the position of assistant cashier of that institution.

Favor Concrete

San Antonio, Texas, February 28.—No one item in construction material is playing such an important part in all branches of material development in Texas as concrete. This city has a number of buildings, some of them tall enough to change the skyline, built entirely of re-enforced concrete and the use of this material is broadening constantly. Bridges over streams in cities and in the country are being built of re-enforced concrete and along lines which old time engineers said were impossible and impracticable.

In addition to buildings and bridges this material is used for dams across streams and in the construction of irrigation pools, grain elevators, bins, manufacturing plants, cotton gins and a number of railroads are experimenting with ties composed largely of cement. At Corpus Christi and Aransas Pass where the government is expending large sums in deepening harbors, concrete is used for jetties and the miles of retaining walls at Galveston which stand as a protection of that city from the vagaries of the sea are built of the same material. Fortunately for Texas, some of the best known stone in the world for the manufacture of high grade Portland cement is found in many parts of the state.

At no time in the history of improvements in Texas has the construction of permanent buildings been so general in all parts of the southwest section of the state as at present. In many cities and localities residence and public building construction is very active. At Corpus Christi Col. John P. Dickinson is planning a hotel to contain several hundred rooms which will be completed in the next few months. At Gonzales the Catholic congregation is just completing a new church built along modern lines. At New Braunfels plans are on foot for the erection of a hotel, fireproof in every detail, to cost $100,000. At Georgetown the city council has let a contract for a power house for electric light and water plant to cost $45,000, the same to be completed by June 1st. At Pecos an unusual building era is on; the school board is preparing to build a $25,000 high school building, the county commissioners will erect a $15,000 jail; the Texas & Pacific depot which will be built this year, funds having been appropriated for the purpose, will cost $30,000; a new mercantile building, $5,000; new Methodist church $20,000; sidewalk and street improvements $15,000. Near Cotulla in the Nueces valley the Holland-Texas Company is completing a dam for irrigation purposes that will impound sufficient storm water to irrigate 2,000 acres of as fertile land as there is in the world. This will be one of the largest irrigation projects in that valley when completed.

PUGET SOUND DIVIDEND

New York, February 28.—In view of the Interstate Commerce Commission's rate decision and the recent complaints that railroads have been making about inability to make both ends meet unless they were allowed to raise their freight rates, Wall Street was much interested in the announcement that the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railway Co., a subsidiary of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, has declared an initial dividend of 2 per cent. This announcement occasioned more than ordinary comment because it follows the action taken by other leading railroads of the country in either resuming or declaring increased dividends. Two recent cases in point are the Lehigh Valley, which raised its annual rate from 4 to 6 per cent, and the Southern Railway, which resumed dividends payment on the preferred by declaring 1 per cent, after a suspension since 1907.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul holds $100,000,000 stock of its Puget Sound subsidi-

Arkansas Bankers

Much to the surprise of the Arkansas banking fraternity at large, the executive council of the Arkansas Bankers Association, at its recent meeting, selected Little Rock for the 1911 convention, which will be on April 6th and 7th. Eureka Springs had been previously selected for the gathering this year, and the change has caused considerable comment, especially at Eureka Springs. Members of the council give no explanation other than that they believe it to be to the best interest of the organization to meet at the State Capital, rather than elsewhere. Every member of the council was present at the meeting, which is a unique incident in late years. It is understood that Eureka Springs wanted to postpone the meeting till late in the season, as the little resort is most attractive then, while there are very important matters pending with the bankers, which could not very well be deferred. One of these is the Denton-Turner banking bill, which the association is anxious to have passed. The meeting at Little Rock, it is believed, will help to get this measure through the legislature.

ary, so that the dividend just declared means an addition of $2,000,000 to the income of the parent company this year.

TEXAS YEGGS SUCCESSFUL

The First State Bank of Barry, Texas, was robbed last week, and the robbers got clear with about $5,000 in money. The robbery had some features. In the first place the gentlemen of the jimmy could not effect an entrance by door or window, so they blew out one entire wall of the bank building, and walked in over the crumbled debris. The safe offered some reasonable resistance, so that three charges were required to open it. This made four mighty blasts, which were heard over the town, but no one investigated until the dawn of the next morning. Having completed their business at the First State Bank the yeggs walked around to the livery stable where they harnessed up a team to a light buggy and in this drove out of Barry. The team and buggy have been recovered.

C. T. Jaffray, vice-president of the First National of Minneapolis, has gone South for a short stay.

Real Estate Security Is The Best

IMPROVED farms in favorable locations are the best real estate securities. Investors in bonds cannot find a better opportunity to obtain satisfactory returns, coupled with ample security, than our 7% twenty year bonds—while our stock is none the less safe and pays better dividends. The Company is a going concern and will pay 25% on stock this fiscal year. Demand for our products always greater than supply and will continue to remain so. This means high prices, with ready market. An investigation will demonstrate and verify above statements. For further particulars, address

Oklahoma Clash

One of the bitterest fights of the present session in the Oklahoma legislature has centered about the efforts of the governor to secure a state banking board of his appointing. When the proposal was broached in the senate there were strong hopes that the administrative wishes would be respected. But the house of representatives has voted vigorously against the governor's wishes and it has now under consideration a committee report that opposes the governor at every point.

Although no new law has been enacted in Oklahoma forming a state board of banking, the house of representatives has practically agreed upon the committee report which contains this section:

"A state banking board is hereby created, to be composed of the governor, lieutenant-governor, president of the state board of agriculture, secretary of state and state auditor. The bank commissioner shall be ex officio secretary of the board. Said board shall have the supervision and management of the depositors' guaranty fund hereinafter provided for, and shall have power to adopt all suitable rules and regulations not inconsistent with law for the management and regulation of the same."

It is hardly probable that the senate will consent to this departure from administrative wishes. The Oklahoma Bankers Association was practically promised that it would have representation on the state board of banking, but under the recommended bill it is not certain that the board will always have a banker in its membership.

ROBBERS LOOT ILLINOIS BANK

Sterling, Ill., March 1.—Robbers entered a bank at Walnut, Ill., last night and after breaking open the safe escaped with between $2,000 and $4,000. Sheriffs Wahl of Whiteside county, Reid of Lee county and Buyers of Bureau county took up the trail of the robbers. The men, however, are either out of the state or in hiding along the Green river. It is the opinion now that, after eluding a posse last night, they made their way to the Peoria branch of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, and either reached Peoria or Chicago.

The four bandits are described as being well dressed and well built. Each of the four men, when seen last, was carrying packages, and it is the belief that they had with them the $3,700 they secured from the bank. Bloodhounds are expected to take up the trail. A reward of $800 has been offered for their capture.

NEW NORTHWESTERN "FEEDER."

The Chicago and Northwestern will build a feeder line from Peoria, 100 miles into Illinois coal fields. The new line will be named St. Louis, Peoria and Western.

Here is Optimism

General business conditions in the Central West continue in a measure unsatisfactory, although no alarm whatever is manifested by bankers who are in close touch with the situation. Charles H. Moore, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, Kansas City, is well posted on business and banking matters in this territory, and he is a thorough optimist. To a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER he said:

"It is only natural that there should be some slackening of things at this season of the year. Stocks of all kinds have run down and this applies to the farm as well as to the store. Farmers are only now beginning to buy feeding stock from the South. Rates are about the same as they have been since the first of the year. We are feeling no uneasiness whatever from the somewhat discouraging reports that come from the East. I am confident that the wheat crop of this territory will be good and there is no reason to become anxious at the outlook. Our deposits have grown steadily since the first of the year and the demand for money I consider normal. The Central West is in fine shape so far as I can see."

Bird S. McGarvey, secretary of the Pioneer Trust Company of Kansas City, said:

"There is not the least cause for worry over the apparent slump in business. Of course a trust company does not do the big business with country banks that the larger reserve banks do, but our own customers are doing well and are unusually cheerful. The merchants are borrowing money only to discount their bills and I hear no complaint that merchants need money to carry over old stocks. The farmers are in splendid shape and all crops are now promising. The present so-called lull is not much of a lull after all. The only complaint that I hear is an occasional man who complains that his business is not quite as much better than last year as he had expected."

MARCH "LIPPINCOTT'S."

In the March "Lippincott's" the complete novel is "The Little Brown Shoe," by Ella Middleton Tybout, a delightful love story with a most baffling and elusive mystery which defies solution by the reader who is kept in suspense by the author until those unexpected developments are brought to light which are quite essential to the thoroughly satisfactory conclusion. Other features of the magazines are five short stories, all of them good, an essay on "Should the Gifted Marry?" and some short poems. The department entitled "Ways of the Hour," contains four excellent discussions on current topics, the most vitally interesting being "The United States Supreme Court" by Willard French, and is followed by many choice bits of humor in "Walnuts and Wine."

LESS LAND SPECULATION

Ralph Van Vechten of the Continental and Commercial National, says in regard to the prospects of speculation in farm lands:

"With a few exceptions the opinions of bankers and business men in the West and Middle West agree that land transactions this spring will be about 25 to 30 per cent of the volume last year and considerably under normal. All reports received by us agree that there is no speculation in land at this time, so that practically no money will be taken out of the local communities excepting in payment of mortgages held by outside corporations. In places there will be a burden placed on the banks by the fact that some of the large life insurance companies have temporarily withdrawn from the field. However, in none of these cases is there any difficulty looked for in taking care of the demands, although one or two of our correspondents have intimated that they might ask for some short time accommodations. Land values in many localities are declining, and where advances have come they have been slight."

FOREIGN TRADE GOOD

A statement of the value of the foreign trade of the United States with the principal countries and grand divisions of the world in the month of January and the seven months ending with January, 1911, compared with corresponding periods of 1910, has just been completed by the bureau of statistics, department of commerce and labor. Imports for the month of January show a falling off of about three million dollars, and for the seven months ending with January, an increase of two and three-fourths million dollars. Exports in the month of January show an increase of fifty-two and one-half million dollars, and in the seven months ending with January, an increase of one hundred and seventy-two million dollars. Exports show an increase to each of the grand divisions and to nearly all of the leading countries, those to China and Japan in January being in each case practically double those in January of the preceding year.

The stock of the Central Trust Co. will be exchanged for equal shares in the Anglo California Trust Co.
